lightlify (lī’-lee-fī) v., arch. to disparage (used by [HSR]; cf. lichtlify).

Lightnin Hill (lī’-nin-hil) n. hill to the east of Linhope farm, reaching a height of 487 m.

Lightpack (lī’-pawk) n. nickname of John Wilson, weaver of the 18th century.

Lightpipe (lī’-pīp) n. name sometimes given for Blackgrain Moss, a part of Winnington Moss. There were once cottages here. The boggy area just to the east of the Auld Caa Knowe was Lightpipe Moss, so marked on the 1863 Oednance Survey map (a cottage is marked ‘Lightpipe’ on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map; there are Lightpipes elsewhere, e.g. near Kielder and formerly a Lightpipe Haa just south of Jedburgh, their origin possibly being a place where drovers would stop for a smoke).

like (lik) interj. as it were, so to speak, used conversationally, peculiarly as a punctuation at the ends of sentences (this is widespread in colloquial English in various periods and regions).

like (lik) adv., arch. likely – ‘...rale leike as ther seam was ti girn the bits o moppies ...’ [ECS], ‘...or take a demuirrd dwam, fair leike ti faa off the spake ...’ [ECS], adj., arch. similar, of the same sort as just mentioned – ‘Item, that ilk merchand that buys cuntrie geir with trone wecht, sall sell it again in small with the lyik wecht' [BR1640], 'The Minister complained ... upon occasion of ye Common Riding ... of distributing strong Liquor ... and ... what might be done toward the suppressing of ye like practice ...' [PR1724], '... and the possessors of Flex had the like use and privilege' [C&L1767], 'And queerer like creature naebodie might see, Than this queer-lookin' hurklin' bodie' [JoHa] (this last sense was formerly common; also spelled 'lyik'; cf. lick).

-like (-lik) suffix used to emphasize or qualify, 'having the appearance', 'so to speak', e.g. 'auld-like', 'daft-like', 'wice-like' – 'O mercy! come doon, and ye'll see it yersel' – O but its an awesome-like bodie' [JoHa], 'Fu' cozie is our wee bit house, though humble-like it be' [JJ], '... twae-threi bleithe-leike fallihs i glarry mole-skins smokeet their clae y peipe' [ECS], 'It's a leikely-leike thing that bacca ull turn dearer or 'd be lang' [ECS], '... slowly turn frae a smert-like young man into yon dried-up fidget o a thing' [DH], '... mebbe a kenning relieved, for it was a gey dirty-like gangrel' [DH] (cf. sic-like, likely-like and wice-like).

the like (thu-lik) n. something equivalent or similar, the same as was already implied, a match, equal – 'hev ee ever seen the like o yon?', 'Item, the lyik to be done to the resseteris of the theft of corne brought into the town by ony personnes' [BR1645], '... gif ewer he do the lyik he sall pay the dowble of the penaltie ...' [BR1645], 'The like o' that! the pen's again thrown by ...' [JoHa], '... micht be ane o' the gentry folk ... an' that didna care to speak to the like o' mey' [BCM1880], '... An whae among oo cast a stane? Oo'd a hae din the like' [MB] (note singular, while informal English is usually 'the likes').

likeas (lik-az) conj., arch. likewise, also, used to introduce another item in a series – '... likas owr souerane Lordis lettres direkit thairwpoun ...' [SB1500], 'The said day the Baillies ... did ordain ... Likeas they hereby statute and ordain that ...' [BR1723], in the same way as, as if – '... an A lilteet a sang an whewed an yuooted, leike as A'd gane wuth' [ECS], '... an there the perr stand, shooder ti shooder, leike as they war glunshin an shuirrin doon at aabodie' [ECS] (also written as 2 words; cf. likeways).

likely-like (lik-lee-lik) adj., arch. probable, likely-looking, – 'It's a leikely-leike thing that bacca ull turn dearer or 'd be lang' [ECS], 'There was a snod bit leikely-leike eateen-hoose, nerr

like ti (lik-ti) v. looking as if to, likely to, apparently going to – '... 'Twas like tae swally mei' [JSB], '... but on this nicht there was a cow like to calve, an' they war gaun to sit up a bit' [BCM1880], 'Hei's duine eis-sel ill; ei says ei's leike ti bowk. A dinna wunder at eet; ei ett till ei was leike ti burst. Hei dizna ken eis ain fill' [ECS], 'Aw'm like tae greet, but what's the uise ...' [IJ].

likeways (lik-wāz) adv., arch. likewise, moreover – '... and that only for themselves bot lykeways in name and behalfe of the haill toune and communitie thereof ...' [BR1684], '... and lykeways whoever reseat ym shall be bound and obligt that the sd. persones shall give satisfatione to ye kirke ...' [BR1689], 'Agane he gaed out about the saxt an' nint hoor, an' did likewise' [HSR], 'An' he cam' til the second, an' said likewise' [HSR] (cf. likeas).

likit (li-kee', -ki') pp. liked – 'hei likit the schuil, bit no the belt si much', 'she'd hev likit the weather ti be better', 'The tade held up her auld dunne lufes, She lykit the sang sae weele' [JTe], 'Atweel he was couthie an' kin'ly, An' neebour folk likit him a'' [JoHa], 'Ye've liket me weel, and ye've liket me lang, As lang an' weel I've limet thee' [JoHa], '... It was likit weil by the neibours a', An' 'twas double deir to me!' [WiSp], 'Respec'it and liket by grit and by sma' ...' [JT], 'Aw fand Jean likit them uncommon weel, an' them her ...' [BCM1880], 'Maybe it is for every generation to feel The sma tragedy: to have oot-leeved What it had aye kenned, And likit weel' [DH] (also spelled 'liket' and 'likeet').

lill (lil) n., arch. a hole in a wind instrument, particularly the bagpipes, chanter or flute – 'A blyther lad ne'er buir a drone, Nor touched a lill; Nor pipe inspir'd wi' sweeter tone Or better skill' [CPM].

Lilliard (li-lee-ard) n. the Maiden Lilliard of Maxton who supposedly saw her lover killed at Ancrum Moor and waded in to avenge him, being killed in the process – '... And when her legs were cuttit off She fought upon her stumps'. A small monument commemorates her supposed grave, about 400 yards east of the A68, near the line of Dere Street. Unfortunately it seems very unlikely that she ever existed, since the place name predates the battle; the monument is essentially a replacement for the earlier 'Lilliard's Cross' and the lines appear to be cribbed from 'Chevy Chase', but it's a good story nevertheless.

Lilliard's Cross (li-lee-ardz-kros) n. former wayside marker at Lilliard's Edge. The name dates back to at least the 12th century, and was still in use in the 16th. There are records in the 14th century of the location being used for March days (it is 'Lillyat Cros' in 1378 and 'Lylzeartis Croce' in 1547/8).

Lilliard's Edge (li-lee-ardz-ej) n. farm by the A68, between Jedburgh and St. Boswells, with a nearby caravan park. Dere Street passes near here, and it is next to the site of the Battle of Ancrum Moor, as well as of the monument to 'Lilliard'. The name is generally applied to the high point on the A68 here, which reaches 172 m (565 ft). Just off the road to the west is the Monteath Mausoleum, and a little further south lies the Lilliardsedge Park caravan park (the origin of the name is probably from the Old English personal name 'Lil' plus 'geat', meaning 'the gate belonging to Lil'; it appears as 'Lylzeartis Croce' in 1548 and 'Lilliartis Crosse' in 1632; it is also written as one word, 'Lilliardsedge').

Lilliardsedge see Lilliard's Edge

Lillico (li-lee-kō) n. Alexander (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Templehall and neighbouring farms. In 1786 he was herd at Templehallshiel, in 1788 was 'late Herd in Templehallshiel now in Harrot Park' and in 1790 was in Langburn. By 1801 he was shepherd at 'Winebrough' (i.e. Windburgh) in Hobkirk Parish, when his sons James and William was listed on the Militia ballot. He is recorded as shepherd on the Wauchope estate according to both the 1797 Horse Tax and Dog Tax Rolls. His children included: James (b.1776), listed as his son in the Lieutenancy Book for 1799, as well as 1801; Isobel (b.1778); Andrew (b.1780); William (b.1782), a shepherd, listed as his son in 1801; Alexander (b.1784); Mary (b.1786); Helen (b.1788); Hugh (b.1790); and Douglas (b.1794), also a shepherd. Alexander (18th/19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish, probably son of Alexander. His children included: Betty (b.1808); Alexander (b.1810); John (b.1813); Andrew (b.1815); James (b.1817); and Walter (b.1819), who was a butcher in Lilliesleaf. Alexander (19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. His wife was Isobella Scott. Their children included Alexander (b.1838). Alexander (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. His wife was Isabel Grieve. Their children included: Christian (b.1842); John (b.1844); William (b.1845); Margaret (b.1848); and Alexander (b.1849). In 1851 and 1861 his widow was living at Dykecrofts. Andrew (16th/17th

C.) recorded in 1623 as tenant farmer of lands near Bedrule, along with Thomas Turnbull, 'indweller in Newtoun'. Andrew (17th/18th C.) married Janet Turnbull in Kirkton in 1721. It seems likely that the same Andrew married Isobel Briggs in Kirkton in 1735. His children, baptised in Kirkton, probably included Isobel (b.1722), Thomas (b.1729), Janet (b.1745) and Andrew (b.1748). Perhaps the same Andrew was living at Stobs in 1736 and 1741 and had children baptised in Cavers Parish, including John (b.1736), Marion (b.1739) and Gilbert (b.1741). Douglas (b.1794) son of Alexander, he was born in Hobkirk Parish. He became a shepherd at Wauchope and lived at Hawklaw. In 1820 he married Elizabeth ('Betty'), daughter of John Taylor, farmer at Unthank in Rulewater. Their children were: Alexander (b.1821); John (b.1822); James (b.1824); Douglas (b.1825); Isabel (b.1828); Robert (b.1831); Elizabeth (b.1834); and Mary (b.1837). George (1704/5–39) shoemaker at Blackburnfoot in Castleton Parish. His children Thomas and 2 others died in infancy. They are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. Hugh (18th/19th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. He married Helen Telfer in 1817, the married being recorded in both Southdean and Hobkirk Parishes. His children included Alexander (b.1818). James (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. His daughter Isabell was baptised in 1693. James (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. He married Marion Collier in 1733 and his children included William (b.1734) and Christian (b.1736). James (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His son Andrew was baptised in 1747. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Elizabeth Grieve in 1765. James (b.1776) son of Alexander, shepherd at Wauchope. He was servant at Wauchope in Hobkirk Parish, as recorded in the Lieutenancy Book for Roxburghshire in 1797 and son of Alexander in the 1799 Lieutenancy Book. On the 1801 Militia ballot he was listed as son of Alexander at Windburgh in Hobkirk Parish, with his brother William also listed. James (1815/6–99) son of William and Margaret Nichol who lived in at least Cavers and Castleton Parishes. There appears to be no record of his baptism. He worked as a farm labourer at Riddletonhill near Maxton. In 1841, along with his brother Robert, he emigrated to Canada, settling in Gloucester Township, Ontario. He returned to Scotland, married Jane Bell in Crailing Parish in 1844 and emigrated permanently in 1845, bringing his mother and sister Janet. He purchased land along with his brother, this being called Century Farm (now part of the Industrial Park on Stevenage Drive in Ottawa. His children were Margaret, William, Andrew, Elizabeth, James, Robert, Isabella Duncan and Sarah Jane. He was for a long time Superintendent of the East Gloucester Presbyterian Church. John (16th/17th C.) recorded in Raperlaw in 1619. He was listed among many Turnbells and others, under Walter of Bedrule, who were accused of taking hay from Huntliehill. Since he appeared personally, he was not denounced as a rebel. John (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He is probably the John who married Janet Wright in Bedrule in 1691. James (b.1697) and John (b.1697), baptised in Bedrule, were probably his children. John (17th/18th C.) married Mary Young in 1705, the marriage being proclaimed in Bedrule and Minto Parishes. Probably the same John had several children baptised in Bedrule: Isabell (b.1706); Margaret (b.1708); Andrew (b.1711); Mary (b.1714); Robert (b.1716); and Isabell (again, b.1722). John (17th/18th C.) married Helen Mather in Bedrule in 1729. John (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His children included Bessie (b.1727), Janet (b.1730), Marion (b.1732), Thomas (b.1736), Margaret (b.1738) and Walter (b.1743). John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their children included Margaret (b.1768) and Isabel (b.1771). John (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. His daughter Agnes was baptised in 1777. John (d.1808) Hawick resident. He married Helen Reid, who died one day after him. He could be the John who witnessed a baptism for Walter Scott at Whitfield in Wilton Parish in 1772. John (19th C.) Hawick resident, member of the East Bank Kirk. He married Margaret Symington in Wilton in 1807 and their children included: Thomas (1807–62), who died in Kelso; and Andrew (1809–c.73), who died in Nenthorn. John (19th C.) Hawick resident. He married Margaret Young and their son Robert was baptised in 1853. Robert (17th C.) married Agnes ‘Willieton’ in Hawick in 1791. Robert (1818/9–76) son of William and Margaret Nichol who lived in at least Cavers and Castleton Parishes. There appears to be no record of his baptism. He worked as a farm labourer at Riddletonhill near Maxton. In 1841, along with his brother James, he emigrated to Canada, other family members following later. He settled in Gloucester Township, Ontario, where he and his brother purchased a farm; he also worked as a stone mason. He married Christina Kinmond and his children were Jane, Margaret, Isabella, Elisabeth, William, John, Jessie, Robert and Christina. Thomas (17th C.) listed on the Hearth Tax roll for Bedrule Parish in 1694. Probably the same Thomas married Janet Wright in Bedrule in 1691. His children, baptised in Bedrule, included Robert (b.1695) and Margaret (b.1700). Thomas (17th/18th C.) member of Hawick Kirk. In 1722 he was living in Cavers Parish. He married Isobel Thomson and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1722, with witnesses John Cunningham (perhaps the minister’s son) and Walter Scott (perhaps the minister’s servant). Perhaps the same Thomas had children William (b.1715) and Isabel (b.1719) baptised in Cavers. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Minto Parish. He married Betty Shortreed and their children included Peggy (b.1788) and George (b.1790). Thomas (b.1831/2) from Berwick-on-Tweed, he was a railway engine driver. In 1861 he was living on Wilton Terrace. His wife was Agnes and their children included William and Thomas. Walter (17th C.) recorded on the Hearth Tax list for Bedrule Parish in 1694. He may be closely related to John and Thomas, who are also listed. Walter (18th C.) married Margaret Turnbull in Bedrule in 1730. Walter (b.1819) born in Hobkirk Parish, he was a butcher in Lilliesleaf, probably on the north side. He was listed in Slater’s 1852 directory. His wife was Eliza Davidson (from Mertoun) and their children included: Agnes; Alexander (b.1849); Jane (b.1851); and William (b.1853). William (1652/3–1720) tenant in West Lees. His wife, Janet Turnbull, died in 1719, aged 55. They are buried in Bedrule kirkyard. He is probably the William listed in the 1694 Hearth Tax records under the Laird of Newton’s farms in Bedrule Parish. He may be the William who married Isabel Rutherford in Bedrule in 1691, and whose children included Walter (b.1691), Thomas (b.1693), Walter (again, b.1696), James (b.1698), William (b.1702), John (b.1705) and Bessie (b.1708). William (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He could be the son of William Lillico born in Abbotrule in 1665. He was herd at the Flex in 1700 and in 1709. He married Isobel Rutherford in Bedrule in 1691. Their children included: Andrew (b.1691); Margaret (b.1700); William (b.1702); James (b.1703); Agnes (b.1705); and Isobel (b.1709). The witnesses in 1700 were William and Francis Henderson, smiths at the Flex and in 1709 were

James Gray in Whitlaw and William Henderson, younger in Flex. William (18th C.) married Jean Ferguson in Bedrule in 1756. William (18th C.) married Elspeth Beattie in Castleton in 1763. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His children included Marion (b.1766), Janet (b.1770), Sarah (b.1772), an unnamed child (b.1774) and William (b.1776). He is probably the William who married Jean Aitchison in Hobkirk Parish in 1770 (but then must have had an earlier wife also). William (b.c.1770s) shepherd at Hartsgarth according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. Perhaps the same William was a labourer at Harden in Castleton Parish on the 1801 ballot for the Militia. He could be the same man as the William who died in about 1832. William (d.c.1832) resident of Castleton, Cavers and Bedrule Parishes. He was living at Bedrule Mill in about 1829. His wife was Margaret Nichol, the couple being rebuked for their first child being born in fornication. Their children included: Janet (1800–80), baptised in Castleton Parish, who emigrated to Canada with her brothers and became matron of a home for orphans; William (b.1802) also baptised in Castleton; Adam (b.1812), baptised in Cavers; James (1815/6–99), who emigrated to Canada in 1841; and Robert (1818/9–76), who emigrated with his brother. He was already dead in 1841 when his wife, 3 children and 2 grandchildren emigrated to Canada. An entry in the Bedrule Parish records shows his widow being giving some of the poor money. William (1782–1861) son of Alexander and brother of James and Douglas. On the 1801 Militia ballot he was listed as son of Alexander at Windburgh in Hobkirk Parish, along with his brother James. He became shepherd at Gatehousecote and later Templehall. In 1841 he was recorded as an agricultural labourer living with his family at South Berryfell and in 1851 was shepherd at Dodburn. By 1861 he and his wife were living at Burnflat in Hawick. In 1814 in Hobkirk Parish he married Christian (or perhaps Katherine) Telfer, who was from Newcastleton; she died in 1873, aged 81. Their children included: Helen (b.1815); Alexander (b.1816), who was at Ladfield in Oxnam Parish in 1851; James (b.1818); Isabella (b.1820); Elizabeth (b.1823); Christian (b.1825); Helen; William (1827–95); Elspeth (1830–1903); and Andrew. The family are buried in Wellogate Cemetery. William (1827–95) born in Hobkirk Parish, son of William. He was a shepherd at Wormsleuch in 1861 (also spelled 'Lilico', 'Lillicoe', 'Lillicow' and 'Lillyco').

Lillico's (li-lee-kōz) n. tobacconist's shop at 3 High Street in the 20th century. The property was previously a bicycle shop. Note that there have been members of this family in the Hawick area for centuries. Helen Lillico was wife of Walter Turnbull of Bedrule around 1600, and there were Lillicos farming in Bedrule Parish from at least the late 17th century.

Lillie (li-lee) n. Andrew (18th/19th C.) recorded as Blakehope in Castleton Parish on the 1797 Dog Tax Rolls. Richard (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Jane Smeaton and their children included Peter (b.1836). Thomas (18th/19th C.) servant at Chesters in Ancrum Parish. He is recorded in 1798 on the list of men on the ballot to serve in the Militia.

Lillielaw Park (li-lee-law-pawrk) n. former name for a piece of land in Minto Parish. It was 'Lillilaw park' in 1779, when valued at £72 19s 8d and liferented by Robert Trotter of Bush. It lay to the north-west of the Minto-to-Jedburgh road, bounded by Craigend farm, Cleuchhead farm, Spout Burn Park, the Minto-to-Jedburgh road and Minto Glen garden. It was still listed in the Land Tax Rolls of 1811. A cottage called 'Lillylaw' is still marked there on modern maps.

Lilliesleaf (li-leez-leef, lilz-lee) n. village about 8 miles north of Hawick, and also the name of the associated parish, part of Roxburghshire. The village was once known as 'Easter Lilliesleaf', to distinguish it from the Wester part, which was associated with the Barony of Riddell. The Riddells of that Ilk long held lands there, with an early document naming specific places in the early 13th century. The Barony of Lilliesleaf was owned by the Diocese of Glasgow from at least the early 12th century until the Reformation. The village once held several fortified houses, the largest being a 2-storey tower at the eastern end of the village, part of the walls of which still existed until about 1810. The moors around the village held many 'conventicles' in the late 17th century, and was the scene of several skirmishes with the dragoons. John 'sleich' and Alexander Alemoor are recorded there in 1502. A charter of 1595/6 lists men granted land within the village being Walter Riddell of that Ilk, William Riddell of Bewlie, Archibald Douglas in Friarshaw, William Riddell in Greatlaws, Alexander Hogg, Thomas Young, William Smail, John Hogg, Thomas Bairnsfather, James Hill, James Henderson, Alexander Smail, Adam Smail, William Robson, William Middlemas, William Douglas and John Redford. The feuars lands were valued at £1283 15s (exclusive of Walter Scott of Chapel's share) in the 1643 county valuation. Additionally in 1643 Walter Scott held lands valued at £200, Walter Riddell was portioner of '20 soums' valued at £60 and 4 acres at £26, and Alexander Hood held £10. The feuars lands were valued at £800 in 1678. In 1694 the residents recorded there were Andrew Davidson, William Leithead, Andrew Riddell, Andrew Gray, Thomas Smail, David Gray, Alexander Smail, James Leithead, Thomas Marshal, William Mason, Robert Leithead, Walter Davidson, James Riddell, James Redford, James Hill, John Scott and William Henderson, along with merchant John Smail, smith John Wright, cooper John Glendinning and wrights Walter Leithead, John Smail and James Leithead. The 1797 Horse Tax Rolls records the horse owners there as John Cochrane, John Anderson, Andrew Redford, John Muir, Robert Stirling, Andrew Riddell, James Lunn, William Grieve, John Hislop, John Kid, James Stirling, Thomas Chisholme, John Scott, James Hogg and James Easton. In 1801 there were 12 men listed there (between the ages of 19 and 30) on the Militia ballot. In the 19th century there were weavers there working for Hawick manufacturers. The village consists largely of a single street, and has many 18th and 19th century buildings. The present church was built in 1771, with later additions, and the graveyard contains the remains of the Riddells of that ilk. A war memorial, made of Doddington stone and designed by J.P. Alison, was erected after WWI. A schoolhouse was built in 1822 as well as the 'Currie School' for girls in 1860, and the village still has its own primary school. The Common of Lilliesleaf was divided among the feuars and heritors in 1701/2, and only a few acres remained by the early 19th century. There is a multi-purpose building, Currie Memorial Hall. The Plough Inn and the Cross Keys are the local pubs, although there were 4 public houses in 1834. The village was the very first destination for a Ride-out in 1891. It became a regular location for many years, ending in 1984, but revived again in 2004 and 2005. 'Voices from Lilliesleaf: Life and Work in a Scottish Borders Village During the Twentieth Century' (2015) was written by Ian MacDougall, based on interviews with locals – 'And where around lang Lilliesleaf With lavish hand is flung A wealth of grace more dear to me Than aught that ere was sung' [FL], 'Drown the echo of your grief In the joy of Lilliesleaf' [WL] (the origin is probably 'Lil's cliff' or 'slope', with the Old English personal name

'Lil' or 'Lilla'; it is first recorded as 'Lillescliva' about 1120, 'Lilliscrive' and 'Lyllesclefe' in about 1150, 'Lilesclive' in 1156, 'Lillesclive' in 1170, then in forms such as 'Lelescleiff', 'Lellescleff', 'Lellisleaf', 'Lellislie', 'Lileisleiff', 'Lilislee', 'Lilisleife', 'Lilislie', 'Lillecleif', 'Lillescleffe', 'Lillesclif', 'Lillescliva', 'Lillesclive', 'Lillesleyf', 'Lilliesleiff', 'Lillieslie', 'Lillischleiff', 'Lilliscleif', 'Lilliscrif', 'Lillisleaf', 'Lillisleif', 'Lillisleife', 'Lillislief', 'Lillistleaf', 'Lillistleaf', 'Lilsie Leiff', 'Lylilie', 'Lylisle', 'Lyllescleiff', 'Lyllisle', 'Lyllislief', 'Lyssly', etc., until the modern spelling appears in 1770; Blaeu's map of 1654 shows 'E. Lilsly' and 'K. of Lilsly', while Adair's map c. 1688 shows 'Lillislief Kirk'; note that the traditional local pronunciation lilz-lee recalls former spellings).

Lilliesleaf (li-leez-leef) n. farm in Rivonia on the outskirts of Johannesburg, presumably named after the local village. It hit the headlines in 1963 when it was raided by South African police and a number of ANC leaders were captured. The house had been the group's hide-out for about 2 years. Nelson Mandela himself was captured separately (at Howick!) in the KwaZulu-Natal Midlands and the whole group were put on trial, leading to 'Rivonia' and 'Lilliesleaf Farm' becoming internationally synonymous with the suppression of black resistance in South Africa. In 1991, after his release from prison, Mandela spent some time scouring the suburbs for the farmhouse and finally located it. In 2001 the Lilliesleaf Trust was set up to turn the farmhouse to turn the site into a museum and conference centre.

Lilliesleaf (li-leez-leef) n. Adam (13th C.) witness to a grant of lands at Cresswell in Hassendean. This was probably in the late 1220s. His name is given as 'Ada de Lillesclive'. It is unclear how he might have been related to Stephen or other nearly contemporary men with the same designation. Alexander (12th/13th C.) son of Waltheof. He witnessed a grant in the period 1185–1215 by Geoffrey the cook of Whitton to the hospital of Jerusalem at Torphichen. He also witnessed the confirmation of this grant by Patrick Riddell and another grant of lands in Whitton by Patrick (who was thus surely related). He further witnessed the grant of lands in Haddington by William of Lilliesleaf to Melrose Abbey, also in 1185–1215. Probably the same Alexander was the father of this same William, who was mentioned in other charters for Walter of Riddell and Adam of Durham in the early 1200s. Alexander (14th/15th C.) granted safe passage from France to Scotland and back in 1408. This was along with the Archdeacon of Lothian and Clerk George of Borthwick. He was referred to as 'Master Alexander of Lillescliffe', suggesting he was a cleric, perhaps of Lilliesleaf. Geoffrey (12th/13th C.) son of Waltheof and brother of Alexander. His name is also written 'Gaufrid'. In about 1200 he granted 3 oxgangs of lands in Whitton to Melrose Abbey. This was confirmed by Patrick of Ryedale and then Eustace of Vescy in the early 13th century. There was also separate confirmations of grants to Melrose Abbey of 4 oxgangs of land in Whitton and then 13 acres and half a parcel of land in Whitton in the period 1195–1207. In the period 1185–1215 he witnessed a grant for William of Lilliesleaf. It seems likely that the designation 'of Lilliesleaf' (and the connection to Whitton) meant that he was directly related to the Riddells of that ilk. John (12th/13th C.) Rector of Lilliesleaf in the late part of the 12th century and until at least 1204. He was recorded as 'Master' in the period 1201–05 when he witnessed a grant of lands in Clifton in Roxburghshire to Melrose Abbey. Sometime in the period 1182–96 he settled a dispute over the teinds of the lands in Roxburghshire previously belonging to Ulkill Wallace. He was also probably the 'Master J., Rector of Lilliesleaf', referred to in a papal letter of 1204. He could be the John, brother of Simon, Parson of Lilliesleaf, who witnessed the renewal of the gift of Hassendean Church in the period 1204–07. He may have effectively taken the surname of Lilliesleaf from his church. Stephen, who held the churches of Borthwick and Nenthorn, may have been his son. He may be the same as John of Huntingdon, who was Clerk of Bishop Jocelin of Glasgow. It is also possible he was son or other close relative of Walter of Lilliesleaf, recorded about 25 years earlier. John (13th C.) recorded as 'Johan de Lillesclif' in the county of Roxburgh when he signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. It seems reasonable to assume that he was related to the earlier John, Rector of Lilliesleaf. His seal showed an 8-rayed figure and the name 'S'IOHIS D'LELISCL'. He is probably the 'Johanne, de Lilliscleif' recorded in a charter of Sprouston in 1320/1. John (13th C.) recorded as 'Johan de Lillesclyue' in the county of Peebles when he signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. It is possible that this was the same man as the John in Roxburghshire, if his name is entered twice. Richard (15th C.) recorded as 'de Lylliscleue' in 1436/7, when he resigned the lands of Lilliesleaf to his superior 'Mungo de Redale' (Riddell probably). Simon (12th/13th C.) Rector of Lilliesleaf.

Sometime in the period 1204–07 he witnessed a charter establishing the Church of Hassendean. His brother John was also a witness, and it is possible he was the man who was formerly the Rector of Lilliesleaf. They may have been part of the Riddell family, who were the superiors of the lands of Lilliesleaf at that time. Stephen (12th/13th C.) recorded as 'master, clerk, person' in 1204 when he witnessed an agreement between the Bishop of St. Andrews, Durham Cathedral and Coldingham; he was there 'Stephano de Lillescl'. He was also witness to a document relating to Soutra Hospital in around the 1220s. He is there recorded as 'Stephano de Lilliscleve'. This may be the same man who held the churches of Borthwick (in Mid-Lothian) and Nenthorn, and who was possibly son of John of Lilliesleaf. He does not appear to have held the church of Lilliesleaf himself. His name occurs no fewer than 42 times in the early 13th century, but disappears by 1227. Stephen (13th/14th C.) mason, listed in an account of wages paid at Linlithgow Castle in 1302. It seems likely he was related to the earlier Stephen. Thomas (d.1222) Parson of Lilliesleaf, recorded in 1222. He succeeded as Archdeacon of Glasgow, but died the same year. Walter (12th C.) Chaplain and Clerk who witnessed the confirmation of the church of Loquhariot in Midlothian in the period 1147–51. In about 1162 he witnessed a grant of the Church of Linton, where he is 'Galtero'. In a document of 1177/8 regarding a dispute involving Kelso Abbey it seems clear he was a clerk of Jocelin, Bishop of Glasgow. He was not Chaplain of Lilliesleaf, but surely took his designation from there. Waltheof (12th C.) father of Alexander and Geoffrey, also written 'Waldev'. He is mentioned in a charter of around 1200. 'Waltheof' could be the same as 'Walter', and it seems likely (given the connection with Lilliesleaf and Whitton) that he was part of the family of Riddell of that ilk. William (12th/13th C.) recorded in the period 1185–1215 when he granted lands in Haddington to Melrose Abbey. His name is recorded as 'Willelmus de Lillesclif'. Witnesses included Alexander and Geoffrey, sons of Waltheof of Lilliesleaf, who were presumably related to him. His seal bore a monk-like figure holding a crosier and the words 'SIGILLUM WILLELMI'. William (13th C.) son of Alexander, recorded as witness to a charter for Walter of Riddell in the early 1200s. He is also mentioned in a document in the period 1214–49 when Matilda Corbet resigned her lands in Lilliesleaf 'except the land of William son of Alexander'. He also witnessed the confirmation of the gift of lands in West Lilliesleaf to Melrose Abbey in about the same period (also written 'Lillescliffe' and variants).

Lilliesleaf Burgher Kirk (li-leez-leef-bur-gur-kirk) n. former church in Lilliesleaf. In 1804 some of the parishioners wanted William Campbell's son to replace him as Lilliesleaf Parish minister, but the Duke of Roxburghe appointed James Stalker (who had been Chaplain to the Royal Forces at Fort George, and to whom the Duke owed an obligation). This led about 70 families to secede and form a Relief congregation. However, a dispute with the Relief Synod over the appointment of their first minister led to them seceding from that organisation and becoming a Burgher congregation. Their secession church was built in the village by 1809. It was referred to locally as the 'Meetin-hoose'. There was also trouble over the appointment of the second minister, and hence a gap of several years. the congregation eventually became part of the United Free Presbyterian Church about 1900 (along with the other secession churches), and was united with Ashkirk Free Kirk in 1909. A roll of the ministers is: James Colquhoun 1808–14; Patrick Bradley 1817–41; William Kiddy 1843–49; John Ballantyne 1851–54; William Young 1857–74; Alexander Paterson 1875–96; George Minto 1897–1908; Peter Alison 1909–25; John H. Ogilvie 1926–28.

Lilliesleaf Kirk (li-leez-leef-kirk) n. church in Lilliesleaf, at the eastern side of the village, serving the surrounding parish. There are records of a church at least as early as 1116. Sometime between 1114 and 1147 there is a grant from there to Uchtred the priest, confirmed about 1160. In the 1170s and 1180s there were several documents from Popes confirming the church as a 'mensal' church of the Bishop of Glasgow. In 1190 the Parson is recorded claiming lands at Bowden, and about that time the parson is recorded as 'J.' when there was a dispute settled with the Abbot of Kelso. In 1220 the parson was 'Master Stephen', according to a document of the Priory of St. Andrews. The church belonged to Glasgow Diocese until the time of the Reformation, with the connection recorded at least as early as 1160. The earlier church was located in the middle of the modern graveyard, and was thatched. The church was described as 'St Mungo's chapel of Lilleslef' in 1546 and 'S. Mungo Chapell' in 1562; hence it was either dedicated to St. Mungo (or Kentigern) originally or rededicated to him later. The present church was rebuilt in 1771, during the ministry of William Campbell (whose daughter married the Hawick minister Robert Gillan). It was erected to the north of the former church. The choir of the older church was turned into the burial aisle of the Riddells of Riddell, along with the Riddells of Muselee and the Stewarts of Hermiston. A manse was built in 1821, with glebe lands of about 11 acres. Tax was paid on 17 windows at the former manse in 1748. The new church was extended and renovated in 1883, and had a nave and square bell-tower added in 1909 (with the bell given by Edward Sprot), under Rev. Arthur Pollock Sym. A triple-arched apse was then added, to designs by J.P. Alison in 1909. It also has a stained glass by W. Wilson. In 1916 a stone panel with an incised sundial was added, probably originally from the older church. The church contains a red sandstone font, which may be as old as the 14th century; at some point it must have been rolled down to the churchyard, and was not moved back up until 1883, when it was built into a wall, and 30 years later moved into the new apse. There was also a Relief (or Burgher) church set up in the village in the early years of the 19th century. There were formerly additional chapels in the Parish at Chapel (the site later called Chapel Farm), Hermiston and Riddell (near Riddell Mill). The parish was linked with Ashkirk 1961–83, with Bowden in the period 1977–94 and with Ancrum from 1994. Since 1999 it has been linked with Ancrum, Eckford and Crailing. The oldest existing communion token is of lead and round, bearing the inscription 'Lil. K.' and the date 1796. A roll of the ministers of the Parish is: Uchtred c.1160; Walter, Chaplain 1174; J[ohn], Rector c.1190; Idel, Chaplain c.1201; J[ohn], Rector 1204; Simon, Rector c.1206; Stephen c.1220s; Thomas, Parson 1222; William of Rutherford, Parson 1296; John Bridgewater, Prebend 1319; Robert Turnbull, Rector c.1460–80; John Brown, from 1480; Thomas Riddell, Clerk until 1514; George Riddell, Clerk 1514–22; John Riddell, Clerk from 1522; Thomas Duncanson 1568–75; Archibald Simson 1575–82; Thomas Wilkie 1588–c.1638; William Wilkie 1640–71; John Chisholme 1674–89; Matthew Cooper 1691–95; William Hunter 1695–1736; Robert Riddell 1737–60; William Campbell 1760–1804; James Stalker 1805–16; David Baxter 1816–42; Adam Gourlay 1842–81; Robert Blackstock 1881–88; Arthur Pollock Sym 1888–1928; James McKenzie 1929–61; Ewan S. Trail 1961–69; Henry M. Jamieson 1969–76; Thomas W. Donald 1977–87; James Watson

Lilliesleaf Library

1988–94; W. Frank Campbell 1999– (the lands of ‘Lilslie-chapell’ are recorded in 1601 and ‘K. of Lilsly’ is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Lilliesleaf Library (li-leez-leaf-li-bru-ree) n. library established in about 1818 in Lilliesleaf. It was stocked with books that had been donated or purchased by the fees of subscribers.

Lilliesleaf Limited (li-leez-leaf-li-mi’-eed) n. company set up recently by Sir Walter John Buchanan Riddell, Baronet of Riddell.

Lilliesleaf Loanside (li-leez-leaf-lōn-sīd) n. name for part of Lilliesleaf. Journeyman mason James Hislop was there in 1799.

Lilliesleaf Mill (li-leez-leaf-mil) n. former corn mill in Lilliesleaf Parish, probably an alternative name for one of the mills near there, most likely Riddell Mill. In about 1530 William Scott in Ashkirk sold the rights to half of the mill for £40 Scots to his brother Walter. John Riddell was there in 1580. It was confirmed to the Riddells of that Ilk in 1595/6. Simon Riddell was there in 1618. The Earl of Roxburghe was superior in 1643, when the lands were valued at £104; however, it was also listed as part of the possessions of Sir Walter Riddell, valued at £172 in 1643, with a feu duty of £5 and mill teinds (held by the Duke of Roxburghe) at £104. Walter Riddell paid the land tax on ‘Lilliesleaf and for the mylne thereof’ in 1678, when the total value was £407 15s, the mill itself being valued at £167. 2 cottage-lands there were inherited by Andrew Riddell of Haining in 1696. It is ‘Lilias-leaf-mill’ in 1684 when Richard Turner was tenant. John Haliburton was there in 1694. The lands were still valued at £104 in 1788 and owned by the Duke of Roxburghe. James Crawford was tenant in 1787 and James Hogg in 1797. In 1799 James Hogg and Andrew Ford were tenants, with Thomas Winthrope as miller and William McKenzie a servant there. James Lambert was tenant in 1825 (it is ‘the mylne of Lyllislie’ in 1580, ‘Lillislle Mylne’ in 1618 and ‘Lilisleifmyln’ in 1694).

Lilliesleaf Moor (li-leez-leaf-moor) n. area to the south-west of Lilliesleaf village. A spot about 3½ miles from the centre of the village was regularly used for conventicles in the 17th century. It is said that the dragoons came upon the field meeting one Sunday in about 1676, but meeting resistance from the attendees, they fled. It may be that this was the local common, which was divided up among neighbouring farms. Parts of the lands there, once belonging to Chapel and Easter Lilliesleaf farms, were owned by Col. Edgar

Lilliesleaf Schuil

Hunter of Linthill and acquired by the Riddells of that Ilk (also written ‘Muir’).

Lilliesleaf Moss (li-leez-leaf-mos) n. boggy area to the south of the east end of Lilliesleaf village, known locally as simply ‘The Moss’.

Lilliesleaf Parish (li-leez-leaf-pā-reesh) n. parish in northern Roxburghshire. The parish was historically bounded by Selkirk, Bowden, Ancrum, Minto, Wilton and Ashkirk. The Parish had a church from at least 1116 and this belonged to the See of Glasgow until just before the Reformation; it was formally removed from Glasgow’s control in an act of 1641. Part of the lands were granted by David I to the monks of Kelso Abbey about 1160. The ‘manors’ of Lilliesleaf, Ancrum and Ashkirk were temporarily transferred by the English King to the Abbots of Melrose and Newbattle, as recorded in 1335/6. A charter of Pope Eugenius in 1440 revokes the union of the church there (union with what is unclear), then another charter of union by Pope Sixtus IV in 1479. Presumably the lands originally formed an estate. Robert ‘de Lylliscleue’ is recorded resigning the lands to ‘Mungo de Redale’ in 1436/7. In 1643 the total value of the Parish was recorded as £8325 18s 4d; the ‘Parsonage Teinds of the parish’ were listed as £1397, with ‘Stipend’ of £333 6s 8d. However, the teinds of the Parish were separately listed at £94 (perhaps sterling) in 1643, when they were held by the Duke of Roxburghe. In 1649 the land and crops of the Parish were valued at about £7700. In 1678 the total rents were valued at £8265 18s 4d, including the Kirk lands and teinds valued at £1257 13s 4d (and owned by the Earl of Roxburghe). The moors were frequently used for ‘field conventicles’ in the 17th century. The patronage of the Parish Kirk went to the Kers of Roxburghe after the Reformation. It is stated in 1834 that older residents could remember when there were 14 towers in the Parish. At the end of the 18th century there were 17 heritors, 630 inhabitants, 14 weavers, 13 joiners, 2 coopers, 11 tailors, and 4 licensed houses. There are Parish registers dating from 1737 (those from back to 1648 apparently became damp and decayed). A book ‘The Parish of Lilliesleaf’ was written by Rev. Arthur Pollock Sym in 1913, while Rev. James McKenzie wrote articles for the Transactions in the 1940s and an oral history project was published in 2015.

Lilliesleaf Schuil (li-leez-leaf-skil) n. school in Lilliesleaf, existing since at least the early 17th century. Patrick Nichol was recorded as school-master there in 1634. There were more than 40 pupils in the 1830s. The master there over the period 1805–50 was George Scott, and in the 1860s was James W. Mackay. There was a school-house built in about the 1820s. The present building was constructed in 1962 and extended in the 1990s. The pupils from the modern primary school attend Selkirk High School.

Lilslie (lilz-lee) n. local pronunciation of Lilliesleaf (this is the form that occurs on Blaeu's c.1650 map of Teviotdale).

lilt (lilt, lil') v., poet. to sing cheerfully, to trill a tune without singing the words, figuratively applied to birds, running water etc. – 'As arm in arm we walk'd along, The mavis lilted up his sang' [JoHa], '...thaye crye ow't for joy, thaye lilt alsua an' sing' [HSR], 'The mavis, lintie and laverock lilt Their love lays in cadence sweet' [TK], 'May you ever, happy river, lilt your joyous song' [WL], to trip, jog, skip, n. cheerful singing, lively song – 'O blythe is the lilt o' his ain mither tongue' [WS], 'Oh kindly is the Teviot tongue, Her lilt is aye sae bonny' [RH].

liltit (lil-tee', -ti') pp., arch. celebrated in song – 'Poor Sally Gray, and Geordie Gill, Are liltit here on ilka hill' [JR], 'Wi' sic abandon o' delight He liltit up his sang, lassie' [FL], 'The form -eet is employed for the ending of the preterite and past participle of weak verbs, e.g. lilteet (= lilted), sterteet (= started), etc., etc.' [ECS].

Lilylaw Ludge (li-lee-law-luj) n. name for the south lodge of the Minto estate. It is still marked on the Ordnance Survey map, at the southern end of the Minto Craigs woods (also written 'Lillilaw').

lilyoak (li-lee-āk) n., arch. lilac, Syringa vulgaris (applied to the shrub or the flower).

lily o the valley (li-lee-ō-thu-vaw-lee) n. Convallaria majalis, native flowering plant with large green leaves and small, white, bell-shaped flowers. It is traditionally worn at the 'Kirkin' of the Cornet. The origin of this custom is unclear, but since the Kirkin itself dates only to the 1880s, there is no reason to believe that the wearing of this flower is an ancient custom. It is also known as 'Our Lady's Tears', with a connection to Mary and hence St. Mary's Kirk. In religious paintings it symbolised humility.

Lilyot's Cross (lil-yits-kros) n. place near Muirhouselaw in Maxton Parish, where March Days were held in the 14th century to sort out Border feuds. Its name is the origin of the 'Maiden Lilliard' legend.

lime (līm) n. a substance made by heating and then crushing limestone, used to improve soils for agricultural use. This practice became widespread in the 18th century, leading to the development of rural locations where limestone was quarried and burned on site, such as Limekilnedge and at Larriston. Lime was later used in the building trade.

Limekilnedge (līm-kiln-ej) n. area near the highest section of the road to Newcastleton, which was formerly part of the drove road to Liddesdale, important for the coal from Plashetts that was brought over by pony. The summit, with a triangulation pillar, reaches 430 m (1182 ft). The name derives from the former lime-workings there, sometimes called 'Stobs Limery', with quarries and some ruined kilns still visible. George Hymers and George Minto were there in 1801. James Ashcroft was a lime burner there in 1841, Andrew Elliot was based there in the 1850s and William McDonald in 1861. In the early 1860s there were a large number of labourers (plus support people and family members) living in huts there, while working on the nearby tunnel; 71 people are listed on the 1861 census. It was described as a village in an 1868 directory – 'Frae Limekilnedge to Teviot The rowin hills sae green ...' [WL], '... And lang or the birds leave the hedge, I'll stride owre the Limekilnedge' [WL] (also sometimes 'the Limekilnedge', it is 'Limekill' in 1801; it is marked as 'Lymkill hedge fells' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Limekilnsyke (līm-kiln-sīk) n. former cottage near Langburnshiels in Rulewater.

Limekilnwud (līm-kiln-wud) n. former lands in Jedforest, probably near Limekilnsyke. It is listed as 'Lymekylwod' along with Ferniehirst in the Exchequer Rolls of 1538 and 1539. 'Edwarde Ollyver of Lymkylwodd' is listed among Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544.

the Limes (thu-līmz) n. Victorian house formerly overlooking Wellfield, now on Raeson Park, also once known as 'Viewfield'. It was the home of the Blenkhorns in the 1880s, and later of William Boyd Sime and Robert G. Maxwell. There is some confusion over whether this was also a former name for Sillerbuthall House.

lime-stane (līm-stān) n. lime-stone – 'But when a fermer pits doon a load o lime-stane in a field, then I gie up a' thegither ...' [DH].

Limey Sike (lī-mee-sīk) n. small stream that rises near the Nine Stane Rig and flows to the south-east to join Roughley Burn.

Limiecleuch see Lymiecleuch

Limie Sike (lī-mee-sīk) n. small stream that joins the south side of the Borthwick Water to the west of Eilrig farm.

lim (lim) n., arch. a lame person, cripple – ‘... A’d naether bumble, brizz, bate, nor blusht-bit ti play the limm an gar iz humple or turn lameter’ [ECS], ‘Ti play the limm = to mar; destroy; spoil’ [ECS] (also written ‘limm’).

limber (lim-bur) adj. lithe – ‘Nor was A tewd or mauchless, but limmber an lither’ [ECS], supple, pliant – ‘Often used when referring to boots, when it signifies pliable in the sense of yielding, giving comfort’ [ECS], (the b is sounded; noted by E.C. Smith, suggesting it was more prevalent locally than in standard English).

limmer (li-mur) n., arch. a lowly fellow, rascal, scoundrel, rogue – ‘But what gard thou steal the laird’s Jock’s horse, Fala, &c. And limmer, what gard thou steal him, quo’ he’ [CPM], ‘... Till oot again the loupin’ limmer’ [JBS], ‘Tam said, for aughts that he cou’d hear, She was a wanton limmer’ [JoHa], ‘Now, fye for shame, Alice’, cried the matron, betwixt jest and earnest, – ‘idle limmer that ye are’ [JTe], ‘Did ye ever see sic a limmer?’ [WNK], ‘... looking gruffly at his mother, he exclaimed, ‘Ye auld limmer e’e see what e’e hae brocht me to’ [BM1899], ‘His een grew bricht, and his senses dimmer, And noucht wad please till the saucy limmer ...’ [WL] (from French).

Lindean (lin-deen) n. village to the north of Selkirk, being about the largest village between Selkirk and Melrose. It was a former station on the Selkirk branch line of the Waverley Line, which ran from 1856–64. The original church was set up there about 1119 by 7 monks from Tiron, who were later moved to found Kelso Abbey in 1128. This could be the ‘Lyndene’ in the Barony of ‘Bolden’ (i.e. Bowden) recorded in 1541 when the tenants included George, William, John and Thomas ‘Elwand’.

Lindean Cleuch (lin-deenklooch) n. small stream joining the Ale Water on the north side, opposite Riddell Mill – ‘And sair he dreaded Linden Cleuch – That fairy-haunted glen; – He said the little fiddling imps Were neither deils nor men’ [JLu] (also written ‘Linden’).

the Linden (thu-lin-deen) n. Hawick Linden, a ‘junior’ rugby team, formed in 1921, and playing in the Borders District League. In 1963 they joined with the Trades in renting facilities at the Volunteer Park. Their strip consists of a royal blue shirt and socks. A history ‘Roots and Branches’ was written by B. Russell in 1997 (note the pronunciation).

Linden Crescent (lin-deen-kre-sin’, -din-) n. street built in 1893 and named after Linden Park. It is a road with a tight bend joining St. Ninian’s Road with the ‘Killin Hoose Brae’.

Linden Park (lin-din-pawrk, -deen-) n. house built as the residence of Walter Laing of Dicksons & Laings, off the Denholm road past Trow Mill. The site previously held an ancient burial cairn, dug out to prepare the foundations. It was built in 1885, designed by John Guthrie and named after the linden or lime trees that grew there. There were additions to the house, designed by J.P. Alison in 1896. There were landscaped grounds, including a small artificial lake, with islands in it. The house was one of the first locally to be lighted by electricity. It also had an ornamental garden in a Chinese style, with pagodas and bridges crossing the pond. A folly built to resemble a ruined keep was also built on the grounds. The house was later home of Walter Laing’s son, manufacturer John Turnbull Laing. It is rumoured to have been the scene of a nighttime visit by a King in a horse-drawn carriage from Hassendean Station to visit his paramour. It burned down in 1921, with the then owner Harry Smith convicted of arson. It was demolished in the 1950s and replaced by a development of bungalows including Linden House, Greenskares and the Archery). A stone bearing a verse from ‘Lay of the Last Minstrel’, carved for the house in 1885, was moved to behind the War Memorial near the Museum in 1978 – ‘...bye auld Hornshole, – a picter o gray an green – wui a glisk o the Moniment; bye Lindean an Weensland’ [ECS] (note the common local pronunciation -deen-).

Linden Terrace (lin-deen-te-ris, -din-) n. street at the top of Linden Crescent, built in 1892 and named after Linden Park.

Lindisfarne (lin-diz-fawrn) n. also known as Holy Island, the cradle of early Christianity in north-eastern England, established by St. Aidan, St. Cuthbert and St. Wilfred in the 7th century. It can be reached by foot at low tide, and contains building work dating from every century since at least the 11th. Wilton (‘Wiltuna’) is probably first mentioned about 843 in a deed of Egred, Bishop of Lindisfarne. The whole of Teviotdale appears to have been attached to the Priory’s see until transferred to Durham, perhaps in the middle of the 11th century.

Lindisfarne (lin-diz-fawrn) n. large house on the left of Stirches Road, formerly a residence of the Innes family, now split into 2 flats. It was

Lindsa (lindz-a) n. Gwladys stage name of Gladys Lindsay Watson.

Lindsay (lin-zee) n. Alexander of Dunrod (15th C.) held lands of Tofts in 1478, from the superior Archibald, Earl of Angus. This may have been the same as the lands in Kirkton Parish, although this is unclear. Andrew (14th/15th C.) son of William of the Byres and an unknown mother (he was probably illegitimate). He is probably the Andrew who was granted the lands of Stouslie and Groundistone by his father William in an undated charter, probably around 1390.

Sir David (d.bef.1357) 1st Earl of Crawford, son of Sir Alexander. He was a prisoner of the English 1307–14, signed the Declaration of Arbroath in 1320, was Custodian of Berwick in 1329, Constable of Edinburgh Castle in 1346 and was an Ambassador to England in 1349 and 1351. Probably the same 'David de Lyndeseye' was recorded in 1335/6 when he paid 20 shillings on his tenements of land in Chamberlain Newton, which had been forfeited into the hands of the English King. In 1324 married Mary, daughter and co-heiress of Alexander of Abernethy, who had earlier married Andrew of Leslie. It was presumably through her that he inherited the Roxburghshire lands. His children included: David, who was killed at the Battle of Neville's Cross; Sir James, who succeeded; Sir Alexander, who inherited his mother's property; Sir William, ancestor of the Lindsays of the Byres; and a daughter who was mother of Sir Alexander Ramsay. David (d.1490) son of John, he was 2nd Lord of the Byres. In 1484 he was Baron of Chamberlain Newton when he granted Over and Nether Newhall (later called Burnhead and Burnfoot) to James Scott of Kirkurd. In 1488 he witnessed the charter for the Barony of Branhholme. He married Janet Ramsey, but died without issue. He was succeeded as Lord Lindsay by his brother John. His seal bore a horizontal stripe with 3 stars. David (b.c.1780) servant at Minto Kaims according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. David 'Davie' (20th C.) baker in Denholm. His baker's shop at Townhead was owned by Alex Carruthers at the beginning of the 20th century, then Peter Scott and then Robert Martin, before he took over in 1934. The premises were later used as the village shop and post office. James (14th C.) granted the lands of Chamberlain Newton to William de Lindsay in about 1380. He was presumably Baron of these lands at that time, although it is unclear which

Lindsay

James he might have been, and how he was related to William. Probably the same James witnessed the confirming charter of lands in Ringwood to Melrose Abbey in 1381 (when he was described as grandson of King Robert II, who granted the charter). It is possible he was the Lord of Crawford (son of James and grandson of David, recorded in connection with Chamberlain Newton in 1335/6), who witnessed the grant of Drumlanrig to William Douglas in the period 1384–88. James (d.bef. 1488) Rector of Hawick, perhaps from 1447, when it was made a canonry and prebend of the Collegiate Church of Bothwell (St. Mary's was described as the 'Church of Hauwyc'). He was appointed by William, Earl of Douglas and Avendale, and described as his kinsman (3 separate Lindsays of Crawford had married into the Douglas family in the previous century). In 1470 he held the Rectory of Benholm (in St. Andrews Diocese) and swapped it with Gilbert Kennedy for the Canonry of Bothwell and Rectory of Hawick. There was also a dispute in 1470 over whether he really held an M.A. In 1476 it is stated that he was preparing to resign the benefices of Bothwell and Hawick and John Scott requested that he be given them by the Pope (although that does not appear to have happened). In 1480 he was Canon of the Collegiate Church of Bothwell and Prebendary of Hawick when he supplicated to the Pope to be allowed to hold 2 incompatible dignities. He was later Dean of Glasgow, taking over from Thomas Vaus in the mid-1460s. He may be the James of 'Colbanton', Rector of Douglas, secretary to the Earl of Douglas, who witnessed a charter granted by the Earl to William Cranston in 1443. He is probably the 'James Lindissay, canon of Glasgow' who witnessed a notarial instrument in 1446/7 made at Newark in which Oswald Abernethy proclaimed that his only superior was the Baron of Hawick. He is still recorded in 1487, and died shortly afterwards. James (18th C.) carpet-weaver in Hawick. His daughter Janet was baptised in 1774. Perhaps the same James, married to Elizabeth Lindsay, had children: John (b.1767), baptised in Hawick; and James (b.1769), John (again, b.1770) and James (again, b.1772). baptised in Ednam. John (d.c.1335) from the family of the Earldom of Crawford, son of Sir Philip of Staplegordon. He was a Canon of the Diocese of Glasgow who was elected as successor to Stephen de Dunnideer in 1317. This was done without the knowledge that Pope John XXII had already appointed Englishman John de Eggescliffe. However, Eggescliffe never took up the appointment, on account of Scotland being at war with England, and was translated to Ireland. He was then confirmed as Bishop in 1323. As Bishop of Glasgow, he had authority in the area around Hawick. He played an active role in national politics, supporting Robert the Bruce and Edward Baliol. He died when the Flemish ship he was on was attacked by English pirates. His seal showed a bishop beneath a canopy, with 2 shields, a fish and a bird, with the words 'S' JOHIS DEI GRA. EPI. GLASGUEN. AD CAS.' John of Dunrod (14th C.) son of Sir James of Craigie. He owned the Barony of Langnewton. In 1360 he granted the lands of Langnewton to William Cochrane of that ilk. John (d.1482) Lord Lindsay of the Byres, son of Sir William of Abercorn and the Byres. In about 1415 (after the death of his father) he had a charter for the Barony of Byres and other lands, which included Chamberlain Newton. He is recorded as Baron of Chamberlain Newton in 1444 in a charter for Borthwickshiels and in 1468 he is recorded granting the lands of 'Stowislee' (i.e. Stouslie) to John Turnbull. In 1471 the Lords decreed that Thomas Turnbull 'of Faulysh' should pay for 3 years of the 'male of the landis of Chaumerlane Newtoun'. Also in 1471 he had a precept of sasine for lands in Borthwickshiels. He was High Justiciar of Scotland North of the Forth. He married Agnes, daughter of Robert Stewart, 1st Lord Lorn. He was succeeded in turn by his sons David, John and Patrick. His children included: David, 2nd Lord; John, 3rd Lord; Patrick, 4th Lord; Margaret, who married Walter Stewart, 1st Lord Innermeath and secondly married Henry Wardlaw (Baron of Wilton); Christian, who firstly married John, Master of Seton and secondly married Robert Cunningham, 2nd Earl of Glencairn (who was Baron of Hassendean); and Mariot, who married John Hay, 1st Lord Hay of Yester. He must have lived to be quite old. John of Wauchope (d.1505) from the ancient Dumfriesshire family, probably the 12th Laird. He was witness to a sasine for George Douglas, Master of Angus in 1499. He held the lands of Fiddleton and others prior to them being sold about 1506. He was fined for not appearing at the Justice-aire held in Dumfries in 1504, to give suit for his lands of Hoddam, Langrigs and Wauchope. In 1505 he was hanged at Dumfries for the murder of Bartholomew Glendinning and his brother Simon. Bartholomew was the local Sheriff on official business to 'poind' a third of the lands at the insistence of Margaret, widow of his father, John Lindsay. Thereafter his goods and lands were forfeited, although Wauchope was recovered by the family shortly afterwards. The lands in Ewesdale appear to have included Meikledale, Arkleton, Terrona, Flask, Howgill, Glendivan, Sorbie, Burngrains, Bush, Bliss and Wrae. John (15th/16th C.) listed in a letter of remission of 1510 for assisting rebels. He is named along with David Scott of Galalaw, plus John and Walter Scott. John (17th C.) among the men declared as fugitives in 1684 for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. He was a tenant in 'Spittal-lands'. Patrick (1566-1644) son of John, related to the Lindsays of Edzell in Angus. He was minister of Guthrie near Arbroath, and then St. Vigeans. He attended several General Assemblies, and was a strong supporter of the episcopalian views of James VI. He became Bishop of Ross in 1613 and then Archbishop of Glasgow in 1633. He must have temporarily held the superiority of lands in Minto, since in 1634 he gave a charter of confirmation for Barnhills to William Bennet. However, in 1638 he was deposed for urging his presbyters to use the 'New Service Book', and although ill he escaped to England and died in poverty in York. He was the last Bishop until the Restoration. Sir Simon of Arthuret (13th/14th C.) son of Sir John, Lord Chamberlain, who was the first of the Lindsays to be granted lands in Wauchopedale. He is recorded in English documents of 1278/9 and 1281/2. He was appointed Captain of Eskdale by Edward I in 1298. His brother Sir Philip had fought with Edward against the Scots, but went over to Bruce's side at Bannockburn. He himself was powerful on the English side, being effectively Warden of the Western Marches. In 1300 he was appointed as Keeper of the late John Wake's lands of Liddel and Hermitage, separately referred to as 'the fortresses of Lydel and Eremitage-Soules' and 'the castle of Hermitage, the mote of Lydel, and the lands of the valley of Lydel both in England and Scotland belonging to the late John Wake; this probably refers to the early castles of Liddel Strength and Hermitage. But he must only have held this position for a few years. He became a prisoner after Bannockburn and forfeited all his lands etc. However, his son Sir John received a charter of Wauchope from the King in 1321. His descendants held the lands until the end of the 17th century, and claimed to be the oldest representatives of the Lindsay Clan. Sir William (14th C.) granted lands including those of Borthwickshiels in the 4th year of the reign of Robert II (i.e. c.1375), the lands having been resigned by Laurence Abernethy. It is unclear which William he was, possibly William of Abercorn and the Byres, or William of Rosie and Logie. It is also unclear if the family ever had a direct connection with the Borthwick valley. In the 10th year of Robert II there was a confirming charter from James of Lindsay (presumably a relative) to him for the lands of Chamberlain Newton. Sir William of the Byres (d.1414) son of Sir William and Christiana Mure. He was granted lands in the Barony of Chamberlain Newton, including Stouslie and Groundistone, by King David II 'through forfeiture of certain lieges'. In an undated charter (probably around 1390, based on the witnesses) he granted Stouslie and part of Groundistone to his son Andrew, while part had previously been infefted to William Gourlay. He was also recorded as superior of the lands of Borthwickshiels. He married Christiana, daughter of Sir William Keith. He was succeeded by his son John, who was 1st Lord Lindsay of the Byres. William of Garmilton (d.bef. 1468) resigned the lands of 'Stowislee' (i.e. Stouslie) in the Barony of Chamberlain Newton to John Turnbull. His relative John Lord of the Byres was Baron of Chamberlain Newton at the time. William (18th C.) cooper in Hawick. In 1724 he married Agnes Armstrong, who was also from Hawick. Their children included Adam (b.1728) and William (b.1732). Rev. William (b.1876) born in Coatbridge, he graduated in 1901 and became assistant minister at Shettleston and South Leith. He then became minister of St. John's in Hawick 1906 and was translated to Newbattle in 1913. He was speaker at the 1908 Colour Bussing (formerly also spelled 'Lindesay', 'Lyndesay', 'Lyndeseye', etc.).

Lindsay's Corner (lin-zeez-kör-nur) n. blind corner in Denholm, on the way into the village from Hawick. A shop there was run by the Lindsay family for most of the 20th century, first as a bakers and then a grocers. The business also used to have a van, which drove around the rural areas, this being particularly during WWII. Although the shop was sold in the 1990s, the popular name is still used.

Lindsay-Watson see Watson

line (līn) n. a note, authorization – 'A got a line frae the doctor', 'here's ma bookie's line'.

Lineart Moss (li-nur'-mos) n. boggy area on Hawick Common near Pilmuir farm, also called 'St. Leonard's Moss'. It was mentioned in descriptions of the Common in the dispositions given in 1767, where it is also referred to as 'the Lineart' (one name is presumably a corruption of the other).

lineen (li-neen) n., arch. a lining, an inside cover, 'A guid leineen = a satisfying meal' [ECS].

linen (li-nin) n. a cloth made from thread obtained from the fibres of the flax plant. In the 18th century and before, it was common for everyone to have their own small plot of flax or 'lint', which they would 'swingle' and 'heckle' to produce linen thread to weave into clothing. Linen weaving was formerly known at Hassendean, Northhouse, Newbigging, Hawick Shiel and Denholm, among other places. There was also some linen industry in Hawick itself, with a weaving shop manufacturing linen checks from about the middle of the 18th century. A little later there was a factory making 'inkle' (or linen tapes), before hosiery took over. The cloth came in either the rawer green form, or was bleached and sold particularly at St. Boswells Fair. The last weavers of linen in the Borders were still active up until about the 1830s in the St. Boswells area (see also lining).

Linfit (lin-fi') n. former school in Yarrow Water, situated near the church in the settlement of Yarrow. The school had a good reputation and had many boarders in the early 1800s, with as many as 100 pupils (as describe by Rev. James Russell). This included Christian Scott from Todshawhaugh and Clement, Tom Brown from the Tower Inn in Hawick and the 'Dandie Dinmont' (i.e. Davidson) family from Liddesdale. The teacher who made the school so well-known was James Scott, who served there 1784–1818. He took over from Alexander ('Sandy') Wilson.

ling (līng) n., poet. heather – 'Ho! For the blades of Harden. Ho! for the pikes that cross. Ho! For the king of lance and ling – A Scott on the Et-trick moss!' [WHO], '... He heard the whirr of the grouse's wing And the drone of a bee as it lit on the ling' [WHO], 'Whaur the mists on the black hills hing, And the broon burns that, oot o' the ling, The scent o' the peat moss bring' [WL], another species of sedge, e.g. hare-tail cotton-grass or deer's-hair moss – 'Alas! my muse she scarce can sing, She's sapless as winter ling' [JoHa].

linge-backit (ling-gul-baw-kee', -ki') adj., arch. having a long, weak back.

linge-end (ling-gul-end) n., arch. point of a waxed thread.

lingelt (ling-ul') pp., adj., arch. hanging in a clinging way – 'The linglet tails o' 'er skirt' [GW] (also written 'liglet').

Linglie (ling-lee) n. former farm over the Ettrick to the north of Selkirk and the name of the road there, as well as a nearby hill containing a linear earthwork. It was long owned by the Burgh of Selkirk. Robert Scott was tenant there in 1708 (note that it may sometimes be confused with Singlie).

Linhope (li-nup, lin-hōp) n. farm between Teviothead and Mossypaul, once owned by William Aitchison, who was long involved in local farmers groups. It was listed along with Frostylee and Phaup in the possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1653, 1661 and in the marriage contract of Anne Scott of Buccleuch in 1663; these were united with lands in Wilton and others into 'the tenement of Blackgraine'. However, it appears to have been in the Barony of Cavers when that superiority was inherited by Sir William Douglas in 1687 and by his brother Archibald in 1698. James Grieve was tenant of the Duchess of Buccleuch there in 1694. It was surveyed in 1718 when it covered 2669 acres and was bounded by Phaup, Skelfhill, Gorrenberry, Billhope, Carewoodrig, Burnfoot in Ewes, Eweslees, Lymiecleuch and Binks. William Little was there in 1724. John Elliot was there in 1733. It was leased from the Buccleuch Estates to John Elliot (of Borthwickbrae) and Walter Grieve (of Branxholme Park) in 1744. James Dickson was there in 1786. William Aitchison was recorded as farmer there in at least 1792–97, with William Grieve as a herd at the same time. William Little was shepherd there in 1861. The 'Horn Brig' lies just to the north, and on the hillsides near here can be seen the hollowed-out tracks of the old 'Read Roads'. It is also here that the route of the Mossypaul ride-out comes down the hill to meet the main road – '...braw, braw braes o' Linhope and lofty Mossypaul' [T], 'Little know you of our moss troopers' might; Linhope and Sorbie true, Tundhope and Milburn too, Gentle in manner, but lions in fight' [ES], 'The lasses o' Lin'op are braw, An' them o' Mossypaul they are bonnie; There's

Haz'lop an' Fa'nash an' a', Aul' Commonsides yields na to mony' [JoHa], 'The lark ascends from Linhope's verdant sward ...' [IWS] (the name derives from Old English 'hlynn hop', meaning 'the valley with the waterfall'; the name appears in 1604 as 'Lennop', 'Lindhope' in 1653, 'Lenhope' in 1661 and 1663, 'Linhopie' in 1687, then 'Linhop', achieving its modern form by the end of the 17th century, but being 'Linehope' in 1718).

Linhope Braeheid (li-nup-brā-heed) n. former farmstead just south of Linhope, to the east of the A7. George Scott was shepherd there in 1851 and John Cairns in 1861.

Linhope Grain (li-nup-grān) n. former name for the small streams east of Linhope, which form the headwaters of the Frostlie Burn.

lining (li-ning) n., arch. linen, formerly used to make shirts and undergarments – '...28s. Scots for 3½ ells of sarking lyneing' [BR1638] (many spelling variants exist; see also linen).

link (link) v., arch. to move with speed, skip, trip along, walk briskly – 'A' the day fu' blithe and cheerie, I gaed linkin' but and ben!' [JT], '... And they a' gang a' linkin' To seek their Hogmanay' [JT], 'In the bitter back end He will link down the glen ...' [WL].

link (link) n., arch. a loop in a chain used for hanging a pot over a fire – '...hang the supper in the tailor's link – That's full twa feet aboon ilk burning spark, To keep the supper back, an' keep the lown at wark' [JR], a loop in a river or land enclosed by such loops – 'All the links of the bonny Teviot and Slitterick' [ES], 'The lambs loup as light by the aul' foggit thorn, The rose blooms as bright i' links o' the burn' [JoHa], 'The wild green links o' Liddisdale' [HSR], a loop in a figurative sense – '...and the lave o the followers are weel strung oot doon the links o the road' [DH], v. to walk arm in arm – '...told her to stand there till he thrashed Jock for daring to 'link his lass'' [HAST1890].

linker (ling-kur) n. a person who connects parts of a knitwear garment, also called a 'greazy binnder' or 'collar-binnder'.

linkie (ling-kee) n., arch. a smart girl, lively young female, a roguish, untrustworthy or tricky person (usually a woman).

linkit (lingkee', -ki') pp., arch. linked – 'Aff to a weddin' her kimmers hae gane: Ilk wi' her laddie has linkit awa'' [JJ].

links (lingks) n., pl., poet. fields, especially grassy lands near the sea – '...we fand it in the links o' the wud' [HSR], 'Then leave the links and lanes beside the sea, And rove the pathless solitudes with me' [HSR].

linky (ling-kee) adj., arch. deceitful, fickle (especially said of women).

Linlithgow (lin-lith-gō) n. town in West Lothian, between Edinburgh and Grangemouth, one of the 4 Scottish Burghs created by David I. They have been riding their marches since at least 1541. The festival is now held on the first Tuesday after the second Thursday in June, involves riding to Blackness, having a procession three times round the Cross, and has reciprocal ties with Lanark's festival. Population (1991) 11,866.

Linlithgow (lin-lith-gō) n. James (16th C.) listed as a 'grief' (i.e. grieve) in the 1574 last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch, when he was owed for his fee. It is unclear whether or not he was local. William (15th/16th C.) listed in 1526 among the Borderers (led by the Homes and Walter Scott of Branxholme) pardoned for an attack on the Earl of Arran. His surname is given as 'Linlithqw'.

Linlithgow measure (lin-lith-gō-me-shur) n., arch. standard for measuring the capacity of dry goods, based on a standard of the boll kept in Linlithgow. This was used in Scotland from 1661, with the standard being about 145 litres for wheat, beans and meal, but about 212 litres for barley, oats and malt.

linn (lin) n. a waterfall, pool at the foot of one – 'And now young Keeldar reach'd the stream, Above the foamy lin; The Border lances round him gleam, And force the warrior in' [JL], 'The only tongue that they might hear Was the lynne's deep murmuring fa'' [JTe], 'The rill is now a raging flood, And roars adown the craggie linn' [JTe], '... But aye, as yet, escap'd that linn Owre whilk sae mony fa's' [JoHa], 'The burnie louns, wi' fitfu' din, Adown the linn sae craggie' [JoHa], '... Bout bogles, brounies, ghaists an' fays, an' kelpies o' the linn' [JJ], 'The wee waterfa' or the fifty-feet linn' [HSR], 'The brown trout lay at the leap o' the linn Oaring the stream with a lazy fin' [WHO], '... Doon their ain romantic linns Is the fairst spot o' a' [TK], a steep ravine, narrow gorge – 'Lyn, two opposite contiguous cliffs or heughs covered with brushwood' [JaS], '... That forms the linn where hazels twine With woodbine and with thorn' [JJW] (from Old English; also spelled 'lin', 'lynn' and 'lynne'; the former meaning occurs in place names such as 'Robert's Linn', 'Hawkhass Linn' and 'Penton Linns', while the latter occurs in e.g. the 'Leap Linns', 'Lynnwood').

lin-pin (lin-pin) n., arch. a lynch-pin.

lint (lin', lint) n., arch. flax, a small plant with blue flowers, Linum usitatissimum, formerly grown for its fibrous stems, which were prepared to make linen. Used either as animal fodder or for flax prepared for spinning. Formerly it was much grown around Hawick, with even each hind having his own plot. In the early 19th century a ploughman in Hobkirk Parish received a cupful of lint seed as part of his payment in kind. The cultivation of the plants and preparation of the lint was once a very labour intensive operation, with the stalks lying 'nine nights' in a pond or pit of water, then using a 'break' (or 'breek') to split the fibres, followed by the 'swingling' – '... Two stones of lint £7' [BR1639], 'Item whatsoever person that steillis any of their neighbours peittis, turffis, green kail, corne, lint, hemp, ...' [BR1640], 'A party is fined for steeping lint in Teviot at the yard foots' [JW1702], 'Ane bruisset reed he sallna brik, an' reekin' liny he sallna slocken ...' [HSR] (from Mediæval English, the word survives in Linthill near Lilliesleaf, Linthaughlee near Jedburgh, Linthaugh near Ashkirk, Lint Haughs near Denholm, and Lintdub Knowes near Harden).

Lintalee (lin-tu-lee) n. house about a mile south of Jedburgh on the banks of the Jed Water and formerly in the Jed Forest. It was residence of Sir James Douglas from around 1316 when he was Warden of the Marches. It is also the site of a battle where Douglas' men defeated those of the Earl of Arundel in the Spring of 1317. Some were ambushed using intertwined birch branches in a narrow pass, perhaps at the Willowford Burn, where Sir Thomas of Richmond was killed. Another English group under a priest named Ellis was discovered feasting near Lintalee itself and also defeated. The Englishmen who escaped with tales of defeat convinced Arundel to turn his huge army South again. The manor house there continued to be used by the Lords of Jedforest into the 15th century. In 1457 it was given for the use of Andrew Ker of Cessford, Bailie of the Lordship. William Ker was recorded there in 1494/5. It was valued at 25 shillings in 1538 and also 1541, when the tenant was Ralph Ker. John Douglas was tenant of the Earl of Angus there in 1617, after the removal of James Ker. It was owned by the Marquis of Douglas in 1643 and 1678, when valued at £160. In 1694 it 'Mr Thomas Sheill' was taxed for having 10 hearths at the house there; this seems likely to have been the same man who was minister at Robertson Kirk. John Turner paid tax for 21 windows there in 1748. Archibald Douglas of Douglas was recorded as owner in 1788 (also known as 'Linthaughlee', it is 'Linthalchlie' in 1439, 'Lintole' in 1457, 'Lyn-tounlee' in 1493, 'Lintole' in 1517, 'Lintolee' in 1539, 'Lintole' in 1541, 'Lintillie' in 1617, and 'Lintlauglie' and 'linthaughlie' in 1694; it is 'Lyn-taly' on Blaeu's 1654 map; the origin of the name is probably just 'the clearing where flax grows').

lint-brake (lin'-brāk) n., arch. a flax-breaking instrument – 'Lint-brake. An instrument used for breaking or softening flax, in place of the fluted rollers of the flax-mill, previous to the operation of rubbing and swingling, Teviotd.' [JoJ] (cf. lint-breek).

lint-breek (lin'-breek) n., arch. an instrument for breaking or softening lint before swingling (also written 'lint-break'; cf. breek and lint-brake).

Lintdub Knowes (lin'-dub-nowz) n. hilly area just to the north of Harden House (the name is presumably from a marshy area where flax once grew).

Lintdykes (lin'-diks) n. former place name in Lilliesleaf Parish, recorded as 'Lintedikes' in the early 13th century when it was part of a grant from Walter of Riddell to Melrose Abbey. The lands had previously been held in dowry by Matilda Corbet.

lint-fever (lin'-fee-vur) n., arch. former name for a condition that people sometimes got when they were first involved in 'swingling' lint – 'The first attempt at swingling was often accompanied by an illness called the Lint-fever, supposed to be owing to the dust entering the nostrils and eyes' [JAHM].

Linthaugh (lin'-hawf) n. former name for an area near the river in Denholm, where flax was steeped in the 18th century. It probably refers to the flat piece of land lying to the west of the mouth of the Dean Burn (also 'Lint Haughs').

Linthaugh (lin'-hawf) n. former farm on the north side of the Ale Water, roughly opposite Synton Mill (marked on Pont's c.1590 map and Blaeu's 1654 map as 'Linthauch').

Linthaughlee see Lintalee

Linthill (lin'-hil) n. Victorian mansion between Lilliesleaf and Midlem, once home of the Homes. There is a walled garden nursery there. It may be that this was the same place once called Midlem Mill, with the main house rebuilt after having been sold by the Elliots in about 1756. The land was owned by Rev. William Hunter of Lilliesleaf in the early 18th century, when the part on the south side of the Ale, referred to as 'Union Hall', was united with Midlem Mill on the north side, the new estate being called Linthill, or 'Linthills'. Dr. Hunter paid tax for 13 windows there in 1748. The estate may also at some point owned by the Kerrs of Cavers Carre. The estate was inherited through marriage by the Riddells of Camieston (a cadet line of the Riddells of that Ilk). The lands were valued at £171 10s in 1788, split between Union Hall (valued at £121 10s) and Ryecheester and Quartersides (valued at £50). William Riddell sold it to William Currie in 1822, and Curries lived there through much of the 19th century. A plan of the estate from 1820 is in the National Archives. Sir Frederick Graham held the hunting rights there in the mid-1900s – 'And sweeter walks ane canna get Than walks by fair Linthill, Where murmuring soft the river sings To rose and daffodil' [FL] (also written 'Lint Hill'; it is 'Linthath' on Roy's c.1750 map).

lintie (lin'-ee, lin-tee) n. linnet, often used figuratively to suggest cheerfulness – '...And linties sang their tunefu' lays Amang the wuds o' Teviotdale' [JoHa], 'Ye burnies poplin through the grove, Where cushats coo and linties sing' [JoHa], '...he's off to see if he can cage the lintie and bring her here' [JEDM], 'The hawk that built upon the rock, And the lintie in the shaw' [HSR], '...That calls to mind the lintie's sang And tender lambkin's bleat' [AO], 'And the lintie in her mither's throat, it's cheerfu' music still, Has socht a nest in the yellow gorse beside the murmurin' Till' [JYH], 'The mavis, lintie and laverock lilt ...' [TK], 'I hear the linties in the whins Where Ettrick rins' [JBS].

Lintinhaa (lin-tin-haw) n. lintin hall, former farmstead in roughly the same location as Stintyknowe (marked on Stobie's 1770 map, and given the similarity of names, possibly an error).

Lintobank (lin'-u-bawngk) n. former name for lands in Lilliesleaf Parish, near Riddell. Robert Wilson was recorded there in 1581/2. The name appears as 'Lintobank tunc Riddell nuncupate' in 1602 and appears to have replaced the earlier 'Eschetho'. In 1636 it was a 4-pound land when inherited by Sir Walter Riddell of that Ilk and was still a 4-pound land when inherited by Sir John Riddell in 1669 (it was 'Lynthopbank' in 1581/2).

Linton (lin'-in, lin-tin) n. village and parish in east Roxburghshire on the Kale Water, north of Morebattle, famous for its Norman Church and legendary 'worm' (which, sadly only dates to the 17th century). The lands there were owned by the Somervilles in the early 15th century and by the Kers of Linton in the 16th and 17th centuries. An account of the parish was written by A.O. Mackie and M.J.H. Robson in 1960 – 'The wode Laird of Laristone Slew the worm of Worme's Glen, And wan all Linton parochine' [T] (the origin is probably Old English 'llyn tun', meaning the farm by the lake, since much of the Parish was formerly under water; formerly spelled 'Lyntoune' and variants).

Linton (lin'-in) n. Adam (18th C.) tenant in West Buccleuch in 1728. He married Ann Martin and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1728. Adam (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Betty Scott and their children, baptised in East Bank Kirk, included John (b.1813), Helen (b.1814), William (b.1816), Margaret (b.1818), Jean (b.1821) and Nancy (b.1830). Adam (b.c.1810) cattle-dealer of Newton-muir. He was an agricultural labourer at Broadleehope in Castleton Parish in 1841. He was one of the earliest Trustees of Hawick Congregational (then Evangelical Union) Kirk, from about 1848. His family was living at Newton Mains in Wilton Parish in 1851 (but he appears to have been absent during the census). In 1837 he married Margaret Aitken, who was from Wilton. Their children, mostly baptised in Lilliesleaf Parish, included: John (b.1838/9); Esther (b.1840); Sarah (b.1841); Cecilia (b.1843); John (b.1845); George (b.1847); Andrew (b.1848); William (b.1850); and Janet (b.1854). Adam (b.1820/1) framework knitter in Hawick. In 1851 he was living on 'Mill Bank St', probably the Mill Port and in 1861 was at 11 Back Row. He married Margaret Wood (from Jedburgh) in Hawick in 1850 and his second wife was Henrietta from Selkirk. His children included Mary (b.1860/1). Alexander (b.1818/9) born in Cavers Parish. In 1861 he was a shepherd at Allygrain. His wife was Jane and their children included Beatrice, John, Walter, Sarah and Jane. Agnes (b.c.1780) resident of Hawick. In 1841 she was a widow living at about 17 Loan with her children William, Kirsty and Janet. Andrew (b.c.1785) shop-keeper on the High Street. He is listed as a grocer in Pigot's 1837 directory and a meal-dealer in 1841. In 1841 he was living at about No. 29, with his wife Margaret and children Jessie and Walter. He married Margaret Michie in 1814 and their children, baptised in East Bank Kirk, were: Jessie or Janet (b.1815); Mary (b.1818); Adam (1820–79), stocking-maker in Hawick; Walter (b.1824); and Walter (again, b.1827). He probably also had a daughter Christian (b.1819/20) who married Robert Johnston; his daughter Janet and son Walter were living with the Johnstons in 1851. Andrew (19th C.) married Mary Stevenson in Robertson in 1825. James (18th C.) from Etrick Parish. In Cavers in 1728 he married Margaret, sister of John Elliot in Penchrise. James (19th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. His marriage to an unnamed woman is recorded in 1745. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His unnamed child with a Paterson was baptised in 1776. James (b.c.1770s) weaver at Northhouse recorded on the ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish in 1799. Perhaps the same weaver James was at Burnfoot Mill on the Militia ballot in Wilton Parish in 1801. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Helen Henry and their daughter Helen was baptised in 1819. James (19th C.) married Margaret Hogg in Hawick in 1836. James (19th C.) married Barbara Wilson in Wilton in 1837. James (b.1814/5) born in Wilton Parish, he was a handloom weaver in Hawick. In 1841 he was living at the West Port and in 1851 on Upper Damside. He married Helen McConnel in 1838, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Wilton Parishes. Their children included Margaret (b.1840), Agnes (b.1842), James (b.1843), Betsy (b.1845/6) and James (again, b.1850), Agnes (b.1852) and Alexander (b.1854). The last 4 children were baptised in Hawick Free Kirk. John (b.c.1770s) servant at Braidlie according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. He was listed as a shepherd at Braidlie on the 1801 ballot. He could be the same man as the farm worker around Teviothead. John (b.c.1780) born at Kirkpatrick-Juxta in Dumfriesshire, he married Sarah, daughter of John Armstrong from Teviothead. He was a farm worker, probably shepherd, at Skelfhill, Whitriggs, Ramsaycleuch and Craikshiel, as well as probably Whitehillbrae and Pyat Knowe near Dodburn. He married Sarah, who was born in Teviothead, daughter of John Armstrong and Isabella Knox. Their children were: John (b.1805); Elizabeth (b.1807); Adam (b.1808); Helen (b.1810), baptised in East Bank Kirk; George (b.1812); Andrew (b.1814); Jean

(b.1816); Alexander (b.1818), baptised in East Bank Kirk; Janet (b.1821), baptised in East Bank Kirk; William (b.1822); and Robert (b.1825), who married Helen Stoddart and secondly Barbara Little Armstrong and emigrated. He and his wife were still alive in 1861, residing with their son Robert at West Cote. John (b.c.1815) recorded as a publican at about 7 Sandbed in 1841. He was an agricultural labourer at the same address in 1851. Joseph (18th C.) recorded in 'Bouand...' (probably Bowanhill) in Cavers Parish. His son Adam was baptised there in 1727. Richard (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Isabel Oliver and they had an unnamed child baptised in East Bank Kirk in 1818. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. His marriage to an unnamed woman is recorded in 1712. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of the Hawick area. He married Margaret Elliot in Robertson in 1798 and their daughter Jean was baptised in East Bank Kirk in 1806. Perhaps the same Robert was a drover at Harden Burnfoot on the 1812 ballot for the Militia in Robertson Parish. He could be the son of John baptised in Robertson in 1774. Robert (19th C.) married Jean Park in Lilliesleaf in 1839. Robert (b.1825) born at Craikshiel, son of farm worker John and Sarah Armstrong. He was shepherd at West Cote in 1861. He married Helen Stoddart, with whom he had 2 children, John and Adam. He secondly married Barbara Little Armstrong, daughter of Francis, who was shepherd at Henwoodie. They emigrated to Australia, where he managed sheep stations for James Glenny Wilson (from Hawick). They then moved to New Zealand, where they still have descendants. Walter (b.1824/5) woollen framework knitter in Hawick. In 1861 he was living at 3 Tannage Close. His wife was Jane (from Lochmaben) and their children included James and Jane. Walter (b.1826/7) joiner in Hawick. He married Joan Robson in 1851, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Wilton Parishes. In 1861 he was living at 74 High Street with his wife Joan (from Wilton). Walter (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Jane Bell in 1854. William (18th C.) married Mary Paterson in Hobkirk Parish in 1773. William (19th C.) shepherd at Millburn. He is listed there among heads of households in 1840 and 1841. William (b.1805/6) framesmith on the High Street according to Slater's 1852 directory (where he is 'Lanton'). In 1851 he was a 'Woollen Power Loom Waver' at 3 Bridge Street (perhaps the modern No. 20). In 1844 he married Janet Thomson, who was from Chesters. Their children, baptised in Hawick Free Kirk, included Margaret (b.1846), Agnes (b.1848) and Janet (b.1850) (also written 'Lintoun'; note that this name is sometimes confused with Sinton in written records).

Linton's Close (lin'-inz-klōs) n. passageway in the mid-19th century, next to the current Bank of Scotland, 7 High Street, named after a one-time owner of the property (there could be confusion with Sinton's Close, since 29 High Street is marked 'Linton' on Wood's 1824 map).

the Linton Worm (thū-lin'-in-wu-rum) n. mythical creature said to have lived in a cave at Linton Hill, near the village of Linton in the 12th century and slain by Somerville of Larriston. A carving over the door of Linton Church commemorates the event. It is also known as the worm of 'Wormiston' – 'Pure blows the summer breeze o'er moor and dell, Since first in Wormiswood the serpent fell' [JL].

linsey-woolsey (lin-zee-wool-zee) n., arch. a fine cloth made of a combination of flax and wool. It was manufactured locally by hand-loom in the late 18th and early 19th centuries.

Lionfield Moss (lī-in-feeld-mos) n. small body of water beyond Stirches, lying just to the west of Welsh's Hill.

the Lion o Liddesdale (thū-lī-in-ō-li-diz-dāl) n. name of a horse-drawn coach, which operated out of Langholm around 1900, taking passengers on a tour of the Ewes, Hermitage, Liddell and Esk valleys (as described in the Border Magazine for 1898). It was drawn by 4 horses and had 'Lion of Liddesdale' painted in large letters on the side. This was also the nickname of Rev. John Law, minister at Newcastleton in the early 1800s.

Lisle (lī-ul) n. Robert (18th C.) from Acton in Northumberland. He purchased the Stonedge estate from William (or perhaps Thomas) Scott in the mid-1700s. However, he only paid the first installment, with the final settlement not taking place during the lifetime of the vendor. He sold it again to James Chisholme in 1793. Thomas Scott of Bonchester was factor for him for a while. In 1788 (and continued in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls) he is listed as owner of the ‘Easter Division of Stonedge and Howa’ (excluding the parts sold to Elliot of Woollee), as well as the Wester Division, his lands being valued at £1191 2s 10d in 1788 (and £1187 14s 5d in 1811). By 1875 Sir Walter Elliot of Woflelee owned half of Langraw ‘in name of Robert Lisle’ (also written ‘Lyle’).

Lithgow (lith-gow) n. Alexander (18th C.) recorded as ‘Mr’ in 1741 when he witnessed a baptism for workman William Graham in Hawick in 1741. He may have been son of Rev. Robert. Andrew (17th/18th C.) excise officer in Hawick. In 1716 he was rebuked by the Session for being involved in late night drunkenness at Thomas Huggan’s house. He apparently went to break up the fight between Huggan and William Oliver. He was witness to the ‘irregular marriage’ of fellow excise officer Thomas Hume of Hawick in 1718. Helen (17th/18th C.) sister of Rev. Robert of Ashkirk and daughter of Alexander of Drygrange. She is said to have married James Anderson (although this could be confusion with a later James Henderson) and had 3 children: Thomas; John; and Jean, who married George Thorburn, smith in Ashkirk, whose grand-daughter married John Eckford, hosier in Hawick. Her nephew Hector Lithgow left a small fortune, which Eckford spent his life trying to prove a claim to. Rev. John (b.c.1620) son of Thomas, portioner at Redpath, Earlston and Isobel Haliburton. He moved from a charge in Ireland some time before 1646 to become minister at Ewes Kirk. In 1664 he refused to conform to Episcopacy and was deprived of his living. This happened ostentatiously, with the messenger delivering the Act of Suspension right after the Sunday sermon with the congregation still present. He moved to his property at Redpath near Leaderfoot (near where another outed minister, Henry Erskine, lived). He continued to preach at conventicles and in 1682 was fined 5000 merks and sentenced to imprisonment on the Bass Rock. However, he escaped this harsh punishment, on the promise of leaving the country, probably residing in England. He returned to Ewes in 1689 after the Revolution, was restored by Act of Pariliamment in 1690 and was also a member of the Assembly. He retired to Redpath in 1694. He married firstly Isobel Weir and secondly Isobel Scott, widow of James Johnstone of Westerraw. His children included: Thomas, with whom he owned land at Bodisbeck; and Janet, who married Nichol Elliot of Unthank. Miss M. (19th C.) assistant teacher in Newcastleton in the 1860s. Rev. Robert (c.1680–1729) youngest son of Alexander of Drygrange and Margaret, daughter of Gavin Elliot of Grange. He had a sister called Helen. He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1701 and became Chaplain to Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto (his uncle). He was licensed to preach by Edinburgh Presbytery in 1707, called to Ashkirk in 1710 and ordained there in 1711. He was described as a moving preacher, who was pious, judicious and possessing a great deal of ingenuity. In 1711 he performed the baptism for a son of Walter Scott of Woll, although it took place in Selkirk. He married Isabella Langlands (who was related to the Hawick and Wilton ministers of the 17th century), daughter of Robert Langlands of that Ilk, and she died in Edinburgh in 1740. Their children included: Alexander (b.1719), who married Helen Pope and served with the 42nd Regiment; Robert (b.1721), who became a wright's apprentice in Edinburgh in 1737; May (b.1723); Margaret (b.1726); Jean (b.1728); and Helen (b.1730) (also spelled 'Lythgow').

litster (lit-stur) n., arch. a dyer of cloth – '... the person of John Scott, litster ...' [BR], '... Jas. Scott, littster, lat baylyea in Hawick' [BR1694], '... and stuff petticoat which James Scott, litstor, or his son, dyed' [BR1697] (spelled 'litstar' and other variants).

Litster (lit-stur) n. Henry (18th/19th C.) hind at Dykes. He married Margaret Rutherford in Ancrum in 1817 and their children included: Janet (b.1818); George (b.1820); and twins John and Henry (b.1822). The baptisms were performed before the Jedburgh Burgher Congregation and recorded in Cavers Parish.

litted (li-teed) pp., arch. dyed – '[Margaret Drummond was convicted of stealing] ome ells of litted stuiif' [BR1697].

litten (li'-in) pp. lit, lighted – 'efter the fyre was litten oo didni feel is nithert' (this is 'lit' or 'lighted' in standard English).

litter (li'-ur) n., arch. a carrier, particularly for bodies, probably a hand-barrow for carting the coffin – '... that in all time coming the Toun Litter when desired by any country people, they shall pay in to the Treasurer half a crown each time ...' [BR1722], 'Received from mr Ogilbie of Tiendside for the litter ... 1 10 0' [BR1729], 'Paid John Aitkin, cooper, for ye hooping of ye litter' [BR1736].

Little (li', li'-ul) n. Adam (1754/5–1808) died at Larriston. He married Margaret Common, who died in Newcastleton in 1846, aged 95. Their children included: James (1794/5–1831); and 2 who died in infancy. They are buried in Ettleton Cemetery along with his sister Mary (1756/7–1816). Agnes (b.1821/2) from Berwickshire, she was a shopkeeper in Denholm in the 1850s. She lived on the Canongate. Andrew (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1623 as 'Andro Lytle' when Rowie Foster was found guilty of stealing a horse from the lands of Chapelhill. It is unclear if this was the local Chapelhill or another one. Andrew (b.c.1780) brother of John, tenant at Colterscleuch. He was listed being also at Colterscleuch on the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish. Andrew (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Moorfield. He is listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835. Andrew (19th C.) listed in 1852 as carrier between Denholm and Selkirk once a week. Andrew (19th C.) shepherd at Gorrenberry in the 1800s. His daughter Margaret married Alexander Turnbull, servant at Wolfelee. Ann (18th C.) cook at Dinlabyre in 1785, when she was working for William Oliver. Archibald (17th C.) resident of Denholm, listed in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls as 'Elder', with 'younger' (presumably his son) listed separately. He was taxed for 2 hearths, suggesting that he may have been a smith or in a related trade. Archibald (17th/18th C.) listed as 'younger' in Denholm on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Archibald (17th/18th C.) 'fowler' in Hawick Parish. In 1720 he and smith William Young witnessed a baptism for Adam Brown 'Headhous'. He is probably the Archibald, son to William in Hawick, who in 1716 married Agnes Learmonth from Kelso. They had a child Janet baptised in 1717, with witnesses wigmaker Robert Miles and tailor James Boston; he was there described as 'offier [presumably officer] ...'. Archibald (b.1778/9) tailor in Denholm according to the lists for the Militia ballot in Cavers Parish in 1799 and 1801. He is also listed as a tailor in Denholm in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He married Barbara Jamieson (from Selkirk), and their children included: Margaret (b.1805); James (b.1808); John (b.1811); William (b.c.1815); Crichton (b.c.1820); and Betty (b.c.1825). He was still alive in 1851 and was listed in a directory of 1852. Catherine (d.1829) servant of Dr. Graham in Hawick. Charles (18th/19th C.) resident of London who subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He probably had a local connection, and may have been related to William, also of London. Charles (19th C.) listed as a baker on the High Street in Slater's 1852 directory. He was probably related to James, also a baker listed in 1852. Cuthbert (17th C.) tenant at Sandholm in Castleton Parish on the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Christopher (b.c.1770s) mason in Newcastleton according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. Christopher (b.c.1780) stocking-maker in Hawick according to the ballot for the Militia in 1801. David (18th/19th C.) clerk to merchant James Dickson. He is recorded in the 1799 ballot for the Militia in Hawick. Probably the same David was merchant in Hawick on the 1801 ballot. He could be the son of David baptised in Robertson in 1772. David (19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Elizabeth Smith and their children included: William (b.1850); and David (b.1853). Dr. ?? (19th C.) Doctor in Hawick in the 1800s, of whom a portrait exists. He was referred to in a report on the cholera outbreak of 1832. Francis (17th C.) resident at Mangerton according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. He must have been related to James, who was also listed there. G. (18th/19th C.) cooper in Castleton. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. George (19th C.) draper in Denholm in the latter part of the 19th century. George (1869–1957) born in Hawick, son of John and Janet Ekron. In 1896 he married Margaret Turnbull Deans (d.1921). Their children were: James Ekron (1897–1917), who served with the Royal West Kent Regiment and was killed in action at Ypres; Marion Nichol Deans (b.1899); Janet (1903–82), married John Wallace and died in West Sussex; and George Francis (b.1914). George (1874–1929) son of William and Janet Scott, he was born on Tweedsmuir. He was said to be from Harwood-on-Teviot, and in 1891 was recorded living at Teviothead in the house of his uncle and aunt, working as a farm labourer. He was an apprentice at Dicksons & Laings and Melrose's. He became a marine engineer, working for

John Brown & Sons, Clydebank and then the Cunard Line. In 1914 he was 3rd Engineer aboard S.S. Lusitania when it was torpedoed with the loss of more than 1000 lives. After 4 hours at sea, he was saved, but never fully recovered. He later worked on the R.M.S. Alania and died at the Marine Hospital, Greenwich. He left a wife and 5 children. Hamilton Borthwick 'Hammy' (1899–1960s) son of master tailor William and Annie Keir, he was born at 1 Weensland Road. He worked with the Hawick News, and joined the army in 1916, although under-age. He was wounded at the Somme, and received a discharge. He later set up his own printing business in Hawick. But he was best known as a singer, at the Common Riding, in the Hawick Operatic Society and around the Borders. He was official Common Riding Song Singer after 1918. He recorded 'Meda's Song' and 'O' a' the Airts' on a 78 r.p.m. record. He moved his printing business to Langholm about 1945, but gave it up around 1952 to become a music teacher at Langholm Academy, retiring in 1964. He married Daisy Graham and they had one child, Helen. J. (18th/19th C.) listed at 'junior' at Clerkleap in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border'. James (17th C.) married Bessie Clerk in Robertson Parish in 1687. James (17th C.) resident at Mangerton according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. He must have been related to Francis, who was also listed there. It is possible the is the James 'Littlemilne in Mangertoun milne' (with the extra 'milne' in error perhaps) whose will is recorded in 1683. James (18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784). James (18th/19th C.) farmer at Terrona according to both the 1797 Horse Tax and Dog Tax Rolls. James (b.c.1775) recorded as son of mason John on the 1799 ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish; his brother John is also listed. James (18th/19th C.) married Agnes Turner in Wilton in 1805. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Janet Hobkirk and their son James was baptised in 1813. James (b.c.1790) farmer in Denholm. In the 1841 census he is recorded around Leyden Road. His wife was Margaret and their children included Janet. He is probably the Denholm farmer recorded in 1815 among men accused of 'mobbing and deforcing water bailifs', but acquitted. James (b.c.1800) farmer at Whitriggs. He married Agnes (or 'Nanny') Blyth in Kirkton Parish in 1833. James (1809/10–53) Hawick High Street baker, born in Cavers Parish. He is listed as a High Street baker on Pigot's 1837 directory. In Slater's 1852 directory he is listed along with Charles, another baker, who was probably a relative. He is recorded at about 42 High Street in 1841 and 1851. In 1835 he married Helen Deans, who died in 1849, aged 37. They are buried in Wellogate Cemetery. Their children included Margaret, Janet, Agnes, Robert, Francis and Agnes (again). James (b.1809/10) stocking-maker in Denholm, probably living on Westside. He married Margaret Scott in Cavers Parish in 1836 and they had children Agnes (b.1837), Barbara (b.1839), Archibald and Adam (b.1844). James (b.1814/5) mason in Denholm. He was son of mason William and Nanny. In 1861 he is listed there, unmarried, and probably living on the Westside. James (b.1820/1) born in Minto Parish, he was nephew of Archibald Robson. In 1861 he was a 'proprietor of houses' at his uncle's farm of Ashieburn in Ancrum. In the 1860s he was recorded as a non-resident voter in Cavers Parish. James (19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Janet Little and their children included Janet (b.1849) and George (b.1851). James (19th C.) skinner in Hawick, recorded in 1872. John (17th C.) herd of Colterscleuch on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. John (17th C.) resident at Gillfoot in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. John (17th/18th C.) tailor and merchant in Hawick. In 1713 he witnessed a baptism (along with smith Thomas Huntly) for William Bulloch. In 1723 (along with John Ekron) he witnessed another for shoemaker William Wright. In 1707 he married Isobel Elliot and their children included: Bessie (b.1708); Sara (b.1711); Bettie (b.1714); Isobel (b.1716); Helen (b.1718), who in 1742 in Edinburgh married Charles Scott, sergeant in Col. John Price's regiment; and James (b.1720). The witnesses in 1708 were 'notar' William Cunningham and tailor William Scott, in 1714 were Thomas Gray and Thomas Huntly and in 1720 were Thomas Watson (Clerk to the Regality) and merchant Adam Elliot. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living in Denholm in 1705 and 1715. His children included Walter (b.1701), Walter (again, b.1703), Bessie (b.1705), Janet (b.1707), John (b.1708), Walter (again, b.1710), Jane (b.1713) and Janet (again, b.1715). John (17th/18th C.) shepherd in Newmill. He married Jean, daughter of Thomas Falside, in Hawick Parish in 1717. Their children included: Thomas (b.1724), who presumably died young; Thomas (b.1725), whose baptism was witnessed by William and Robert Thomson; and William (b.1730). John (17th/18th C.) flesher in Hawick. He is probably the 'flesher' who arrived in Hawick in 1716, having previously lived in Nether and Upper Denton, near Brampton in Gilliesland, coming with a certificate of good deportment from his previous parish. He may be the merchant John who witnessed a baptism for flesher George Renwick in 1716. His wife was Margaret Fiddler and their children included: William (b.1717); and James (b.1720). The witnesses in 1720 were fleshers Robert and George Renwick. John (17th/18th C.) married Marion Reid in Cavers Parish in 1717. John (17th/18th C.) merchant in Hawick, mentioned in an Edinburgh marriage record in 1742, when his daughter Helen married Serg. Charles Scott. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isabel Hall and their children included Margaret (b.1729). John (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His son Thomas was baptised in 1737. John (18th C.) recorded in Denholm in 1736 when he married Isabel Murray in Cavers Parish. He was also living in Denholm in 1737. His children probably included: Janet (b.1737); and John (b.1739). John (18th C.) farmer near Hermitage, recorded in 1749. He could be the John, married to Helen Murray, whose son James was baptised in Castleton in 1749. John (18th C.) married Janet Goodfellow in Kirkton Parish in 1774. John (d.bef. 1794) recorded at Burnfoot in Ewesdale on the 1792 Horse Tax Rolls. It was probably his widow who was listed at Burnfoot in 1797. John (18th/19th C.) mason in Denholm, recorded in 1784. He was also listed as a mason in Denholm on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 3 horses. He was probably the John who married Alison Oliver in Cavers in 1781. His children included: John (b.1774), perhaps with a first wife; William (b.1782); Agnes (b.1784); Isobel (b.1788); George (b.1790); and 'Aills' (b.1793). He was surely the John whose sons John and James were listed in Denholm on the ballot for the Militia in 1799. John (b.c.1763) joiner at Greena in Castleton Parish. He is listed there in 1841. John (18th/19th C.) flesher in Hawick. He paid the Horse Tax Rolls in Hawick in 1797. He was also recorded in 1797 among Hawick men balloted to serve in the Militia. The annotation 'Serving' suggests that he was already serving, as confirmed when he was sworn in personally and recorded on the amended list of 1799 as 'Butcher Serving'. He married Jane Armstrong and their children included: Ann (b.1795), born in Langholm, who married Robert Hay and ran the Crown Inn in Hawick; and John (b.1797), born in Hawick, who may have married Elizabeth Clerk in Yarrow. John (18th/19th C.) married Ann Riddell in Cavers Parish in 1791. John (b.c.1770) farmer at Colterscleuch and other farms, recorded on the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was owner of 4 horses in 1797. He was additionally taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. In 1799 and 1801 he was listed as tenant in Colterscleuch on the ballots for the Militia in Cavers Parish; his brother Andrew was also there in 1801. He could be the John who got married in East Bank Kirk in 1809 (with no wife's name recorded); this could be the marriage to Janet Crozier recorded in Cavers Parish in 1809, with the couple's children, baptised in Cavers, including Jean (b.1810), Archibald (b.1812) and William (b.1814). John (b.1774) mason in Denholm, son of the older John. In 1797 and 1798 he was listed among men on the ballot to serve in the Militia. He was listed again as son of mason John on the 1799 ballot in Cavers Parish; his brother James is also listed. In the amended list of 1799 he was among those whose names had not been drawn, but were no longer living in the area. He was also listed as a mason on the 1801 Militia ballot. John (b.c.1780) listed as 'Junr. Mason' in Denholm according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. This distinguishes him from the other mason of the same name who was also listed on the 1801 and earlier ballots. He may have been a cousin or other more distant relative of the other John. John (d.1813) carrier in the Hawick area. In 1808 near Hawick he was 'maltreated, and robbed of about £130 ... about three miles from Hawick'. Never fully recovering his health, he died in Langholm. John (18th/19th C.) married annie Turnbull in Kirkton Parish in 1809. John (18th/19th C.) married Agnes Henderson in Cavers Parish in 1809. John (b.1789/90) born in Westerkirk Parish, he was teacher in Ewesdale. He was already schoolmast in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border'. He was listed as a teacher living at Unthank in Ewesdale in 1841. In 1851 he was in the Schoolhouse and listed as 'Parish Schoolmaster'. He was still Parish Schoolmaster in 1861, at the age of 71. His wife was Rachel and their children included Jane and James. John (18th/19th C.) merchant at Coldside in Liddesdale in the early 19th century. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. John (18th/19th C.) listed as being of 'Know' in 1825 when he subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick'. John (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Roughley in Castleton Parish. He was listed among heads of households in 1835-41. John (b.1787/8) from Canonbie, he was a blacksmith in Newcastleton. His mother was probably Catherine. He was recorded as a blacksmith in Pigot's 1837 directory and Pigot's 1852 directory. In 1841 to 1861 he was living on Douglas Square. He was a registered voter in Castleton Parish in the 1860s. His cousin Robert Armstrong worked with him. John (b.c.1795) from Canonbie, he was at the Stitchellhill Lime Works in 1841 and proprietor of the Limekilnedge Lime Works in 1851. He married Isabella Irvine in 1840, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Cavers Parishes; she was from Glasgow and must have been his 2nd wife. Their children included: George (b.1823/4), baptised in Hawick; and Thomas (b.1827/8), John (b.1830/1), James (b.1833/4), Walter (1836/7) and Andrew (b.1838/9), baptised in Castleton. John (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Margaret Paterson and their children included: John (b.1832); and Jane (b.1837). John (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Elizabeth Anderson and their son John was baptised in 1832. John (19th C.) married Anne Renwick in Southdean Parish in 1849. John (19th C.) cabinet-maker who married Jane, daughter of Provost Robert Milligan. He may be the apprentice cabinet-maker living with carpenter Andrew Scott at Myreslawgreen in 1861. John (b.1800/1) mason in Denholm. In 1841 he was on Main Street and in 1851 on Sunnyside. He married Isabella Hilson (or perhaps Wilson) in Cavers in 1836 and their children included Robert (b.1837), Barbara (b.1838), Isabella (b.1840), Archibald (b.1842), Eleanor (or 'Helen', b.1844), Elizabeth ('Betsy', b.1845), Margaret (b.1845), John (b.1848), Walter (b.1850), James (b.1852) and Janet (b.1854). John (b.1816/7) mason in Denholm. In 1841, 1851 and 1861 he was living on Westside. He married Helen Murray (from Teviothead) in 1840 and their children included: William (b.1842); Thomas (b.1844); Euphemia (b.1846); James (b.1848); Agnes (b.1850); Isabella (b.1853); Robert (b.1855/6); John (b.1857/8); and George (b.1859/60). John (19th C.) married Jessie Jardine in Hawick Parish in 1852. John (b.1826/7) recorded as 'Mason, Hewer' in Denholm in 1861. He married Christina Waldie, who was from Eckford. Their children (the first 2 baptised in Ancrum) included George (b.1853/4), James

(b.1854/5), William (b.1856/7) and Margaret (b.1859/60). John (b.1828/9) recorded as 'Mason, Hewer' in Denholm in 1861. He was living around Leyden Road with his wife Agnes, who was from Jedburgh. In 1851 he was living with his mother Margaret Tait on Canongate. John (19th C.) married Jane Fall in Hawick Parish in 1853. John (b.c.1834) from Langholm, he lived in Hawick. He was a frame worker and lived at 14 Loan. In 1866 he married Janet, daughter of James Ekron and Margaret Thomson. Their children included: Margaret (1866–1941), who married William Beattie; George (1869–1957), who married Margaret Deans; Helen Reid (b.1871), who married George Proudfoot; James Ekron (1873–1961); and Thomas (b.1878). Matthew (16th C.) tenant in Lairhope in 1576, when he and Adam Warwick in 'Braidley' were pledged to the Privy Council not to be involved in thieving. The sureties were Walter Scott of Goldielands, James Gledstains of Cocklaw and James Langlands of that Ilk. He was declared a fugitive in 1578/9 for continuing to commit crimes. Matthew (18th/19th C.) owner of Demainholm (along with Robert Pott) according to the Land Tax Rolls of 1811. Mr. (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1618 when he was in the Tolbooth in Hawick. Scott of Buccleuch, the Sheriff of Teviotdale and Riddell of that Ilk were appointed to a commission to try him. His crimes (and forename) are unspecified. Mrs. John (18th/19th C.) recorded at Burnfoot in Ewesdale on the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. She was taxed for 2 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. She also paid the dog and clock taxes at Burnfoot in 1797. She was widow of John, who was listed there in 1792. Robert (17th C.) local man who married Bessie Murray. Their children Margaret (b.1648) and James (b.1650) were baptised in Hawick and their daughter Malie in Ashkirk in 1652. The witnesses in 1648 were Thomas Shiel and William Grieve and in 1652 were James Hastie and John Armstrong. Robert (18th C.) farmer in Yethouse in Liddesdale, recorded in 1748. Robert (1751/2–1823) died at Tinnisburn. He married Janet Murray, who died at 'Rashill' in 1830, aged 71. Their children included: Margaret (1792/3–1812); James (1795/6–1828), who died at Greens; and 2 children who died in infancy. Robert (1760/1–1802) died at Nether Larriston. His wife was Mary Scott and their children included: Isabella (1790/1–1808); and Thomas (1793/4–1820). They are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. Simon of Meikledale (14th/15th C.) sometimes considered to be the first chief of his clan. In 1426 he had a charter confirmed by James I of an earlier grant by Robert, Duke of Albany. This was for the lands of 'Senbigill', 'Meikildale', 'Kirktown', 'Sorbi', 'le Milnarland', and 'le Pullis' in the barony of 'Al-larynock' which had been resigned by Alexander Fraser of Ewesdale. He is thus be one of the earliest known Lairds in Ewesdale. Simon of Meikledale (16th C.) descendant of the earlier Simon. In 1499 he witnessed the sasine for George, Master of Angus being infefted in the Lordships of Eskdale and Ewesdale. In 1537 he had a charter of the lands of Meikledale in the valley of Ewes. The charter was witnessed by William Little, Burgess of Edinburgh and the following sasine by Andrew and Edward Little; these may have been relatives. Simon of Meikledale (16th C.) presumably son or grandson of the previous Simon. He is recorded in the comprehensive remission of 1585 for men of Dumfriesshire whose superior was Lord Maxwell (perhaps related to the raid on Stirling). He is listed as 'Sim Litill, laird of Mekill, Daill' and a large number of other Littles also appear on the list. Simon (b.1799/1800) from Westerkirk, son of Thomas, he was educated at Kirkton and Edinburgh. He was Schoolmaster at Teviothead from 1818 (effectively succeeding Tom Jenkins). He also acted as Registrar for the area. He was still recorded at Teviothead Schoolhouse in 1861. His wife was Helen and their children included Betsy, William and Isobella. He is buried in Teviothead cemetery, along with an infant child who died in 1832 (as well as Betty Little, 2nd wife of David Scott from Thornhall). He was probably related to the Kirkton Schoolmaster. He was still alive in 1871. Simon (b.1842) born at Kirkton, son of Thomas, schoolmaster at Kirkton, with his mother being Margaret Turnbull. He was ordained minister of Ballantrae and died unmarried at Lanark Manse. Thomas (16th C.) recorded in Langhope in 1579 when he was listed among the debtors to James Liddesdale, Burgess of Selkirk. Thomas of Meikledale (16th/17th C.) broke out of Selkirk jail in 1625, along with Robert Scott of Thirlestane, Gavin Elliot of Brugh and George Davidson of Kames. Thomas (d.1673) son of the Laird of Meikledale. His gravestone was once readable in Ewes Kirkyard. Thomas (18th C.) tenant in Rashiegrain. He married Isabel Beattie. Their children (baptised in Hawick Parish) included: Helen (b.1740); and Betty (b.1743). He may be the Thomas who hired the Hawick mortcloth twice in 1758. Thomas (d.1799) weaver in Hawick whose death is recorded. Thomas (b.1802/3) probably son of Thomas, he was master of Kirkton School from 1834. He was educated at Kirkton and in Edinburgh. He was recorded there in Pigot's 1837 directory and remained schoolmaster until the 1860s. He also served as Registrar and Inspector of Poor for the Parish. In 1861 he presented the stone slab, which had been the stool of repentance from Kirkton Kirk, to the Museum. He may be the Thomas who subscribed to Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He married Margaret Turnbull and their children included: Thomas; William T.; Simon, who was minister of Ballantrae; and Isabella. Thomas (b.1812/3) from Middlebie, he was a shepherd at Hislop in 1861. His wife was Mary. Walter 'Wat' (16th C.) tenant of Sir Walter Scott of Howpasley in the lands of Outersideig in 1569. Sir Walter acted as cautioner for his tenants at a meeting in Hawick, assuring that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. Walter (17th/18th C.) recorded as 'servitor to Walter Laing clerk to ye Duchess of Buccleugh, (and servitor to ye sd Walter tenent of Park)' in 1716 when he married Janet Scoon (daughter to a deceased Scoon) in Hawick. He was recorded in (Branxholme) Park in 1719. His wife's name was also recorded as 'Mary' and 'Margaret' (although this seems likely to all be the same couple), with children: Margaret (b.1717); Margaret (again, b.1719); Jean (b.1721); and an unnamed child (b.1725). The witnesses in 1719 were James Henry and Robert Scoon in Branxholme Town (who was probably related to his wife). Walter (18th C.) tenant in Denholm, recorded in 1745 and 1749. He married Janet Spinnie (or Spindie) and their children included: Ann (b.1743); Betty (b.1745); Agnes (b.1747); an unnamed child (b.1749); John (b.1752); and Isabel (b.1756). Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of London. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825, and hence probably had a local connection. Walter (19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Jane Brown and their daughter Mary was baptised in 1841. Walter (19th C.) carrier in Newcastleton. In 1852 he was recorded running a weekly service to Nether-Oakshaw, presumably transporting coals from the mine there. William (15th C.) recorded in Thornycleuch in 1494/5 when his son-in-law John Scott was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Selkirk. William (17th/18th C.) recorded as 'of Tounhead' when he leased half of 'Tounhead' to James Runcement, 'now in Hassendean'.

He is recorded in a bond of 1699 as 'of Hassintounhead' along with his wife Margaret Gray when he borrowed one thousand pounds from Henry Leck. In 1703 he sold the lands of Hassendean Townhead to Thomas Turnbull of Knowe and also borrowed money from James Gray of Nether Ancrum (which he seems to have had difficulty repaying). Henry Leck (tenant in 'Stodrige') tried to recover his debt in 1701/2 and this may have been done by 1710, since he recovered his tenancy rights to Hassendean Townhead. In 1705 a bill was sent to him by Gideon Scott of Highchester, via Bailie Robert Hardie of Hawick, then passed on to Thomas Turnbull of Knowe. Thomas of Knowe paid his teinds for Townhead in 1705, according to a discharge by Gideon Scott of Falnash (the Duchess' Chamberlain). William (17th/18th C.) tenant in Side. He was listed there in the 1694 Hearth Tax records. In 1707 he was called before the Castleton Kirk Session for making a 'penny wedding'. He 'promised that he should not be troublesome about any such thing in future' and was dismissed to pay a fine to the civil magistrate! William (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Gray and their children included: Janet (b.1709); Jean (b.1713); and John (b.1715). William (18th C.) resident at Linhope in 1725 when his daughter Margaret was baptised in Cavers Parish. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Isabel Bunyan and their children included Margaret (b.1749) and probably William (b.1746). William (18th C.) tenant in Denholm in 1761. He is probably the William who married Isabel Scott and whose children, baptised in Cavers, included James (b.1756), William (b.1761) and Archibald (b.1769). William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He was recorded as a 'farrier' (or perhaps 'farmer') in 1789 when he witnessed a baptism for Mark Sutherland. William (18th/19th C.) resident at Newcastleton, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He may be the William from Castleton who subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. William (18th/19th C.) recorded as 'Clerk to Mr. Nixon Merchant' in Hawick in 1797 on the list of men balloted to serve in the Militia. In 1799 he was listed as a replacement for John Henderson, labourer, who was considered a deserter. In 1799 he was listed among those on the 1797 ballot who were now absent, being 'Mercht. now in London'; he thus seems to have avoided serving. William (18th/19th C.) mason in Denholm. In 1797 he was listed among men on the ballot to serve in the Militia and in 1799 among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not

Drawn Still residing in Cavers Parish'. He was also listed as a mason in Denholm on the 1801 Militia ballot; he may have been related to John, also listed as a Denholm mason in 1801. William (b.c.1780) labourer in Denholm on the 1801 ballot for the Militia. William (18th/19th C.) resident of London who subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He probably had a local connection, and may have been related to Charles, also of London. William (b.c.1790) born in Westerkirk, Dumfriesshire, when young he worked as a ploughman at a farm near Birneyknowe. In 1813 he assisted Capt. Walter Scott of Wauchope in catching a murderer (as recounted in Lang's 'Stories of the Border Marches'). Scott enlisted the ploughman's help when he caught up with the 6-foot Irishman (called John Linnichen or Henry Macgraw) along this former high road from Hawick to Newcastle. He had attacked and robbed John Macdonald, a travelling merchant from Dumfriesshire who was apparently 101 years old. The chase ended on 'High Tofts Hill', the murderer was apprehended, walked back to Kirkton, then taken by cart to Hawick and on to Jedburgh for trial. William was apparently presented with a baton and excused from paying taxes for the rest of his life. He was later farmer for a while at Salenside. In 1841 he was living at Clerklands and in 1851 was a labourer at 'Newtonmoor' in Wilton Parish. He married Janet (b.c.1800), daughter of George Thorburn, farmer at Stonedge (and she apparently died aged 99). Their children included: Archibald; Jane; George; Janet; William; James; Andrew; Ann; and Catherine Ann, who Robert Scott, vet at Cauldmill. William (b.1776/7) mason in Denholm. In 1841 and 1851 he was living around the north end of Westside with his wife and adult children. His wife was Agnes (or 'Nanny') and their children included James, William, George, Robert, Charles and Bell. William (b.1783/4) born in Newbigging, he was a flesher in Newcastleton in 1851 and on an 1852 directory. However, the same William, at about 15 South Hermitage Street, was listed in 1841 as a teacher. His wife was Elizabeth (or 'Betty') and they had a daughter, Elizabeth. William (18th/19th C.) mason at Holmfoot, probably near Newcastleton. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. William (b.1800/1) from Westerkirk Parish, he was shepherd at Braidliehope in the Hermitage valley in 1851. He may be the labourer William listed as a head of household in Castleton for the first time in 1838. William (b.1818/9) builder in Denholm, son of William. In 1861 he was living around Leyden Road. His wife was Jessie and their children included William and James. William (b.1817/8) shepherd at Stanishope. He married Margaret Greig and their children included William, Elizabeth, Margaret, John, Jane and Robert. He may be the W. Little recorded at Hawkass in 1868. William (b.1817/8) stockingmaker in Denholm, son of Archibald. In 1851 he was living at about Westgate and around Sunnyside in 1861. He married Margaret Johnstone (from Falnash Mill) and their children included Archibald, John, James, Violet I. and Daniel C. He could be the William from Denholm who won 2 leaping events at the 1835 Common Riding Games. William (b.1833/4) from Ashkirk, he was a shepherd at Linhope in 1861. William (19th C.) schoolmaster at Kirkton roughly from the 1840s to the 1860s. His wife was called Mary. William (19th/20th C.) son of James of Carlsgrill and Janet Keir. His mother was sister of William Keir of Whithaugh. He inherited Whithaugh from his uncle and sold it in 1924 William (19th/20th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. He had a shop at No. 3 Silver Street on the 1920s (former pronunciation as in 'Leitle'; also spelled 'Litle', 'Litol', 'Littel', 'Littill', 'Lytil', 'Lytil', 'Lytle', 'Lyttle', etc. in older records).

Little Aggie (li'-ul-aw-gee) n. nickname in use in the 19th century, ??.

Little Causey (li'-ul-kaw-zee) n. former name for part of the road up the Loan. It was here that Capt. Campbell was pelted with manure during the disputed Common Riding of 1809. The precise location is unclear.

Little Cavers (li'-ul-kā-vurz) n. small house on the side road between Honeyburn and Ashybank. It has long been coloured pink, and may have once had a small hamlet around it. The name may come from the former name for Kirkton Parish, or have simply developed as an epithet for a hamlet near the main village of Cavers. In 1684 Adam Leyden, William Laidlaw and Andrew Riddell, 3 tenants of the farm there, were listed as fugitives for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. It was the site for the parish school in the 18th century as Denholm grew, so that a location was required between Denholm and Cavers. However, the school moved to Denholm Green in about 1802 and the building became a residence (it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

the little cloth (thu-li'-ul-kloth) n. the second-best funerary cloth, in distinction to the main 'mortcloth' – 'Pay'd for the Mortcloath and Little Cloath helping' [PR].

Little Corbie Sike (li'-ul-kor-bee-sīk) n. stream in upper Liddesdale, running roughly to the north to join the Aldery Sike and then Thorlieshope Burn. It runs parallel to Muckle Corbie Sike.

Little Cote (li'-ul-kō) n. name for former farm near Littlecote Hill in Cavers Parish. Adam Huntly was tenant in 1694 and William Blyth in 1776. John Johnstone was there in 1791, Thomas Scott was tenant in 1837 and Robert Scott was farmer in 1851. The Armstrong brothers farmed it in the mid-20th century. The name was essentially replaced with the late Eastcote, although the earlier farm may have been to the south-west of the modern Eastcote. The earlier farm of 'Muckle Cote' may have been closer to the modern West Cote. There is a possible old enclosure on Littlecote Hill, which could be associated with the former farmstead – 'Little Cot, Muckle Cot, Crook and the Trows, Worchart, Wormston and Cavers Knowes' [T] (it was 'Littlecoatt' in 1694 and 'Lyttle cote' in 1776).

Little Dan (li'-ul-dawn) n. nickname of the 19th century – 'Kinly Stick and Daavid Garland, London Laidlaw and Little Dan, Johnny the Gover (in a far land), And Wat the Drummer leads the van' [HI].

Little Dean (li'-ul-deen) n. former farm near Little Cavers. The area was said to have been used for secret Covenanters' sermons. It was situated near the plantation still known as Little Dean, which flanks the Honey Burn, just west of Denholm Dean.

Littledean (li'-ul-deen) n. former farmstead in Wilton Parish, located on the left-hand side of the road between Midshiels and Hassendeanburn. The Mather, Brydon and Milne families lived there in 1841. There was no sign of the former cottage by the early 20th century (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, it is 'Littleden' in 1841).

Littledean (li'-ul-deen) n. ruined 15th century tower in Maxton Parish overlooking the banks of the Tweed, once the home of the Kers. Duns Scotus may have been born here about 1265. The lands were possessed by Rutherfords in the 17th century. There is much local folklore about unpleasant occupiers and ghosts. Gen. Ker of Littledean was ruined fighting a legal battle in the early years of the 19th century to establish his claim as heir to the Kers of Cessford and hence to the Dukedom of Roxburghe. The male line of Kers of Littledean ended with the death of Walter Ker in 1841. This family have a burial vault at Maxton and used the motto 'Pro Patria Periclitator'. The lands were later part of the estates of Lord Polwarth (the origin of the name is probably just Old English for 'the little valley'; it is first recorded as 'litildene' in 1502; it is 'Litledene' in 1547, 'Litildane' in 1547/8, 'Littilden' in 1560, 'Littill Dane' in 1574, 'Litilden' in 1578/9, 'Lytilthane' in 1582 and occurs as 'Littildernn' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

little-denner (li'-ul-de-nur) n., arch. breakfast – 'Little-dinner, A morsel taken in the morning before going to work, Teviotd.' [JoJ].

Little Drinkstone (li'-ul-drink-stin) n. former name for lands near Drinkstone. In 1550/1 Robert, son and heir of Adam Scott of 'Nethirmanis of Hassinden' was infefted by Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule in the '2½ merklands of Litill Dryngstoun' in the Barony of Chamberlain Newton. There followed a letter of reversion by John Scott of Drinkstone in favour of Robert Scott 'in Hassendenburn' of the same lands on payment of £70 Scots in 1566. In 1606 Walter Scott of Alton was served heir to his father Adam's lands of 'Littill Dombstoun' in the Barony of Chamberlain Newton, which is presumably a transcription error for Little Drinkstone.

the Little End (thu-li'-ul-end) n. informal name for part of the old school on Orrock Place, where the younger children were taught.

Little France (li'-ul-frans) n. name for an area between the Slitrig and the old railway line just north of Shankend farm. Aerial photography has identified the outlines of rig lines, a small enclosure and the foundations of former buildings (the origin is obscure; it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Little Gledstane (li'-ul-gled-stān) n. nickname for one of the local Gledstains family of Cocklaw Castle, who took part in the Raid of the Redeswire. This was probably James of Cocklaw, 12th of that Ilk, the nickname presumably suggesting that he was short. There was also a field in Rulewater with the same name, but whether it was connected is uncertain – 'The laird Watt did weil indeed, His friends stude stoutly by himsell; With little Gladstane, gude in need, For Greitin kendna gude be ill' [T].

Little Gledstains (li'-ul-gled-stānz) n. former name for some lands which were part of the Barony of Feu-Rule in the Rule valley. There is presumably some connection with the Gledstains family and perhaps with the local hero of the Raid of the Redeswire in particular, but no details are known. The lands lay between those of Hobsburn and Langraw (precisely where is uncertain, since these farms were once of considerable extent) and were said to have formerly been a Lairdship. It is possible that Adam Scott of 'Gledstanis' recorded in 1581 was Laird there. Robert Elliot 'in Gledstaines' was removed from the lands by Sir Andrew Ker of Oxnam in 1610. The lands were part of the Stobs estate in the late 17th century, and were included in the contract where rental income went to the widow of Sir Gilbert Eliott and her surviving children. This is probably the 'Glestains' where Thomas Oliver was farmer in 1758. The old house was still in existence in 1775, having thick walls and iron bars on the small windows; part of the building materials were incorporated into the garden house at Hobsburn (it is 'Littilglaidstaines' in 1562, 'Litle Gledstaines' in 1677 and 'Little Glaidstanes' in 1693).

the Little Gover (thu-li'-ul-gu-vur) n. nickname, probably from the 19th century, and possibly related to Johnnie the Gover – 'Sally Maclusky, Betty Johnny, Jamie Adams and Tammy Graham, The little Gover as smart as ony, Auld Mag Lamb and her penny krame' [HI].

Little Harden Burn (li'-ul-hawr-din-burn) n. small stream in Liddesdale, which rises on Harden Hill and joins Harden Burn to the east of old Castleton.

Little Hassendean (li'-ul-haw-sin-deen) n. former name for Westerhouses in the Parish of Hassendean, so-called in 1582.

Little Haugh (li'-ul-hawf) n. another name for the the Wee Haugh.

little-hoose (li'-ul-hoos) n., arch. a toilet, water-closet.

Little Jock Elliot (li-tul-jok-e-li) n. nickname of Jock Elliot of the Park.

little lee (li'-ul-lee) n., poet. little peace – 'Aft has he beat your slough-hounds back And set yourselves at little lee. Fala, &c.' [CPM].

the Little Maister (thu-li'-ul-mās-tur) n. nickname for a schoolmaster called Turnbull in the late 18th century.

the Little Muir (thu-li'-ul-mewr) n. former name for a farmstead or area near Closses, at the edge of Hawick Moor. It was mentioned in 1766 in the description of 9 small pieces of land that were let in order to try to prevent encroachment on the Common by neighbouring tenants.

Little Newton (li'-ul-new'-in) n. part of the lands of Newton, perhaps those associated with Newton Don, although some references may be to the lands in Bedrule Parish. An English document of c.1380 lists 'the lands of Little Newton next Roxburgh which were in the hands of Thomas Riddelle'. Adam Grahamslaw, son of the Laird of 'litill newtoun' is recorded in 1502. The farm was burned by Simon Armstrong and Clement Crozier and their men, for which they were pardoned in 1531/2. John Grahamslaw 'of Littill Newtoun' is recorded in 1572/3. William and George 'Grimsley', sons of the deceased Harry of 'Little Newtoun', were held for the murder of Robert Turnbull of Hallrule in 1606.

Little Park (li'-ul-pawrk) n. former name for lands in Liddesdale, probably the farm of Castleton Park, with the 'Little' used to distinguish it from the larger holding of Park (or 'Copshaw Park') to the south. William Scott was tenant there in 1694, according to the Horse Tax rolls, with Archibald Nixon also listed as a resident (it is 'Littill park' in 1694 and is marked on Stobie's 1770 map).

Little Rulewud (li'-ul-rool-wud) n. former name for some lands near Denholm, possibly adjacent to those of Rulewud itself. It has also been suggested that it was an old name for Denholm Dean. In the reign of David I (1329–71) there is a Crown confirmation of these lands in the barony of Cavers to Thomas of Cranstoun. The lands probably once belonged to the family of Rule. This was confirmed again in about 1380, with the lands then being referred to as being 'near Denum'. In 1458/9 the lands are among those for which Thomas Cranston of that Ilk had a discharge with Douglas of Cavers for rentals. The lands of 'Litilroulwod, with tower thereof' are listed among those in the Barony of Cavers in 1511 and regranted to Sir William Cranston of that Ilk in the following year and still held by John Cranston according to a discharge of 1574. The '40 shilling land of Roulwoode parva alias tower' was passed from John, Lord Cranstoun to his nephew William in 1636. It was still in the Barony of Cavers when inherited by Sir William Douglas in 1687 and by his brother Archibald in 1698; it is described as having a wood and tower, called the lands of 'Toure', near the town of Denholm. In modern times the name has been given to a cottage to the east of Denholm

Dean (it is 'Little Rulwod' in c.1380, 'lytill Roulwode' in 1458/9, 'Litill Roulwod' in 1511, 'roulewod parua' in 1512, 'Little Roulwood' in 1574, 'Litle Rowlwood' in 1687 and 'Litle Roallwood' in 1698).

Little Saut Haa (li'-ul-saw'-haw, -sawl'-hal) n. Little Salt Hall, house built above Langlands Road in 1937, near the former Salt Hall. It was designed by Kathleen Veitch and probably built for teacher William Redpath. It is a grade C listed building. The word 'Little' was later removed from the house's name.

the Little Shop see the Wee Shop

Little Steil (li'-ul-steel) n. lands in Liddesdale, recorded on the 1541 rental roll as 'Litlesteil'. They were valued at 6 shillings and tenanted by Bartholomew Nixon (possibly related to Stells or the Steel).

Little Stirches (li'-ul-stir-cheez) n. former name for a place near Stirches. It is mentioned in the Wilton Session records for 1703.

Little Sundi (li'-ul-sun-di) n., arch. the day before Communion Sunday, being a fast day, a fast day in general.

Little Tudhope Hill (li'-ul-tu-dup-hil) n. hill just to the north-west of Tudhope Hill, on the boundary between Rosburghshire and Dumfriesshire. It reaches a height of 483 m.

Little Warrington Sike (li'-ul-waw-rin'-in-sik) n. stream in Castleton Parish, which rises on Larriston Fells and joins Storff Sike and then Great Warrington Sike before running into Larriston Burn.

little wheel (li'-ul-wheel) n., arch. smaller type of spinning wheel, used in Hawick through the 18th and early 19th centuries for flax or hemp spinning – 'There was presented by Mrs. Hogg, Crumhaugh-hill, a spinning wheel, i.e. the 'Little Wheel', formerly used for spinning lint' [HAST1863] (cf. muckle wheel).

Little Whithaugh (li'-ul-whi-tuf) n. small farm near Whithaugh, to the north-east of Newcastleton. Thomas Mather was tenant there in 1694.

Little Whitlaw (li'-ul-whi'-law) n. name of part of the farm at Whitlaw, lying south of the Flex road, bordering on the old Common. It was next to 'Meikle Whitlaw', from which it was separated by the Flex (or Whitlaw) Burn. It was long a tenanted farm owned by the Duke of Buccleuch. The farm was surveyed in 1718, along with other Buccleuch properties, covering 60 acres and being bounded by the Slitrig, Flex and Hawick Common, with no farmhouse at that time. It was leased (along with Meikle Whitlaw) to Francis Gledstains of Whitlaw in 1692. The tenant at the beginning of the 19th century was James Elliot. The farmer there in 1841 and 1851 was James Knox, when the farm covered 97 acres, and in the 1860s the farmer was James Shiel. The area of this earlier farm is the site of farm buildings of Flex farm.

Little Wrae Cleuch (li'-ul-rā-klooch) n. small stream in upper Liddesdale, rising on Windy Knowe and lying to the east of Muckle Wrae Cleuch.

Little Wullie Dunlop see Wullie Dunlop
Living Bards of the Border (li-vin-bawrdz-ov-thu-bōr-dur) n. book published in 1859 by James Watson of Jedburgh, which contains examples of many of the contemporary Hawick poets.

Livingston (li-ving-stin) n. Rev. James minister of Teviothead Kirk 1929–40, being assisted by James Hill in the last year.

Livingstone (li-ving-stin) n. Rev. John (1603–72) born in Monyabroch, Stirlingshire, son of Rev. William of Kilsyth and Agnes. He attended Glasgow University from the age of 14 and after graduating had several temporary positions, but turned down presentations to various parishes on account of his religious principles. He preached in Ireland, but was excommunicated and joined a ship bound for America that was forced back in a storm. He signed the National Covenant in 1638 and was one of those charged with presenting it to the Court in London. He was minister at Stranraer for a decade, before being appointed minister of Ancrum in 1648. He was one of the Commissioners to Charles I in 1650, perhaps in the party that travelled to Breda to offer him the Crown. He was appointed by Cromwell in 1654 to recommend ministers to vacant parishes. He attested to the character of the deceased Francis Earl of Buccleuch in 1654. After the Restoration he refused to accept Episcopacy, was banished in 1663 and died in Holland. He wrote an autobiography (not published until 1754), as well as notes on some of his contemporaries, and worked on a translation of the bible into several languages. He was friends with other local ministers, including Rev. James Kerr at Abbotrule, Rev. John Scott at Oxnam, Rev. John Scott at Hawick and Rev. William Elliot at Yarrow. He also associated with Sir William Scott of Harden, Sir Gideon Scott of Highchesters, Sir Walter Riddell of that Ilk and several Pringle landowners, as well as Lady Stobs, Lady Newton and Mrs. Elliot of Craighend. He was said to have been the most popular preacher in the Borders. He married Janet Fleming and had at least 15 children, although most died in infancy. His daughter Marion was born in Stranraer in 1642 and married Rev. John Scott of Hawick. His youngest son James went to New York and had descendants who were involved with American Independence. His time at Ancrum is recorded on a stone built into the wall of the Manse garden there. Mary Ann (19th C.) owner of the lands of Coldlaw and Tandlaw according to the Land Tax Rolls of about 1874. Her name is recorded as 'Mrs. Mary Ann Livingstone or Finlay'. She was presumably the widow of someone called either Livingstone or Finlay, perhaps a descendant of Rev. Robert Scott of Coldhouse. William of Drumry (15th C.) son of Sir Robert, from the Clydebank family. He held the half (probably the eastern half) Barony of Hassendean, according to a sasine of 1467. This was also stated in a 'letter of reversion' of 1470, in which Alexander Scott of Howpasley and Abington gave redemption money for Midshiels and Appletreehall; it is unclear when he first gained the barony. He was the Lord of Drumry fined in 1493 for non-presence (relating to his lands in Hassendean) at the Court of the Justiciary in Jedburgh. He resigned the barony to the King in 1493/4 and it then passed to Alexander, Lord Home. Also in 1493/4 he assigned (with the consent of his son Robert) 3 'letters of reversion' to Alexander, Lord Home, these being for Midshiels, Appletreehall, East Mains and Clarilaw. He probably married Euphemia, daughter of David Wemyss of that Ilk and was succeeded by his son Sir Robert.

lizzie-rin-the-hedge (li-zee-rin-thu-hej) n., arch. goosegrass, cleavers, Galium aparine (also robin-rin-the-hedge; see sticky wullie).

'll (l, ul) contr. will – 'Ee'd better heide thae rockbools, or the bairns 'll kinsh thum' [ECS], '... oor folk 'll bei touched an' influenced in a mainner which 'll bei unmistakable' [BW1939] (often attached as a contraction to the previous word).

loags (lōgz) n., pl., arch. footless stockings, worn by labourers in the summer, as gaiters in wet weather or as protective sleeves by female millworkers – 'Worn to the leather were his clogs – And on his legs a pair o' loags' [RDW].

loan (lōn) n., arch. a lane, especially one leading to a meadow, in former times a strip of land between fields, left uncultivated for driving cattle homeward – 'At Allanhaugh, a small village (the vestiges of which only now remain) in the upper parts of Tiviotdale, the devil was seen regularly every Saturday evening, walking along the loan' [EM1820], 'When kye come croonin' to the loan, an' lasses liltin' sweet' [JoHa], 'In loan or steedin' whene'er they saw her, Muckle Mou'd Meg was the name they'd caa her' [WL].

the Loan (thu-lōn) n. once the lane out to the pastures on the Common, being part of the Burgh lands, sandwiched between West Mains and East Mains and connecting the Town with the Common. It was known as the 'Common Lone' or 'Lone' up until about 1860. It became the main road through the town towards Carlisle, this not changing until the New Road was built in 1815. Both sides were first feued in 1792, this being the first extension of the Town beyond its ports (hence before this time the Loan was technically outside the Burgh limits). It was slowly built up with houses from then on, with further development of the upper West End through the 19th century. J.P. Alison designed Nos. 2 and 7 in 1901. Some houses were removed in 1939. In the mid-20th century there was licensed grocer James Henderson at No. 5 and Allison's green-grocery at the corner with Beaconsfield Terrace. There was much demolition and building work between 1957 and 1977, with reconstruction in 1974–77, allowing a clear view of the Moat and new access to Drumlanrig School – 'Up the Loan we'll drive like fire ...' [AB], 'Down the Loan we come fu' doucely ...' [AB], '... And doon the Loan like fire' [JT], 'As Aw was gaun up Hawick Loan ...' [JSB], 'For now o' the Loan I used to ken There's hardly a stannin' stane' [DH].

loanheid (lōn-heed) n., arch. top end of a loan – 'He may have taken in a piece of the loan-head by that dyke' [HAST1916].

the Loanheid (thu-lōn-heed) n. Loanhead, the former name for the area at the top of the Loan. Up until the early 20th century the area had many fields rented by farmers who had their barns and stables in the town. Farmers of the 19th century included the Hendersons of the Back Row, the Blakes of the Back Row, the Elliots of the Loan, the Waldies of the Green Wynd, the Andersons of the Green Wynd, the Patersons of the Loan, the Laidlaws of the Loan, the Thorburns of the Loan, the Richardsons of the Loan, the Nichols of the Loan and the Hunters of Drumlanrig Place. The last farmers in the area were probably Dick Scott, (who kept pigs at the top on the right-hand side) and the Cavers family (who were there well into the 20th century). The area also had the covered reservoir that supplied most of the town up until the 1960s; for many decades in the 19th century children would sit on its roof to watch the Chase – ‘... The Loanheid cockerel, noisy bird That early in the morn was heard’ [IWL].

Loanhill (lōn-hil) n. lost place name near Branhholme, listed in the description of the half lands of Branhholme in 1420 when they were granted to Robert Scott of Rankilburn. The lands described include ‘half of the meadow of Lonnehyl’ with precise location uncertain, but perhaps somewhere to the west of Branhholme.

loanin (lō-nin) n., arch. a loan, lane between fields – ‘The shepherd child, the healthy wild, The park and loaning green’ [JoHa], ‘Ah! weel might there be heard a moaning, Throughout the land on ‘ilka loaning’ [AD], ‘The loanin’ up the hill – ay, ay! Far as the laigh march-line; It was the road we took the kye, When we were boys lang-syne’ [ECB], ‘They met in the Kirkyard and loaning, Old burgesses loyal and true’ [RSC], ‘The lang road that rins doon throwe Newtoon an bye the Dryburgh loaneen’ [ECS] (also written ‘loaneen’).

the Loanin (thū-lō-nin) n. the Loaning, a street in Denholm, being the road out of town towards the fields to the south of the Hawick to Jedburgh road.

the Loanin Burn (thū-lō-nin-burn) n. stream in Denholm running alongside the Loaning.

Loanside (lōn-sīd) n. former name for a farmstead in Cavers Parish, location uncertain. In 1801 shepherds Francis Armstrong and William Helm were living there.

the Loanside (thū-lōn-sīd) n. former name for lands lying adjacent to the Loan (also written ‘Loneside’).

Loan Toll (lōn-tōl) n. one of Hawick’s 4 toll houses, the building still existing with a commemorative plaque, opposite 25 Loan (near the gates of Mote Park). The building sticks out further into the road than those nearby, indicating its former purpose; the Loan was formerly the main road out of Hawick to the south. This is the first place the drums and fifes march to on the Thursday of Common Riding week, and is also on the route of the Cornet’s Walk after the Colour Bussing. It was also referred to as the ‘Turnpike Bar’.

Local Government Bill (lō-kal-gu-ver-min’-bil) n. important bill of 1929 which took away powers from smaller burgh councils (with a population under 20,000), yielding control to County Councils. Parish Councils and Education Authorities were dissolved, with education and welfare being controlled by the County. In Hawick there was much resistance to these changes, with the town losing control of its police force, public health and road maintenance. Roxburghshire County Council grew in power as a result.

loch (loch) n. lake, the nearest big example near Hawick is St. Mary’s Loch. But plenty of smaller bodies of water just outside the town are also called lochs, e.g. Leahead Loch, Mosshills Loch and Branhholme Loch.

Loch (loch) n. David of Overcarnbie (d.1780), General Inspector of Fisheries in Scotland and Inspector of the Woollen Manufacturers of Scotland. He was made an Honorary Burgess in 1777, presumably when passing through Hawick on the tour he made for the Board of Manufactures. He wrote ‘A Tour through most of the Trading Towns and Villages of Scotland’ in 1778. The book has 2 pages describing trade and industry in Hawick, with a summary of the state of the fledgling knitwear manufacturing. This included a statement that there were 65 looms in the Town (18 of them making carpets) and 6 stocking frames. He once said that children as young as 5 could be usefully employed in the woollen trade. Oliver (19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. He married Agnes Oliver and their children included: Walter (b.1848); William (b.1850); Ellen (b.1852); and Betsy (b.1854).

Loch Bog (loch-bōg) n. area to the north of Newmill Burn and south of Branhholme Easter Loch.

Loch Burn (loch-burn) n. stream running from Blackcleuch Loch north-east to the Allan Water, also known as the Low Burn.

Lochburnfit (low-, loch-burn-fi) n. Lochburnfoot, a former farmstead where the Loch Burn meets the Allan Water, west of Southfield. The Mossypaul ride-out route often goes past here. There may once have been a weaving village here. Walter Miller was a weaver there in 1694. James and John Reid were living there in 1745 and John ‘Slacer’ in 1748. It is probably the ‘Lawburnfoot’ where Adam Anderson and William Grieve were in 1797. Agricultural worker Richard Byers and ‘game watcher’ James Miller lived here with their families in 1841 (marked on Stobie’s 1770 map; it is 'Loochburnfoott' in 1694 and 'Loughburnfoot' in 1745 and 1841).

Lochburn Plantin (loch-burn-plawn'-in) n. Lochburn Plantation, wooded area along the south side of the Allan Water, just to the south-west of Southfield farm.

Lochcarron (loch-kaw-rin) n. tartan and knitwear manufacturers, with factory at 76 Princes Street, as well as bases in other Border towns. It was founded by Morris Buchan in 1947 in Gala, with his son Alistair Buchan joining in 1959 and becoming C.E.O. in 1986. The Hawick mill was the main knitwear centre, but closed in 2009.

Loch Cottage (loch-ko'-eej) n. cottage to the south of the road which passes Branhholme Easter Loch.

Lochcraig Heid (loch-kräg-heed) n. hill in the south-western part of the Borders, behind Loch Skeen. It reaches a height of 801 m, and can be seen in the distance from many local vantage points.

Lochdail (loch-dāl) n. former name for lands near Hawick. They are mentioned among lost placenames by James Wilson in 1850, but their location is still unknown.

Lochgreen (loch-green) n. lands, formerly part of Essenside, bordering on Essenside Loch. This small area was annexed to Castleside in 1760 in exchange for lands nearer to Easter Essenside. This led to a dispute between the Cochranes of Ashkirk and the Elliots of Minto over rights to the marle in the Loch in the early 1800s.

Lochend (loch-end) n. former name of farm near Kaimend, about a mile south-east of Hawick. It was just to the north of the small body of water opposite the road to the east of Kaimend, i.e. on the east side of the back road from Hummelknowes to Ormiston, and was also known as Ormiston Lochend. The farmer there in 1797 was John Clerk and William Clerk was also there in the same year. In 1861 it was 'Loughend' with James Cavers and Alexander Lang and their families as residents. In the 1860s the farmere there was James Davidson (marked on Stobie's 1770 map, between 'Roxmount' and 'Ormiston-mains', and labelled 'Ormiston Lochend' on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Loch Hill (loch-hil) n. hill on the east side of the Ewes valley, between the farms of Glendivan and Hoghill. It reaches a height of 258 m and has a hill-fort at its summit, as well as a smaller enclosure to the west. The name presumably comes from the small body of water, which lies on high ground between the 2 archaeological features.

Lochmaben (loch-mā-bin) n. town west of Lockerbie in Annandale. It was a major Bruce seat in the 12th and 13th centuries and became a royal burgh in 1440. Lochmaben Castle was once the strongest fortress in the Borders, and covered 16 acres. The lands passed to the Murrays and then the Johnstones. Population 2,024 (1991).

Loch o the Lowes (loch-ō-thu-lowz) n. body of water south of St. Mary's Loch, originally part of it, but separated by deposits from the burns that flow into there. It is about 1½ miles in circumference. This may originally have been the name of the whole lake, with the larger portion later taking the name of the chapel there.

Loch Park (loch-pawrk) n. area to the east of the High Street, once a small pond, but largely drained in 1835 because of the smell, to rid the area of its 'pestilential vapours'. A curling rink was opened there in 1854 and used until 1866, when another pond was opened near St. Leonard's. It was also used as a place for public demonstrations, e.g. in 1884 around 10,000 people rallied there in support of the Franchise Act. The area was used as an auction ring by Andrew Oliver & Son until 1883, when it was purchased by James Scott and David Rutherford, who continued sales there until the early 1900s. The land was then used for other purposes, becoming a railway maintenance yard in 1921, before being converted to an industrial park for small businesses in 1968. Now the name tends to refer specifically to the industrial estate.

Loch Park Road (loch-pawrk-rōd) n. road running along the northern side of the Loch Park Industrial Estate, built in 1884, with the name deriving from the former pond. At the bottom of the street the road passed under a railway bridge, which was demolished in the early 1970s.

Loch Rig (loch-rig) n. ridge just to the south of Shielswood Loch.

Loch Sike (loch-sik) n. small stream that rises in Branhholme Easter Loch, running roughly south-east, through Loch Sike Plantation, to join the Newmill Burn and thence into the Teviot.

Loch Sike (loch-sik) n. small stream that rises on Woll Rig and flows eastwards to run into Headshaw Loch. There are also quarries nearby, which were used in the 18th and 19th centuries for dry-stane dykes.

Loch Skeen (loch-skeen) n. loch high above the Grey Mare's Tail, reached via a track along the Tail Burn – 'Where the crystal waters that wanton stray From their home in far Loch Skene, lock (lok) n., arch. a small amount, particularly of hair, straw or similar, a pinch – 'An' yet a lock o' saut joost right laid on, By an aul' wife, prove an effectual cure' [JoHa] (cf. weelock).

Dance down the cliff in their sportive way, A myriad cascades of pearly spray, To rest in the deep ravine' [TK] (also sometimes 'Skene').

lock (lok) n. one of two positions in rugby, nos. 4 and 5, also known as the second row, who lock together the front row in the scrum. Such players are usually tall and have squashed ears.

Lock (lok) n. John (13th/14th C.) from somewhere in Roxburghshire. He swore fealty to Edward I in 1296, with his name being recorded as 'Johan Lock'. His seal shows an 8-rayed figure and the words 'S'JOH'IS LOG'. He was also 'Lok' on the jury for the inquest into the inheritance of the half-barony of Wilton in 1303/4.

Locke (lok) n. James (19th/20th C.) Selkirk manufacturer who lived for a while at Kilmeny. He was an early tennis enthusiast in Hawick. His son William Lindsay was a doctor. In 1870 he married Wilhelmina (1849–1924), daughter of manufacturer William Watson. They had at least 2 daughters, who lived in Cambridge and Edinburgh.

Lockerbie (lo-kur-bee) n. town near the Border in Dumfries & Galloway region, where the Dryfe Water meets the Annan. It had a nearby Roman camp at Birrenswark Hill. The town was founded in the early 18th century by the Johnstones, became a burgh in 1863, and was known for its lamb sales. It gave its name to the 'Lockerbie Lick', meaning a slashed face, during the times of feuding between the Johnstones and the Maxwells. Tragedy struck in 1988 when a terrorist bomb brought down a Pan-Am jet, killing all on-board and 11 people in the town. Population 3,982 (1991).

the Lockerbie lick (thu-lo-kur-bee-lik) n., arch. former term for the habit of the Johnstones of slashing their victims' faces.

Lockhart (lok-har') n. Allan Eliott (1803–78) 5th Laird of Borthwickbrae. Second (and oldest surviving) son of William Eliott, he was a lawyer and became Deputy Lieutenant of Selkirkshire and then Roxburghshire (in 1848). He was listed as a Commissioner in Selkirkshire in 1819, when still younger of Borthwickbrae. He was called to the Bar in 1824. He was listed at Borthwickbrae among the local gentry in Pigot's 1837 directory, and mentioned as a major landowner in Hawick Parish in 1838. He was Selkirkshire

M.P. 1846–61, was also involved in local education and agriculture and served as a Commissioner of Supply, Justice of the Peace and Tax Commissioner for Roxburghshire. In 1841 he was absent from Borthwickbrae, but his sister and 4 children were there, along with a governess and 6 other servants. In 1861 he presented a jar of reptiles to the Archæological Society. In 1874 he was listed in the Land Tax Rolls as owner of Flex, as well as Wester Essenside and Leap Hill. In 1830 he married Charlotte (1809–88), 5th daughter of Sir David Dundas of Beechwood, and succeeded to the estates on the death of his father-in-law 2 years later. He had 12 children, including 5 sons who survived to adulthood: William (b.1833), who succeeded and married an Elliot of Wolfelee; David (1834–1903), who married Fanny Wood of Hutton and had 3 sons; Capt. Allan (b.1837), who married twice and had a daughter; Col. Robert Dundas (b.1841), who had 2 daughters; and Charles Walter (1850–94), who married a daughter of Mark Neville and died without issue. His daughters included: Matilda (1832–98); Marianne (b.c.1836); and Robina (1840–1924). He retired in 1861 and after the Death of Lord Polwarth was appointed Lord Lieutenant of Selkirkshire. George (d.1547) cleric who was Archdeacon of Teviotdale from about 1509 until 1533. The George 'Herher' referred to in 1509 is probably a transcription error for his name. He was elevated to Dean of Glasgow in 1533, and remained in that office until he died. Sir George (c.1630–89), Lord Carnwath, son of Sir James of Lee. He was a prominent Scottish advocate, who served as Dean of the Faculty of Advocates, Lord President of the Court of Session, Privy Counsellor and Commissioner to the Scottish Parliament for Lanarkshire. He married Philadelphia, daughter of Lord Wharton and was succeeded by his son George. He was murdered on Edinburgh High Street by the husband of a woman he had represented against him. In 1690 his son George was served heir to his lands around Jedhead in Southdean Parish. It is unclear how he acquired these in the first place. Sir George of Carnwath (1673–1731) son of Sir George. In 1690 he inherited his father's annual rents of part of the Marquisate of Douglas in Jedforest, specifically 3 half steadings in Jedhead and half of 2 steads in 'Campsheill-haugh'. He was a member of Parliament for the county of Edinburgh and one of the commissioners for arranging the union with England. He was a spy who brought to light the extent of bribery before the vote for the 1707 Union, leading to Burns line 'bought and sold for English gold'. He was a Jacobite supporter and later a spy for Charles Stewart, having to flee the country for a year and dying in a duel 3 years later. Gilbert Elliott (1808–24) younger son of William of Borthwickbrae. He joined the Royal Navy and died onboard H.M.S. Diamond, which was captained by Lord Napier. John (18th C.) married Isabel Lillico in bedrule in 1724. John Elliott of Borthwickbrae (1796–1815). Eldest son of William, he was a Cornet in the Dragoons and was killed at Waterloo. Margaret 'Peggy' (18th C.) chambermaid at Cavers in 1791, when she worked for George Douglas. Mary Charlotte (1875–1965) daughter of Capt. William, 6th of Borthwickbrae and Dorothea Helen, daughter of Sir Walter Elliot of Wolfelee. Her father sold Borthwickbrae in 1884. Her 3 brothers died before their father and in 1907 she became head of the lines of both Borthwickbrae and Wolfelee. In 1899 she married Maj. R.H. Adams, but took the surname Elliott-Lockhart in 1907. She had a son, called Sir Allan Robert (b.1905) and a daughter Dorothy Cecil Bertram. Capt. Robert Elliott (19th C.) of Borthwickbrae, he served in the Royal Artillery. Stephen (15th C.) leased the Crown lands of Gilmanscleuch in 1486. Walter Elliott (b.1804) younger son of William. He worked for the East India Company. He married Mary, daughter of William Proctor and died in Madras without any children. Lt.-Col. William Elliott (1764–1832) 4th Laird of Borthwickbrae, eldest surviving son of John of Borthwickbrae and Margaret Laing. He appears to have lived at Orchard before succeeding to Borthwickbrae; he was described as 'William Elliot Esq. in Orchard' in the years 1790/1 and 1791/2 when he paid tax for having a female servant and 2 male servants, and also in 1790/1 and 1790/1 when he paid for owning a carriage. From 1792 he was 'William Elliot of Borthwickbrae' when he continued to pay the duty for 2 male servants and a carriage in Roberton Parish, with 3 servants in 1793 and 1794 and 1 in 1797. He was at Orchard on the Horse Tax Rolls for 1790–94, when he had up to 4 carriage horses, as well as being owner of 2 work horses in 1797. He also paid the dog tax in 1797. From 1795 he served as Colonel for the local troop of Yeomanry (volunteer cavalry, also known as the Roxburgh Fencible Dragoons), leading his men in repelling the French (who were supplying arms to Ireland) at Killala Bay in 1798. He was later appointed major commandant of the Roxburgh Gentlemen and

Yeomanry Cavalry, and turned out with his regiment at the False Alarm of 1804. In 1821 he was appointed Lieut.-Col. of the Roxburghshire Yeomanry Cavalry. In 1802 he paid the Land Tax on Borthwickbrae, the west side of Howcleuch and Wester Alemoor. He was listed as a Commissioner for both Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire in 1805 and 1819. He was a member of the Jedforest Club from 1812. He was among the first to be listed on the 'Donations' page for the Hawick Savings Bank in 1815. He was left the lands of Meikledale and Flex by his uncle, William Laing. He also inherited lands of Old Melrose, where his family would sometimes reside. He became M.P. for Selkirkshire, serving 1806–30, and was made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1823. There is a letter of 1824 where the Burgh of Selkirk asked him for funds for the races at the Common Riding there. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. In 1827 he complained about poachers, with Andrew Oliver as his lawyer. In 1792 he married Marianna (or Marianne), daughter and heiress of Allan Lockhart of Cleghorn, and changed his surname to 'Elliott-Lockhart'. His children were: Jane (b.1795), baptised at Edinburgh, but recorded in Roberton; John (1796–1815), who was killed at Waterloo; Margaret, who was at Borthwickbrae in 1841; Allan (b.1803), who succeeded; Walter, who died in Madras; William (b.1808), who became a Major; and Gilbert (1808–24), who died on H.M.S. Diamond. He died at Cleghorn. Capt. William Elliott (1833–1907) 6th Laird of Borthwickbrae, and 14th of Cleghorn in Lanark, eldest son of Allan. He served in the Cameronians and 74th Highlanders, retiring from service in 1868. He was then assistant Chief Constable of Lancashire before becoming Chamberlain for the Duke of Buccleuch at Branksome, with responsibility for Selkirkshire and Teviotdale. He held this position from 1876 until 1892. During this time he was an enthusiastic supporter of the idea of building a Cottage Hospital in Hawick. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1870. He was also Deputy Lieutenant for Selkirkshire and J.P. for Roxburghshire, as well as Selkirkshire and Lanarkshire. He was Chairman of the Managers of Hawick Cottage Hospital and President of the West Teviotdale Agricultural Society, as well as being on the committee for the Upper Teviotdale Fisheries Association. He became an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1881. In 1882 he was present (as Chamberlain) at the opening of the Dod Burn water works in Hawick. He was also proprietor of the lands at the Flex in the 1880s. He sold Borthwickbrae to Robert Noble in 1884 and for a time lived at Branhholme, but then moved to Cleghorn in Lanarkshire. He matriculated arms in 1893. In 1866 he married Dorothea Helen, eldest daughter of Sir Walter Elliot of Wolfelee. Their children were: Capt. Allan Ashton (1867–98), who died in Malta; Walter Blair (1870–95), who died unmarried; Mary Charlotte (b.1875), who succeeded as heir of the line; and Norman (b.1871), who died in infancy. He wrote about the history of Branhholme, including the associated Scotts of Buccleuch, for the Berwickshire Naturalists' Club (sometimes 'Lockhardt', and often called 'Eliott-Lockhart', note also that it became 'Eliott' rather than 'Elliot').

Lockhart Place (lok-har'-plis) n. street in the Wellogate area, built in 1879 by Hawick Working Men's Building and Investment Company, and named after the second William Elliott Lockhart. No. 9 is a grade C listed building.

Lockie (lo-kee) n. Alexander (18thC.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isabel Thomson in Wilton in 1768 and their children included Thomas (b.1769), Agnes (b.1772) and William (b.1777). The witnesses in 1772 were merchant John Oliver and wright James Aitkin. Alexander (18th/19th C.) servant to William Brown, Minister of Bedrule, according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. Alexander (b.c.1801) servant at Denholm Mill according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. Andrew (17th C.) resident at Easter Essenside on the Hearth Tax roll in 1694. Probably the same Andrew married Isobel Harvie and had children, baptised in Ashkirk Parish, including John (b.1691) and Bessie (b.1693). James (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living in Denholm in 1720. He married Bessie Storie in 1719. Their children included: John (b.1720); Marion (b.1731) James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. His wife was Jean Scott. Their children included John (b.1768). James (18th C.) resident at Threephead in Robertson Parish. His name was written 'Locie' in 1771 when his twins James and William were baptised. Perhaps the same James was witness to a baptism in Wilton for Walter Scott at Whitfield in 1770. James (18th/19th C.) tailor in Denholm, listed in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. Janet (b.1798) daughter of mason William. She was still living at Borthwickbraehaugh in 1851, but described as a 'Carrier'. Her son Walter Thomson was also there, as well as her nephew William Turnbull. Janet (b.c.1800) grocer recorded on the 1841 census for Wilton. She lived on Damside, which was perhaps the lower part of Wilton Path. Her children included Mary Hall, Jessie, Betsy, John and William. By 1861 she appears to be on Dickson Street and with no occupation. John (13th/14th C.) recorded as 'John Lok' when he was on the inquisition of 1303/4 for inheritance of the half barony of Wilton. It seems reasonable to suppose that his named was Lockie and that he was a local man, like the others. John (17th C.) resident of Ashybank who was listed in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. William was also listed there and so probably related. John (18th C.) recorded at Denholm in 1725 when his daughter Helen was baptised in Cavers Parish. William (b.1722) and Christian (b.1727), baptised in Cavers, were probably also his children. John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1736 he witnessed a baptism for John Smith (blacksmith at Stirches) and in 1737 others for George Wallace, resident at Roughheugh and for Robert Graham, resident of Brieryyards. He married Elspeth Porteous in 1731 and their children included: James (b.1734); Anne (b.1736); and James (again, b.1740). It is possible he is the John who died in 1742, after whom the area of 'Lockieshedg' was named. John (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Mary Nichol and their children included William (b.1749). John (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Violet Laidlaw and their children included: Mary (b.1752); Janet (b.1754); Isobel (b.1757); and Violet (b.1759). His wife was probably the daughter of Adam Laidlaw and Helen Bell born in 1729. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Jane Stoddart in Robertson Parish in 1791 and their children included Walter (b.1795), Margaret (b.1797) and Janet (b.1802). John (18th/19th C.) servant at Honeytown in Cavers Parish. In 1797 he was listed among men balloted to serve in the Militia; the annotation 'Serving' suggests he served. His name appears again in 1798, recorded as substitute for Michael Anderson from Appletreehall. Later in 1798 he was sworn into the Militia and was listed as 'Serving' on the amended list of 1799. John (b.c.1773) resident of Sorbie in Ewesdale. In 1800 he married Jean, daughter of Thomas Dryden, blacksmith at St. Boswells. Their children were: Jean (b.1801); Catherine (b.1803), who married Robert Anderson from Langholm; Elizabeth (b.1805); Janet Church (b.1807); and James (b.1809). John (b.c.1800) gamekeeper living at Byreleeaugh in Robertson Parish in 1841. By 1851 he was working in a factory in Galashiels and in 1861 was a carter at Ladhope. His wife was Janet and their children included Alison, Margaret, Jessie, Marion, Isabella, Anne, Jane and Meriam. Patrick (17th C.) resident in Ashkirk listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He is probably the 'Pat' who in 1691 witnessed a baptism for Andrew. He married Bessie Easton and their daughter Bessie was baptised in 1689. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1687 he married Margaret Waugh, as recorded in Robertson Parish. However, the marriage took place at Hassendean Kirk (perhaps one of the last there). He witnessed baptisms in Robertson Parish for George Collin in 1687 and for James Waugh in 1768. Probably the same Thomas was resident of 'the netherend' of Hassendean Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1715 he was a wright at Synton Parkhead. He married Helen Veitch and their children included Elizabeth (b.1715) and John (b.1717). Thomas (b.1814/5) born in Robertson Parish, he was a 'game guard' at Lea-head on the 1851 census. In 1841 he had been visiting Hoscotesiel, while his family were staying at Coldhouse. He could be the 'Lockie o' the Stinty Knowes' mentioned in the poem 'Hawick Immortals'. He married Margaret Hay and their children included William, Georgina, Catherine and James. William (17th C.) resident of Ashybank who was listed in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He was probably closely related to John, who was also listed there. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at 'Whithaw' (presumably Whitehaugh) in 1764. He married Janet Laidlaw and their children included John (b.1764), Walter (b.1767) and Rachel (b.1769). The witnesses in 1764 were Robert Ormiston and Thomas Scott. William (b.1772/3) mason at Borthwickbrae. He was living at Borthwickbrae Parkhead in 1798. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. In 1841 he was living at Borthwickbraehaugh. He married Margaret Cavers in 1795 and their children included: James (1796–1825), buried in Borthwick Waas, with the first part of the headstone unreadable; Janet (b.1798); John (b.1800); Jane (b.1802); Ann (b.1805); Isobella (b.1807); Thomas (b.1811); Euphemia (b.1813); William (1814/5–33), also buried in Borthwick Waas and Robert (b.1819). William (1788–1853) born at Stinty-Knowes, son of William and Jean Paterson. He was educated at Wilton and became schoolmaster at Stouslie in 1806, serving there for 37 years. He is listed as teacher at Stouslie among male heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835–41. He was also known as a poet. A friend of 'Clinty', he wrote one of the Auld Brig poems. He also wrote 'Farewell to Edinburgh', a poem in celebration of the lighting of Hawick's first gas lamps, and others, including annual odes on the Duke of Buccleuch's birthday. He is also mentioned in a song from 'Daft Jock Gray', recorded in the book 'Memoir of Robert Chambers' (1872) – 'There's Lockie o' the Stinty Knowes, There's Nicol o' Dick-neuk, And Bryson o' the Priestrig, And Hall into the Heap' [DJG]. He married Isabel Anderson (from Robertson) in Wilton Parish in 1808. In the 1841 census he is at Stouslie School with wife Isabella and children Jean (b.1808) and William (b.1814). He is still teachere there in 1851, but now living at Easter Longbaulk, with 3 grandchildren also in the house. He died at Longbaulk. William (19th C.) of William Lockie's knitwear, founded in 1874, based on the Fore Raw and later at Riversdale Mills. He was a contributor to buying the Auld Mid Raw for demolition. William (19th/20th C.) resident of Whitriggs. In 1906 he contributed to the fund for the renovation of Kirkton Kirk (sometimes written 'Lockey', 'Locky', 'Lokie', 'Loky', etc.).

Lockie's see Lockie's Mill

Lockiesedge (lo-kee-zej) n. sometimes spelling of Lockieshedge.

Lockieshedge (lo-keez-hej, lo-kee-zej) n. area between Stirches Road and Mayfield, around the house with the same name. It was the easternmost part of the area formerly known as 'Rough-heugh' and the name applied to a large part of what is now Mayfield. It is first recorded as feued by Robert Langlands in two parts to John Biggar and to Robert and Mark Liddel of Whitehaugh in 1773. This second part passed to the Hart family in 1776. Apparently a beech hedge bordering the old road to Selkirk (Stirches Road) grew until the 18th century, where there are now buildings. Walter Scott was recorded living there in 1797 and Adam Hart was a weaver there in at least 1797–1801. Weaver James Scott was recorded there in 1799. The 18th century high wall was demolished in 1970 when the road was realigned (named after the hedge and an early resident, John Lockie, who died in 1742; also written, presumably in error, 'Lockiesedge' and 'Lockie's Edge').

Lockieshedge Hoose (lo-keez-hej, lo-kee-zej-hoos) n. house in the area known as Lockieshedge, off Stirches Road, opposite Wellfield Road. Also known just as 'Lockieshedge' or sometimes 'Lockiesedge'.

Lockie's Mill (lo-keez-mil) n. William Lockie & Co., knitwear manufacturers of Riversdale Mills, founded in 1874. The company also had a small factory off Drumlanrig Square (on the Fore Raw) in the latter part of the 19th century, being a 3-storey building reached from No. 28. This now houses 'Westfield Works' at Nos. 27 and 28. The building's frontage has a combination of paired windows and oriel windows. The modern company focuses on luxury garments.

lockit (lo-kee', -ki') pp., arch. locked – 'Caged up, within a glass-case lockit, He'll shew the curse that Job invokit' [JoHa], 'I'll hae him lockit up for a scoundrel obtaining money by false pretences' [JEDM], '... And the lilacs are lockit ticht I' their maidenhead' [DH].

Lock the Door Lariston (lok-thu-dōr-law-ri-stin) n. song written by James Hogg, the Ettrick Sheprherd, in 1797. It was popular at the Colour Bussing and similar events in the 19th century. Scocha recorded a version in 2001 – 'Lock the door, Lariston, Lion of Liddesdale; Lock the door, Lariston, Lowther comes on; The Armstrongs are flying, The widows are crying, The Castleton's burning, and Oliver's gone' [ES] (usually spelled with one 'r').

locusts (lō-kists) n., pl., arch. carob beans, used as a cattle feed and before WWI purchased by children as a confection, chewing the beans until only the fibre was left – 'A licorice stick, a neivefu' monkey nits, A bag o' locust – tidbits rare' [WL] (also called 'locust beans').

Lod (lad, lōd) n., arch. Lord – '...Till ten had struck, When Bob cries 'Lod, My chieles, we're on the batter'' [VW], interj., arch. used to express disapproval or disagreement, especially in phrases like 'Lod sakes' or 'Lod man!' – '... An' champin' smash amang the dirty puddle; Lo'd! how they sprawl aboot, an' girnin' guddle!' [JoHa] (also written 'Lo'd').

Lodge 111 (loj-yin-u-lee-vin) n. Hawick Masonic Lodge, being Lodge St. John, No. 111, affectionately known as 'the three ones'. Its premises are at 33 Commercial Road, and were converted from the building of Innes, Chambers & Co., tweed merchants in 1923 (with designs by J.P. Alison and foundation stone with time capsule laid in 1922). Prior to that their meetings were in the Commercial Inn, in a warehouse of a Mr. Oliver and then in a Church hall at Myreslawgreen, which was consecrated in 1874. The Lodge started at least as early as 1768, although there are suggestions that there were already Masons in Hawick before then; a charter gives its number as 141, this being altered later. Activity lapsed in the mid-19th century, but it was resuscitated in 1860 and has been active since then. The maximum number on the roll was 582 in 1922. This lodge helped to erect the Henry Scott Riddell monument and an annual visit there is made in June. They were also present at the laying of the foundation stones for the Subscription Rooms, Corn Exchange, Cottage Hospital and Library. The lodge has a collection of masonic jewels and other artefacts, including the military sword of William F. Beattie. The Lodge has long been involved with local charitable and community causes. The building was renovated in 1973/4, with the main entrance moved to the side. There was a march through the Town for the 100th anniversary and there was a re-dedication ceremony to celebrate the 250th anniversary in 2018. Histories were written by Tom Ker in 1892 and Alex Burgon in 1994.

Lodge 424 (loj-fow-ur-too'-ee-fow-ur) n. Lodge St. James, Border Union Royal Arch (B.U.R.A.), No. 424, being a branch of the Freemasons. It formed in September 1863 and was perhaps reformed in August 1882. It started essentially out of disputes over the Volunteers, with mass resignations from the other Hawick Lodge in 1863, led by prominent townsmen such as George Hardie Fraser. A bazaar was held in 1892, opened by the Grand Master Mason. The new premises were built at 8 Union Street in 1893, to the designs of J.P. Alison, with the foundation stone laid with full ceremony. Before that the lodge met every second Tuesday in Orrock Church Hall. The Lodge celebrates a Mid-Summer Festival of St. John. Latterly the club members have been meeting twice per month, from September to April. The lodge contains a frieze depicting scenes from the Bible. A history, written by James Edgar, was published in 1932.

Lodgegill (loj-gil) n. former farm on the Tarras Water, east of the Ewes valley. It was a seat of the Elliots in the 17th and 18th centuries. Descendants of Anderson of Tushielaw were shepherds there in the 18th and 19th centuries. Robert Scott and family were living there in 1841 – 'Callants, ride! what ails your rotten naigs? He's making straight for Lodgegill and the craigs!' [HNo].

Lodgeknowe (loj-now) n. former farmstead in Cavers Parish, precise location uncertain. William Scott (servant at Colterscleuch) was householder there in 1796. It is recorded on the 1797

Horse Tax Rolls, when John Lunn was farmer there. Patrick Hume was a labourer there in 1799 (it is 'Lodgeknow' in 1796 and 1797).

Lod-sake (lōd-sāk) interj., arch. a mild oath, 'for the Lord's sake' – '... when, Lo'dsake, callants! wad ye believe it – the cratur a' at ance just sprang frae the grund like a wull-cat ...' [BCM1881], 'Now, Lodsake, Tammas, be quick, for aw've the pot on the day ...' [JTU] (see also Lod).

Lod-sakes-mei (lōd-sāks-mī) interj., arch. Lord save me, deary me, for Heaven's sake, used as a very mild oath – 'A was in a habble! Bit lod sakes mei! It wasna leike A was muiteet oot ...' [ECS], 'Mind ... Aa wadna dae'd nowadays. Lod-sakes-mei, no. Everything's shundert!' [DH].

loe (loo, lō) v., poet. to love – 'Fair fa ye, lass; I loo your project weel. O war my heart as light as it is leel!' [CPM], '... Yet ne'er could lo'e them as we lo'e our auld aik tree' [JoHa], 'An' weel I ken, an' weel I loe, the magic, mystic hour' [JoHa], 'For ane that lo'ed ye dear, Ye'll whiles drap a tear' [JTe], 'Thou sallt loe thy neeber, an' hete thine enemy' [HSR], 'Becaus thy loein-kindness is better nor liffe ...' [HSR], 'And weel we lo'e the guid auld toon ...' [JT], 'Of a' the toons that I lo'e weel Auld Hawick abune them a'' [JSE], '... Stands the toon we lo'e owre a' touns' [WL], 'And throwe the ages yit ti come, May Hawick aye loe their Fifes an Drum' [ABo] (also spelled 'loo', 'lo'e', 'looe', 'looe', etc.).

loesome (lō-sum) adj., poet. lovable, lovely, beloved – 'Come lo'esome Spring wi' a' your braws ...' [JT], 'There's no' a ane in a' the land – At least there is na mony – Sae clever baith wi' heid an' hand As oor ain lo'esome Conie' [FL].

loft (loft) n. a gallery in a church, formerly being erected for private families, with additional seating being rented out to assist the poor fund – '... for building and erecting of the timber work of ane loft in the kirk of Hawick, designed by the Presbyterie for the Baylyeas and toun Counsell of the said toun' [BR1684], 'Charges of the settes [seats] in the loft above the bilifes' loft ... 11 0 0' [BR1733].

lofts (lofts) n., arch. gallery levels in a church, usually associated with a particular family or group of people. The pre-1763 church had the following balcony sections: 'the Bailies' Loft'; 'the Parkhill Loft'; 'the Middle Loft'; and 'the Wester Loft'. The post-1763 St. Mary's Kirk had the following separate balcony sections: the 'Middle Loft' or 'Steple Loft'; the 'High Loft' or 'Common Loft' or 'Rowly-Powly Loft'; the 'Weaver's Loft' or 'Bailie's Loft' or 'Wester Loft'; and the 'Buccleuch Loft' or 'Duke's Loft'. Wilton Kirk had 'Highchesters Loft', and Cavers Kirk had 'the Laird's Loft'.

Logan (lō-gin) n. Andrew 'Andy', champion archer from Hawick, who runs the Redgauntlet Archery Club. In 2005 he helped British Telecom by firing a downed telephone cable across the Teviot near Hassendean Burn. Later that year he won the Recurve Bow section of the European Championships and was given the Honorary Provost's Council's Achievement Award. He lit the brazier at the Opening Ceremony for the Hawick 'Olympics' in 2012 – 'Oov got threi champion airchers Europe's Logan, and world champions McCombe and Cook' [AIB], Rev. James (16th/17th C.) graduating from Edinburgh University in 1602, he was presented to the Parish of Southdean in 1609. However, the Presbytery decided about a week later 'to provide another kirk for him', so he appears not to have been the official minister. James (17th C.) merchant from Kirkpatrick Parish in Galloway. In 1696 he was admitted as a Burgess of Hawick, with Walter Graham acting as cautioner for him, that he would pay all liabilities. Rev. James (19th C.) born at Muthill, Perth, he was minister of Robertson Free Kirk. He was recorded at Robertson when the Ordnance Survey Name Book was made in the period 1858–60. In 1861 he was a lodger at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot. Note that a man of the same was minister at Swinton 1833–68, and made the second statistical account there. Mr. ?? (b.1880) born in Kelso, son of Peter and nephew of Dr. Robertson Nicholl, Editor of the 'British Weekly'. He was educated in Kelso and at Apatia Agricultural College. He became tenant farmer of Mackside in the early years of the 20th century. He was a member of the Hobkirk School Board. He married a daughter of Rev. William Smith. Thomas (16th C.) recorded in 1560 as owner of a tenement in Hawick, on the north side of the High Street, east of the tenement of Thomas Short. He is recorded in 1579 when the same tenement in Hawick, belonging to Simon Sanderson, 'sumtyme pertenit' to him (also written 'Logane').

loggerheid (lō-gur-heed) n., arch. a loggerhead, idiot – 'Robert Wright, late bailie, is fined for abusing the present bailie, by hanging of him, calling him drunken sott and logerhead ...' [BR1685].

logie (lō-gee) n., poet. fire-place of a kiln – ‘Freed for a while to take the air From hell’s tremendous logie’ [JR].

loke (lōk) interj., arch. used to express surprise or happiness, also in the phrase ‘Lokesake mei!’ or ‘Lokesakes!’ (euphemism for ‘Lord’).

loll (lol) v., arch. to mew, mewl, howl like a cat – ‘...they were agreeably surprised with the loalling of cats’ [EM1820], ‘Loalling. Loud mew-ing, Teviotdale’ [JoJ], ‘The vera cats are waefu’ lollin’ – Guid weather’s dead’ [JoHa].

London (lun-din) n. Edmund (13th/14th C.) given the Prebend of Ashkirk by Edward II in 1319. His name was given as ‘Edmund de Londres’. Perhaps the same ‘Master Edmund de Londres’ was recorded in 1305 in a list of merchants who used the River Thames between London and Oxford. He was Clerk of the Chapel of the Countess of Hereford in about 1315 when he petitioned the King on behalf of his uncle ‘William Cachefreynchs’. A record from the House of God in Berwick mentions that he was the appointee there, but was ousted by Robert the Bruce after Bannockburn and replaced with William of Roxburgh. Thomas (12th/13th C.) probably son of William ‘de Londres’, he was known as ‘Thome de Londonis’ and variants. He was a descendant of William de Londres, 1st Lord of Kidwelly, a Norman knight who settled in Scotland. The family name developed into Lundy. He witnessed the Charter of Earl Henry to Jedburgh Abbey in about 1150. He married Escheyne, daughter of Uchtred de Molle. Their children were: Malcolm de Lundin, granted the Barony of Lundy in Forfar, who became ‘Doorward’ of all the King’s palaces; Philip de Lundin, granted the Barony of Lundin in Fife; and Escheyne de Molle, who married Robert de Croc and Walter Fitz Alan, High Steward of Scotland. He also married Margaret Lovel, who had previously been married to Ralph, Lord of Castle Cary and Hawick, and who was mother of Henry, Lord of Hawick; she gifted lands at Outerside to Jedburgh Abbey in the 1160s (also sometimes written ‘Loudon’).

the London Cup (thū-lun-din-kup) n. Common Riding race prize, subscribed for by callants living in London in 1845. How long the trophy was competed for and what happened to it are unknown.

London Laidlaw (lun-din-lād-la) n. nickname of Robert Laidlaw.

the London Scottish Border Counties Association (thū-lun-din-sko’-eesh-bōr-dur-koon’-eez-aw-sō-see-ā-shin) n. former organisation of Borders gentlemen and ladies based in London. It was formed in 1897, with Andrew Lang as President, and held its first annual dinner in 1898, with the Chair occupied by the Duke of Buccleuch. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle talked on ‘the literature of the Scottish border’ at the 1904 dinner.

Longmuir (lawng-mewr) n. Rev. William McG. minister of Denholm, Minto and Bedrule 1992–2003.

Longueville (long-vil) n. Thomas (d.c.1340) possible the earliest member of the Langlands family. One story is that he was a French Pirate, ‘the Red Rover’, who was captured attacking one of William Wallace’s ships, with the two becoming friends. A more likely story is that the family came across with William the Conqueror and settled in Scotland. It seems he was also known as ‘Thomas de Charteris’ after marrying the Charteris heiress and taking her name. It may have been that a branch of the family established themselves at Langlands and took that as their name. This early history is unclear, and further confused through the influence of historical romances such as ‘The Scottish Chiefs’ (1809) by Jane Porter, popularising earlier tales by the mediæval balladeer Blind Harry. The family gained lands at Langlandshill in Peeblesshire, built the original Kinfauns Castle in Perthshire and also acquired local lands that would become the Langlands (i.e. Wilton) estate. Wallace is traditionally supposed to have visited the Langlands estate in 1297 and ‘tethered his charger to a thorn tree near the Castle Wall’.

the Longuevilles (thū-long-vilz, -long-gwu-vee) n. originally Norman family, taking their name from a small town in Normandy. The Longuevilles, Earls of Buckingham, were the ancient lords, and there are several places still bearing the name in England. The family held lands in the Barony of Wilton from the early 13th century. There has also been the suggestion that this was the same family as ‘Langlands’, who are recorded as Barons of Wilton in the 15th century; this connection would establish the same family as Barons for about 500 years.

[WL], '...But lookit sae vexed when his team got bate That ye gied him half your pie ...' [DH], 'So Aa stude and lookit at it for a bit, and Aa keekit at it ...' [DH].

look slippy (look-sli-pee) interj., arch. look alive, take care – '...Let's look slippy, here's 'Sacky' coming' [JHH].

Lookup (loo-kup) n. Andrew (18th C.) writer (i.e. lawyer) and Provost of Jedburgh, who was made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1776. Probably the same Andrew paid the window tax in Jedburgh in 1748. This peculiar surname was once fairly common in Jedburgh and Melrose. Robert (b.c.1780) writer in Hawick, according to the ballot list for the Militia in 1801. He could be the son of Thomas baptised in 1783. Thomas (1729/30–1811) forester for the Buccleuch estates in 'Teviotdalehead' in at least the period 1798–1807. He is probably the Thomas 'Lukup' recorded as 'Groom and House Servant' at Branxholme in 1778 and 1779 (working for William Ogilvie) and 'House Servant' in 1785 and 1786 (working for Adam Ogilvie). He may be the Thomas who married Alison Gill (or McGill) in 1771 and whose children included: Helen (b.1772); Christian (b.1775); and Robert (b.1783). The witnesses in 1772 were John Laurie (preacher at Caerlenrig) and John Kyle. He died at Branxholme and was buried at St. Mary's. William (17th C.) listed as wright and servant to Walter Earl of Buccleuch. His surname is transcribed 'Linkvpe', but it seems likely this was 'Lookup'. He was listed in the deceased Earl's inventory in 1633, when he was owed for work done at Branxholme and Hawick (also written 'Lukup' and other variants).

loon (loon, lown) n., arch. a lad, youth, fellow, rascal – '...Robert Hardie being accusit ... for ... calling the council's officers men-sworn lowns' [BR1657], 'I chased the loons doon to Carlisle, Jook't the raip on the Hair-i-bee, Ma naig nickert an' cockit his tail, But wha daur meddle wi' me?' loor-shoodert (loor-shoo-dur) adj., arch. round-shouldered.

Looselaw (loos-law) n. former farmstead on the Tweeden Burn in Castleton Parish. On Stobie’s 1770 map it was marked on the north side of the burn, close to the location of Hillhouse, which is not marked.

loosy (loo-see) adj., arch. lousy, infested with lice, mean, nasty.

loot (loot) v., poet. to let, allow – ‘A wheen o callants loused the girths And loot the sheltie free ...’ [WL], ‘And, loons, here’s a secret I’m gaun tae loot dab ...’ [DJ] (not common Hawick pronunciation).

loot (loot) v., arch. to stoop, bend the body – ‘... aw had just looted doon to talk a birn oot o’ ma shoe for a minute ...’ [BCM1880], ‘... men war layin on an chaappin, lootin doon an howkin threh a skerr, the teime a stane-nappin injin gaed-on leike a tuim mill’ [ECS], n., arch. a stoop, act of bending – ‘He limpit and stachert sae when he did gang, Wi’ a loot and a stop, syne a bob and a bang’ [JoHa] (also lout).

lootchie (loo-chee) n., arch. the loach, Cobitis barbatula (also written ‘loachie’).

lootit (loo-ee’, loo-ti’, tee’) pp., arch. stooped – ‘But she lootit doon and her rock tuik a lowe, An’ that was a bad beginnin’ o’t’ [T].

Lopdell-Bradshaw (lop-del-brad-shaw) n. Rev. Humphrey Maitland (1931/2–2004) from Angus, he was son of an officer in the Gordon Highlanders, and served as adjutant for that Regiment while they were stationed at Stobs in the 1930s. He was mentioned in dispatches for action in Cyprus in 1957. He became an Episcopalian minister in the early 1960s, serving at Holy Cross in Edinburgh, then in Gilmerton, Birmingham and Oxfangs, before moving to St. Cuthbert’s in Hawick in 1977. He left in 1988 for the Isla-Deveron group of parishes, apparently amid a storm over a section of the vestry forming a sort of social work agency. He was Canon of St. Andrew’s Cathedral, Inverness from 1991. He retired in 1997 and moved to Kirriemuir. He married Margaret and they had a daughter, Diane.

lopper gowan (lo-pur-gow-in) n., arch. the oxeye daisy, marguerite, Chrysanthemum leucanthemum (also ‘loppert gowan’; cf. horse-gowan).

loppert (lo-pur) pp., adj., arch. coagulated, clotted, said of milk, etc. – ‘At dinner-time he treats his stomach, With lopper’d milk, or barley drammock’ [JR], ‘The mune she shines sae bricht, Till a’ the yirth aneth her een Is fu’ o’ loppert licht’ [DH] (also loupered).

lopperty-heid (lo-pur-ee-heed) n., arch. a dolt, blockhead.

Lord Alemoor (lōrd-āl-moor) n. alternative title of the Earl of Tarras (Walter Scott of Highchester and Harden) in the latter part of the 17th century. It was also the title of Andrew Pringle, an 18th century judge.

Lord Balmerino see Elphinstone

Lord Goldielands (lōrd-göld-ee-lindz) n. subsidiary title used by the Scotts of Buccleuch, along with Earl of Deloraine and Viscount Hermitage. It was created in 1706 for Henry, 3rd son of James, 1st Duke of Buccleuch, and became extinct in 1807 when Henry Scott, 4th Earl of Deloraine, died.

Lord Heathfield see Gen. George Augustus Elliott

Lord Herries (lōrd-he-reez) n. hereditary title of the Herries and then Maxwell families, who owned the Barony of Feu-Rule until the mid-17th century (see Herries and Maxwell; written ‘Herrie’ and variants).

Lord Harry’s Rant (lōrd-ha-reez-rawn) n. song appearing in Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’, published in Hawick in 1784. It is said there to be about one of the Earls of Deloraine, and this may have been Henry Scott (1676–1730), 1st Earl of Deloraine, 2nd son of Ann, Duchess of Buccleuch. With the first lines being ‘Give ear to my frolicsome ditty, Of one that a wager did lay ...’, it has been printed in several forms under different names, such as ‘The Rant’. It tells the story of a gentleman who made a bet that he could cross the city without saying anything to the night watchmen. But he is arrested by one, and only freed by the intercession of the Lord Mayor’s daughter.

Lord Lieutenant (lōrd-loo-te-nin) n. official position in a county, originally set up in the late 18th century to be responsible for maintaining local law and order and calling out the militias in times of disturbance. It is a non-political position, the appointee being the Crown’s representative in the county, presenting medals on behalf of the Queen, organising royal visits, etc. They also have responsibility for the Territorial Army and Justices of the Peace. The position is typically held by a retired senior military officer, peer or business person. Lieutenants are among the few people allowed to fly the Lion Rampant. Due to local government reorganisation the regions covered are no longer counties, but referred to as ‘lieutenancy areas’, the local one being ‘Roxburgh, Ettrick and Lauderdale’. The Duke of Buccleuch is the current Lord Lieutenant.

Lord Montagu (lōrd-mon-tu-gew) n. title of Henry James Montagu Scott uncle and guardian to the young 5th Duke of Buccleuch, who was made an Honorary Burgess along with the Duke when they travelled through Hawick in 1821.

Lord o Buccleuch (lōrd-ō-bu-kloo) n. title used by the head of the Scotts, also known as Scott of Branxholme and Buccleuch. The 1st Lord of Buccleuch was Walter, ‘the Bold Buccleuch’, who was raised to the peerage in 1606 and died in 1611. His son Walter was 2nd Lord until elevated to an Earldom in 1619. However, several of the earlier chiefs were called ‘Lord’, this being formerly synonymous with ‘Laird’. There were at least 10 Lairds before ‘the Bold Buccleuch’, with the first to sit in the Scottish Parliament as Lord of Buccleuch being Sir David Scott, 7th Laird, in 1481.

Lord o Hawick (lōrd-ō-hlk) n. title of the Barons of Hawick, particular used of the Douglases, responsible for law enforcement around Hawick in the early 16th century.

Lord Olifer (lōrd-o-lee-vur) n. nickname for Robert Oliver in the 17th century, and his son, also Robert in the early 18th century, as well as for an earlier Oliver in Falside in Southdean Parish – ‘Lord Olipher embalmed in song, A stranger to fear, a foe to wrong; Like sturdy Hab, branched from your race, Your lineage royalty would grace’ [WNK].

Lord Neaves see Neaves, Charles

Lord Pei Huill (lōrd-pī-hūl) n., arch. a snobbish person – ‘... the man with the airs and graces was inevitably ‘Lord Pei Huill’ [WL].

Lord Polwarth (lōrd-pol-wurth) n. the present head of the Scotts of Harden is Henry Alexander Hepburne-Scott, 10th Lord Polwarth. The first local Lord Polwarth was Hugh Scott, 11th Baron of Harden.

the Lord’s Trei (thu-lōrdz-trī) n. former tree near the western side of the road shortly before coming to the Caa Knowe. Its position is indicated by a raised area in the field. This is probably an ancient burial cairn (about 33ft in diameter) with an enclosure around it. It may be related to the Caa Knowe cairn, which is nearby. The date that the tree grew in the centre is not known, but it was already an old tradition by the mid-19th century.

Lord Warden (lōrd-warden) n. official government position from the early 14th century until the Union of the Crowns in 1603, with responsibility for security of the lands around the Border. There were Lord Wardens of both Scotland and England, with the land split into West, Middle and East portions (sometimes just West and East), with Hawick lying in the Scottish Middle Marches. Sir James Douglas (‘The Black Douglas’) was the first recorded appointee on the Scottish side, in 1314. The Wardenship was hereditary with the Douglas family until forfeited in 1455. Afterwards there were usually 3 separate Scottish Wardens. The relevant Wardens for Hawick are approximately: Sir James Douglas, from 1314; Sir William Douglas, from 1343; Sir Archibald Douglas, 1364 and 1368–1400; Archibald 4th Earl of Douglas, from 1400; James 7th Earl of Douglas, sometime; William Douglas, 2nd Earl of Angus, from 1433; William, 8th Earl of Douglas, from 1450; William Douglas of Cluny, from 1464; James, Earl of Buchan, from 1479; Walter Ker of Cessford, from 1502; Ralph and Andrew Ker, from 1503; Alexander, 3rd Lord Hume, from 1510; Sir Robert Ker, from 1514; Sir Andrew Ker of Cessford, from 1515; Anthony Darcy, from 1516; Archibald Douglas, 6th Earl of Angus, from 1525; Sir Walter Ker of Cessford, from 1536; Sir Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst, from 1538; Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch, from 1550; James, Earl of Bothwell, from 1558; Sir Walter Ker of Cessford, from 1560; Earl of Angus (Archibald Douglas), from 1574; William Ker of Cessford, from 1583; Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst, from 1584; Earl of Arran (James Stewart), from 1584; William Ker of Cessford, from 1585; Duke of Lennox (Ludovic Stewart), from 1592; Sir Robert Ker c.1594–1603 (see also Warden).

Lorenz (lo-renz) n. Helen Ruth nee Palmer-Douglas, eldest daughter of James Malcolm Palmer-Douglas. She inherited the vestiges of the Cavers estate, including the small piece of land on which the Hornshole Monument was erected, which she gifted to the people of Hawick in 2019. She married Walter and had children Jason and Robert.

lorimer (lo-ri-mur, -ree-) n., arch. someone who makes metal parts for bridles and saddles, a saddler – ‘Decerns Thomas Oliver to content and pay to James Scott, lorimer, 3 half firloths of aitts eitten by his guids and geir ...’ [BR1642].

Lorimer (lo-ri-mur) n. Sir Robert Stodart, R.S.A. (1864–1929) born in Edinburgh, he became a noted architect and promoter of the Arts and Crafts movement in Scotland. He designed the National War Memorial at Edinburgh Castle. Locally he was responsible for the design of the 1908 wooden chancel screen in St. Cuthbert’s, the 1897/8 renovation of Fatlips Castle, the clock tower in Gala Burgh Chambers and the War Memorial in Kelso.

Lorraine (lō-rān) n. Agnes (16th/17th C.) suggested to have been a daughter of Hector of Harwood (although there is no evidence for this). She married Martin Elliot. In 1618 she held the liferent of half a husbandland in Lilliesleaf and gifted the lands to her son and heir William Elliot. In 1625 she and William Elliot had a sasine of lands in Lilliesleaf. Agnes (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. In 1745 she was charged by the Kirk Session of fornication with Thomas Barry, on the birth of her unnamed child. She had to appear before the congregation in sackcloth no less than 11 times. Probably the same Agnes appears to have married Thomas Barrie in Kirkton Parish in 1748. Alexander (14th C.) said to have been taken prisoner at the Battle of Neville’s Cross. It has been suggested that he was a son of Eustace, but there is no definite evidence of their relationship. In 1359 he was granted custody of the lands of Richard of Kirkbride by Edward III, presumably for supporting the English King. It may be that he was the progenitor of the Berwickshire Lorraines (several named Alexander), who were Sheriff-Clerks in Duns in the 17th and 18th centuries there. Alexander (16th/17th C.) resident of Kelso Parish. In 1602 he and his wife Marion Rutherford had a son James baptised. Among the witnesses was George Lorraine, who was surely a relative. It seems likely he was descended from the earlier Alexander. An Alexander recorded in Edinburgh in 1621 may have been his son, as well as John, who was a writer in Duns and married a daughter of Sir Alexander Don. Alexander (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish and then gardener at Oakwood and Middleford. He was probably related to William and Robert, who were also in Ashkirk at the same time; they may all have been brothers and sons of George and Janet Fleming. His brother Robert (a gardener) witnessed the baptism in 1697 and probably the one in 1691 (which is hard to read) along with James He married Jean Ker and their children (several baptised in Selkirk) included: Jean (b.1691); Mary (b.1693); Margaret (b.1697); Liliās (b.1698); Elspeth (b.1700); and Margaret (again, b.1705). Archibald (17th/18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His son James was baptised in Bedrule in 1698. His name is recorded as ‘Archbald Loring’. He may have been a son of Walter and Janet Shortreed. Beatrix (17th C.) recorded in 1643 in Ruletownhead in the valuation of Abbotrule Parish. Her lands were valued at £10. Edward (15th C.) Englishman who was the progenitor of the Barons of Kirkharle in Northumberland. It is unclear what connection there was to the Roxburghshire Lorraines; however, the forename Edward was also known in that branch. He was said to have lands in the Durham area. In 1425 he married Johanna, daughter and heiress of William de Strother. He thus became owner of Kirkharle, and neighbouring lands, including the Northumbrian farm of Hawick. He was probably succeeded by his son Edward. Edward (15th/16th C.) possibly son of James. He may have been the uncle of Hector of Harwood, for whom he witnessed a sasine in 1531. The witnesses after him were William and Patrick. Edward (16th C.) son of John who held lands in Blainslie near Melrose. His name appears to be written 'Lorne'. In 1579 he had sasine for lands in Blainslie as well as the reversion for the lands. Edward (d.c.1598) Laird of Harwood in the late 1500s, son of Hector, who he succeeded in 1573. In 1573 he was summoned to appear before the Privy Council, along with Sir Thomas Turnbull and others for their raid on the house of Robert Kerr of Woodhead; however, they were acquitted because Kerr had been assisting the fugitive Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst. He owned Hawthornside as well as Harwood, and also held the lands of Appotside (perhaps through marriage). In 1578/9 he was 'guidsone' (i.e. son-in-law) to Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule, when he was among men required to be presented to the Privy Council, with John Johnstone of that Ilk as cautioner, for the murder of Thomas Shiel. In 1580 he was 'younger of Harwod' when he was in a bond with the Turnbells of Bedrule and Barnhills to keep peace with the Turnbells of Minto and others; at that point the Lorraines of Harwood were united with the Turnbells of Bedrule and Barhills, and feuding with the Turnbells of Minto, Wauchope, Bewlie and Hobsburn. In 1583 William Douglas of Cavers was cautioner for him. He is probably the 'Larde of Harret' who signed a bond of assurance with the English Warden in 1584 (along with Gledstains, Elliots, Armstrongs and others). He was recorded in 1585 along with William Douglas of Cavers as cautioners for John Douglas of Whitriggs. He and John Turnbull of Minto were cautioners for 'Hobbie Elliot, called Vicar's Hobb' in 1588/9. Also in 1589 James Langlands of that Ilk was cautioner for him. About 1590 he was listed among landed men in the Borders. He is probably the Edward who (along with Gilbert) signed a bond written by Sir John Forster to try to end family feuds on the Border in 1595/6. In 1580 he married Margaret, daughter of Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule. He is said to have been an unassuming man, although his wife was the opposite. She apparently roused the ire of the Turnbull Clan, who laid waste to Harwood in the years 1598–1605. Hector and William, probably his sons or other close relatives, were slain, along with his wife's servant. Flocks and herds were also carried off, as well as timber. The feud only ended when an appeal was made to the Earl of Angus. His son Hector succeeded him by 1599, while Edward and James were other surviving sons, and he may also have had sons William, Walter and Fergus. In 1606 his son James was declared a fugitive. Edward (16th/17th C.) younger son of Edward and Margaret Turnbull. He is mentioned several times as 'Edward the younger of Harwood'. Edward of Harwood (b.c.1600) son of Hector, with his mother possibly being a daughter of Robert Elliot of Redheugh. His father was killed when he was quite young and his uncle James served as his tutor. He is recorded in an instrument of 1619 being required to marry Margaret Hamilton, sister to Francis Hamilton, who was heir of James Hamilton, formerly owner of lands in the Rule valley; this was under the instructions of his superior, Lord Herries. In fact Margaret married Rev. William Weir, who became minister at Hobkirk; it may be that not fulfilling the marriage contract meant that Edward had to pay a fine to Lord Herries. In 1630 he is recorded in a 'contract of wadsett' assigning the lands of Harwood and Hawthornside to William Weir, minister of Hobkirk; this followed the contract of 1598 when his father Hector had borrowed money from James Hamilton. In 1631 he granted sasine of Hartshaugh to Gilbert Elliott. Also in 1631 he had a precept of clare constat and sasine for Harwood and Hawthornside, granted by Andrew, Lord Jedburgh; this renewal confirms that he was great-grandson of Hector. In 1632 he and Rev. Weir were involved in another wadset of Harwood to Gilbert Elliott (son of 'Gibbie wi the Gowden Gairtins'). In 1632 he had a sasine for Appotside, granted by Rev. William Weir, with the consent of Francis, son of James Hamilton, as well as for Tythehouse. In 1633 he had a wadset with Gilbert Elliott for the lands of Tythehouse. In 1637 he and Gilbert Elliot granted the lands of Harwood and Tythehouse to William, eldest son of Simon Elliot of the Binks. He had thus ended his family's ownership of Harwood, but held onto the small farm of Appotside. In 1643 he is listed as owner of Appotside, valued at £200. He is probably the 'Laird Loran' who led a group of 20 or so men who captured Royalist leader William Murray after the Battle of Philiphaugh. He is recorded as 'of Apotsyd' as witness to a contract of 1648 and again in 1649. He witnessed a marriage contract in 1652 for Robert Elliott and Margaret Riddell. In 1654 he is described as the 'heritable proprietor' when he and his eldest son Walter had a contract of 'wadset' with William

Elliot of Harwood and the Binks for the lands of Appotside. In 1656 he resigned his lands of Appotside and Tythehouse in favour of William Elliot of Harwood; this was with the agreement of his wife, Maisie Elliot, and also mentions his eldest son, Walter. An additional contract reserves for him the 'mill, multures, sequels, suckin, kiln, houses, mill-lands lying beyond the water dam on the south side' of Appotside, along with pasture for a few animals. He signed his surname as 'Lorran'. In 1659 he appears to be the tenant of Appotside Mill, along with Walter Riddell (tenant at Appotside), when the 'liferent' of the lands was given to Christine Grahamslaw (new wife of William Elliot of Harwood). In 1662 he was listed among the debtors to the deceased William Elliot of Harwood; Walter 'in Whyttchaugh' was also listed, and probably his son. In about 1663 the Land Tax Rolls record that he paid tax on £300 at Appotside. He married Maisie Elliot, who may have been from the Eliotts of Stobs (his neighbours) or the Elliots of Reidheugh (his mother's family). His eldest son Walter was perhaps the Walter who married Janet Shortreed and lived in Hawick Parish. He may also have had a daughter Alison, married to Robert Scott, whose daughter Elspeth was born in Kelso in 1635. He may also have had a younger son George, who had a daughter baptised in Hawick the same day as a daughter of Walter. He probably remained at Appotside until his death, ending his family's association of about 250 years with the lands around Harwood. Eustace (d.bef. 1374) probably ancestor of the Lorraines of Harwood, his surname is given as 'de Lorreyne' and similar vaiants, while his forename is also 'Eustachius' and 'Tassyn'. He was involved in events on both sides of the Border and is recorded between 1323 and 1374 (which is long enough that it is possible there were 2 generations here). It is not known when he was born or who his parents were. Although sometimes referred to as a knight, it is unclear which side of the Border this came from. He held land in Roxburghshire, including 'Heroude' (which is surely Harwood in Rulewater), as well as in Dumfriesshire (including 'Coschogill') and in Ayrshire. In 1323 he was given safe passage to meet the Earl of Atholl in England, with the stipulation that he was not to go more than 10 leagues across the Border. In 1331 he was among men accused of illegally hunting on the Earl of Angus' lands in Northumberland. In 1333 he was a Scotsman appointed by Edward III as one of the Commissioners to inquire into the valuation of Berwick. He was a Commissioner for the Treaty of Perth in 1335, having his Scottish lands restored at that time. About the same year he was among a few Scottish noblemen who swore fealty to Edward III and in 1336 was granted a pardon by the English King for crimes committed in Scotland. In 1340 he had remission (now from the Scottish King) for the killing of Robert Lauder, although no details of the incident are given. In 1343 he was given compensation by Edward III for lands lost in Scotland. He was also Warden of Roxburgh Castle (with Sir William Douglas as Governor at the same time) in 1346, when the Castle was surrendered to the English (specifically Henry Percy and Ralph Neville). He had a son (perhaps on the English side) captured at the Battle of Neville's Cross (by Robert Bertram), for whom ransom was paid in 1347. He was 'Eustacio Loreyn' when he witnessed to a charter for Adam of Rule, for the lands of Altonburn, in about 1354. Around that time (and certainly by 1357) he forfeited his lands to Hugh Blair of that Ilk, presumably for acting against the Scottish King; the lands were confirmed to Hugh's son James Blair in 1374. In 1357/8 he witnessed a charter of confirmation by John Copeland to John Ker for lands in Altonburn; at that point he was 'of Chatto'. He was still 'of Chatto' in 1358 when he witnessed a charter for William of Blakedene, confirming lands of Molle and Altonburn to John Ker. He was probably related to James, recorded in the 1350s and 60s, including witnessing the 2 charters of 1357/8 and 1358 with him. It has been suggested that James (perhaps ancestor of the Harwood line), Alexander (perhaps ancestor of the Berwickshire line), Robert (perhaps ancestor of the Hummelknowes line) and William may all have been his sons, but there is no definitive evidence for any of these connections. Eustace (15th C.) recorded as a witness to a ratification of a gift of land in Edinburgh in 1457. He was surely a descendant of the earlier Eustace. Fergus (d.1616) murdered at 'Gaithouslok' (i.e. Gatehousecote) by Andrew and Cuthbert McDougal, tenants in Stonedge. They were apparently caught 'with the bloodie hand' and committed to Jedburgh Tolbooth in 1618. He was surely related to Walter, tenant in Gatehousecote, and it has been suggested that he might have been a younger son of Edward of Harwood. It is unclear where his forename came from, but there is a Fergus Turnbull recorded a century earlier. George (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk. His daughter Elspeth was baptised there in 1641, with his surname being recorded as 'Lorne'. George (17th C.) described as 'in Cavers', along with William, in a Hawick magistrates court case of 1642, when Samuel Rutherford, servant of the Laird of Cavers, accused a large group of his drinking friends of stealing his wallet. George (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Anna (or perhaps Janet) Fleming and their children included John (b.1655). The baptism was witnessed by John Lister and Simon Adamson and was the same day as Walter's daughter Isobel was baptised; this hints that he may have been Walter's brother, and hence a younger son of Edward of Harwood. It has been suggested that he may also have had children Robert, William, Isobell and Alexander. George (17th C.) resident of Abbotrule Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Perhaps the same George was recorded in 1691 when he and another man were paid for mowing in the account book of Dame Magdalene Nicholson, widow of Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs. George (d.1720) servant of George Scott in Easter Groundiston. His children, baptised in Wilton Parish, included: John (b.1703); George (b.1706); Agnes (b.1709); and Janet (b.1714). The baptism in 1703 was done along with a son of John Lamb, with witnesses Adam Scott and Walter Scott. The 1706 baptism was done at Wilton Common, with witnesses James Irvine and Will Scott. The use of the Wilton 'mortcloth' for his funeral is recorded, and he was transcribed 'in Coghall' (probably 'Boghall'). The death of 'Agnes Lorrain in Heap' in 1734 was probably his daughter. It has been suggested that he may have been son of John and grandson of George and Janet Fleming. George (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Helen Nichol in 1727 and their children included Helen (b.1731). He may have been the son of George born in 1706 and the later George may have been his own son. George (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Isabel Hart in 1752. He may be the George who witnessed a baptism for John in 1755. He may be the George whose funeral is recorded in Wilton in 1770. He may have been son of the earlier George from Wilton. George (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Orchard in 1763 and 1765 (and hence surely related to John, who was also there at about the same time) and at Hummelknowes in 1772. His children included: Margaret (b.1763); Helen (b.1765); an unnamed son (b.1767); and John (b.1772). Gilbert 'Gib' (16th C.) probably son of Hector. He was listed in 1579 among Scotsmen accused by 'the Laird of Pansoun, Englishman' of raiding into England; he was stated there to be son of the Laird of Harwood. He was also on a list in 1579/80 of men charged to make recompense to Englishmen they had acted against; his cautioner then was the Laird of Bedrule. He is also recorded in 1583/4 when he was denounced along with Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule and others for not appearing before the Privy Council. He is probably the Gilbert who (along with Edward) signed a bond written by Sir John Forster to try to end family feuds on the Border in 1595/6. He is probably the Gilbert, who along with Hector 'Lorance' (probably his brother) is recorded being fined for crimes against William Hall of Otterburn in 1596. He could be the 'Gib Lorreyne' listed along with 'Archy Trumble' in a complaint of a raid into England in 1597. In 1599 Hector Turnbull of Wauchope complained that he and Hector, 'father-brothers of Hector Lorane of that ilk' were involved in the slaughter of David Turnbull, heir of Wauchope; they were captured and presented to James Douglas of Cavers, as Sheriff of Roxburghshire, but Douglas refused to enter them in court. Also in 1699 he was 'father-brother' to Hector of Harwood when John Turnbull of Minto was cautioner in a bond to enter them. He could be the 'Gilbert Lorreyne of Hawdon' recorded in 1601 when Richard Fenwick of Stanton accused him of stealing livestock from him. He may also be the Gib 'of Apputtsyde' recorded in 1601 along with Hector and John, as well as several Turnbells, when they were accused of crimes by an Englishman. He is probably the 'Gib Loraybe, called Auld Gib' who was listed as a fugitive in 1605, along with 'Jock's John' and many Armstrongs, Elliots, Turnbells, etc. He was listed again as a fugitive for failing to attend another Border Commissioners' court in Jedburgh in 1606, along with his brother Hector; he was then 'Gib Lorayne, called Old Gib'. This suggests that he may have had a son who was 'Young Gib'. It has been suggested that he married a sister of William Scott of Tushielaw, but there is no evidence for this. Grizel (17th C.) resident of Gatehousecote listed in 1684 among people who failed to appear in Jedburgh when cited. The others included Margaret (who may have been her sister) and Andrew Shiel. They were probably Covenanting objectors. She was also listed in 1684 along with Margaret and Beatrix, possibly her sisters. It has been suggested she might have been daughter of Walter (but there is no proof for this). Hector (16th C.)

owner of the lands of Harwood and Hawthornside according to a charter granted by William Lord Herries in 1531 (incorrectly noted as in one source as 1561). He was the grandson (and heir) of James and son of John. He may have been a minor when he succeeded his grandfather (his father presumably predeceasing his grandfather). He seems to have been the first Hector in his family, so perhaps his mother was a Turnbull (where this forename was known at the time, and with 2 Turnbulls witnessing the 1531 charter). It was stated that the earlier charters for the lands had been accidentally burned, and hence a new charter was given in 1531. The sasine for his lands was witnessed by Edward, William and Patrick, who may have been his uncles, or other near relatives. He is probably the 'Ecto' Lord of Harwode' who had a bond of 1557 along with Turnbulls, Elliots and others, to present 'Will Nyksone, called Gymmerhom'. He is probably the 'Lard of Harwod' listed in 1564 among Border lairds who were ordered to support the warden, Ker of Cessford. He was succeeded by his son Edward and probably also had sons Hector and Gilbert, and perhaps daughters Agnes and Marion. He probably died before 1573. In 1583/4 he was probably the Hector of Harwood on a list of Borderers ordered by the Privy Council to render their houses for the King's use (making it somewhat unclear when he died). He is probably the Hector recorded on Monipennie's list of Border Lairds in the 1590s (even although he was deceased by then). His son Edward is recorded in 1578/9 as 'guidsone' to Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule, and hence his wife was probably sister of Turnbull of Bedrule. Hector (16th/17th C.) son of Hector of Harwood and brother of Edward and Gib. He is probably the Hector, who along with Gilbert 'Lorance' is recorded being fined for crimes against William Hall of Otterburn in 1596. In 1599 Hector Turnbull of Wauchope complained that he and Gilbert, 'father-brothers of Hector Lorane of that Ilk' were involved in the slaughter of David Turnbull, heir of Wauchope; they were captured and presented to James Douglas of Cavers, as Sheriff of Roxburghshire, but Douglas refused to enter them in court. John Turnbull of Minto was cautioner for a bond to enter him and Gilbert, this being subscribed at Barnhills. He is probably the Hector 'of Apputtsyde' listed in 1601 along with Gib and John, along with several Turnbulls, when they were accused of crimes by an Englishman. He was listed in 1606, along with his brother 'Auld Gib', among men declared as fugitives for not attending a Borders Commissioners' court in Jedburgh. Hector (c.1582–1604) son of Edward and grandson of Hector. He was Laird of Harwood and was succeeded by his grandson Hector, probably son of his own son Edward. A contract of 1598 with James Hamilton describes a loan (of £1000) from Hamilton, and how he will inherit the lands of Harwood and Hawthornside, but with Hamilton receiving the lands if he defaulted on the loan. This was confirmed in a contract of 1600, where he was to be infefted in the lands, with the loan from Hamilton now being almost £1200. In 1602 the wardship of his lands was granted to James Hamilton, as well as 'the marriage of Hector Lorane, now of Harwode' and the marriage of any other male heirs who might succeed later; he was still a minor at this point, since he was described as 'apparent of Harwood'. Hamilton also had a charter for the lands of Tythehouse and Apotside. It seems likely that in about 1602 he married a daughter of Robert Elliot of Redheugh and Marion Hamilton, who was the sister of James Hamilton (who held the rights of his marriage). However, his wife's first name is not recorded and it is not known if she remarried after his early death. He was killed 'with schotis of hagbutis and pistolettis' as part of the feud between Lady Appotside (his mother, daughter of the Laird of Bedrule) and other local Turnbulls. After his death the lands of Harwood and Hawthornside reverted to the superior, William, Lord Herries, until taken temporarily by James Hamilton. He probably had a single child, Edward, who succeeded. Hector of Harwood (16th/17th C.) heir to his grandfather Hector. He is recorded in a deed of 1631 for the lands of Harwood and Hawthornside; William and Patrick were witnesses to the associated sasine. He was the last Lorraine Laird of Harwood, selling the lands, along with Tythehouse and Appotside to Simon Elliot of the Binks in 1637. He married a daughter of Robert Elliot, 16th of Redheugh, whose brother was William Elliot of Hartshaugh. Dr. Herbert James Bell (1852–1909) son of Rev. Joseph, minister of Tinwald and Caerlaverock. He was great-great-grandson of William, servitor to John Scott of Gorrenberry, and hence was descended from the Lorraines of Harwood. He graduated from Edinburgh University, then spending 3 years in the U.S.A. before commencing in medical practice in England. He moved to Hawick in about 1889, taking over from Dr. Penman. He lived at 31 Bridge Street. He served as surgeon to the Mechanics' Friendly Society and was medical officer to the Hawick Post Office. He was also a member of Hawick School Board, was an elder in Hawick Parish Church and served as President of Hawick R.F.C. He was a Unionist in politics and was President of the Hawick Constitutional Club. He once stood as a local councillor. He spent 1902 as a government medical officer on the Gold Coast in Africa. From 1903 he was medical officer for Stobs Camp. His wife was Janet Hewat (1861–1935), who communicated with George Tancred regarding the Lorraines of Harwood. Their children were: Joseph Currie (b.1886), who was also a doctor; Edith Dickson Bell (b.1887), who married David Bell and secondly H.S. Davidson; Janet Hewat (b.1889), born in Hawick, who married Charles MacLeod; Alice Mary Neilson (b.1891), also born in Hawick, who married Nicholas Vass; and Richard Hewat Bell (b.1894), also born in Hawick, who married Mary Gould. He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. Hugh (13th C.) recorded in about the period 1210–22 when he and his wife Ada, daughter and heiress of Simon Fraser, renewed a charter to Kelso Abbey. This was for the church of Keith-Humbie in East Lothian. His name is given as 'Hugo Lorens', which is presumably 'Lorraine'. However, it is unclear how he was related to other Lorraines. James (d.1346) said to have been a 'Banneret' who was killed at the Battle of Neville's Cross. His name is given as 'James Loreyn'. It is unclear if he was on the Scottish or English side, and how he might have been related to Eustace, who was Warden of Roxburgh Castle at that time. James (14th C.) witness in 1354 to a charter of Robert of Alton relating to the chantry at the Church of Roxburgh. He was also witness to the charter granting the lands of Altonburn to the Kers in 1357/8 and another granting them further lands in Sprouston in 1358. In 1357/8 he was granted an annuity of £20 by Edward III, for having lost most of his Scottish lands on account of supporting England; this was repeated the following year with an extra 20 marks and in 1359 he received a further gift from the English King. In 1357/8 he witnessed a charter for John Copeland and another in 1358 for William of Blakedene, both relating to the lands of Altonburn (and both also witnessed by Eustace). Also in 1358 he was granted the Barony of Caverton in Roxburghshire, and in 1361 received custody of the lands of Old Roxburgh, formerly belonging to the deceased Nicholas de Seymour. In 1365 he witnessed a quitclaim by Joan, wife of John of Copeland. In about 1370 he witnessed a grant of lands in Lessuden to Melrose Abbey. He is recorded as being 'de Lorreyne', 'Loreyne', 'Loreyn' and 'Lorreyne'. He was probably directly related to Eustace (perhaps his son or brother), who was recorded in the 1330s to 50s. One possibility is that he was son of Eustace and direct ancestor of the later Lorraines of Harwood. James (15th C.) recorded in 1454/5 when he attempted to recover the lands of Coschogill in the Regality of Drumlanrig from John Blair of Adamton. These had been in the hands of the Blairs since forfeited by Eustace about a century earlier. Given the court case to recover some of the family lands in Dumfriesshire, it seems clear that he was a direct descendant of Eustace, and either was already Laird of Harwood, or succeeded in recovering these lands at about the same time. Probably the same James was on an inquest held in Dumfries in 1451/2 regarding the lands of Sir James Douglas, and he was likely also the Lorraine who witnessed a land transfer to a Bailie of Dumfries in 1453. Perhaps the same James was a member of an inquest at Jedburgh Forest in 1439, relating to succession of the lands of John Douglas of Bonjedward. He was surely related to the nearly contemporary John of Harwood, perhaps his brother. James (15th/16th C.) mentioned in a charter of 1531 to his grandson Hector, by which time he was deceased. His son (and father of Hector of Harwood) may have been John. It has been suggested that he was son of John of Harwood, recorded in 1464/5, and descended from Eustace. He is recorded as 'Jacobi lorane' in 1494/5 when William Douglas of Cavers was fined for his non-appearance at the Justiceaire in Jedburgh. Probably the same James 'Lor-ein of Herwod' was part of an assize in 1507. He may have had sons John, Edward, William and Patrick (the latter 3 being witnesses to the saine in 1531 for Hector, listed in this order); however, there are no documents to confirm any of this. Nevertheless, there is evidence that John was father of Hector, and hence presumably John was his son. James (16th C.) listed in 1547 among residents of 'Overtoune of Blanyslie' near Melrose. His surname is given as 'Lorne', but it seems likely this was Lorraine. It is unclear how he would have been related to other Lorraines, but it has been suggested that he could have been a son of John of Harwood. He married Agnes Lamb and his son Edward had a 'precept of clare constat' for his father's lands in Blainslie in about 1579. James of Appotside (16th/17th

C.) 2nd son of Edward of Harwood and Margaret Turnbull. In 1598 he was implicated in the slaughter of David Turnbull of Wauchope near his house. This was no doubt part of the ongoing feud between the Turnbells and Lorraines. Note that his younger brother William was killed by Turnbells in 1600 and his older brother Hector in 1604. In 1605 he is recorded as 'Jacobo Lorane fratri Hectoris Lorane de Harwode' when he had remission for being involved in the murder of David Turnbull of Wauchope. In 1606 he was denounced for resisting a messenger that came to apprehend the fugitive William Turnbull of Braidhaugh. In 1606/7 he was recorded as brother of the deceased Hector of Harwood and 'propinquior agnatus' (i.e. closer relative) to Hector, on his father Edward's side; he was thus appointed as tutor to his young nephew Edward. In 1607 Thomas Home, Burgess of Musselburgh was cautioner for him to appear before the Privy Council to answer the charges brought against him by Thomas Turnbull of Wauchope and Hector Turnbull of Barnhills, namely 'for presenting bended pistolets to their breasts for their slaughter'. Also in 1607 he was son of Edward of Harwood when he petitioned the Privy Council, claiming that he never received the charge and hence did not appear to be warded in Edinburgh Tolbooth. He paid a fine, but it is unclear if he was imprisoned afterwards. In 1618/9 he was witness to a bond between Walter Turnbull of Bedrule and Adam Turnbull of the Townhead of Abbotrule. In 1619 there was a complaint that he had threatened William Ker (younger of Yair) with a hagbut when he was riding near the headwaters of Rule. He was denounced a rebel for failing to appear, but it is unclear whether or not he escaped punishment. There is no information about whether he married or had children. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Ancrum Parish. He had a marriage contract with Isobel Bairnfather in 1687, in which she has sasine of 'ane nether hous and two rigs of arrable land in nether ancrum'. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Stirches who was given 10 shillings by Wilton Parish in 1704. He may be the person transcribed as 'Jannet Lorne' (possibly at Easter Heap) who was given money the previous year. He was probably related to Patrick and William, who were recorded at Heap in 1650. James (17th/18th C.) recorded as 'sometime in Cleithaugh' in Southdean Parish. His daughter Bessie was baptised in Cavers Parish in 1708, with the child's father engaging for the child in his absence. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was at 'Coldfolds' (probably Cawfaulds) in 1750, Broadlee in 1753 and Clarilaw in 1758. He married Bessie Scott and their children included: Samuel (b.1750); James (b.1753); and Betty (b.1758). The witnesses in 1750 were Thomas Riddell and James Simpson, in 1753 were James Dryden and James Martin and in 1758 were James Dryden and Andrew Blyth. He is probably the James who witnessed a baptism for John Rutherford in 1779. He could be the James who died in Wilton in 1811, with Betty dying in 1812. James (18th/19th C.) married Betty Scott in Wilton Parish in 1809. Jean (d.1769) resident of Doorpool. She is buried in Hobkirk Cemetery, with the funeral of William being recorded the same day. Dr. Joseph Currie (1886–1945) son of Hawick doctor Herbert. He graduated from Edinburgh University and was admitted to the Royal College of Surgeons. It is said that in 1907 he moved to become medical officer for the Burmah Oil Company in Rangoon. During WWI he served in the R.A.M.C. as a Lieutenant and then Captain. Afterwards he was a surgeon in Edinburgh. He married 3 times, to Margaret Kennedy, Alice Wilson and Margaret Young. He had a son Herbert Derrick Bell (1913–82), who played rugby for Scotland. John of Harwood (15th C.) member of the panel in 1464/5 that ruled on the inheritance of the Barony of Cavers by Archibald Douglas. He is listed as 'John Lorane of Harwod'. He was probably a descendant of Eustace. He was surely closely related to the James who was recorded in 1454/5, perhaps his brother. He may have been father of James of Harwood and hence direct ancestor of later Lorraines of Harwood. John of Lorraine (15th/16th C.) probably son of James and father of Hector. He is probably the John whose seal is recorded among Rutherford charters, showing a lion rampant and the words 'S iohanes LORAN'. He is recorded in 1493 when the Sheriff, William Douglas of Cavers, was fined for failure to produce him at the Court of the Justiciary in Jedburgh (unless this was a different generation); he was again recorded in 1494/5 for failing to appear. Given that Hector was served heir to his grandfather James in 1531, he must have already been deceased by then. He was explicitly stated to have been father of Hector in the 'Acta Dominorum' for 1535/6, relating to a claim made against his son by James Wallace of 'Cornell', son and heir of Adam Wallace of Craigie. As well as a son Hector, he may have had children James (connected with Blainslie), John (perhaps father of 'Jock's

John') and Bessie (also in Blainslie, married to Michael Dickson) . John (16th C.) recorded in 1574 as owner of property in Jedburgh. It has been suggested that he might have been a son of John and hence brother of Hector of Harwood. He may have been father of 'Jok's Johnne'. John of Appotside (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1601 with Gib and Hector, along with several Turnbells, when they were accused of crimes by an Englishman from Morpeth. Probably the same man was 'Johnne Lorayne, called 'Jok's Johnne' in 1605, when listed as a fugitive, along with 'Auld Gib'; he was recorded there as 'Johnne Lorayne, called Jok's Johnne'. He was thus son of John, and surely descended from the Lorraines of Harwood (perhaps great-great-grandson of James of Harwood). John (17th C.) witness in Hawick in 1657 to the baptism of Beatrix, daughter of Walter and Janet Shortreed. He was presumably related to Walter. John (b.1655) son of George and Janet Fleming and probably descended from the Lorraines of Harwood. It has been suggested that he may have been father of many of the family members associated with Wilton, e.g. George, James and William. However, there is no documentary proof for this. John (17th C.) resident of Ruletownfoot according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. It is unclear how he was related to other Lorraines. John (17th/18th C.) servitor to John Scott of Ancrum. In 1712 he was attending the New North Kirk of Edinburgh when accused by the Ancrum Session of fornication with Agnes Cant; he was publicly rebuked in Ancrum in 1716. In 1714 he married Isabel Leithead in Lilliesleaf Parish and their son Thomas (b.1716) was baptised in Ancrum. It is unclear how he was related to other Lorraines. John (18th C.) resident of Kirkton and Cavers Parishes. He was in Upper Tofts in 1722, Berryfell in 1725 and Earlside in 1732. He married Margaret Glendinning in Kirkton Parish in 1722. Their children included: Jane (b.1725); and John (b.1732). He could be the John who witnessed a baptism for Walter in Wilton Parish in 1729. He may also have been father of Agnes, who had a child with Thomas Barrie in 1745. John (18th C.) resident of Netherhall in Wilton Parish. He married Helen Easton in 1751; his wife was also from Wilton. Their children included: William (b.1752); Helen (b.1754); and John (b.1755). The witnesses in 1752 were Thomas Hay and Thomas Scott and in 1754 were William Lamb (suggesting that he may have been a son of Walter, who reciprocated in witnessing a baptism for William Lamb) and

William Noble. The witness in 1755 was George, who was surely a close relative. In 1752 he and Janet Scott in Wiltonburn were accused of fornication by the Wilton Session, and made to pay fines. Perhaps the same John married Bessie Scott (from Kirkton Parish) in 1758 in Wilton Parish. He may be the John who witnessed a baptism for Robert Stewart in 1775. However, he may also be the John for whom the Wilton 'mortcloth' fee was paid in 1774. John (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. In 1748 he married Ann Mitchellhill from Cavers. Further children baptised in Cavers Parish were probably also his: Christian (b.1758); Anne (b.1760); and Margaret (b.1769). In at least 1758-69 he was living in Orchard (and hence was surely related to George, who was in Orchard in 1763). He could be the John, son of John, born in 1732. He is probably the John who received poor relief in Kirkton in 1796. John (18th C.) married Margaret Hobkirk in Kirkton Parish in 1760. His surname is written 'Lorn' and 'Loran'. He was at Acreknowe in 1761 and 1764, and Newmill in 1764 and 1768. His children included: Janet (b.1761), who may have had a child Walter with Robert Ballantyne in 1796 Jean (b.1764); John (b.1766); and Margaret (b.1768), who may have married Robert Anderson. He could be the 'John Loran' recorded in 1771 when he paid the Hawick Council for 3000 divots (presumably from Hawick Common); along with several other neighbouring farmers he paid a penny per 50 divots. He is probably the John who received poor relief in Kirkton in 1796. He could be the same as one of the other Johns. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Helen Learmonth and the couple paid a fine to the Session for fornication. Their children included Benjamin (b.1769). The witnesses were Walter Irvine and John Murray. It seems likely he was related to Walter, who witnessed a baptism for Walter Irvine and Isobel Learmonth (probably related to his wife) in Wilton in 1765. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, possibly son of John and Helen Easton. He married Margaret Graham in 1778. He may be the John who died in Wilton Parish in 1806. Lady Margaret nee Turnbull (16th/17th C.) daughter of Sir Thomas of Bedrule and wife of Edward Lorraine, who was Laird of Harwood and Appotside. She may have been called 'Lady Appotside', and it is possible her husband gained these lands from her father through their marriage. She was said to be quite quarrelsome, particularly towards her own family, and suffered the wrath of Turnbull Clan, who laid waste to Harwood and Appotside, with matters coming to a head in 1598 and the years following. 200 cows were stolen, along with 600 sheep, 30 horses and 'the haill insight and plenissing' of Harwood in 1598. The following year 30 cows and goods were taken from Appotside, which was also burned. And in the years 1599–1605 the woods at Appotside were cut down, including about 2200 trees. Her servant Lyall Brown was killed in 1598 along with William Lorraine in 1600 and Hector Lorraine of Harwood in 1604 (both probably her sons). Apparently she appealed to the Earl of Angus, who offered to repay her out of his own pocket. And although this never transpired, the feud came to an eventual end. She is probably the same Margaret who (along with her son James) brought a court action in 1609 against Andrew Hamilton for intruding on the lands of Tythehouse. Margaret (17th C.) listed as a midwife in 1676 among others of the Abbotrule area who were imprisoned in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh for being 'most active and guilty of ane insolent ryot latly committed upon the person of Mr. George Baptie, minister, in the churchyard of Abbotrule'. This presumably means she objected to having an Episcopalian minister in her parish. The others listed included her daughter Anna Shiel, as well as Agnes and Bessie Shiel (probably related to her) and Elspeth Jackson. In 1684 she was listed at Gatehousecote among persons who failed to appear at court in Jedburgh; others included Andrew Shiel (surely related, and perhaps even her husband) and Grizel (perhaps her sister) there. She is further listed in 1684 along with Grizel and Beatrix (perhaps both her sisters). She may be the Margaret 'in Graden Barronnie' who refused to take 'the oath of abjuratiōne' in 1685. Her daughter Euphan was recorded in 1691 (as well as Jean, wife of William 'Zeaman', who could be another sister), when she was again referred to as a 'midwyffe in Gettascot'. Probably the same Margaret was resident of Gatehousecote according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Marion (16th/7th C.) see Marion Turnbull Patrick (14th/15th C.) son and heir of Robert, who was Laird of 'Homylknolle' (i.e. Hummelknowes). In 1428/9 he resigned his lands into the hands of his overlord in favour of Janet Rutherford, 'wyfe quhylem' (probably 'former wife') of George Rutherford of Chatto, excepting his own liferent. He was described as her 'eme', meaning uncle (usually maternal); however, it has been suggested that she was a Rutherford of Edgerston. The reason was because she had helped him 'wyn' his lands of 'Homylknolle' and the indenture was signed at 'Lynthaulche' (probably Lintalee). This document is the earliest record of Hummelknowe, and the earliest connection of the Lorraines with the Hawick area. He has a seal that was 'a lion passant, guardant crowned'. It has been suggested that his children included sons James (juror in 1439), Robert (juror in 1440) and John (Master of Coldstream Priory); however, there is no evidence for this and it seems more likely that James was from the Harwood branch and John from the Berwickshire line. Patrick (16th C.) mentioned in the records of St. Andrews University. He matriculated in 1525, graduated in 1527 and became a licentiate in 1529. It is possible he is the same Patrick who witnessed the charter for Hector of Harwood in 1531, making him perhaps son of James and Hector's uncle. He could be the same man as the clerk of Glasgow Diocese. Patrick (16th C.) clerk of the Diocese of Glasgow who drew up the sasine for Wolfelee and other lands for David Home of Wedderburn in 1550. Probably the same notary of the Glasgow Diocese wrote a sasine of 1559 relating to lands in Wilton. He may also be the Patrick who witnessed a sasine in 1531 relating to Hector Lorraine; this suggests he was related to Hector, perhaps being his uncle and hence son of James. Probably the same Patrick also witnessed a bond signed in 1546, for entering Elliots as prisoners at Ferniehirst. Patrick (17th C.) listed along with William on a list of Communicants at Easter Heap in 1650. They were probably related to the later Lorraines of Wilton. Robert (14th C.) recorded in 1361 as a juror on an inquest held at Roxburgh regarding the possessions of Sir William Dacre. He was on a further panel in 1361. It seems likely he was closely related to Eustace, perhaps a brother or son. One possibility is that he was a son of Eustace and direct ancestor of the Lorraines of Hummelknowes. Robert of Hummelknowes (15th C.) recorded on a 'retour of inquest' made in Hawick in 1424 (for deciding on the succession of lands in Hownam). He was also 'Robyn Lorane, Lord of Homylknow', whose son Patrick is recorded in an indenture of 1428/9. It seems likely that he was a descendant of Eustace, perhaps through his son Robert. It is possible that the same Robert was on a retour of inquest for the lands of Samuelston, held at Lauder in 1440. Bailie Robert (15th C.) along with Simon of Routledge, he was Bailie recorded in a sasine of 1453, and hence one of the first 2 known Bailies of Hawick. It is possible he was the same man as the Robert recorded in the 1420s. Robert (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His wife was Margaret Burn and their children included Beatrix (b.1688). The witnesses to the baptism were John Stuart and Robert Howden. It has been suggested that he was a son of George and Janet Fleming, but it seems more likely that he was closely related to the other Ashkirk Lorraines. He may be the gardener Robert, who witnessed a baptism for his brother Alexander in Ashkirk in 1695. Robert (17th/18th C.) married Margaret Story in Cavers Parish in 1707. He may have been 'in Tour'. It is possible that he was a son of Robert and Margaret Burn. Robert (18th C.) weaver in Weens. His son James was baptised in Hobkirk Parish in 1728. Roger (13th C.) witness to a confirmation of a gift of Ralph Maule to Newbattle Abbey sometime before 1231. In 1234 he was witness for the settlement of a dispute between the Chapter of Moray and Alan Durward. He is also recorded as a juror for Earl Patrick of Dunbar and Earl Walter Comyn of Menteith in about 1245. His surname is written 'Lohereng', 'Lorang' and 'Loren'. It is possible he was an ancestor of the Scottish Lorraines, but there is no direct evidence of any connections. Walter (16th/17th C.) tenant in Gatehousecote. In 1619 he had a bond with 'his good friend' Adam Turnbull, tenant of Bonchester Townhead. Given the timing, it is possible that he was a younger son of Edward of Harwood and Margaret Turnbull. It is suggested that he may have been father of Margaret (wife of a Shiel), who is recorded in Gatehousecote in the 1670s to 90s, and perhaps also father of Grizel and Beatrix (who are recorded along with Margaret in 1684), as well as Jean (recorded along with Margaret in 1691). Walter (17th C.) eldest son of Edward. In 1654 he and his father signed a contract with William Elliot of Harwood and the Binks, guaranteeing Elliot rentals from Appotside and its mill in return for a loan of 6,000 merks Scots. He signed his surname as 'Lorrane'. Probably the same Walter was recorded as 'in Whyttehaugh' (likely in Castleton Parish) as a debtor in the last testament of William Elliot of Harwood and the Binks in 1662. He may also be the Walter 'of Greins in the parochine of Castletoune' who had a bond with his brother-in-law Robert Scott of 'Cartertoune' in 1667. In 1670 he was tenant in Riccartonfoot when there was a discharge recording that he was unable to pay £220. In 1671 he rented the farm of Powisholm for a year, rented Byreholm in 1673 and

Byegate in 1677. There is a tradition that he was killed at the Battle of Bothwell Brig in 1679, but there is no evidence to support this. It is possible he was the Walter 'Lorane' recorded in Hawick in the 1650s and 60s. Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He may be the same man as the son of Edward, last Laird of Harwood. He is recorded in 1665 when he accused Marion Gillespie of 'pulling the hair out of his heid'. Probably the same Walter married Janet Shortreed and his children baptised in Hawick included: Isobell (b.1655), who could be the Isobel who married Thomas Laidlaw and lived in Robertson Parish or the Isobell who married George Minto and lived in Ashkirk Parish; and Beatrix (b.1657). Walter, who married Bessie Riddell, was probably also his son. It is also possible that another son was Archibald who was living in Hobkirk Parish when his son James was baptised in Bedrule. The witnesses to the 1655 baptism were John Scott (possibly of Gorrenberry) and Andrew Chisholme (possibly of Parkhill), while the witnesses in 1657 were John Scott and John Lorraine. Walter (17th C.) married Helen Scott in Ashkirk Parish in 1657. It is possible he was a son of Walter and grandson of Edward of Lorraine and Margaret Turnbull. It is possible that the Helen who married William Thomson in Selkirk in 1697 was his daughter. Walter (d.1679) resident of Abbotrule Parish. He was a Covenanter who was killed at Bothwell Bridge. Walter (17th C.) probably son of Walter and Janet Shortreed. He is recorded in 1681 as 'in Hardine' (probably Harden in Liddesdale) when he had a bond borrowing £3 from Walter Scott of Wauchope. He is recorded at Kirndeane in 1681 and 1682 in the Buccleuch estates rental book, when it is clear that a lot of his livestock had died. He rented Greens in 1682, but it not recorded what happened to him after that. He married Bessie Riddell and their children son William was baptised in 1682, with witnesses. John Riddell (probably brother or father of Bessie) and William Wilson. If he was grandson of Edward of Harwood, then it is possible that his wife was related to the Riddells of Bewlie (who were associated with that family). Walter (18th C.) resident of Cavers. In 1714 he was in East Cavers and in at least 1717-24 in Denholm. His children included: Ann (b.1714); Thomas (b.1717); Margaret (b.1721); and George (b.1724). He may be the Walter who married Margaret Miller of Cauldmill in 1705. He may also be the 'Walter Lorrain in Kirktown' whose son John (b.1706) was baptised in Cavers. It is unclear how he was related to other Lorraines. Walter (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He is recorded at Stirches in 1724, 1727 and 1729. He married Bessie Graham in 1722 and their children included: George (b.1724); William (b.1727), who may have married Margaret Hope in Dumfries in 1755; and Agnes (b.1729), who may have married John Armstrong in 1751 and could be the Agnes who died in 1781. The witnesses in 1724 were Walter Scott and John Scott and in 1727 were James Douglas and James Scott. John Lorraine (along with William Lamb) witnessed the baptism in 1729 and must have been a close relative. In 1727 he witnessed a baptism for William Lamb. He was surely related to other Wilton Lorraines. Walter (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He may be the Walter (b.1733), son of William and Helen Ovens. He married Margaret Smith in 1760 (apparently after the birth of their 1st daughter) and she died in Hawick in 1781. Their children included: Margaret (b.1759); and Mary (b.1764). The witnesses in 1764 were Walter Ballantyne and James Wilson. He could be the Walter who witnessed a baptism for James Irvine in Wilton Parish in 1765. He was probably the Walter who had a child die of smallpox in Hawick in 1775. He could be the deceased Walter whose daughter Margaret died in 1777. Walter (1742–1817) eldest son of William and Janet Clerk. His father came from Nether Tofts in Kirkton Parish. He was born at Barnglies in Dumfriesshire. He was a farmer at Oakwoodhill and married Mary, daughter of farmer Francis Currie. Their children included: William (1772–1842); Francis (1773–1815); John (1775–1849); Andrew (1778–87); James (1781–1804); Walter (1783–1872); Joseph (1785–1809); Margaret (1787–92); and Andrew (again, 1790–92). The family are buried at Kirkconnel. William (14th C.) gave a wadset to Alan Lauder in 1386 for his lands of 'Lorymeslands'. This could be simply 'Lorraineslands' and were on the north side of the Lauder Water. He is recorded as 'Willm. of Lorem of Swynstoun'. It is unclear how he might have been related to other contemporary Lorraines. He may have been a son or other close relative of Eustace, but given that the name 'William' was not common in the family immediately afterwards, it seems unlikely he was an ancestor of later local Lorraines. William (15th/16th C.) holder of the lands of Hanginside (i.e. what became Hawthornside) before being granted to Richard Hanginside (before 1488), apparently because he had transferred his allegiance to the English King. William (16th C.) witness to a sasine for Hector's lands of Harwood and Hawthornside in 1531. He was thus probably related to Hector, perhaps being his uncle, which would make him a son of James. Edward was listed before him and Patrick after him (and were surely related). William (1586/7–1600) son of Edward and Margaret Turnbull. He was killed at the age of 13 in the woods of Lorraine. This was part of a feud between local Turnbells and his mother 'Lady Appotside'. His elder brother Hector of Harwood was also killed 4 years later. William (17th C.) described as 'in Cavers', along with George, in a Hawick magistrates court case of 1642, when Samuel Rutherford accused a large group of his drinking friends of stealing his wallet. His name came before that of George. William (17th C.) listed along with Patrick on a list of Communicants at Easter Heap in 1650. They were probably related to the later Lorraines in Wilton. He may be the William who witnessed a baptism for Andrew Leiden in Hawick in 1640; the other witness was Simon Adamson, who also witnessed a baptism for George in 1655, suggesting he was related to George and Walter and hence potentially a son of Edward and Maisie Elliot. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He may have been a son of George and Janet Fleming. He married Dorothy Duncan and their children included Mary (b.1697), who was 'begotten in fornication'. His wife may be the 'Dorothea Lorrain' who was given poor relief by Ashkirk Parish in 1713, 1714, 1715 and 1716 and was 'in Sinton' when buried in 1716. William (b.1682) son of Walter and Bessie Riddell, he was born in Hawick Parish. He was 'servitor' to John Scott of Gorrenberry, who held lands at Nether Tofts. In 1707 in Edinburgh he married Bessie Buchanan, widow of writer Robert 'Cristall'; she was daughter of wright Duncan Buchanan and married her 1st husband in 1698. This suggests that he was spending some of his time in Edinburgh, where presumably his master also had a house. His son William was baptised in Kirkton in 1709, when he was recorded being in Nether Tofts. Margaret, baptised in Cavers Parish in 1721, was probably also his child. There were also other children baptised in Edinburgh: Elizabeth (b.1708); 'Sibbillett' (b.1709); Walter (b.1711); Bessie (b.1712); and Anne (b.1714). Most probably died in childhood and are buried in Edinburgh. He was later a stabler in the South West Parish of Edinburgh and: in 1718 married Katherine Paterson; in 1722 had bans proclaimed to marry Katherine Ogilvie; and in 1723 married Christian Kyle. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1712 he was gardener in Whitfield and in 1716 he may have been at Brieryyards. In 1712 he married Elspeth (or Elizabeth) Brown from Robertson Parish, daughter of Robert Brown, from Kirkton Parish. Their children included John (b.1716). His wife could be the Elspeth Brown who was buried in Wilton in 1747. He may have been a son of John and brother of George and Walter. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, recorded at Borthaugh in most of the baptismal entires 1723–36. However, he may have been at Newton in 1733. He married Helen Ovens and their children included: Walter (b.1723); Margaret (b.1725); Bessie (b.1727), who may have married Robert Wilson and died in 1778; Elizabeth (b.1729); Francis (b.1731); Walter (again, b.1733); and Helen (b.1736). The witnesses in 1725 and 1729 were George Bell and Walter Riddell, in 1727 were Robert Cowan and James ‘Beasley’, in 1731 were George Bell and John Scott, in 1733 were Patrick Scott and John Hume and in 1736 were Walter Riddell and Thomas Kerr. He may be the William whose death is recorded in Wilton in 1777. William (c.1707–90) son of William, he was baptised in Kirkton Parish in 1709. In 1740 he married Janet Clerk in Hawick; at that time he was still living at Nether Tofts. Soon afterwards he moved to Cadgillside farm at Chapelknowe near Canonbie, where his first son Walter (father of Dr. William) was born in 1742. Other children included: Janet (b.1744); Andrew (1746–1819); William (b.1749); John (1751–1829); James (1753–1822); and Margaret (1755–1833). His wife is recorded at Barnes when she had poor relief in 1889 and also several more times until her death in 1800. William (d.1769) resident of Doorpool. He is buried in Hobkirk Cemetery, with the funeral of Jean being recorded the same day. Dr. William (1772–1841) born at Chapelknowe near Canonbie, he was son of Walter and grandson of William, who was from Kirkton Parish. He was classics master at Selkirk Grammar School, then Rector of Jedburgh Grammar School and is described in the book ‘A Borders Schoolmaster’ (2000) by Audrey Mitchell. He was later Master at Glasgow High School. In 1803 he married Dorothea (or ‘Dora’), daughter of Thomas Scott of Bonchester. 3 of his sons were Doctors at Glasgow University (formerly spelled ‘Loran’, ‘Lorane’, ‘Lorain’, ‘Lorraine’, ‘Lorayne’, ‘Loreen’, ‘Loreyn’, ‘Loreyne’, ‘Lorn’, ‘Lorrain’, ‘Lorran’, ‘Lorrane’, ‘Lorren’, the Lorraines (thu-lō-rānz) n. family that was once important in the Borders, particularly in Rulewater. The origin of the name is surely the region of Lorraine in north-eastern France, perhaps coming over to Britain at the time of William the Conqueror. The same French family from the Duchy of Lorraine provided a later connection with Scotland through Mary of Guise, who was daughter of Claude of Lorraine, becoming Queen Consort of James V and mother of Mary, Queen of Scots. It has also been claimed that the family is connected with the lands of Deloraine in the Ettrick valley. The early history is very unclear, as is the connection with the Barons of this name who inhabited part of Northumberland (including, confusingly, the farm of Hawick), specifically Kirkharle. Eustace, recorded in the 1330s to 50s, may have been an early ancestor of the Roxburghshire family. There were Lorraines at Hummelknowes near Hawick in the 15th century and Robert Lorraine was one of the earliest recorded Bailies of Hawick, in 1453. The Roxburghshire Lorraines held the lands of Harwood from at least the late 15th century until 1637. The name occurs several times among lists of men accused of mounting raids into England in the 16th century. The arms of Lorraine of Harwood are shown as 3 green laurel leaves on a silver background in 1542.

Lorraine Wud (lō-rān-wud) n. former name for a wood near Harwood or Appotside in the Rule valley, named after the family that once owned the land. It is recorded in 1606 that young William Lorraine was killed ‘within the wood of Lorane’ by a gang of Turnbells, this being part of an ongoing feud with his mother Margaret, ‘Lady Appotside’, herself a Turnbull by birth.

losh (losh) interj., arch. an exclamation of wonder, dismay or remonstrance (perhaps a shortened form of ‘Lord save us’) – ‘His words they were sweeter than honey, But, losh! they were a’ he could gie’ [JoHa], ‘Losh man! hae done wi’ senseless clatter, Will siccan whingeing mend the matter?’ [RDW], ‘Losh! hev ye no heard o’ the daein’s on the hill? Hoo for twae or three weeks o’ inspection an’ dreel . . .’ [BM1900], ‘Whan losh! wi’ a yell Lizzie Nor’lan’ cam in, Her twae een glancin’ fire, an’ froe on her chin’ [BM1901], ‘Losh chaps, Aw mind yince yae terrible frost and the Loan sklye was on . . .’ [JEDM], ‘Losh mei, Aw dinna ken at a’, but ca’ him nae neebor o’ mine’ [JEDM], ‘Losh sakes mei! the thochts that come seipin, are fit ti gar aa the trauchles an the fashes gang leike the snaw off the deike in a thowe' [ECS], 'Losh! The scene is fair entrancin', And draws a smile' [RH], '...His head, losh me, is no' that grey, Sae he may get a couthie kimmer' [TCh], 'Losh he wammelt and tumm'led ower on to the flure' [UB], 'My better half's just come in wi a bang, And, losh man, her friends drove hame in a carriage' [TCh], 'But, losh me, what's a' this spread o'er And all the cause of gurgling mirth?' [WFC] (local variants noted by G. Watson include 'losh man!', 'losh mei!', 'losh sake!' and 'losh sakes mei!'; this is a euphemism for 'Lord', perhaps influenced by other exclamations, such as 'gosh').

loss (los, lōs) v. to lose – 'deh loss the heid', 'A hope it rains the whole weekend A hope ye loss yer flag ...' [T], 'Present to him the Pearl Cross, And tell him it to never loss, But on his bonnet wear it close, For the maids o' Caledonia' [BY], '... Loss hauf their power the head to dile, An' haud the heart' [JoHa], 'Let them wha taste a social glass, Ne'er loss the time o' rising' [JoHa].

lossit (lo-see', -si') pp., arch. lost – '...promeist be him to bring haill, saif and sound to Hawick, quhilk he brak, drownet, and lossit be the way' [BR1652].

lot (lo') n., arch. an assessed contribution for a common purpose – '...that each inhabitant who pays not stent nor lott shall be lyable for the same price ...' [BR1722] (also written 'lott').

Lothian (lō-thee-in) n. general geographic name for the area around Edinburgh. Latterly it has included the counties of Linlithgow, Midlothian and Haddington, but it formerly applied to all the eastern part of the Lowlands, even including Roxburghshire.

Lothian (lō-thee-in) n. Joseph (18th C.) gardener in Hawick. He married Janet Scott and their children included: Joanna (b.1736); Peter (b.1738); and George (b.1742). The witnesses in 1738 were Walter Scott of Newton and Patrick Scott, younger of Alton, suggesting that his wife was related to these branches of the Scotts. The 1742 witnesses were merchant Charles Tudhope and mason James Harkness (formerly 'Lowthian').

Lothian an Border Horse (lō-thee-in-an-bōr-dur-hors) n. local Territorial Yeomanry Regiment. It was generally for the wealthier volunteers who had their own horse. It grew out of the Royal Edinburgh Volunteer Light Dragoons, set up in 1797 (with Sir Walter Scott as its first quartermaster) and the East Lothian Yeomanry Cavalry, set up at the same time by the Duke of Buccleuch. The 2 merged in 1800 to form the Royal Midlothian Yeomanry Cavalry. It disbanded in 1838, but the 2 units reformed in the 1840s, and amalgamated again in 1879, and were renamed the Lothian and Border Horse in 1908. C Squadron was based in Hawick, with detachments in the main towns of Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire. Many men volunteered for service in this regiment during WWI. In 1921 armoured cars replaced horses and from 1924 it was associated with the 4th Royal Tank Regiment. It became the 1st and 2nd Lothians and Border Horse in 1939, and saw action in North Africa, France and Italy during WWII. In 1956 it was amalgamated with other regiments to form the Queen's Own Lowland Yeomanry and was again disbanded in 1967, although resurrected as the Scottish Yeomanry from 1992–99. 'War Record of the 4th Battalion King's Own Scottish Borderers and Lothian and Border Horse' (1920) was written by W.S. Brown. Papers from the regiment are in the National Library of Scotland and some photo albums in the Museum.

Lothian's Regiment (lō-thee-inz-re-jee-min') n. another name for the Teviotdale Regiment.

Lothian Street (lō-thee-in-stree') n. street on the high ground by Loch Park. The main buildings were erected in 1875, with several additional dwellings in the following few years. There was also part of the Lyle & Scott factory there. However, part of the east side was demolished in 1977 and made into a car park. It was named after Schomberg Henry Kerr, 9th Marquess of Lothian.

Lough (lowch) n. Andrew (15th/16th C.) resident of Selkirk. He is recorded in the Selkirk Protocol Books for 1535 when, along with several others, he was accused of taking grain from 'le Schaw' belonging to John Hall. In 1538 he had George Robson, John Robson, Walter Veitch, David Do[wne?] and Walter Scott removed from his 20 merklands in Synton. Oliver (1826–1916) son of Walter, who was a carrier around Southdean. In 1848 he married Agnes, daughter of William Oliver (hind at Langraw). In 1851 they were living with his in-laws at Langraw Scaur. Around the late 1850s they emigrated to Nevada, U.S.A. His children included Walter (b.1848), William (b.1850), Betsey (b.1854) and Henry (b.1856). He died in Nebraska. Walter 'Wattie' (b.c.1785–1864) son of James and Christian Oliver, he was born in Jedburgh Parish. He was a carrier at Letham in Southdean Parish in 1841 and in 1851 was carrier and grocer at Gatehousecote. In 1861 he was listed as 'Formerly Carrier' at Old Gatehousecote. He ran a cart to Liddesdale in the days before the railway. He married Elizabeth (Betty) Storie in 1819. Their children were: James (b.1820), who married Euphemia Telfer; George (b.1821); Isabella (b.1823), who married George Telfer; Oliver (b.1826), who emigrated to the U.S.A.; Walter (b.1829), who married Isabella Rutherford; Thomas (b.1832), who was a labourer at Highend in 1851; and Mary (b.1834), who married Andrew Smith. Most of his children were born in Oxnam Parish and some were christened at the Free Kirk in Jedburgh. He died in Hobkirk (formerly written 'Louche').

lound (lownd) adj., arch. tranquil, calm – 'A lound wund' [GW] (cf. lown).

lounder see loonder

loup see lowp

loupered (low-purd, -pur') adj., pp., arch. clot-ted, curdled – '...Scones on the girdle, made wi' loupered milk, A jug o' cream still warm frae the byre' [WL] (also 'lappert' etc.; cf. lapper and loppert).

the Loupin Stane (th-low-pin-stān) n. small-standing stone in an isolated area in Craik Forest, a little over a kilometer to the west-northwest from Wolfcleuchhead. The dimenstions are 0.8m long by 35cm wide at the top, narrowing to a point, and just 5cm thick. On one side are carved 2 heads and lettering, while on the other is inscribed 'Wolfcleuchhead'. It is possible this is a mounting step from the steading of Wolfcleuchhead, moved to its present position at some point (see also lowpin-on stane).

the Loupin Stanes (th-low-pin-stānz) n.
small stone circle near Eskdalemuir, not far from 'the Girdle Stanes'. There are 12 stones in an oval about 18m across, including 2 larger ones that provide the 'entrance'. The popular name comes the story that locals used to try to leap between these two stones until someone's leg was broken (although they are probably too far apart for this to be feasible).

lourd (loord) adv., poet. rather, liked – 'I wad lourd have had a winding-sheet, And helped to put it ower his head, Ere he had been disgraced by the border Scot, Whan he ower Liddel his men did lead!' [T].

louse see lowse

the Lousy Drain (thu-low-zee-drān) n. popular name for an open ditch in Hobkirk Parish in the 19th century. It ran down from Kirknow farm through the Parish school playground, and served as an open sewer, which older boys would try to jump over.

lout (low') v., poet. to bend, stoop – '...Laigh doun I louted on my knees, An' preed the Hunter's pool' [ECB], 'The fairies wad hear, quo' bonny Jeanye Roole, And wi' louting my back is sair' [JTe], 'Lang syne it was, Thon souchin sim-mer's day, Wi' clouds that sailed Loutin to their shaddas' [DH] (see also loot).

Lovat see Simon Fraser

Lovat Mill (lu-vi'-mil) n. factory of Teviotex at 15 Commercial Road.

Love (luv) n. John (20th C.) Headmaster of St.
Margaret's School around the a940s and 50s. His wife Winnie was a teacher in the same school and they had daughters Anne and Mary. The family emigrated to the U.S.A. in the 1960s.

Lovel (lu-vul) n. Agnes (13th/14th C.) listed in the Ragman Rolls of 1296 as 'Agneys Louel qe fu la femme Henry del counte de Rokesburg', so she was presumably the wife of an already deceased Henry. Maurice, Parson of 'Little Cavers', who also appears on the Roll, may be her son or other relative. It is possible she is the same as the Eva, widow of Henry, who is recorded in 1294. Asceline (d.1119) probably the ancestor of the Lovels. His father was likely to have been Robert de Breherval, who held the castle of Ivery (or Yvery) in Normandy and came to England with William the Conqueror. He was a vassal of William de Breteuil and his surname was 'Goello' or 'Goel' (which is probably a variant of 'Guelph' or 'Whelp', i.e. the wolf-cub', which became 'Luppellus' in the Latinised version of French-Norman). He may also have been known as 'Gouel de Percheval' and 'Gouel de Yvery', with his nickname 'Lupus' coming from his violent demeanour. Although he spent much of his life in Normandy, he held several estates in Somerset, as well as Titmarsh in Northamptonshire. He commanded Norman forces at the siege of Mante in 1087. He also had a lengthy series of sieges involving his liege, the Earl of Breteuil, from whom he eventually gained Ivery. It is said that he tortured the Earl of Breteuil, until he yielded and gave his daughter Isobel, along with a large dowry. He is said to have had 7 sons, including: Richard, who died before him; Robert, who succeeded, but only for a couple of years; William, who succeeded after Robert; John of Harptree, ancestor of the Barons of Harptree Gournay; and Roger, called 'Balbus' or 'the Stutterer' who was Lord of Grandisilva' in Normandy. He also had a daughter, who married Radulfus Rufus. Baldwin (11th/12th C.) of Tintenhull, one of the earliest recorded Lovels. However, these early generations are confused, and it is unclear how he was related to the Lovels of Yvery. He probably succeeded his father Ralph in 1121 and was father of Ralph and possibly also Margaret (although she may have been Ralph's wife). Henry (12th C.) possibly the Henry Lovel who was said to have been first given the Barony of Hawick, perhaps in the 1130s, and who is among those who encouraged King David to invade England in 1138. However, these generations are quite confused, and it is unclear whether he even existed. Henry (d.c.1194) Lord Cary, son of Ralph and Margaret, or possibly 3rd son of William Gouel de Perceval, and hence brother of Ralph. He succeeded in about 1159. He may also have had a brother, Thomas. He was probably born at Castle Cary, but also held the Barony of Hawick, and is likely to have split his time between England and Scotland. He paid feudal fees in Somerset in 1162. During the time of Robert, Dean of Bath (i.e. before 1166) he had his gift to the Priory of Brunton confirmed. He also witnessed several other grants in Somerset in the latter part of the 12th century. He was 'Henry Luvel' in 1166 when he witnessed a charter by King William to Robert de Brus. He is recorded as Baron of Hawick when he was a witness in 1166 and 1190. He was probably also the 'henrici lupelli' (i.e. Henry, Little Wolf) who is recorded in a charter (confirmed by Pope Lucius III in 1183, Pope Gregory VIII in 1187 and Pope Clement III in 1188) giving 2 oxgates of land at 'Brancheulla' (i.e. Branhholme) to the canons of St. Andrews. This was witnessed by the first 3 clergymen known to be connected with Hawick. This same grant of 2 oxgangs of land in Branhholme to St. Andrews Priory in about 1175 was mentioned in a list of gifts in 1206, 1216, 1246 and 1248. In 1190 he was recorded in the Pipe Rolls for Dorset and Somerset. He married Alice de Cary, and his sons were Ralph (who died without issue) and Henry (who succeeded to the Barony of Hawick). Other children may have included Maurice and Richard, who exchanged these 2 oxgangs for other nearby lands in about the 1190s. This Richard may have also succeeded the next Henry, and was therefore either his son or grandson. Henry (d.c.1216) Lord Cary, probably younger son of Henry, he succeeded his brother Ralph, who died in 1207. In 1197 he was assessed for fees for the Norman army. In the period 1198–1202 he was appointed as attorney in a case by Ralph de Trumbleville. In 1207 he settled a case brought by Matilda, his brother Ralph's widow, over lands she claimed she had been given in dower; this included $\frac{1}{3}$ of the family's barony in Scotland (presumably Hawick), but she settled for the manor of 'Hunewic' (i.e. Honeywick near Castle Cary), together with money and livestock. In 1208 he paid 300 marks for the livery of his lands, and still held some Somerset lands jointly with his mother Alice and sister-in-law Maud (the same as Matilda). In 1210 he paid King John to avoid going on the expedition to Ireland. He married Christiania and was succeeded by his brother (although some accounts say son) Richard. However this genealogy may be confused, and there may be another extra generation of Henrys and/or Richards. He may be the Henry who was among witnesses to a charter for Gilmerston in the Glasgow chartulary in the reign of William. His widow 'Cristina' secondly married Richard Cotel; in about 1222 she complained that Richard 'Luvel' (probably her brother-in-law, or possibly her son) had dispossessed her of some of her dower lands. In 1248 she complained again about being removed from her dower lands, and there was a complicated agreement over several lands, including 'Honewyk' (i.e. Honeywick near Castle Cary). Henry (d.1262/3) of Castle Cary and Hawick, 2nd son of Richard, his elder brother William dying before their father. He married Eve (or Eva), who died in 1294. They had sons Richard and Hugh, who both succeeded. They also had daughters Alicia (the elder) and Cristiana (d.bef. 1264), who were both unmarried. Little else is known about him and it is unclear whether he played any direct role in the Hawick area. He may be the 'Sir H.' who witnessed an agreement in Somerset in 1256. In 1263 his son and heir Richard did homage to the English King and received his father's lands. However in 1264 there was an inquest into the age of Richard's brother Hugh, and whether he should be heir of 'Kari Lowel'; his widow 'Lady Eva Lovel' is also mentioned. Also in 1264 his daughter Alicia brought a case against Hugh, complaining that he had tried to dispossess her from the lands that she and her deceased sister Cristiana had been granted. His widow Eva is further referred to in 1294 when her lands and her son Hugh's lands were given to the custody of John de Soulis. Hugh (d.c.1290) of Castle Cary and Hawick, brother of Richard and 2nd son of Henry. In 1264 there was an inquiry into his age, since his brother Richard had died, and so he succeeded to the barony of 'Kari Lovel' (i.e. Cary). Also in 1264 his sister Alicia accused him of dispossessing her of a manor in Sussex, given to her and her deceased sister Cristiana; he was charged to allow his sister to keep her farm. He was recorded as Baron of Hawick in 1268. A 1268 plea against him for restoring a watercourse at Castle Cary mentions that his grandfather was Richard. A further case in 1268 involves his sister-in-law Cecilia and the land of 'Wynkanton'. He was recorded as lord of 'karycastel' in the 1270s, in 1274 was 'Sir Hugh' of Cary when he made an agreement with the Prior of Bruton, and was 'Hugone Luvel' when he witnessed a grant for Bruton Priory. He married Eleanor (or 'Alianors') and their children were: Sir Richard, who succeeded in 1303 when still a minor, becoming Lord of Castle Cary and Baron of Hawick; and Olivia, who married John de Gournay. He was recorded in 1291 when his widow was directed not to re-marry without the King's permission and John de Soulis was given custody of $\frac{2}{3}$ of his lands until his heir reached majority. Additional lands and privileges of his (including the church of 'Stoketone') were granted to John de Soulis in 1292/3, and also in his lands were confirmed to John de Soulis, along with the lands which Eva Lovel (his mother) had held until his majority. Sir Hugh (13th/14th C.) recorded in an English document of 1306 as a supporter of Robert the Bruce who had been sent to a prison. He was prisoner in Gloucester Castle 1307–10. He was also at Dundee in 1311/2, when a horse of his was appraised; both 'Dominus Hugo Lovel' and a separate 'Hugo Lovel' were on the list of horse owners. It is unclear how he was related to the other Lovels of the time. Sir James (c.1316–42) only son of Richard the first Lord of Castle Cary. He married Elizabeth or Isabel around 1328, but died before his father. Their children were Richard (who died young) and Muriel (who inherited the titles and married Nicholas Seymour). Sir William of Douglas had a crown charter of 1341 for all his forfeited lands in Eskdale and Ewesdale. In 1342 his widow is recorded having liferent of 2 manors in Somerset, which had been given to him by his father in 1328/9. Sir John (13th C.) recorded 'as magistro Johanne Lovel' on an assize in Cumberland in 1292, then in a court case in Newcastle in 1293, relating to affairs in Scotland. He was also recorded in the same way in 1296, in a document relating to equipping Edward I's expedition into Scotland. He was certainly English, but it is unclear where he came from. He was also recorded as 'the marshal' who had come to pacify the dispute between the Welsh and English in Edinburgh. Probably the same John was paid in 1297/8 for a mission to France. John (15th C.) from somewhere in Scotland. He is recorded in 1438/9 when he had a warrant for safe conduct to trade in England, along with a servant. Lawrence (13th C.) recorded (probably early) in the period 1259–86 in a document relating to King Alexander at Lanark. He served as some kind of soldier. It is unclear how he was related to other Scottish Lovels. Margaret (d.bef. 1164) wife of Ralph. It is unknown what her maiden name was, but not impossible she was also a Lovel. She may have held the lands of Hawick after her husband's death. Her son and heir was Henry. She secondly married Thomas of London (who also married Escina of Mow); with the consent of her sons Henry and Thomas she granted 'Ughtredshaghe' (probably Outerside) to Jedburgh Abbey at its foundation, as confirmed in about 1170. Maurice (13th C.) probably son of Henry. Along with Richard he exchanged these 2 oxgangs for other nearby lands in about the 1190s. He may be the Maurice who witnessed an undated grant by Richard, Lord of Cary, to the Priory of Bruton, with another witness being Henry, son of Richard. Maurice (13th C.) recorded as 'Morice Louel, persone del Eglise de Petyt Cares, del counte de Rokesburgh' (i.e. 'parson of Little Cavers') in the Ragman Rolls of 1296. In a list drawn up in 1777 he is transcribed as 'Mauricius Lunel, Parsona ecclesiae de Parva Cares'. The 'Agneys Louel', widow of Henry, who also appears on the Ragman Rolls may have been his mother. Note that there was another Maurice a generation or 2 earlier, probably brother of the Richard who died in 1253. Muriel (b.1331/2) daughter of James, who died in 1342, she succeeded her grandfather Sir Richard in 1351, probably becoming Baroness Lovel. It is unclear if she inherited the Barony of Hawick, although control of the lands was certainly no longer in Lovel hands by her time. She married Nicholas, Lord St. Maur. Ralph (d.c.1121) one of the earliest known Lovels. He held Castle Cary in 1107. He was probably the son of Walter de Douai, Baron Bampton, who held the Castle at the time of the Domesday Book. However, these early generations are very uncertain, and it is unclear how he may have been related to the other contemporary Lovels. He may have been succeeded by Baldwin. Ralph (d.c.1159) of Tintenhull and Castle Cary, son of William (although possibly related to the near contemporary Baldwin, since accounts of these generations are very uncertain). He may have been the first family member to adopt the surname 'Lovel', based on the family nickname 'Lupellus', meaning 'Little Wolf' (which was also applied to his brothers Henry and William). He appears to have also had the nickname 'Simelt'. Along with his father he was part of the rebellion against King Stephen of England, and defended Castle Cary in a siege in 1152. He is said to have married a daughter of Henry de Novo Mercatu, from whom he received Dunkerton in Somerset. This wife could have been Margaret, who appears to have been the heiress of Hawick (and so possible the barony was part of her dower lands), and died before 1164; it is not impossible that she was the Margaret who secondly married Thomas de London. He was succeeded by Henry, who was probably his brother (or possibly his son). He may be the Ralph who restored the grant of lands to the Priory of Bruton that his father had taken away; this was witnessed by 'Thoma Lupell', who was surely a close relative. Ralph (d.c.1207) eldest son of Henry, from whom he succeeded, before in turn being succeeded in the Baronies of Castle Cary and Hawick by his brother Henry. His name is also recorded as 'Rodolph'. He married Maud (or Matilda), daughter of Henry de Newmarche. In 1207, after he had died without issue, 'Matillidis' claimed her dower lands and made a settlement with her brother-in-law Henry over rights to the manor of 'Hunewic' (probably 'Honeywick'). In about 1222 his widow was now married to Ralph Lebutiler, when she and Christina (widow of Henry) complained that Richard had dispossessed them of their inheritance, including some lands in Scotland. Richard (12th C.) of Castle Cary and Hawick, possibly son of Henry. He married Alice and their sons were William (who died young) and Henry. He is probably also the 'Ricardi Lupelli domini de Hawic' recorded in the Register of the Priory of St. Andrews in about the 1190s. There he exchanged 2 'bovates' (i.e. oxgates) of land between Whames and Whithope to the canons of St. Andrews, in exchange for lands in 'Brancheshelm' (i.e. Branhholm) which had been conferred by his father Henry. The boundaries of these lands are given, and are interesting in preserving several lost place names, namely 'anesotd terre', 'chestriss', 'farmop', 'langesideburne' and 'quikenne'. He may also be the 'Richard Luvel, lord of Cary' who confirmed a gift to the Priory of Bruton, and whose confirmation was witnessed by his son Henry, as well as Maurice (who could have been his brother). Note that there are several Richards, Henrys and Ralphs at about this time, and so the details of the family tree are hard to disentangle. Richard (d.1253) probably son of Henry, and brother of Ralph and Henry. However, given the length of time that elapsed, it is also possible he was son of an additional Richard, and hence grandson of Henry. He was probably the Richard 'Luvel' who was involved in a land transaction relating to Biddesham near Cary in 1203/4. He succeeded Henry in 1218, paying £100 for the livery of Cary and the other Somerset estates. In about 1222 he was described as tenant when there was a claim against him by Christina, widow of Henry. She had remarried to Richard Cotel, and claimed that he had dispossessed her of her dower lands of 'Kary, Wreketon and Pidecumbe', as well as other lands and rights. Also mentioned was Matilda, formerly wife of Ralph 'Luvel', and now wife of Ralph Lebutiler, who also held lands in inheritance. These disagreements included 'the land which Richard Luvel held in Scotland'. In 1231 he had a charter for demesne lands of Cary and also witnessed another charter. He is further recorded in the 1230s and 40s regarding knights service. In about 1237 he gave agreement that the Priory of Bath should hold the rights to the church of Castle Cary, as granted by his father Henry. In 1248 Christina 'Luvel' (stated to have been the wife of his brother) complained again that he owes her money and dower lands, 'as well in England as in Scotland'. A court case against him in 1255 was adjourned because he was deceased by then. He married Alice, whose surname is unknown. After she was widowed, her marriage was granted to William Berkeley, but he married someone else and so she then married Nicholas de Haversham. Their children included: William, who died before him; and Henry, who succeeded. Richard (d.1263/4) of Castle Cary and Hawick, eldest son of Henry. He succeeded his father, but died only a year or two later, and was in turn succeeded by his brother Hugh. He married Cecily (or Cecilia), whose surname is unknown; she was involved in a plea regarding her dower lands of 'Wynkanton' in 1268. He is recorded as 'Ricardus Lupell' in the Scottish Exchequer Rolls in the period 1264–66 as late owner of the Barony of Hawick; there was an account for the foggage in the Barony of Hawick, with him dying before the feast of St. Michael in the previous year. Richard (13th C.). His lands are referred to in 1278 by the Sheriff of Somerset and Dorset, and again in 1283. It is unclear who he was. Sir Richard (c.1283–1351) Lord Lovel, son of Hugh. He was born at Castle Cary and was custodian of the castles of Corfe and Purbeck. He succeeded his father in about 1291, while still a minor, his guardian being John de Soulis. In 1297 he swore to Edward I that he would serve him against France. He is listed in rolls of knights in 1298 and 1301 and found 2 men to serve Edward I in 1302. In about 1303 he achieved majority and took up his estates. In 1306 he received 10 marks for helping Edward against Robert the Bruce. He probably left Scotland soon afterwards, since Branhholme (in the Barony of Hawick) was granted to Sir Henry Baliol in 1307, with a confirming charter in about 1321. Furthermore the Barony of Hawick was granted to the Earl of Strathearn (perhaps before 1329). In 1306/7 he was paid for losing horses in the wars in Scotland. In 1307 he was listed among ‘magnates staying in the parts of Scotland to whom the [English] king should write’. In 1308 and 1309 he was part of a bond, along with James, Steward of Scotland, with the Earl of Lincoln. In 1310/1 he had an agreement with the English King to receive the Manor of ‘Wynfirtheogle’ in exchange for his wife’s manor of Old Roxburgh; this was still unresolved in 1313/4, with ‘Bradenache’ in Devon being offered instead. In 1313/4 he was paid for service to the English King. In 1315 his wife was confirmed in the grant of the ward of Carf Castle and Purbeck. In 1316 he was given a charter of Sir John Soulis’ lands in Dumfries, as well as Old Roxburgh, but then Old Roxburgh was kept for the safety of Roxburgh Castle, and he was granted the Manor of Bradenach in Devon in exchange. In 1317 he and his wife exchanged Bradenach with ‘Brehulle and Selveston’. In 1318/9 he was ‘lord of Caricastel’ when he gave up his rights to some lands in favour of Montacute Priory, with his wife Muriel also being mentioned. He was also holder of the Barony of Hawick in one of the oldest existing records, when it was regranted by Edward III in 1347 (although at a similar time it was also granted to Maurice Murray by David II of Scotland). In 1335 he had the castles of Corfe and Purbeck committed to him and his wife (Muriel Soulis). In 1347 there was an inquest into whether he and his wife had rights to the Barony of Hawick as well as half the Barony of Eskdale; ‘a jury of good men of the visnes of Hawik and Eskedale’ found that ‘his ancestors have possessed the barony of Hawik from time beyond memory’ until it was taken by the Sheriff of Roxburgh in the same of the English

King, but they did not rule on the lands in Eskdale. He was summoned to English Parliament in 1348 and 1350 as Lord Lovel. Sometime before 1310/1 he married Muriel (or Muriella), daughter and heir of John Soulis (his guardian) of Old Roxburgh. His children were: Joan, who married Sir John de Moels; James, who died before him and whose daughter Muriel succeeded, followed by her son Richard Seymour; and Eleanor, who married Roger Rouhaut of Aston Rowant. He is probably the Richard whose seal bore a lion rampant on a background of crosses. The failure of the male line here ended the direct succession of more than 2 centuries. Robert (d.1121) son of Ascelin Gouel de Percival and brother of William (at least in some accounts of the early Lovels). He probably inherited Castle Cary from his father in about 1119, but died soon afterwards. In 1119 he took up arms against Henry I, but negotiations, involving Radulfus Rufus (his brother-in-law) led him to switch allegiance to the King. He may be the ‘Robertus Luvellus’ who witnessed a gift to the canons of Bruton. He left no issue and was succeeded by his brother William. Roger (13th C.) son of Roger. In 1242 he and Richard de Dreycote confirmed a grant of lands to the Canons of Bruton; ‘Domino Ricardo Lupello’ was the first witness and hence probably a close relative. He is recorded as ‘Rogerio Lupello’ when he witnessed an agreement with the Priory of Bruton in 1253. Probably the same Roger was also recorded in some other Somerset documents at about the same time. Sir Thomas (15th C.) recorded in 1491 when there was a payment from the English authorities for ‘diver posts placed between Scotland and Berwick’. Thomas (15th C.) recorded in 1494/5 among men for whose murder William Clerk ‘apud ecclesiam foreste’ (i.e. at the Kirk of the Forest) had remission at the Justiceaire in Selkirk. He may have been one of the last men of this surname in the region. William (d.c.1155) of Castle Cary, also described as Earl of Yvery and ‘Lupellus’, his surname may have been ‘Gouel de Perceval’, with ‘Lovel’ being first adopted by his son from the ‘Lupellus’ nickname. It is said that his nickname was the diminutive form of ‘Lupus’, which had been attached to his father. In some accounts of the early Lovels he is the son of Ascelin Gouel de Perceval and younger brother of Robert, from whom he succeeded; however, these early generation are very uncertain, and there is dispute among authorities. He held estates of Yvery in Normandy and Cary, Weston, Stawell, etc. in England. Spending more time in England than his father and grandfather, he may have built the first stone castle at Castle Cary. He fought for Waleran in a rebellion against Henry I about 1123, escaping imprisonment in 1124 and returning home in disguise, barefoot, having given the Seine ferryman his shoes. He supported Matilda against Stephen in the English civil war, resulting in Stephen besieging Castle Cary, taking it in 1138, but returning it on the promise not to support Matilda. The castle was again besieged in 1153, when William and his son Ralph reneged on this promise, but was saved by the arrival of the Earl of Gloucester's force. He is probably the 'Willelmus, qui cognominatur Lupellus' who had a charter with the Abbey of St. Peter of Chartres in the early 12th century. He also confirmed a gift to the Priory of Bruton. It is unclear if he was also Baron of Hawick, or if the barony was first held by his son, or even if it was held by another family member during his lifetime. He married Auberie, sister of Waleran de Bellemonte, Earl of Mellent (and related to the Kings of France). Their children may have included: Waleran, Baron de Yvery, whose descendants retained that Barony until the 15th century; Ralph, who succeeded to Castle Cary; Henry, who later succeeded; William of Titchmarsh and Minster Lovel, although this is disputed by some accounts; and Richard Perceval, ancestor of the Earls of Egmont. William (14th C.) said to have forfeited lands in Eskdale and Ewesdale in the reign of David II. These lands were granted to William, Lord Douglas, younger. He may be the William who was on a list of men whose horses were appraised in Dundee in 1311/2. He is probably the Sir William who was at 'Haydenebrugge' in 1327. However, it is unclear how he was related to James, who forfeited the same lands in 1341; it may be that the names were in error (also written 'Lovell', 'Lovel', 'Lupellus', 'Luvel', 'Luvell', 'Luvellus', etc.).

Lovel Court (lu-vul-kōr) n. street name for the courtyard developed behind Drumlanrig's Tower when the area was renovated in the early 1990s. It had once been the stabling area for the Tower Inn and a large building housing the Tower Garage (originally misspelled 'Lovell' on the street sign).

Lovell see Lovel

the Lovels (thū-lu-vulz) n. family name of Norman nobility who were given lands around Hawick by David I in the 1120s or 30s. The family held the lands of Yvery in Normandy. They may have settled in Teviotdale in the previous reign of Alexander I. Their lands included Branhholme, which they held until 1307. They built their castle, the Moat (or Motte), a wooden palisaded tower on a mound of earth, as a symbol of their lordship of the lands around Hawick. They later built a more substantial tower where Drumlanrig's Tower now stands, as well as rebuilding St. Mary's in stone. The Lovels held the patronage of the church in Hawick until 1355. The family also held lands elsewhere, particularly Castle Cary in Somersetshire (south of Bristol). Castle Cary was a Norman fortification, built at the foot of Lodge Hill, and held by the Lovels from perhaps 1107 until it was destroyed about 1155. The fortifications can still be seen above the town, including a mound where the castle stood (reminiscent of Hawick's Moat). During the Wars of Independence their loyalties lay with the English and the family returned to Somerset. Their Hawick lands were forfeited by David II and given to Maurice Murray, later being passed to Archibald Douglas in the 15th century. The Lovels continued to hold lands in Somerset long after the castle there had been destroyed, and the town there is still called Castle Cary. The family name probably derives from an early member nicknamed 'Lupellus' (Little Wolf) which became 'Lupel' and then 'Lovel'. There are certainly occurrences of 'Lupell' in early records. Their arms were a gold background strewn with crosses, and with a blue lion rampant. The identification of Lovel of Hawick and Branhholme with Lovel of Castle Cary was only made in about the 1870s by historian Joseph Bain. Note that there were other prominent branches of the family, e.g. the Lovels of Titchmarsh (or 'Tichmersh, in Northamptonshire), the Lovels of Minster Lovel (in Oxfordshire) and the Lovels of Ballumbie (in Angus), but they may not all have been directly connected. There is a Lovel mentioned in the Scottish ballad 'The Battle of Otterburn' and a ballad called 'Lord Lovel' (about a knight who dies of sorrow after returning to hear of the death of his love) – 'What shameful deed besmirched with guilt Attached to the Lovels' name? What untold sin? – no mortal knows Except the monk who shrived the same' [JCG].

He acted as Baron Bailie for the Scotts of Buccleuch, and is recorded as witness to documents at least from 1427–57. In 1446 he witnessed the charter between Inglis of Manor and Scott of Buccleuch. In 1447 he was one of the witnesses to the feu charter between Simon of Routledge and Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch for lands of Birkwood just outside Hawick. In 1449 he was Patricio Lowis de Mener' when he witnessed the renunciation of the lands of Lochurd and Kirkurd by Walter Scott of Buccleuch. In 1451 he witnessed a document for Sir Walter Scott of Kirkurd in Edinburgh. He was succeeded by Thomas, probably his son. William (15th C.) on the panel for James Douglas of Drumlanrig inheriting the Barony of Hawick in 1484. William (17th C.) tenant in Catslack-knowe in 1684 when his servant William Inglis was on a list of Covenanter fugitives.

Ludne (lu-den) n. former name for a former area in Liddesdale. In a rental roll of c.1376 the ‘Quarterium de Ludne’ is listed as one of the 4 main sections, including 29 farms, with total value of 18 pounds 11 shillings and 8 pence. Among the farms was Greenshiels, Oldshiels, Carryshiels, Hartsgarth, Langhaugh and Tofts, and the holders of lands were ‘Fethyng’, ‘Loumane’, ‘Willelmi filii Alani’, ‘Ricardi de Roule’ and ‘Willelmi del Syde’. It seems to have coincided with the west side of the Hermitage Water. However, the precise extent of the area, as well as the pronunciation and any connection with modern lands, is unknown.

Luff (luf) n. John George (1845/6–1918) local hotel proprietor. Born in Sussex, he came to Hawick about 1877 as a waiter in the Tower Hotel, where he developed a novel shorthand slate attached to his waiter’s tray. It is said that he spoke fluent French and Italian, having spent time on the Continent. He went into business on his own, later having the Central Hotel built, which he ran originally as a temperance hotel. He later offered to demolish the ‘Coffin End’ at his own expense if the Town would grant him a liquor licence; this request was denied, but after improving his hotel and being granted a licence, he did in fact have the wooden eye-sores removed and gifted the land to the Town. He was a vocal opponent of the Clubs of the Town and in general, claiming they were merely unlicensed drinking establishments; he published some pamphlets on this topic. He was a Councillor for Wilton Ward in the period 1901–04, being fond of novel schemes and for quoting aphorisms, and famous for speeches he gave from the Central Hotel balcony. On one such famous occasion he proposed a scheme to turn the Park into a pleasure park, with a huge artificial lake. He published ‘A system of mastering Pitman’s manual’ (1877), ‘Thoughts on clubs by a country cook’ (1899) and ‘The Income Tax Corrector (c.1910). His engraved shorthand tray is in the Museum, and he is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery – ‘When the moon is made of green cheese, And pigs begin to fly, Though they are the most unlikely birds That ever went into the sky. When Councillor Luff is Provost, Oh! won’t the pork be high!’ [T], ‘He’s a scrumptious sort of man is John George Luff, He’s a bump-tious sort of man is John George Luff; And the the Lumback (thū-lum-bak) n. popular name for Longbaulk Road and surrounding area, reflecting the common pronunciation. The name usually refers to the road out to the country, with its official street name being Longbaulk Road, continued as Crumhaughhill Road – 'The lad that howes the Lum-Back neeps Richt cheerily he plies the paddie ...' [DH].

lum-can (lum-kawn) n. a chimney-can, chimney-pot – 'Lum-cans tell o't as doon they're whumlin' ...' [JoHa].

lum chist (lum-chist) n., arch. a chest of drawers of a particular type popular in the 19th century, having an extra deep drawer in the middle of the upper part, used for storing top-hats or other large pieces of headwear.

lum-hat (lum-haw') n., arch. a top-hat. These were fashionable in the mid-19th century, and can be seen, for example, in a painting of the High Street from 1850 – 'Like another lum-hat, it probably floated away down to the sea, 'wantin' the croon', for Mungo was not a sentimental man' [DH].

lum-heid (lum-heed) n. a chimney-top – 'E'en now I hear them crouslly crawin', I' the lum-head ...' [JoHa], 'O' The District Lift gauns up and doon, Oor lum-heids daurna reek, The cups o tei come roond a' day, And the scaffies yince a week!' [DH].

lump (lump) n., arch. a large amount, great deal – 'Hei hes a lump o eis faither's naetir about um' [ECS], 'A lump better = much better' [ECS].

Lumsden (lumz-din) n. Ernest headmaster of St. Cuthbert's School from 1925 until about 1945. During WWII he also acted as organist and choir-master in the Kirk.

Lunardi (loo-nar-dee) n. Vincent (1759–1806) balloonist, who made the first substantial flight in Britain, and was a household name in the late 18th century. He made several flights in Britain in the 1780s, including from Edinburgh and from Kelso (to Northumberland, perhaps the world's first international flight!). After launching from St. Andrews Churchyard, Glasgow on the 23rd November 1785 at 1.45 p.m. (with a crowd estimated at 100,000), he had an adventurous voyage, with the wind blowing him to the south-east. He tried to land on a hill near Dryhope (apparently thinking that St. Mary's Loch might be an arm of the sea), where he lost his anchor, flag and some ropes, and was spotted by many local people. He eventually came down about 2 miles east of Alemoor at about 3.55, being fortuitously met by Mr. and Mrs. Chisholm of Stirches, who had shouted ‘Lunardi, come down’ at him. Mrs. Chisholme rode for about 3 miles in the balloon, with 2 shepherds holding the ropes. Then they brought him to Hawick and he spent the night at Stirches. The following day he was received by the Magistrates, entertained at a special dinner and afterwards given the freedom of the Town.

Lundie (lun-dee) n. Allan (16th/17th C.) studied at St. Salvator’s College and graduated from St. Andrews University in 1586. He became Vicar at Lessuden (St. Boswells) in 1596. He was rebuked by the Presbytery in 1608 and again in 1610 for negligence and being ‘ane player at cairdis’, among other complaints. He was translated to Hassendean in 1610, but only stayed about a year before moving on to Channelkirk in 1611 (basically he had a choice, and while he preferred Hassendean, the Presbytery advised Channelkirk). He went to Hutton and Fishwick in 1614, demitted sometime before 1636, but was recorded as still alive in 1639. His descendants held land at Spittal (near Berwick) for several generations. He married Agnes Trotter and their children were James (next minister of Hutton), William, John, Andrew and Elizabeth. James (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1517 being given the wardship of the lands of the deceased Walter Scott of Howpasley, as well as rights over the marriage of his daughter. These were the superiority of lands forfeited after the execution of Alexander, Lord Home. In 1535 there was a reversion of his charter for the lands of ‘Apiltrehall, Mydschelis, Crawlawhill’ plus their mills, ‘Cotlaw, Butrig and Ouir and Nethir Manys of Hassindene’; the lands returned to George, Lord Home. He was probably related to the family of Lundie of that Ilk, but it is unclear if he played any other role locally. William (18th C.) tailor in Ormiston, recorded in 1753 when his son William was baptised in Cavers Parish. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Alison Scott and their son Archibald was baptised in 1772 (also spelled ‘Lundy’ etc.).

Luneshope (loonz-hōp) n. former name for lands in Cavers Barony as included in an English document c.1380. The lands are listed between Langbyre and ‘Godwynesclu’.

lunge (lunj) v., poet. to belabour, beat – ‘‘Content’, quoth I, ‘that want should lunge me’’ [JR].

lunk (lungk) pp., poet. hung – ‘...it wer better for him that ane milstane wer lunk about his neck’ [HSR] (perhaps meant as past tense of ‘link’).

Lunn (lun) n. Andrew (18th C.) married Isabel Lillico in Bedrule in 1730. Derek son of Bill and Joyce, he is a local photographer, long-time member of Hawick Camera Club and Associate Member of the Royal Photographic Society. After receiving a camera as a 21st-birthday gift, he decided to turn his hobby into his profession. His work has included weddings and commercial commissions, but he is particularly known for portraits. His studio space has been at 49 North Bridge Street and then 10 Howegate. He was named Scottish Portrait Photographer of the Year in 2002. With Ian Landles he mounted exhibitions with accompanying books: ‘Honest Men and Bright-eyed Daughters’ (1990); ‘Mair Honest Men ...’ (1993); and ‘Son of Honest Men’ (2000). He also plays guitar and sings, being for several years in the band ‘3D’ and later drummer in ‘The Medicine Hat’. Donald (1931–2008) born on the Loan, he was an apprentice butcher with Scott & Telfer’s and started his own business on the Howegate, famous for his tripe and haggis. He also played rugby for the Trades and served in the R.A.F. for 2 years. He was Cornet in 1957 and was President of the Callants’, Mosstroopers’ and 1514 Clubs. He married Eileen and had a daughter Vivienne. George (d.1861) resident of Avisford on the Meroo River in Australia. He was said to be ‘late of Singdean, Roxburghshire’ when he married Jane Johnstone in New South Wales in 1845. His wife was from Langholm and the couple had at least 3 children, Isabella Agnes (1846–1909), William James (1848–71) and Elizabeth ‘Lizzie’ (1851–1922). He drowned in unexplained circumstances in Sydney Harbour. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married to Janet Hobkirk and their son Walter was baptised in 1639. James (17th C.) weaver in Hawick. His son, also James, was a witness in 1666 to a case involving a fight in St. Mary’s Kirk between William Turnbull likely to be son of the earlier weaver James. In 1707 he witnessed baptisms for weaver ‘Black’ John Swan and for weaver Archibald Douglas (along with John Swan). He married Marion Wilson and their children, born in Hawick, included: Thomas (b.1671); Marion (b.1672); James (b.1680); Jane (b.1683), Thomas (again, b.1686); and Bessie (b.1689). The witnesses in 1680 were William Swan and William

Bridges and in 1689 were weaver William Swan and dyer George Young. Marion who married William Murray in Yarrow in 1701 may be his daughter. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Denholm. His unnamed child was baptised in 1705. Other children, who were probably his include Walter (b.1696), Janet (b.1699), Janet (again, b.1700) and James (b.1708). James (b.c.1705) resident of Hawick. He married Helen Rae (b.c.1711) and their children, baptised in Hawick, included: Katherine (b.1738); and Walter (b.1740). He may be the James, son of John, born in Hawick in 1705, or the son of James born in Cavers in 1708. James (18th/19th C.) farmer in Clerklands on the Riddell estate. He was recorded as a resident of Lilliesleaf on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He married Janet Reid and had children baptised in Lilliesleaf, including: Margaret (b.1796); Jean (b.1798); Thomas (b.1800); John (b.1802), draper in Lilliesleaf; and James (b.1804). James (18th/19th C.) shepherd at Earlside. Additionally he was taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. James (1769–1839) son of Walter and Betty Turnbull. He was born at Colterscleuch. Based on the births of his children he lived at Rough-hope, and elsewhere in the Borthwick and upper Teviot valleys. He married Elizabeth Telford (c.1773–1845), who is buried at Teviothead. Their children included: Elizabeth (1796–1880), who married James Lough at Ropelawshiel; Mina (c.1799–1888), who married Henry Scott and died at Milsington; Joan (c.1801–80), who married William Scott; Walter (1803–73), who married Janet Grieve and die at Meadshaw; Janet (1806–79), who married William Beattie; and Grace, who married Robert Armstrong. Jean ‘Blinnd Jean’ (d.1778) Hawick resident whose death is recorded along with her nickname. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Clerk and their unnamed child was baptised in 1671. It seems possible that he was father of weaver John, as well as Helen, who married James Scott ‘Laird’. John (17th C.) married Isobel Young in Roberton in 1687. John (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He is probably the weaver who in 1700 (along with James Scott, Laird’) witnessed a baptism for weaver ‘Black’ John Swan. He gave evidence in 1710 about a fight in St. Mary’s Kirk between 2 other weavers. He married Marion Wight in Hawick in 1701. Their children included: Marie (b.1701); Janet (b.1703); and James (b.1705). The witnesses in 1703 were James Scott ‘Laird’ and weaver Mungo Swan, and in 1705 were John

Swan, James Scott ‘Westport’ and James Scott ‘Doctor’. It seems likely he was son of the earlier weaver John and that the wife of James Scott ‘Laird’, Helen Lunn, may have been his sister. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Jean Rule and their children included: Bessie (b.1719); Jean (b.1722); and Isobel (b.1725). weaver in Hawick who gave evidence in 1710 about John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His unnamed child was baptised in 1750. John (18th C.) resident of Lillieleaf Parish. His children included: Helen (b.1754); Janet (b.1755); and Rachel (b.1755). John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Mary Nisbet in 1756 and their children included: James (b.1760); Walter (b.1763); and Charles (b.1764). John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Agnes McMillan and their children included: John (b.1762); and Agnes (b.1773). Hugh (b.1765) and Jean (b.1769), baptised in Wilton Parish, with mother ‘Agnes Lun’, were probably also his children. John (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His children included James (b.1757), Betty (b.1759), John (b.1761) and William (b.1763). John (18th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. His children included Helen (b.1778). John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Lodgeknow (in Cavers Parish), recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Perhaps the same John was servant to Mark Elliot at Tythehouse in Hobkirk Parish in 1801. John (b.c.1770s) servant at Earlside according to the 1799 ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish. John (1777–1861) son of Walter and Betty Turnbull. He was a labourer living in Newcastleton. In 1841 he was at about 6 South Liddle Street, and in 1851 was with his son Robert at Eskdalemuir. He married Isabella Eckford, who came from Crailing. Their children included: Walter (1806–79), who was born in Hobkirk Parish, married Margaret Dalgleish and live in Selkirk; Agnes (1807–90), who married Francis Govenlock; George (b.1809); Elizabeth (1817–93), born in Kirkton Parish, married Archibald Hall and died in Langholm; and Robert (1817–56), who married Isabella Armstrong. He secondly married Nelly (d.1870), daughter of John Hotson. John (18th/19th C.) married Elspeth Hall in Southdean Parish in 1803. His surname may have been ‘Lund’. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. He married Isobel Eckford and their children included George (b.1810) and Elizabeth (b.1811). John (19th C.) married Helen Thomson in Cavers Parish in 1825. John (1802–71) son of James and Janet Reid.

He was a woollen and linen draper in Lilliesleaf, recorded in Pigot's 1837 directory. His business premises and home were a little east of the centre of the village, facing north. For a while he had some stocking frames, but his drapery business really took off after the 'roup' of Wullie Stavert, who had served the previous generation. He was a Liberal in politics and was a member of the Burgher Kirk in Lilliesleaf. He was called upon to sort out local affairs and hence referred to in the village as 'the Provost', spending time in the Post Office, along with the Postmaster Tammie Turnbull and the stockingmaker Bob Scott. He and Turnbull were firm friends, although they belonged to different churches. He also wrote poetry, with at least 8 surviving, 3 of which are included in 'Living Bards of the Border' (1859), namely 'The Blue Sky', 'Aspirations' and 'The Poet's Funeral'. He chaired the Lilliesleaf centenary Burns Night and one of his poems is 'Lilliesleaf Burns Festival'. He was listed as a merchant in Lilliesleaf in 1841 and in 1851 and 1861 he was recorded on the south side of Main Street. He lived with his mother Janet (or 'Jenny') and sisters Margaret ('Peggy') and Jean ('Jeanie'). He was unmarried when he died. His drapery business was carried on by his nephew James Hood, and in 1872 (after his death) was renamed John Lunn & Co. A photograph of him exists and a sketch of his life is in the Border Magazine for 1898. The local minister said that 'His strong well disciplined mind, his great intelligence, sterling integrity, and benevolent disposition, rendered his opinion valuable on any subject'. John (19th C.) married Mary Bruce in 1851 and their son Walter was baptised in Hawick Free Kirk in 1851. Robert (b.c.1780) servant at Northhouse Haugh according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish. He could be the Robert who married Elspeth Hope and whose daughter Margaret was baptised in 1805. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Hawick. In 1689 he was fined by the Magistrates for the 'exorbitant' wedding of his daughter to William Douglas. He was listed as a merchant among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. Probably the same Thomas 'Lune' was listed on the west-side of Hawick on the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. He may be the 'T. Lun' who was fined by the Bailies in 1675 'in not coming to the night watch when he was charged to do so'. He may be the Thomas, married to Margaret Armstrong, whose children baptised in Hawick included Marion (b.1672) and Alison (or perhaps 'A son', b.1675); the witnesses in 1675 were James

Newbie and William Swan. He witnessed a baptism for Patrick Bridges in 1678, along with William Swan. Thomas (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. In 1724 he appeared before the Session to apologise for defaming his fellow weaver William Scott. He was probably the Thomas born in Hawick in 1686 to James and Marion Wilson. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. His children included Rachel (b.1744), James (b.1746), John (b.1748), Patrick (b.1750), Margaret (b.1753). Thomas 'Tom' (18th/19th C.) weaver at Shuttlehaa near Teviothea. It is unclear how he was related to other local Lunnns. He was married to the sister of James Swanson, who brought Tom Jenkins to the area; however, her name is not known. After Swanson died a few days after returning to Hawick, he looked after Jenkins, as well as Swanson's illegitimate son James. Thomas (18th/19th C.) stocking manufacturer in Lilliesleaf, in partnership with James Sterling, as recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. Walter (17th C.) resident of Denholm on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Walter (b.1740) baptised in Hawick Parish, son of James and Helen Rae. He lived at Colterscleuch. He married Elizabeth (or 'Betty') Turnbull in Hawick in 1765 (with her name transcribed as 'Sim'). Their children included: Betty (b.1766), who married Archibald Scott; James (1769–1839), who married Elizabeth Telford; Walter (b.1773), who married Betty Hobkirk; John (1777–1861), who married Isabella Eckford and died in Newcastleton; Robert (1782–1865), who married Elspeth (or Euphemia) Hope and died in Langholm; and Janet (1783–1862), who married John Sword and died at Easter Alemoor. Betty who was baptised in Cavers Parish in 1756 (unless this is an error) may also have been his child. Walter (18th C.) merchant in Hawick. He paid the horse tax in 1792–94 and the cart tax in 1797. He became bankrupt in 1799. In 1801 he is described as 'Merchant or Travelling Packman, laterly residing in Hawick' whose estate was sequestered and he was the subject of a petition by his trustee Hawick merchant John Nixon (this being written by Sir Walter Scott). Nixon opposed his request to be declared 'cessio bonorum', on the basis that he had in fact misled his creditors in various ways. In 1803 he was in Edinburgh Tolbooth, presumably the result of being a debtor. His wife was Elizabeth Hay (formerly wife of William Borthwick), daughter of Alexander Hay and Janet Smith. Walter (b.c.1770s) shepherd at Tweedenhead according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. Walter (18th/19th C.) married Berry Hobkirk in Cavers Parish in 1808. Walter (1803–73) son of James and Elizabeth Telford. He was born in Teviothead Parish and worked as a shepherd and agricultural labourer, living at Meadshaw in 1841, 1851 and 1861. In 1828 he married Janet, daughter of Walter Grieve and Margaret Glendinning; she died in 1883. Their children were: Isabella (1828–60), who married John Preston and died in Lilliesleaf; James (b.1830); Elizabeth (Betty, b.1834), who married John Murray; James (again, b.1836), who married Margaret Hunter; Agnes (1842–94); and Jane (1844–59). Walter (??–??) writer of the local poem ‘Thochts o Langsyne’. He may be the same as one of the other Walters. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was at Appletreehall in 1732 and Burnhead in 1737. He married Janet Hislop in 1731 and their children included: James (b.1732); Agnes (b.1734); John (b.1737); William (b.1739); and James (b.1742). The witnesses in 1732 were James and John Dryden and in 1737 were Walter Scott and Thomas Kyle. William (18th C.) resident at Mabonlaw in 1774 when his son John was baptised in Robertson Parish. Adam (b.1776) was probably also his child (formerly written ‘Lun’, ‘Lune’, etc.).

Lunon (lu-nin) n. London, capital of England, once connected to Hawick by train – ‘Frae Lunnin town an act they shaw, To summon men by dint o’ law’ [JR], ‘You – ane o’ the greatest gentlemen in the hale country, exceptin’ the Yirl – an’ the Yirl’s aye at Lunnon’ [JTe], ‘... I wonder how the King an’ the fouk o’ Lunin allow sic things’ [RW] (spelled several ways).

lunt (lun’, lunt) n., arch., poet. a light, ember, match, piece of inflammable material – ‘Lunt ... The flame of a smothered fire which suddenly bursts into a blaze, Teviotd.’ [JoJ], ‘A wheen folk oot picnickin at a deikey-fit on Dunionseide hed kinnelt a lunt ...’ [ECS], ‘Salome flang like a wanton, free, A lunt, the flash o’ her witchin’ ee’ [WL], v., arch. to light, become alight – ‘Ye shake yer head – thou anger canna hide it: Lunt, puff! quo’ I; joost bite yer lip an’ bide it’ [JoHa], ‘When siclike things they’ve gotten right, Their cuttys next they’re luntin’ ...’ [JoHa], ‘Thae rositty sticks’ll lunt grand’ [GW], to set on fire, to light – ‘A luntin’ match’ [GW], to smoke a pipe, especially to make it give off a lot of smoke.

lunt (lun’) n., arch. a springy step, v., arch. to walk with a spring in one’s step – ‘... an A was luntin along the skleff, towrt Denum’ [ECS].

luntin (lun’-in) adj., arch. sprightly – ‘She’s a luntin’ hizzy’ [GW].

lunzie (lun-zee) n., poet. loin – ‘And Eb sent it over his hawse in a crack, Then lay on his lunzie and routit and spak’ [JTe].

luppen (lu-pin) pp., adj., arch. leapt – ‘The flae’s luppen away’ [ECS], ‘That stirk’s luppen owre the yett’ [ECS], burst, split open – ‘A luppen cabbitch’ [GW], ‘Thae’s graand meely taatish; thay’re aa luppen’ [ECS], ‘His beelin finger’s luppen’ [ECS] (this is the past participle form of lowp, with the past tense being lap or lowpit).

luppen-oot (lu-pin-oo’) adj., arch. flushed through blushing, broken out in a red rash – ‘A luppen-oot face (cf. flown-oot)’ [ECS].

Lurden (lur-din) n. farm in the former Hassendean Parish, just to the north of Knowetownhead (this is an old Scots word for ‘mean fellow, sluggard’).

Lurden Burn (lur-din-burn) n. small stream that rises near Clarilaw, passes Hassendeanburn farm and joins the Hassendean Burn at Lurden. A footbridge over the burn gives access to the farm.

Lurden Entry (lur-din-en-tree) n. former name for a track leading from Lurden and Knowetownhead to the B6359 just east of Horsleyhill. There was a railway bridge over the track here, and another bridge over the railway to the south.

Lurgie (lur-gee) n. nickname of Robert Wilson, deriving from the family home of Lurgiescleuch.

Lurgies Burn (lur-geez-burn) n. stream that runs into the Harwood Lake in the upper Rule valley. It is formed from Black Cleuch and the Freestone Cleuch.

Lurgiescleuch (lur-geez-clooch) n. farm on the track above Harwood, lying on the Lurgie Burn. It was the former home of Hawick historian Robert Wilson’s family (probably his grandfather), hence his nickname ‘Lurgie’. It once formed the eastern quarter of the lands of Fairnieles and was sold by William, Earl of Lothian in 1647 (along with Stanedge) to Sir Thomas Ker of Cavers. There was 1 hearth listed on the tax rolls at the end of the 17th century. Adam Armstrong was herd there in 1758 and John Wilson was there in 1786. James Dryden and Thomas Potts were there in 1821. Shepherd James Wilson and his family were there in 1861 and G. Pringle in 1868. An old road crosses from here to Langburnshiels in the Slitrig valley (it is ‘Lurgiescleuch’ in 1647 and ‘Lurgiescleugh’ in 1694 and 1786; the farm is marked ‘Lurgiescleugh’ on Stobie’s 1770 map; the origin of the name is obscure).

Lurgie's Well (lur-geez-wel) n. popular name for a spring beside St. Leonard's, named after Robert 'Lurgie' Wilson, from it being a favourite rendezvous of his. It is said that he fell asleep there and caught the chill that led to his death.

luskee (lus-kee) n., poet. meaning uncertain – 'In the upland way ... the luskees there that busk the brae Are the bees that mak' the honey' [HSR].

Lustruther (lu-stru-thur) n. farm and surrounding area in Southdean, just south of the main road between Chesters and Southdean. Robert Oliver was tenant there about 1502. The Olivers farmed there for many generations, this being the same family as the Olivers of Dinlabyre, and said to have been descended from the Strynds branch. It has also been stated that around the 17th century the family made a fortune from driving Scottish cattle to markets in England, when that was illegal. It was described being 2 steadings valued at 50 shillings in the Exchequer Rolls in 1538 and 1539. In 1541 the tenants listed on the rental roll were William ('the Lawyer'), Marion (his mother), John ('Blackhead'), another John, Katherine, Marion, Janet and Robert Oliver; it was split into 4 parts, with total value 50s. A tower near here was burned by Dacre's men (led by Sir John Radcliff) in late 1513 and by the English again in 1544; there is now no sign of the tower house, and the modern farmhouse bears the date 1777. William Oliver, Hob Oliver and John Oliver, younger, were all 'of Lustrudder' when they were among Olivers swearing allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544. It is said that around the 17th century the Olivers of Lustruther made a fortune engaged in (illegally) driving cattle across the Border. David Turnbull, tenant there, was exiled for perjury in 1622. The tenants of the farm in 1669 were Agnes Shiel and William Oliver. Christian Oliver was recorded there in 1684. George Riddell was there in 1688, John Oliver in 1694, William Slatter in 1797 and James Fair around the 1820s. Above the plantation known as Lustruther Strip is a short linear earthwork, and in the same area there is a quarry, field boundaries and rig and furrow lines (the origin is probably Old English 'hlose' and Middle English 'struther', meaning 'the pig-sty by the marsh; the name is first recorded in 1502 as 'Lustruthir', it is 'Lurchestrother' in 1513, 'Lustroder' in 1538, 'Lustrudir' in 1539, 'Lustruder' and 'Lustrodder' in 1544, 'Lwstruder' in 1562, 'Lustrother' in 1583,

lut (lu', lut) v., poet. to let – 'An' he lut it fa' in the middle o' thair camp roun' aboot thair bydin'-pleces' [HSR], 'The king sendet an' lowe-set him; een the ruulir o' the peepel, an' lut him gae free' [HSR] (cf. lat and luit).

Lutherdale (loo-thur-dāl) n. Andrew (15th C.) recorded as Rector of Abbotrule in 1476 when he supplicated to the Pope to be allowed to hold 2 benefices at once. His name appears as 'Luderdel'. Probably the same Andrew was Abbot of Dryburgh 1482–1508. He seems likely to be related to the Lairds of St. Mary's Isle in Kirkudbrightshire, who appear to have moved there from the Roxburghshire and Berwickshire area in the mid-16th century. Andrew (15th/16th C.) recorded as 'Andrea Lutherdail' when he witnessed the baronial sasine for Hawick in 1511/2. This was along with Robert (Chaplain) and James, who were presumably related. He also witnessed the sasine of 1514 for James Douglas of Drumlanrig. He may be the same as the earlier Andrew, or else was probably related to him. David (d.bef. 1486) recorded as Archdeacon of Teviotdale 1474–75. His is probably the 'Duncan archd. of Glasgow' mentioned in 1474. He appears as Archdeacon of Dunkeld 1475–79. He was also Canon of Dunblane and Rector of St. Ternan in Arbuthnott. He served as Comptroller (i.e. responsible for accounts) under James IV. James (15th/16th C.) probably related to Andrew and Robert, who also witnessed the 1511/2 sasine for the Barony of Hawick, the ceremony taking place at the Mote. It is possible he is the 'James Liderdele, chaplainm native of Scotland' recorded in Greenwich in the 1516 'Patent Rolls' of Henry VIII. John (15th C.) notary in Edinburgh who witnessed a document relating to the lands of Kirkurd for the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1475/6. He is recorded as 'Jhoanne Lutherdale'. Robert (15th/16th C.) first witness to the 1511/2 sasine for giving the Barony of Hawick to Sir William Douglas of Drumlanrig. He is recorded as 'domino Roberto Lutherdail, capellano', so he was Chaplain, presumably of Hawick, and held a Masters degree. Andrew and James were also witnesses, and so probably brothers or sons. He also witnessed the sasine for the Barony in 1514, listed after Alexander Newton, 'vicario de Hawik'. This suggests he had a subsidiary function to Newton, or was in charge of one of the smaller chapels within the Barony. Probably the same ‘domino Roberto Luthirdaile’ was listed in a Glasgow Diocese document in 1510. Thomas (15th C.) witness in 1432 to the sasine giving the Barony of Cavers and Sheriffdom of Roxburghshire to William Douglas; there his name is recorded as ‘Thoma Luderdayll’, and he is listed as a Burgess (presumably of Hawick) along with Simon Routledge. He was also ‘Thoma de Lutherdale’ in 1452 when he was among 4 Burgess of Hawick on the list of witnesses to the sasine granting the Barony of Hawick to William Douglas of Drumlanrig. He is recorded in an early Hawick sasine of 1453, where his name was written ‘Thomas of Luderdale’. In 1455 he was ‘Thomas de Luthirdale’ when he witnessed a document at St. Mary’s relating to the lands of Whitchesters. And in 1456 he was one of the witnesses for another Whitchesters document, where he is listed as ‘Thoma de Lutherdale’ and one of the burgesses (of Hawick presumably) (also spelled ‘Luderdale’, ‘Luderdaill’, ‘Lutherdaill’, ‘Luthirdale’, etc.; this may be a variant of ‘Lauderdale’; cf. Liddersdale, which may be based on ‘Liddesdale’, but may in some cases be the same surname).

Lyall (ll-ul) n. Joseph C. (19th C.) registrar for Ewes Parish in at least the 1860s to 1880s. He also served as Session Clerk and Clerk to the School Board. Thomas ‘Tom’ (1940–2020) born in the Haig, son of lorry driver Tom and Ina Scott, he attended Trinity and the High School. He was known as a successful rugby player in the back row and as centre for the Y.M. and also played for Hawick R.F.C. He worked Turner & Rutherfords, Braemar and John Laing, ending up as knitting manager. He married Georgie Collins and they had children Julie, Kirsty and Kendra,.

lyand (ll-and) pres. part., arch. lying – ‘... with the pertinentis, liand within the baronie of Braxhelme ...’ [SB1569], ‘... for the compositioun of hir teindis of Trowis, liand within the parrochin of Cavers’ [SB1574], ‘... of the said lands of Flex heritable pertaining to him lyand contiguous with and to our Common of Havicke ...’ [BR1692], ‘... upon ane tenement of land of his in Hawick, lyand betwixt the land of James Brown on the north part ...’ [JW] (also written ‘liand’).

Lydgate (lid-gā) n. Adam (15th C.) recorded as ‘Adam de Lydgat’ in 1453 when he witnessed a sasine at Milsington. Several of the other witnesses were local men, but it is unclear where he was from.

lyin money (ll-in-mu-nee) n., arch. unused money – ‘Lyin money or eidl (idle) money = unused capital, or money not invested in any business or enterprise, etc.’ [ECS].

lyik see like

Lyle (lil) n. Adam (16th C.) recorded in 1567 as ‘man and servand’ to David Turnbull of Wauchope. Turnbull was ordered to present him to answer charges of raiding into England. Agnes McDonald nee Robson, ‘Nan’, M.B.E. (1929–2010). Born and lived in Hawick all her life, she had several jobs, including librarian at Newmill. She was associated with many local clubs and charitable organisations, in particular with the Scouting movement along with husband Rob, for which she received an M.B.E. in 1988. She received many honours from the Scouts, including the Silver Wolf, serving as a leader for about 60 years. She gave a talk to the Archaeological Society on the history of Scouting in Hawick. She was also awarded the Paul Harris Fellowship by the Rotary Club and had a village school named after her in Kenya, following her work with the Borders Exploration Group. A memorial cairn was erected on Whitchesters Hill in 2011, with an associated walk. The top of the cairn is inscribed ‘Baden-Powell Do your best. Try and leave this world a little better than you found it’. Her children were Ruth, Joyce and Andrew. John (17th C.) possible name for resident near Leahaugh in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. His name appears to be written ‘Leule’. John (18th/19th C.) John recorded as ‘John Lisle in Denholm’ in 1818 when his marriage to was Jean Turnbull was announced in Melrose Parish. Fr. John Stevenson (1850–c.1920) born in Derry, he served in the army, but becoming a convert to Catholicism, he abandoned a military career to train for the priesthood. He was ordained in 1889, became assistant at Falkirk and then served as Hawick’s priest 1892–1912. He was known as a quiet man, but always at the beck and call of his congregation. He personally taught the older pupils in the mornings and held a boy’s club after school. He oversaw the widening of the seatings within the chapel. In failing health, he was transferred to Peebles. Robert 2nd Lord Lyle (d.1497) son of Robert, 1st Lord. He was based in Renfrewshire. He served as ambassador to England from 1472. In 1482 he was charged with treasonable communication with James, 9th Earl of Douglas, but was acquitted. He gained some of the Earl of Angus’ lands in 1485. In 1488 he was assigned the lease of Sundhope in the Yarrow valley and gave up the lease on 'Gar-lacleuch et Blakhous'. He was one of the Justiciars at the Circuit Court in Jedburgh in 1493 and in Jedburgh and Selkirk in 1494. He was involved with negotiations with James III before the Battle of Sauchieburn (where he was probably present) and afterwards when James IV was crowned, for whom he served as Royal Justiciar. He was succeeded by his son Robert. Robert S. 'Rob' (1921/2–91) brought up in Hawick, he worked with Hawick Hosiery Co., but then became an apprentice with Ingles the joiners. He served in the R.A.F. in WWII and later became a cabinet maker with Temples House Finishers. He then trained at Moray House and became a High School woodwork teacher for the next 30 years. While there he started the High School Pipe Band and was also a guidance teacher. He was also a founder member of the Trades rugby team. He was a piper with the Home Guard, Ex-Servicemen's and Scout Pipe Bands (which he restarted in 1972). He was heavily involved with the Scout movement for most of his life, becoming Group Scout Leader for Hawick, Assistant District Commissioner for Roxburgh and Border Scout Mountain Adviser. He was awarded the Medal of Merit in 1972 and the Silver Acorn by the Chief Scout in 1980. In 1954 he married Nan Robson. Walter (16th C.) 'exhorter' of Southdean Parish in 1567. Perhaps the same Walter (although recorded as 'Pyle') was exhorter at Foulden in 1563; it is possible that 'Foulden' is an error for 'Souden'. William (b.1796/7) from Melrose, he was a farm steward in the Hawick area. In 1851 he was living at 'Pitt Cottage', near Branxholme Braes. His wife was Helen, and they had children, John, Thomas, William, Margaret and Alexander. William (1833–1904) co-founder of Lyle & Scott's. Born in Hawick, he initially travelled for William Laidlaw & Sons, then managed Wilson & Armstrong's. Along with Walter Scott he founded Lyle & Scott as a hosiery manufacturers in 1874/5, running the company alone after Scott died in 1892. Not prominent in public life, nevertheless he was a manager of the Cottage Hospital and benefactor of the Jubilee Nursing Scheme, as well as being Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He was an elder at St. Andrew's Free Church and a staunch Liberal. A keen outdoor sportsman, he tenanted the Pilmuir shootings for many years. He was also a keen gardener, as attested by the grounds at his home, Kildowan. He married Agnes, daughter of weaver Charles Scott; she died in 1899, aged 68 and was a cousin of Sir James A.H. Murray (formerly written 'Lisle' and variants).

Lyle an Scott's (lil-in-skots) n. knitwear company with main factory on Liddesdale Road. It was established by William Lyle and Walter Scott as a hosiery manufacturers in 1874, the pair having previously worked as managers in other factories. The firm once had premises on Lothian Street (certainly in the early 1900s), and this was probably the original factory, built for them by Marchall & Son, with designs and joinery by A. Inglis & SOn. The firm became a limited company in 1897. The company bought the Liddesdale Road property around 1939, but it was taken over by the War Department and used as a munitions factory until after the War. Like other companies, it moved into twin-sets and other fashion knitwear by the mid-20th century. In 1938 they made an agreement with Cooper's in the United States to be the sole British manufacturer of Jockey Y-front underwear. There were boom years in the 1950s with the production of Y-fronts, and in the 1960s with highly patterned golfwear. Since 1975 the company has had a Royal Warrant by appointment to HRH the Prince Philip, Duke of Edinburgh. The company merged with Wolsey Ltd. in 1964 and became part of the Courtauld's Group in 1967. The company trademark is a golden eagle. The company's additional premises at Burnfoot were vacated in the 1990s and destroyed in a fire in 2005.

Lyle an Scott's Brig (lil-in-scots-brig) n. footbridge across the Slitrig connecting the Back Braes to a footpath behind the Lyle & Scott's factory on Liddesdale Road. It was built in about 1957 by an engineering company from Monmouth, under the instruction of Adam Balmer, chief engineer of the factory. There had previously been flat stepping stones there, which were useful when the river was low. With the expansion into Y-fronts the company built the bridge to assist its workers from the West-end (also sometimes called 'the Backbrae Fitbrig').

Lymie (li-mee) n. former informal name for Lymiecleuch – 'There is ane at the Carlanrigg, Might sof'en the heart o' auld Simey; But gin ye want lasses that's trig, Gae up the burn fa'ther to Limey' [JoHa] (also written 'Limey').

Lymie (li-mee) n. nickname for James Elliot of Lymiecleuch.

Lymiecleuch (li-mee-klooch) n. farm on the side road south-west of Teviothead. Robert Grieve was there in 1618. In 1670 it was purchased from William Elliott, younger of Stobs, by Simon Elliot of the Binks and Swinside, William Elliot of Unthank, and William's son Adam. At that time it included the lands of Corriesike, Langbyre and Giddenscleuch. In 1678 it was valued at £1000 and part of the estate of Elliott of Stobs. The precise ownership in the late 17th century is complicated. Sir William Elliott of Stobs and William Elliot paid the land tax in 1678 for their halves of the lands, each valued at £500. Adam Elliot of Mosspeeble gained a charter of the lands in 1673, but lost them in 1687. In that year Sir William Elliott of Stobs, issued a charter to his brother John for these lands, but John did not gain possession until 1695. About 1695 William and Robert Elliot of Lymiecleuch and Penchrise were charged with theft by John Riddell of Haining; failing to appear, their surety, Gilbert Elliott of Stobs paid the fine, and after a further payment acquired both farms. Adam Elliot of Lymiecleuch was involved in a legal action with Anna Duches of Buccleuch in the period 1698–1703. Adam Elliot was there in 1705, Walter Scott in 1708, William Henderson in 1714, James Telfer in 1717 and James Jardine in 1719. William Pott was herd there in 1727, Thomas Davidson was there in 1730 and John Rae in 1731. In 1788 it was valued at £1000 and owned by Sir Francis Elliott of Stobs. Thomas Telfer and William Nixon were farmers there in 1797 and John Rutherford also lived there. In 1799 Robert Scott was a tenant there and James Scott and James Crozier were servants. James Elliot was farmer there in 1841 and John Clerk in 1868. It was used as a shooting lodge in the late 19th century. The hill above is called Limie Hill, and the Limie Sike joins the Limiecleuch Burn there. The hamlet there appears to have been locally known as 'Limey', as in John Halliday's poem 'The Lassies o' Limey' (also spelled 'Limiecleuch' 'Lymiecleuch' and 'Lymiecleugh'; it is transcribed 'Lymmercleugh' in 1618, is 'Limey-cleugh' and 'Limiecleugh' in 1678, 'LymyCleugh' in 1695 and 'Lymiecleuch' about 1700, 'Lymiecleuch' in 1717, 'Limiecleuch' and 'LymyCleugh' in 1797 and 'LimieyCleuch' in 1821; note there is a place of essentially the same name near Canonbie, with which it can be easily confused).

Lymiecleuch Burn (lī-mee-klooch-burn) n. stream that is formed from the streams of Merry-path Sike, Wrangway Burn and Lang Hope near the farm of Wisp and runs roughly northwards to join the Teviot near Teviothead. Its source is around Pikethaw Hill on the border of Roxburghshire with Dumfriesshire (it is 'LymyCleuch Burn' in 1839).

Lynch's (lin-cheez) n. toy shop on the north side of the High Street, at No. 19, in the latter part of the 20th century. Also known as 'J. Lynch' (pronounced jI), 'Miss Lynch's' and 'Pairky Aathing's'. It closed in 1989 – 'Oo went ti Paisley's for oor tools, Jess McVeetie's for rock bools, Lynch's hed a' kinds o' toys, Ellen Riddle hed her pies ...' [IWL].

Lyne (lin) n. farm marked on Gordon's manuscript map c.1650 and Adair's c. 1688 manuscript map of the Sheriffdom of Etrick Forest, between Milsington and Hosscote, on the north side of the Borthwick. This corresponds roughly to the position of Deanburnhaugh. It is probably the same place referred to in several charters and other documents along with Girnwood as 'Greenwood and Lyne', also sometimes as 'the Lyne'. In 1488 the lands were leased by Robert Scott from Thomas Turnbull, later leased by the Lords of Home, and sold to the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1532/3. In 1506 'the lands of Lyne were valued at £2 Scots, in time of peace 1 merk, and were held of the king for ward and relief'. The lands were ratified to Anna, Duchess of Buccleuch in 1693. It seems likely this was associated with the waterfall at Girnwood Linn, to the west of the farm of Girnwood (it is 'Lyne' in 1488 and probably 'Lyn' in 1574 and 1589 and Linn in 1661).

Lyne (lin) n. parish to the west of Peebles, formerly part of 'Lyne and Megget' parish. The Lyne Water flows through the area to join the Tweed. The area contains the remains of an extensive Roman fort from the 2nd century, and a road probably connected it with Newsteads near Melrose.

Lyne (līn) n. William (17th C.) tenant of Goldielands in 1642 when he is recorded as part of an accusation (probably unfounded) of theft in Hawick magistrates court. His wife was Margaret McDougall.

Lyneside (līn-sīd) n. former station on the Waverley Line, shortly before Carlisle.

Lynn (lin) n. Richard (19th/20th C.) served as Burgh Foreman for Hawick. In that capacity he lived at 10 Slitrig Crescent. He is probably the 'Dick' whose son ran Swinton the builders in Hawick. It is said that just after the Boer War he came across another Hawick man in South Africa, while leaning out of a train window, and although they recognised each other, the train passed before they could talk.

Lynn timer (li-nee) n., ins. name sometimes used for someone from Lynn timer housing estate, usually used derogatorily.

Lynn timer see Lynn timer

Lynn timer (lin-wud) n. Lynn timer, an area in the south-west of Hawick, off the Newcastleton Road, on a flat piece of ground in a loop of the Slitrig. It became a council housing estate on the outskirts of town, built in 1933 and comprising Lynn timer Road and Lynn timer Crescent. Originally a pleasant enough residential area, it grew to be infamous, becoming synonymous with the least desirable elements within the town, the area being renamed Liddesdale in an attempt to reinvent the area. It fell into a state of disrepair and was largely demolished in 1980–81, being completely levelled in 1991 to make way for new housing. After a public vote the area was renamed Lynn timer again – ‘The plaintive sound is wafted on the gale, And Lynn timer’s sighs are heard to join the wail’ [WNK], ‘Oh Lynn timer guards the South approach, Drumlanrig holds the West ...’ [NM], ‘Since Stepehenson’s infernal din Came screamin’ doon frae Lin timer Linn ...’ [WP] (named for the ‘linn’, i.e. stream in a ravine, and wood that stood there; sometimes spelled with one ‘n’, and sometimes with an ‘i’).

Lynn timer Brig (lin-wud-brig) n. Lynn timer Bridge, name sometimes used for the bridge across the Slitrig to Lynn timer House. It may also refer to the bridge behind Lyle & Scott’s factory, connecting Liddesdale Road with the ‘Back Braes’. A footbridge near there, sometimes also called ‘Nixon’s Brig’, was washed away in the 1846 flood, with half of it ending up near the Tower Hotel and the other half at the Auld Brig.

Lynn timer Cauld (lin-wud-kawld) n. Lynn timer Cauld, the weir built upstream from Lynn timer, by Slitrig Viaduct, which once helped supply the water power for Lynn timer Mill. It was sometimes known as ‘Nixon’s Cauld’. It was partly swept away in the flood of 1846.

Lynn timer Crescent (lin-wud-kre-sin) n. Lynn timer Crescent, street at the south east end of town, named after the nearby stream and wood, with the houses built in 1933. It was renamed Liddesdale Road in 1971 and by 1991 the houses has been demolished and the site cleared, with new housing appearing from 2001.

Lynn timer Hoose (lin-wud-hoos) n. Lynn timer House, built for William Nixon on the western bank of the Slitrig north of the ‘Scaur’. It is a large white house on the right-hand side of the road driving out of Hawick, and is now split into flats. It was certainly built before 1841 and William Nixon was still recorded there in 1868. Originally the house was reached via a drive that crossed a ford over the Slitrig, but in 1878 a bridge was erected and the gate lodge built, along with landscaping of the gardens. During WWII it was used as a hostel for women war workers.

Lynn timer Ludge (lin-wud-luj) n. gate house for Lynn timer House at 10 Liddesdale Road. It was probably built in 1878 at the same time as the bridge over the Slitrig to the main house. It is a single-storey house with a rectangular plan, but with overhanging eaves and an attic gable.

Lynn timer Mill (lin-wud-mil) n. Lynn timer Mill, hosiery mill at Lynn timer, built by John Nixon & Sons, with the first construction perhaps being as early as 1803. Before it was built the spun wool was sent to Galashiels for carding; but the new factory enabled the spinning and carding to be carried out in one place. The factory was probably extended during the days of William Nixon, and the 1858 Ordnance Survey map clearly shows the associated gasometer and ‘tenter fields’. The mill was sold to Laidlaws in 1864. There was a serious fire there in 1869, with rebuilding afterwards. It was a prominent factory throughout the 19th century, but closed at the beginning of the 20th. Water power was provided by a short lade, fed from Lynn timer Cauld. It was demolished in 1933 to make way for the Lynn timer housing scheme – ‘While fashion’d fair and warldly gear May charm whae’er they will, Gi’e me my ain, my bonnie Jean, – The lass o’ Lynn timer Mill’ [JT] (also sometimes ‘Lynn timer Mills’).

Lynn timer Road (lin-wud-rōd) n. Lynn timer Road, name given for the continuation of Slitrig Crescent, being the beginning of the B6399 leading to Newcastleton. The mill lade used to pass along the east side of the road, in front of all the houses there. The name was given when new houses were built in 1933, and came from the nearby stream and wood. In the mid-20th century M. Campbell’s grocer’s shop was on the road, just before the housing estate. It was renamed Liddesdale Road in 1971, had new houses built in 1973, and the houses at the southern end were demolished in 1982.

Lynn timer Wud (lin-wud-wud) n. name sometimes used for the wood above Lynn timer, or possibly for the wood that was formerly at Lynn timer before development.

Lynn timer see Lynn timer

Lyon (Il-in) n. Andrew (b.1870) son of David. He married Margaret Drysdale and their children were: Nellie (d.1995), who worked at Braemar and was National President of the Baptist Church; Jessie, who married an Elder; Jane or Jean who worked in a hospital and married an Oliphant; and David, who worked in a spinning mill. Bailie ?? sat on the local Military Tribunal during WWI. David (b.c.1800) from Langholm, he is recorded as 'Bookseller &c' on the 1841 census. In 1851 he was a 'pot runner', living on the Loan. He lived at about 29 High Street. His wife was Margaret and their children included Matthew, Andrew, William, Walter, Jean, Francis Dick, David and Elizabeth. David (b.1852) son of Robert. He was a wool frame-work knitter. He was a member of the Baptist Church and an amateur botanist. He also supported a campaign to stop employers paying wages in pubs. He may be the David from Hawick who had some poetry in local publications. In 1869 he married Jane Cullen and their children were: Peter and William, who died in infancy; Andrew (1870–1940); Barbara Waters (1873–1959), who was hit by a motorbike when a child, and had to wear callipers; William Cullen (b.c.1876); Catherine Johnstone Taylor (1877–1965), who had a sweet shop on Bright Street; Janet Gray Cullen (1880–1919), who emigrated to Canada; Robert (1882–1923); James Cullen (1884–1964), who moved to Earlston, returning to Hawick after he retired; and David William Waters (b.1888), who worked at Braemar. David (b.1852) cousin of Martha. He was grocer at Deanburnhaugh and later foreman with George Hogg & Sons. He married Isabel Scott (b.1847) in 1874. David Guernsey (19th C.) brother of James and Martha. He was a soldier. David (20th C.) Secretary and Treasurer of the Saxhorn Band in the 1960s. Dickie see Dickie Lyon. Isabel (b.c.1810) originally from England, she is listed in 1841 as a glover, living on 'Kirk Yard'. Rev. James (1849–1936) son of a Hawick stockingmaker, brother of David and Martha. He attended St. Andrews Kirk. He was a painter's apprentice who later went to America and then became a Methodist missionary in India. He was District Superintendent, M.E. Church Mission, Roorkee, U.P. India. Later he was Church of Scotland Acting Chaplain at Kotagiri, Madras. John (d.c.1423) cleric who was proposed as Archdeacon of Teviotdale in 1418. This was done by James I, while he was in captivity. Other men held the Archdeaconry at about the same time, however, he continued to retain some rights until his death. John (1431–1497) son of Patrick, he was 3rd Lord Glamis, succeeding his brother in 1486. He attended university, perhaps in Paris, and was appointed as Justiciar North of the Forth. He was one of the Justiciars at the Circuit Court in Jedburgh and Selkirk in 1494. He married Elizabeth Scrymgeour and was succeeded by his eldest son, John. Three other sons of his were killed at Flodden. Matthew (19th C.) Hawick stockingmaker, with a small shop near Hawick Mill. He apparently figured out how to make improvements so that silk and wool for men's coats could be made using the stocking frame. He was given £40 from the Board of Trade for this innovation. He sold a cloak to the Duchess of Buccleuch, then made one for the Duke of York, which used lamb's wool in a tartan pattern. This was exhibited in the Town Hall, following which the Duke ordered a second. He then made a cloak of blue silk and scarlet wool for King George IV and was at Dalkeith House when it was presented to him in 1822. There is a sketch of him by Alexander Michie. He could have been the Matthew, married to Janet Norrie, whose son Matthew was born in Hawick in 1796. The death of Matthew, son to stocking-maker Matthew, is recorded in Hawick in 1816. Richard (19th C.) resident of Hawick. In 1863 he presented to the Museum a Roman coin that was found when the Auld Brig was demolished in 1851. Robert (16th C.) recorded as 'fabro farraris' (i.e. horseshoe maker or blacksmith) in Hawick in a list of creditors of William Scott, younger of Buccleuch, in 1552. Robert (b.1850) married Joan Currie and had 8 children in Hawick. They were: Catherine (b.1873); Andrew (b.1875); William (b.1877); Jessie (b.1879); Daniel (b.1881); James (b.1885); Robert (b.1885), possibly a twin of James; and Mary (b.1890) (formerly spelled 'Lion').

Lyons (Il-inz) n. Deborah 'Debbie' local drama and music worthy. She works as a beauty therapist, owning Bodywise in Drumlanrig Square. She has been associated with the Hawick Amateur Operatic Society since her first role as a child in the Sound of Music in 1971. She became a mainstay of the organisation, serving twice as President. She has also been involved with amateur operatics in Selkirk, Galashiels and Berwick. She also directs the ACT 1 Youth Theatre. She received the National Operatic and Dramatic Association 50-years' service award in 2022. She was also a singer with the band 3D and is known for singing 'Old Mill Town' and other Hawick fourites. In 2005 she was the first woman to sing at the Common Riding Dinner.

He was a carrier, living at Smithfieldhaugh in Kirkton Parish in 1851 and 1861. He carted over to the North Tyne every fortnight. He ran a cart between Hawick and Liddesdale before the railway. He was still recorded at Smithfieldhaugh in 1868. He married Agnes Moffat (b.1828/9, from Moffat) and their children included James (b.1853), David (b.1855/6) and Mary (b.1857/8). He was said to be 'a man of large proportions and of austere countenance, invariably dressed in a square-crowned hat, corduroy trousers, and a huge double-breasted waistcoat with sleeves and flap pockets'. John (d.1951) married Elspeth, daughter of Barton Oliver. His children included Maggie Oliver (b.1903) who married an Anderson. Robert (19th C.) married Helen Scott in 1832. The marriage was recorded in both Southdean and Oxnam Parishes. Their children, baptised in Jedburgh Associate Kirk, included James (b.1833), Charles (b.1834), Mary (b.1836), Thomas Scott (b.1839), Betty (b.1840), Robert (b.1842) and Helen (b.1844). Walter (19th C.) married Nelly Heatley in 1832. Th marriage was recorded in both Wilton and Kirkton Parishes (also written 'Mabel').

Mabonlaw (mā-bin-law) n. farm above Harden, once part of the estate of the Scotts of Harden, it had more recently been available as a rental cottage. It stands near the Marchelyton Burn, and the hill above, presumably Mabon Law, reaches a height of 256 m and contains a fort, about 55 m by 25 m, with a single rampart and external ditches. It was part of the Harden estate from the 16th to 19th centuries, being valued in 1811 (along with 'Highchesters Whinny Park') at £312. In 1576 it was 'infected' to Marion Scott ('the Flower of Yarrow') as part of the marriage agreement with Walter Scott (later 'Auld Wat') of Harden. There were 18 'communicants' recorded there in 1650, namely Isobel Briggs, John Briggs, Helen Lunn, John White, Janet Turnbull, Bessie White, Robert Rule, Bessie Henderson, James Riddell, Janet Miller, John Wilson, Jean Scott, George Lawson, Margaret Wilson, James Telfer, Janet Easton, John Telfer and Jeanie Brand. John Thomson, was tenant there in 1684, when he was declared as a fugitive for attending field conventicles. The area was part of Wilton Parish until transferred to Robertson in 1690. It was included among lands inherited by Gideon Scott of Highchester from his father Walter, Earl of Tarras in 1694. There were 8 separate households listed there in 1694, including 3 Riddells. John Leithhead was recorded there in 1702. The tenants in 1709 were Walter Scott, Robert Scott, William Henderson, William Turnbull and John Riddell. Thomas Anderson was there in 1710, James Wilson in 1710–23, Adam Hardie in at least 1711–1713, Walter Riddell and William Beattie in 1717, William Nichol in 1718–23, Janet Sweet in 1720, William Elliot in 1721–27, John Nichol in 1723, Thomas Turnbull in 1725 and Andrew Chisholme in 1728. It may have been sold by Walter Scott of Harden about 1754. The headlands with Todshaw were divided in 1757. James Hume was living there in 1757, Robert Turnbull in 1763–66, William Laidlaw in 1764–67 and Thomas Nichol in 1766, Walter Elliot in 1771, David Laidlaw in 1772, John Watson in 1773 and William Lunn in 1774. In 1779 it was among lands whose liferent was sold by Walter Scott of Harden to Charles Scott, younger of Woll. John Scott was living there in at least 1780–85, John Henderson in 1780, James Laidlaw was farmer here in 1794–97 and James Miller was also there in 1795. It was valued (along with Highchesters Mill and 'Dunsbush') at £463 9s in the late 18th century. Weaver James Miller was living there in 1800. John Turnbull was a ploughman there in 1812. William Rutherford and Walter Clerk were there with their families in 1841 and 1851. Walter Rutherford was shepherd there in 1861. In about 1874 it was listed among the properties of Lord Polwarth. The cottage there has latterly been let as a holiday property (note that older versions of the name are easy to confuse with Mervinslaw; formerly 'Mabinlaw' etc., it is 'Mabenlaw' in 1643, 'Maybenlaw' in 1648, 'Mabinlaw' and 'Maybenlaw' in 1694, 'Mevinlaw' in 1702, 'Mabinlaw' in 1710, 'Mavin law', and 'Mavinla' in 1713, 'Mebinlaw' in 1721, 1725 and 1728, 'Mebonlaw' in 1764 and 1772, 'Mebonlay' in 1774 and 'Mawbonlaw' and 'Mebinlaw' in 1780; it is 'Mebinlaw' on a 1650 parish map, Blaeu's 1654 map marks 'Mabinlaw', while it is 'Maibenlaw' on Stobie's 1770 map).

Mabonlaw Moss (mā-bin-law-mos) n. boggy area to the north of Mabonlaw.

Macbeth (muk-beth) n. (c.1005–57) King of Scotland from 1040. He was the grandson of Malcolm II and claimed the throne over Duncan I (another grandson), who died in battle against him. However, Duncan's son Malcolm Canmore then fought for the throne, with the assistance of Siward, the Earl of Northumbria, and they captured the south of Scotland. He was then killed by Malcolm and the throne passed to his stepson Lulach.

MacCalman (mu-kawl-min) n. Rev. Ian B. (d.1967) minister of Minto Parish 1956–67. He had been an army Chaplain and his wife was from South Africa. During his time as minister a new manse was built on the Hassendean road.

Maccoll see McColl

MacDiarmid (muk-der-mi) n. Hugh (1837–1901) real name Christopher Murray Grieve, born in Langholm, he was probably the most famous 20th century Scottish poet. With Hawick's Francis George Scott and William Johnstone, he formed part of what was sometimes called a Scottish Renaissance in the 1930s. He wrote the poem 'The Sauchs in the Reuch Heuch Hauch' (i.e. the Roughheugh Haugh) inspired by a line of James Murray's, with the poem being set to music by Francis George Scott. Scott was one of his close friends, and set many of his verses to music, as well as helping him to compile various writings into 'A Drunk Man Looks at the Thistle'. A modern monument to him was erected on Whita Hill in 1988.

MacDonald (muk-do-nuld) n. Archibald J.F. 'Archie' (1904–83) Liberal M.P. for Roxburgh &

Selkirkshire 1950–51. He won with a large majority over Lord William Scott in a by-election, but the next year was defeated by C.E.M. Donaldson by only 829 votes. His name is often spelled ‘Macdonald’. James Ronald (1858–1937) born in St. Andrews, son of James and Catherine. He was educated at Madras College, St. Andrews University and Edinburgh University, where he graduated M.A. in 1880 and was licensed to preach in 1892. He became licentiate at Saughtree Kirk in 1892 and left in 1902 to become assistant and then minister at Eskdalemuir. He married Emily Sophia Nichols. Jessie Oliver Stoddart Ramsay (1910/1–2004) born at Dodlands in Cavers Parish, she was proud of her Copshawholm ancestry. She was educated at Trinity Primary School and then Hutchesons Grammar School, where she was dux. She studied English at Glasgow University and became a lecturer in English and Teaching Methods at Moray House. In 1950 she was appointed Head of St. Denis School for Girls in Edinburgh, where she remained until 1964. When her husband retired, they moved to Bowden and she made contributions to several publications. Her work ‘The Place-names of Roxburghshire’ was published in 1991; it was started as a thesis project when she was a student and completed for a Transactions article and then booklet. It mainly focuses on names for which there is evidence before 1600 (and an addendum is lodged with the Borders Archive). She also wrote ‘Bowden Kirk, 1128–1978’ (1978 and 1994) and a paper for the Archæological Society in 1992 on James Oliver, inventor of the ‘chilled’ plow blade. She died in Fife. J. Gordon Hawick knitwear engineer, who started as an apprentice at Woodcock’s. Known as a local historian, he has contributed articles to the Archæological Society Transactions, e.g. ‘Isobel Baillie’ in 2004, ‘William Watson & Sons’ in 2004 and 2005 and ‘Women’s Suffrage: A Border Perspective’ in 2012. John (b.1851/2) from Urry in Ross-shire, he was Superintendent of the Hawick Burgh Police force from about 1878 until 1902. He also acted as Sanitary Inspector, Public Prosecutor and Fire Master. In addition he was Captain of the Golf Club. He can be seen with the Fire Brigade in a photo of 1889. He used to ride at the head of the Common Riding Procession, and can be seen in the Gaylor film clip of 1899. Mr. ?? Police Superintendent in Hawick in the 1970s/80s??. Robert (b.1817/8) from Muckhart in Perthshire, he was a grocer and wine merchant at about 6 Howegate in 1851. He was already a widower, with daughters Janet W. and Jane M.

In Slater’s 1852 directory he was a grocer and spirit dealer on the Howegate, as well as seedsman, ‘agent for Bigg’s sheep dipping compound’ and ‘tallow chandler’. Col. William of Powderhall and Ormiston (19th C.), J.P., officer of the Scots Greys who were used to control riots surrounding elections in Roxburghshire in the 1830s. It is said that in 1836, when he was in Hawick to attend a dinner given for Lord Minto, the open carriage in which he was leaving with his family was followed for about a mile out of town, with a crowd pelting it with mud. He led the troop who were in Hawick to keep the peace at the election of 1837. He attacked the mob along with several special constables, losing his hat and being struck by a stone on the forehead in the doorway of 3 Sandbed. He also attended the 1839 banquet held at Branxholme to honour the Duke of Buccleuch. He subscribed to 4 copies of Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825, when he was already ‘of Ormiston’. He is listed on the 1837 electoral roll, having acquired Ormiston through marriage. He also held lands in Cavers Parish. He served as a Commissioner of Supply, Justice of the Peace and Tax Commissioner for Roxburghshire. He was also a Vice-President of the Edinburgh Border Counties Association. He owned Ormiston House just outside Hawick, and occupied it in the Autumn months (for hunting), with Provost Wilson occupying it for the rest of the year. His children included Alexander and John James, also listed as joint life-renters in 1835. His wife ‘Mrs. Margaret F. McDonald or Muir’ was listed as owner of Ormiston in about 1874.

Macdowall see McDougall

MacDowall (muk-dow-ul) n. Fergus (15th C.) held the benefice of Cavers Parish from about 1465. He was directly appointed by the Pope, and not by the monks of Melrose that had made some previous appointments. The same name occurs within the MacDowalls of Galloway. He is probably the Fergus who witnessed a few charters in 1463 and perhaps the same ‘Fergusio Macdowall’ recorded on a charters for lands in Wigtown in 1508. Perhaps 2 men are conflated here: one Fergus, Lord Register and Rector of Wigtown, who was the 2nd son of Uchtred Macdowall, 7th of Garthland; and the other the son of Dungald, who is mentioned in a letter of marriage of 1465/6. John (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1619, probably at Raperlaw. He was among many Turnbells and others, under Walter of Bedrule, who were accused of taking hay from Huntliehill and declared as rebels for not appearing to answer the charge.

His surname is written 'McDowell' (see also McDougall).

Macfee (muk-fee) n. William G. (19th/20th C.) from Dennistoun, Glasgow. He preached for several months in the 'Ern Kirk' in Wilton in 1889. The congregation were keen for him to become their minister, but he was ordained at Pendleton Church in Manchester, went to Partick in 1895 and then moved to a better climate for his health in 1900.

MacGill (mu-gil) n. Rev. John White (1867–1937) born in Musselburgh, son of a minister, he graduated M.A. from Edinburgh University in 1889 and was licensed by Dalkeith Presbytery in 1892. He was assistant at Alexandria, North Berwick and St. Margaret's (Edinburgh), before being ordained at St. Catherine's, British Guiana in 1897. In 1924 he was translated to Inverallochy and then became minister of Saughtree kirk in 1925. However, he remained only 2 years before moving to Caerlaverock. He married Edith Sarah Luxton Wexford, and they had 2 children (also McGill).

MacGregor (mu-gre-gur) n. Alexander (19th C.) teacher at Saughtree school in the mid-1860s. He took over from James Telfer, who had been teacher there for almost 30 years. He is probably the same as Rev. Alexander, who graduated M.A. from Glasgow University in 1861, was ordained as minister of Hags in 1865 and was at Inverkeithing and Rosyth from 1866. Augustus Wallace, W.S. (1867–1937) son of Rev. John and grandson of the Rev. J.A. Wallace. He was employed by Purdom's in Hawick for 16 years and was later a partner of Auld & MacDonald, W.S. He was a member of the Scottish Zoological Society and the Hawick Archæological Society, and was also known as a stamp collector (jointly editing a catalogue on the Malay States). He also edited the book 'Fifty Years of Lawn Tennis in Scotland' (1927). It is said that he was more interested in tennis than employment, and was a notable player in his youth. He served as a Captain in the K.O.S.B. in WWI, although he was never posted abroad. He also helped execute Hawick's WWI Roll of Honour. He died in Hawick. Donald (b.1856) from Inverness, he graduated M.A. from Glasgow University in 1878, M.B. from Edinburgh in 1884 and M.D. in 1886. He was at Chester-Le-Street and Ketteringham, before coming to the Hawick area. He lived in Denholm in the 1880s and 1890s. In 1887 he married Jessie, daughter of J.H. Mundell of Mundeville Park, Bournemouth. Their children included

Donald Hamilton (d.1918, who fought with the Gordon Highlanders) and Marjorie S. John (18th C.) listed as footman at Borthwickbrae in 1792 and 1793, when he was working for William Elliot Lockhart. Rev. John (1824–73) born in Golspie, Sutherland, he studied at New College, Edinburgh 1850–54. He assisted at Rothesay and the Free New North Church in Edinburgh, was ordained at Kirkurd in Peeblesshire and became minister of Hawick Free Kirk (i.e. St. George's) in 1865, having been called in 1864. He was apparently a great biblical scholar. In 1865 he married Rev. Wallace's eldest daughter, Wilhelmina Hepburn; however, she died of small-pox in 1869. He became ill in 1879 and was given 6 months leave, but died within a couple of months, leaving his only child Augustus Wallace (b.1867) an orphan. Mr. ?? (18th C.) dance-master who hired out part of the Hawick Town House in order to give lessons in 1794. He probably went round other Border towns.

Machell (ma-kel) n. Nicholas (19th C.) listed as a carrier's agent on the Backdamgate in Pigot's 1837 directory. His carts went to Carlisle Edinburgh and parts of Lancashire from the Backdamgate every Monday and Thursday. It was said that during the flood of 1846 a large quantity of tea and sugar in his warehouse was destroyed. He married Mary Hunter in Hawick in 1838. Although he is unrecorded after that, it may be that his surname was really 'Maxwell' or 'Mitchell', for example.

machine (mu-sheen) n., arch. a passenger vehicle, small carriage, motor car – '...an A ettlt at finndin some machine ti serr ma ends' [ECS].

MacIntyre (maw-kin-tIr) n. Charles (18th C.) footman at Riddell in 1794, when he was working for Lady Riddell. Rev. Duncan (1883–1969) son of an Inverness Headmaster, he trained for the Episcopalian ministry, being ordained in 1910. He served as Curate in Hawick that same year before moving to Glasgow. He was later Rector in Dumfries and at Aberfeldy and Strathtay.

Mack (mawk) n. Adam (17th/18th C.) resident of Denholm, where he was recorded in 1718 and 1722. His children included: Jane (b.1718); and John (b.1722). Other children, baptised in Cavers, who could be his include Margaret (b.1707) and Adam (b.1711). Adam (18th C.) from Cavers Parish, he married Margaret Henderson in Roberton in 1749. John (b.1825) son of John and Mary Colledge. He was a grocer and mason in Denholm. He was recorded around Canongate in 1861. In 1850 in Hobkirk Parish he married Jane Bane, and their children included: Janet (b.1851); Mary (b.1853); Emily (b.1856); Agnes; and John (b.1861). In 1867 he secondly married Euphemia Dickson (who was a widow of John Rutherford), and had a second family: Jane (b.1868); Catherine (b.1870); Robert Dickson (b.1871); and Grace (b.1873). She kept a shop in Denholm, which sold 'taffy', scones, etc. William (16th C.) listed as 'William Mak', along with 15 other people who occupied Newton in Bedrule in 1531 (it is unclear precisely what his surname was).

Mackay (mu-kI) n. Daniel Neil 'Neil' (1928–96) born at 10 Slitrig Crescent, where his father was Burgh Foreman, he was son of draper William Gibson. He was educated at Hawick High School and the Royal High School in Edinburgh and served with the Royal Signals in Sri Lanka. On returning to Hawick he ran the family draper's shop in Croft Road, and later moved it to North Bridge Street, near the Baptist Opening. He was elected Town Councillor in 1969 and served the Town as Dean of Guild. He was also a Justice of the Peace and later a county councillor, as well as Vice-Chairman of Roxburgh District Council until 1980. He was additionally Chairman of Hawick Chamber of Trade and was an instigator for the twinning of Hawick with Bailleul. He was also a member of Lodge St. John 111. He was a keen writer, originating the 'Janus' column in the Hawick News. He also played piano and wrote the song 'Home By Burnfoot'. He was Town Councillor for Burnfoot Ward when he wrote the song, which won a contest set by Burnfoot Residents' Association. He died at 5 Wilton Glebe and is buried in Wilton Cemetery. Rev. Donald (1817–75) son of Dr. George from Rafford, Moray, he studied in Aberdeen and Edinburgh. He was assistant at Drainie (Lossiemouth) and became a Free Kirk minister there in 1844. He resigned because of ill-health in 1852, but accepted a call to Newcastleton Free Kirk in 1856. He remained until 1860, when he moved to Rafford as his father's successor. He married Sophia Wood in Dumfries in 1861, but they appear to have had no children. Rev. Donald from Dalrymple, he became minister at Burnfoot in 1966. Hugh Hawick's Deputy Librarian for many years, and long-time committee member of the Archæological Society. He moved to Hawick in 1974 and retired from the Library after serving for 25 years. He wrote the introduction to the collection of David Hill's writings in 2011. James W. (19th C.) teacher at Lilliesleaf School in the 1860s. He also served as Registrar and Inspector of Poor for the Parish. Neil see Daniel Neil. William (19th C.) saddler recorded on Douglas Square in Newcastleton in the 1860s. He could be the same man as the Irish railway worker residing in the village in 1861 (also written 'MacKay').

Mackenzie (mu-ken-zee) n. Rev. Alexander (18th C.) minister from Edinbrugh. He married Margaret, daughter of Dr. William Rutherford of Barnhills. His wife inherited $\frac{1}{3}$ of Barnhills, and he purchased the other $\frac{2}{3}$ from his sisters-in-law, Helen and Jean in the late 1730s. He also held lands at Auldsmeeton. In 1749 Barnhills was sold to John Callender, W.S., then immediately to John Mackenzie (possibly a relative) of Devlin and then Rev. Walter Stewart, minister of Ashkirk. Elizabeth Toll-keeper and early member of Allars Kirk. Rev. George Omond (1893–1943) son of John and Janet Ormond, he was educated at George Watson's and Edinburgh University. He was licensed in 1922, became assistant at Kirkintilloch and was translated from Methil to become minister of Minto Kirk in 1927. He demitted in 1935 and was admitted to Nicolson Street Church, Edinburgh, in 1939. He married Isabella Jopp Spence and their children were: Ian Gordon (1916–80); Thomas Spence Seaforth (1917–23); George Fingal (1920–45), killed when his ship was torpedoed; Gilbert Omand (1921–2003); Kenneth Macbeth (1923–1992); and Ella Jean Christine (b.1926). James (d.1744) son of George, Earl of Cromarty. He was known as Lord Royston. He was one of the Commissioners for letting the Duchess of Buccleuch's lands in Scotland, serving in this capacity 1711–31. In 1725 the Hawick Kirk Session wrote to him asking for assistance with the many poor people in the Parish. There are many letters in existence from the Duchess to him, covering that time period. In about 1730 she wrote about several matters including thanking him 'for buying that peece of ground in Hauick. 'Tis most convenient for me of anie thing belonging to that litll howse' (presumably referring to land adjacent to Drumlanrig's Tower). Rev. Laurence (1816–69) son of Andrew of Greenburn. He studied at St. Andrews University 1831–9, and was a Probationer within Perth Presbytery for many years before being ordained as a minister. He was presented to Ashkirk Parish by Gilbert, Earl of Minto in 1843 after John Edmondston walked out with much of the congregation at the Disruption. He was deprived in 1854 and died unmarried in Crieff (see also McKenzie).

Mackintosh (ma-kin-tosh) n. Angus (19th C.) factor to the Earl of Minto in the 1860s. He thus served as Chairman of the Parochial Board. He lived at Minto Cleuchhead, but must have taken over from Ephraim Selby after 1861. William (18th C.) house servant at Synton in 1778 and 1779, when he was working for Alexander Scott of Synton (also spelled ‘McIntosh’ and variants).

Mackside (mawk-sīd) n. farm a little to the east of Hobkirk and Wolfelee, once part of the Barony of Abbotrule. Peter Turnbull is recorded there in 1502. It was acquired by Adam French from the monks of Jedburgh Abbey in 1569. The superiority was still with the Lordship of Jedburgh in 1587. John Turnbull was there in 1603 and David Turnbull in 1611, Patrick Turnbull in 1618 and Lawrence Turnbull in 1622. It is probably the ‘Laird of Toft’s Turnbull’s ...side’ recorded in the 1643 county valuation, valued at £100; Gavin Turnbull was also there (with land valued at £24) and Janet Home was liferenter (with land valued at £50). It was among lands whose superiority was inherited by daughters of George Scott (brother of Sir Walter of Whitslade) in 1670. The lands (or perhaps their superiority) were among those inherited by William Kerr of Abbotrule in 1680. Archibald Shiel was a tenant there in 1684 when listed as a fugitive for attending conventicles. John Turnbull and James Oliver were tenant there in 1694, with William Shiel, Margaret Dickson, William Scott and Thomas Turnbull all listed as cottars. It was sold by William Kerr of Abbotrule to William Elliot of Wolfelee in 1751, becoming part of the Wolfelee estate for the next century and a half. It was listed among the properties of Cornelius Elliot of Woollee in 1788 (in also 1811), with a value (along with Blackcleuchmouth) of £166 15s 4d. Francis Turnbull was servant there in 1797, and Robert Scott in 1799 and Alexander Goodfellow and Alexander Fulton in 1801. It was briefly lived in by James, the 3rd Laird of Wolfelee, while the main house was being built in the 1820s, and again by Mrs. Elliot of Wolfelee during renovations in 1862. There were Turnbells there in early 17th century and the tenant was John Mair in the mid-17th century, John Sharp in the mid-18th century and Turnbells again in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. The farm was quite extensive and for a fraction of the 19th century was let out as grassland. Robert Allan was farmer in 1868. Tenants in the late 19th and early 20th centuries were Mr. Clark and then Mr. Logan. There was also once probably a small threshing mill there, powered by water from a pond. There was also once a toll-bar on the road near here (also spelled ‘Maxside’ and variants, it was ‘maxsyd’ in 1502, ‘Maxsyde’ in 1569, ‘Maxsyde’ in 1588, ‘Maiksyde’ in 1603, ‘M’syd’ in 1618, ‘Maksyde’ in 1626, ‘Machsyde’ in 1653, ‘Macksyd’ in 1670, ‘Mac-side’ in 1684, ‘Macksyde’ and ‘maxside’ in 1694 and ‘Maxside’ in 1797; it occurs on Gordon’s c. 1650 map as ‘Maxsyd’ and on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Maxsyde’, although is marked too far north; the origin of the name is probably ‘the slope belonging to Maccus’, from a variant of the personalname Magnus, cf. ‘Maxpoffle’ and ‘Maxwell-heugh’ near Kelso).

Mackside Moss (mawk-sīd-mos) n. former common near Mackside. Part of the land there was used for the manse of Wolfelee Free Kirk.

Macksideshaw (mawk-sīd-shaw) n. former steading near Mackside. Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs had a charter of the lands (along with Wells) in 1659. It was later part of the estate of Wolfelee (recorded in 1659 and 1730).

Mackside Toll Bar (mawk-sīd-tōl-bawr) n. former toll-house near Mackside, on the Wolfelee estate. There were Thomsons there in the late 1800s.

MacLean (mu-klān) n. Sorley (1911–96) Scottish poet, born on Raasay. He wrote extensively in Gaelic as well as English, had sympathy with far-left politics and served in the Army in North Africa during WWII. He came to Hawick in October 1939 to teach evacuees, and stayed until about the following June. During this period he wrote most of his renowned ‘Dàin do Eimhir’ poems.

MacLeod (muk-lowd) n. Scott (1979–) born in Hawick and educated at the High School, he was a lock in rugby. He played basketball and golf at school, but joined the Trades at the age of 20. He then played for Hawick R.F.C. He joined the Border Reivers in 2002, but left to play for Welsh rugby team the Scarlets and then for Edinburgh Rugby, before moving to Japanese side Kobe Kobelco Steelers and then the Newcastle Falcons. He was first capped for Scotland in 2004 and has 24 caps, including 2 Calcutta Cup wins. He retired from playing in the 2015/6 season and started coaching (also McLeod).

MacLeven (muk-lee-vin) n. Elizabeth ‘Bessie’ (17th/18th C.) from Galloway, she settled at Gornberry in Castleton Parish. She was rebuked by the Session for providing a false ‘testimonial’, and explained how she had had a child out of wedlock and had to move.

Macmaster (muk-maw-stur) n. Rev. Robert (19th C.) listed as 'M'Master', minister of the Hawick Baptist Chapel on Allars Crescent in Slater's 1852 directory. This is probably Baptist minister Robert Paton Macmaster (1830–95), who was born in Ayrshire, became a Baptist and wandered around preaching for a few years, before obtaining his first formal charge at Walsall in about 1853; he married Annie Robertson miller in Edinburgh in 1852, and was later at Coventry, Bristol, Bradford and Darlington. It seems likely that he spent only a short time in Hawick.

Macmillan-Scott (mawk-mi-lin-sko) n. Arthur Francis of Howcleuch and Langlee (1854–1935) 2nd surviving son of Thomas. He was probably born at Harwood in Rulewater. He was educated at Harrow and was Captain in the 2nd Battalion Rifle Brigade and 5th Lancers. He later became a member of the Scottish Bar and then farmed sheep in Australia for a while. He was then involved in Toynbee Hall (the original 'settlement house' for the middle class to live and provide direct aid in poor neighbourhoods) in East London. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1896. He inherited Howcleuch and Langlee from his uncle Charles Scott. In 1899 he married Louisa Leslie Florence, daughter of Henry Strickland Bryant of the Education Department. As a Reserve he was sent to fight in the Boer War in 1900, becoming Captain and receiving the South African Medal. His wife joined him in South Africa for over a year.

Katherine Jane nee Roberts (d.1913) daughter of Capt. Browne Roberts of the East India Company, who was Sheriff of Calcutta. In 1844 she married the Laird of Wauchope, Thomas. She painted a sketch of Wauchope House in 1848. She had 3 sons and 3 daughters. Her name is also written 'Catherine'. She lived at Wauchope after her husband's death, and is recorded as proprietor there in a directory of 1868. She later moved to Pinnaclehill, near Kelso. Thomas, J.P. (1816–62) of Wauchope and Pinnaclehill, eldest son of Walter the 4th Laird. He was educated at Loretto, trained as a lawyer, apprenticed to Larence Davidson and Thomas Syme, and became Writer to the Signet in 1838. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1841. In 1844 he married Katherine Jane, daughter of Capt. Browne Roberts from Kent (who had been High Sheriff of Calcutta); his sister-in-law Margaret Amelia

Macmorland

Roberts later married his brother Charles of Langlee. They lived in Edinburgh and then at Harwood House, where most of his family was born. Quiet in manner, it is said that the secluded country life suited him. He succeeded to Wauchope after the death of his father in 1857 and moved there. He also held part of Weensland that had previously belonged to Archibald Dickson. He assumed the Macmillan surname after inheriting his maternal grandfather's estate of Shorthope. His children were: Walter (b.1846), who died in infancy; another Walter (b.1848), who succeeded; Arthur Francis (b.1854); Edith Marion (b.1851), who married Maj.-Gen. Frederick Edward Sotheby from Northamptonshire; Marion Maude, who died unmarried; and Katherine Margaret, who died young after joining a sisterhood in England. Thomas Alexander Frederick (1881–c.1952) 7th Laird of Wauchope and Pinnaclehill, son of Walter. He was educated at Eton and trained as an English lawyer. He let Wauchope out for shooting. He sold it about 1936. He married Karen Anna Erichsen in 1912 and secondly in 1918 married Enid Cynthia Paine. His son was Walter Theodore Robin. Walter (1848–1901) 6th Laird of Wauchope and also of Pinnaclehill, son of Thomas. He was born in Edinburgh (but baptised in Harwood) and educated at Harrow and Cambridge University. He became Lieutenant in the 6th Dragoon Guards and later served as Captain of the Scottish Borderers Militia, based in Dumfries. He had a new house built at Wauchope about 1875. Regarded as reserved like his father, he was fond of reading and also rode with the Blackmoorvale hounds. He was Justice of the Peace for Selkirkshire and Chairman of the Hobkirk School Board. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1869. In about 1874 he is recorded as owner of the estate of Wauchope. In 1888 he was the first County Councillor elected for Hobkirk Parish. He left Wauchope for Bournemouth due to failing health, and died there. In 1876 he married Antoinetta, eldest daughter of Theodore Henry Dury of Bonsall, Derbyshire. His children were: Thomas Arthur Frederick; and Cecille Margaret, who married Cmdr. James Tancred of the Royal Navy.

Macmorland (muk-mōr-lind) n. John Peter (1839–93) son of Peter minister of North Berwick, he was educated in Edinburgh, graduating with his B.D. in 1865. He was licensed by Dunbar Presbytery and became minister of Minto Kirk in 1865. He married Elizabeth Macdonald (who died in 1917), daughter of Eaglesfield

Macmorrin

Bradshaw Smith of Blackwood House and their only child was Elizabeth Philadelphia Macdonald Lockhart, who married William Higgin of Belfast. Alexander Galloway became his assistant and successor in 1878, and he died in Switzerland (also written 'McMorland').

Macmorrin (muk-mo-rin) n. William (d.c.1408) cleric of Glasgow Diocese, whose name has variant spellings, such as 'McMoyn'. He held the position of Archdeacon of Teviotdale sometime shortly before 1408. He may also have been Archdeacon of Glasgow in about 1403.

MacNee (muk-nee) n. Daniel (d.c.1860) preacher at Teviothead from 1847, probably until it became a new Parish in 1850. He then emigrated to Hamilton, Ontario, but later returned to Scotland and died in Edinburgh. George Fraser (1863–1905) born in Wilton, son of Robert and Jemima Fraser. He was a student teacher at Buccleuch School, before moving to Edinburgh where he became Secretary to the Church of Scotland Committee on Education. He was also Vice-President of the Edinburgh Borders Union, organising their Hawick nights. He may have written the article on Hawick Common Riding for the Edinburgh Despatch in 1891. He presented the Cornet with a new Sash in 1898 (on behalf of Teries in Edinburgh), and was a member of the Callants' and Archæological Clubs. A keen walker of Border hills, he once walked from Hawick to Newcastle in a single day. He also walked Hadrian's Wall extensively and gave illustrated lectures on it. He was also a keen Volunteer, becoming Captain of College Company 4th Volunteer Battalion Royal Scots. He was said to be of a happy and generous disposition and have a boyish enthusiasm for his native town. He died in a shooting accident (his trigger apparently caught on a twig when he was shooting rabbits at Corstorphine) and was buried with military honours in the Wellogate. The MacNee Fountain was erected in his memory by public subscription. Robert (19th C.) married Jemima Fraser in Wilton in 1851. She was daughter of frameworker Peter Fraser.

the MacNee Fountain (thu-muk-nee-fown'-in) n. ornate grey granite drinking fountain in Wilton Lodge Park, near Langlands Bridge. It was erected by public subscription in 1906 in memory of George Fraser MacNee. It is inscribed with a quote from Charles Dickens: 'In Love of Home, the Love of Country takes its rise'.

MacNeill (muk-neel) n. Jessie (1853–1922) younger daughter of Bedrule Schoolmaster William. From 1882 she assisted her father as sewing mistress. After his death in 1893 she stayed on for a short time, but then became sick-nurse for a farmer in Southdean called Riddell. Late in life she married Denholm postman Hugh Rigby. William (1814–1893) from Tranent in East Lothian, son of David and Frances Fraser. He became teacher at Longniddry in 1844 and then was teacher at Cogsmill from 1849. A few years later he moved to Bedrule School, where he was schoolmaster for 38 years. He also served as Registrar for the Parish, as well as Session Clerk, Inspector of the Poor and Clerk of the School Board. In 1843 he married Helen Imrie (who died in 1878). Their children included: Mary (b.1844); David (b.1845); Frances (b.1847), who married Archibald Stewart; Alexander (b.1849); Helen (b.1851), who married William Cairns Robson; Jessie (b.1853), who married Hugh J. Rigby of Denholm; and William (b.1857), who died in his teens. His wife worked as an assistant at Bedrule School, but after her death he was denied a request for an assistant. After he resigned and was reinstated, he was able to hire his daughter Jessie as a sewing mistress from 1882. He complained about the state of the schoolhouse in 1892 and retired later that year. The family are buried in Bedrule churchyard (also written 'MacNeil' and 'McNeil').

Macomie (ma-kō-mee) n. William (17th C.) resident of the former Hassendean Parish. He married Jean Burn in Robertson in 1685 and their children included: John (b.1665); Janet (b.1685); and James (b.1688). The witnesses in 1688 were John and James Martin. His surname could be a variant of 'McCombe'.

MacQueen (mu-kween) n. Robert (1722–99) advocate of Edinburgh who acted as official council for Hawick in the action regarding the Division of the Common raised in 1767. In 1768 he gave his opinion that the case was unclear, stating that 'on the one hand, that the town hath considered themselves as proprietors of the Commonty ... but, on the other hand, the Duke has brought a pretty strong proof that his tenants for time immemorial have been in use to pasture, and to cast peats, &c'. He was consulted again in 1774, by which time he was of the opinion that the neighbouring land owners had a claim and suggested that the Town should offer to concede $\frac{1}{3}$ of the Common to save expense. He was known as a brilliant lawyer, who was coarse, heavy-drinking and extremely popular. He was afterwards Lord Braxfield, becoming infamous as a judge who was fond of savage punishments, e.g. sentencing reformer Thomas Muir to transportation. He was the original of R.L. Stevenson's 'Weir of Hermiston' and the 'Jolly Judge' pub in Edinburgh was named after him. Rev. Richard Rose (b.1833) born at Braemar, he was a missionary involved with the Free Kirk in Hawick. He studied at Edinburgh University. He became the first ordained minister of the West Port Free Church in 1869, staying for only a few years. In 1870 he married Margaret Phillips, widow of brewer George Henry King. He left Hawick in 1872 to move to Dundee and then was translated to Knockando in 1875 (also spelled 'McQueen').

MacQuoid (mu-kwoid) n. Peter Craik (b.1895) born on the Isle of Wight and licensed to preach by Edinburgh Presbytery in 1921. Probably his first charge was as assistant in Hawick. He moved to become minister at Bothkennar in 1924 and went to Turriff in 1927.

MacRae (muk-rā) n. Rev. Dr. John (1815–92) native of Glasgow (born on Burns birthday), he was the son of James, a Glasgow shoemaker. He was educated at Glasgow University and licensed by that Presbytery. He succeeded Wallace as Minister of Hawick Parish at the Disruption of 1843 and remained for almost 50 years. He lived in the Manse on Buccleuch Road. He moved from St. Mary's to the new Old Parish Church in 1844. His time as minister also saw the creation of the separate congregations of St. Mary's and St. John's. He was the instigator for the founding of the Industrial School (later Drumlanrig) and also served as an Orrock Trustee. He was one of the most scholarly preachers of his age, receiving an honorary Doctor of Divinity from Glasgow University in 1864. He also founded the Blantyre Mission in British Central Africa (now Malawi). A disagreement with his assistant (J.A. Birrell) in 1881 resulted in part of the congregation leaving to form Wellington Church. He was a highly respected figure in Hawick, projecting an air of old-time dignity (and argued against instrumental music as late as 1882). He laboured under a lameness of foot, and was supposed to have said 'if it had not been for this I would have been a soldier'. He married Margaret, daughter of Archibald MacLachlan of Helensburgh (and she died childless in 1882). A memorial ward at the Cottage Hospital was erected in his memory, along with a tombstone in the Wellogate Cemetery, a memorial brass plaque in the Church, and communion cups from his congregation. His publications include 'Sermons' (published in Hawick, 1851), 'Sermon for the National Fast' (1854), 'The Scripture Law of Marriage' (Hawick, 1861 and 1862), 'Sermon on the Completion of the Fortieth Year of his Ministry' (Hawick, 1883), 'Sermon on the Death of the Duke of Buccleuch and Queensberry' (Hawick, 1884), 'Sermon on the Death of H.R.H. Prince Leopold' (Hawick, 1884), 'Sermon on the Life and Character of General Gordon' (Hawick, 1885), 'Sermon on the Disestablishment and Religious Equality' (Hawick, 1885), 'Funeral Sermon on the Life and Character of the Rev. James Stewart, Minister of Wilton' (Hawick, 1886) and 'Sermon on the Life and Character of Her Gracious Majesty the Queen' (Hawick, 1887) (also written 'Macrae').

MacRae's Band (muk-rāz-bawnd) n. popular name for a choir that started in the Parish Church in the mid-19th century when Rev. MacRae was Minister. They practised every Saturday night in the old Parish School in Orrock Place, and were later disbanded.

Mactaggart (muk-taw-gur') n. Bruce see W. Bruce. Ian C. (1900/1–1965) son of Robert and Mary Aikman, he was Cornet in 1928. Events at his year as Common Riding were recorded on a silent black and white film. He won the Medway Cup outright at the Common Riding Races of 1933, winning on Rufus for the third time (after victories in 1929 and 1932, and coming second in 1930 and 1931). In 1934 it was replaced by the Rufus Trophy and won by him on Rufus! In 1966 the Medway trophy was returned by his wife for competition. He was Callants' Club President in 1955. He was Managing Director of Mactaggart Brothers, wool merchants, seeling the firm in 1964. He served as chief executive officer for wool control in Scotland during WWII. He married Jessie S. Borland and they are both buried in Denholm. They had 2 daughters, Fiona and Ann. Robert Lamb Watson (1870–1949) son of Robert Lamb Watson and Mary Jane Alexander Main, and brother of William Alexander Main. He was born in Duddingston, Midlothian and became a manager at Pringle's in Hawick. He married Mary Helen ('Nellie') Aikman. Their children were: James (d.1956); Ian (1900/1–65); and Mamie. He secondly married Hyndmer Hewatt, and their children included Arthur Crosbie (1918–42), who died at El Alamein. William Alexander Main (b.1868) born in Glasgow, son of Robert Lamb Watson (also the name of his brother) and Mary Jane Alexander Main. He was a businessman who established the skinworks Mactaggart Brothers. In 1903 he married

Mary Jane Cooper, and their children included William Alexander and Mary Bryson. William Alexander, C.B.E., J.P. 'Wullie' or 'Wullie Mac' (1906–2002) born at Braeside, Weensland Road, son of William Alexander Main and Margaret Jane Cooper. He was educated in Melrose and at Sedbergh School. He took up rugby and first played for Hawick R.F.C. at 17. He was part of the team that won all the 'sevens' in 1927. Instead of following in the family business he joined Pringle's in 1925 as a trainee manager, becoming Director in 1932 and joint Managing Director (with Arthur Oddy) in 1933 at the age of only 27. In 1936 he convinced the other directors to change the name from 'Robert Pringle & Sons' to just 'Pringles' and to diversify into fashion knitwear. He served with the K.O.S.B. territorial battalion 1926–33 and was put in charge of the Hawick Air Training Corps in 1939, later serving with the R.A.M.C. in Europe. He became sole Managing Director in 1945, following the resignation of Oddy. He then led the company to enormous post-war success, becoming Chairman of the Board in 1960. He resigned as Managing Director in 1968, following the take-over by Dawson International, but he remained as Chairman until 1969. During his time in charge the workforce increased from 200 to 2,000 and the firm essentially cornered the worldwide market in fashion knitwear for golfers. He is said to have a very 'hands-on' approach to management, regularly walking on the shop-floor and talking individually to the workers. He received the C.B.E. in 1964 for services to industry. He was Cornet in 1930. He was also briefly on the Town Council, and involved with the Callants' Club, Vertish Hill Sports and Buccleuch Hunt. He contributed funds to establish the Hawick Youth Centre, and he and his wife donated stained glass windows to Lilliesleaf Church. He was President of Hawick R.F.C. in 1972, its centenary year. He married his Cornet's Lass Marjorie Laing Innes, and she died in 1998. The family settled at Bewlie. Their children were: Bruce; Alan; and Claire. He lived at Bewlie House. W. Bruce (1933–) son of Wullie. He joined Pringle's as a trainee in 1951, becoming a Director in 1964 and Managing Director in 1969. He was Cornet in 1954 and Acting Father in 1971 (to the son of his own Acting Father, John P. Martin). He married Sheila Tait and had 2 sons and 2 daughters. He was the Jubilee Cornet in 2004 and Jubilee Acting Father in 2021.

Mactaggart's (muk-taw-gurtz) n. skinworks, built on land off Albert Road, which had previously been the site of Albert Mills. The skinworks had also previously been off St. George's Lane. It closed in the early 1970s, and was demolished to make way for a supermarket and housing built in 1977 – ... Built where McTaggart's men, Worked wi' skins wi' weary fingers, When the wund blaws the right way, The smell still lingers' [IWL].

magic lantern (maw-jeek-lan-turn) n. former name for a slide projector, particularly with mounted glass slides, which became popular in Victorian times. ‘Magic lantern shows’ caused a sensation when they first appeared in the late 19th century, essentially a forerunner of the cinema. There are records of large turnouts for such shows in Hawick, and many slides from around 1900 survive in the Museum, most made by D. Gaylor.

Magistrate (maw-jis-trā) n. formerly one of two officers, the Senior Magistrate and the Junior Magistrate, elected annually by the Burgesses to enforce laws with the town. The word was synonymous with ‘Baillie’ for most of Hawick’s recorded history. Typically each Magistrate would serve for 2 years (with the election in early October), first as Junior and then as Senior Magistrate, although there were exceptions to this. Because of the specific wording of Hawick’s Charter, the Magistrates exercise a jurisdiction similar to that of Magistrates in a Royal Burgh, and in former times they had a great amount of leeway in administering justice. In the 17th and 18th centuries there were often disputes over jurisdiction, with Hawick residents being forbidden from appealing to any other courts (i.e. the Baron Baillie or the Sheriff) than the Hawick Magistrates Court. During the 18th century it was common for the magistrates also to keep an inn where local disputes would be settled and much of the business of the Town carried out; there was criticism that they profitted from the Town’s business. Before there was a Provost, the Senior Magistrate was the highest elected official in town. After the reconstitution of the council in 1861 there were 4 magistrates. The Magistrates would sit on the bench to deal with local legal matters, although they were also Justices of the Peace only in fairly recent times. Their legal jurisdiction only extended to the Burgh boundaries (formerly synonymous with Baillie).

magistracie (maw-jis-tri-see) n., arch. the office of a magistrate, the magistrates collectively – ‘...conform to the ancient pratique of this burgh since the first ryse and beginning of magistracy within the same’ [BR1673], ‘...even to the comitting of some ryott, abusing of Magistracie and almost to the effusione of blood’ [BR1706], ‘...that whosoever has a mind to set up for the Magistracy, and peuther for it, shall be put in the Bailies’ Leet without any objection’ [BR1756] (also written ‘magistracy’).

the Magna Charta (thū-mawg-na-chawr-ta) n. name sometimes formerly used for the Charter of 1537 granted by James Douglas of Drumlanrig to the inhabitants of the Burgh of Hawick.

Mag Nichol’s Trough (mawg-ni-kulz-trof) n. popular name for a former public water supply near the head of the Loan. Also sometimes called ‘Jamie Nichol’s Trough’. There was also a private supply nearby that was used by the Nichols.

maidenheid (mā-din-heed) n., arch. maidenhood.

the Maidens (thu-mā-dinz) n. the Maiden Paps, south of Hawick and prominent along the Newcastleton Road. Like several of the higher peaks in the area, these hills are formed from igneous rocks. The heights of the 2 peaks are 510 m (1,677 ft) and 505 m (1,650 ft). Their double peaks are a distinctive feature of the skyline to the south (marked ‘Maiden papes hills’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

the Maiden Paps (thu-mā-din-pawps) n. another name for the Maidens – ‘It rows aboot, it trows aboot, Baith near and far awa’; Whiles it is on the Maiden’s Paps, And whiles on Ruberslaw’ [TCh] (it is ‘Maiden Pups’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

the Maiden Way (thu-mā-din-wā) n. ancient road passing nearby to Hawick, believed to pre-date the Romans. There may be more than one road given this name. The local one passes through the head of Liddesdale and across the hills to the west of Dodburn, being used as a drove road until relatively recent times. This has been suggested as the northern extension of the road of the same name, which crosses the Penines (being part of the Penine Way near Alston), passing near Bewcastle and on through the South Tyne valley. The ‘Thief’s Road’ may have followed a similar path (the origin is probably Old Welsh for ‘elevated’ rather than being related to the English word).

maidicine (mā-dee-sin, -di-seen) n. medicine – ‘... Jimmy Black, the Nobel Prize for Maidicine winner’ [IWL].

the Maids o Honour (thu-mād-ō-on-ur) n. a group of single women selected by the Cornet’s Lass to assist at the Colour Bussing (and Overseas Night the evening before). They follow her in with the Flag, and pin ribbons on the Cornet’s supporters. Their role in the Colour Bussing and in decorating the Principals’ coats with ribbons goes back at least to the beginning of the 19th century. The number is fixed at 22, 10 selected by the Cornet and his Lass, 5 each by the Right-and

the Maid o Wudfit (thu-mād-ō-wud-fi) n. beauty of the Borthwick in the latter part of the 19th century, written of in 2 poems by Thomas Chapman, ‘Lizzie’ and ‘The Maid o’ Woodfit’ – ‘Out in the garden, with roses In blossom around her doth sit, The fair, matchless maiden o’ Teviot, Sweet Lizzie, the pride o’ Woodfit’ [TCh].

maig (māg) n., arch. a hand, particularly a large ungainly one – ‘Haud aff yer maigs, man’ [JoJ], ‘... maigit (mā-gee, -gi) pp., arch. mugged, overhanded – ‘He’s maigit that bit flesh sae, that I’ll hae nane o’t’ [JoJ], ‘Rowe some broon paiper roond eer buik; it’ll aye keep eet threh geetin maigeet’ [ECS] (cf. muggit).

maigmaiden (māg-mā-din) n., arch. a handmaiden – ‘... gie thy strenth untill thy servent, an’ saufe the son o’ thy maigmayden’ [HSR].

mail (māl) n., arch. a meal, repast, quantity of milk yielded by a cow at a single milking – ‘The cow’s mail’ [GW], ‘A guid mail’ [GW] (also written ‘mael’; Leyden has this meaning the rent of a cow’s walk or grass, but E.C. Smith notes that locally these are ‘cow’s gang’ or ‘cow’s gress’; see also mail o meat).

mail (māl) n., arch. rent, a levied contribution – ‘... for the male of twenty schillingis in the yere and for ilk yere of the saide nyntene yerris of th vsuale mone of Scotlande ...’ [DoR1445], ‘Item, thair wes awing be the said vmquhile Walter to Gedioun Murray his half-bruther, for the males of Glenpoyt ...’ [SB1574], ‘... at twa termes in the zeir, Witsunday and Mertimes in winter, be equall portionis, of maill, gif it beis askit allanerlie ...’ [SB1591], ‘For a barne mail, £3 12s., all for a year’ [BR1638], ‘... the stable which he had taken, was in peaceable possession of, and paid mails for ...’ [BR1707], ‘The council appropriate 5 merks for the help of the mail of a house for an English school’ [BR1715], ‘... put his sheep to pasture with the tenants’ sheep, and paid them grass mail for the same’ [C&L1767] (from Old English; see also ‘mailin’).

the Mail (thū-māl) n. name for one of the 2 mail coaches operating between Carlisle and Edinburgh in the early-to-mid 1800s. This daily service commenced in about 1807, enhancing the previous stage coach, which only ran 2 or 3 times a week. It is listed in Pigot's 1825/6 directory, along with the other, the Sir Walter Scott. At that time it was leaving daily for Carlisle at midnight and for Edinburgh at 4 p.m.

Mailchester Park (māl-ches-tur-pawrk) n. former name for lands in Minto Parish, recorded in 1779, valued at £29 4s, and liferented by Lord Westhall. In 1811 it was 'Mail Chester Park' owned by Lord Minto. The lands were adjacent to Hawthorn Park, bounded by Kames farm, the Grinding Burn, Minto Glebe, Hawdean Syke, Langlands, Noteman's Shott, Quicksands, Hillend Parks and Muir Parks.

Mailieshope (mā-leez-hōp) n. former name for an area behind the Wellogate – '... a lane which runs east from the Wellogate Road, just before descending into the How of Mailieshope' [JAHM].

the Maimory o Drumlanrig (thū-mā-mur-ee-ō-drum-lan-reeg) n. another name for the Silent Toast.

main (mān) n., poet. might, strength in combat – '...And sae they fled wi' all their main, Down ovr the brae like clogged bees' [CPM], 'They ran their horse on the Langholm howm, And brak their spears wi' meikle main ...' [CPM].

Main (mān) n. Agnes (17th C.) listed among the poor living at Hassendean on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Andrew (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Whithope in 1722, Borthwickbrae in 1724 and Whithope in 1728. In 1720 he married 'Manny Whitt' (presumably Many White), who was also from Robertson. He may also have married Janet Scott in Robertson in 1727. His children included: Janet (b.1722); John (b.1724); Hugh (b.1728); and James (b.1730). Andrew (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Muselee in 1741. He is probably the Andrew who married Margaret Easton in Robertson in 1736. His children included: Margaret (b.1741); and Helen (b.1745). He is surely related to the earlier Andrew. Isobel (17th/18th C.) recorded receiving money from Ashkirk Parish in 1727. James (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish, when it contained Hassendean. He was married in 1687, although his wife's name is then blank. His wife was Isobel Martin and their daughter Bessie was baptised in 1688, with witnesses John Dodds and Adam Craig. Probably the same James married Helen Pott in Robertson in 1689. He may also be the James whose son John was baptised in Robertson in 1702. He witnessed a baptism for Adam Craig and Isobel Main (surely a relative) in 1688. John (18th C.) gardener in Ormiston. In 1728 in Cavers Parish he married Agnes Elliot. His children included Richard (b.1731) and Marion (b.1732). Richard (17th/18th C.) resident of Earlside in 1708 when his son Thomas was baptised in Cavers Parish. Other children were: Agnes (b.1710) and James (b.1722). Richard (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He was at Kershope 'Easter' in 1768 and Sundhope in 1770. Probably the same Richard was shepherd at Whitropefoot, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He married Elizabeth Amos and their children included: William (b.1761); Helen (b.1763); Robert (b.1766); Mary (b.1768); and Jean (b.1770). William (18th C.) resident of Southdeanrig in 1724, 1726 and 1729. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included: James (b.1724); Agnes (b.1726); Richard (b.1729); and Isabel (b.1732) (also written ‘Maine’; see also Mein).

Mainchester (mān-ches-tur) n. Manchester, a city in north-western England, a major manufacturing centre since the 18th century – ‘Huz and Mainchester carried the Reform Bill’ [T].

mainer (mā-nur) n., t., arch. manure (note accent on 2nd syllable).

Mainetti’s (mi-ne’-eez) n. plastics manufacturers, with a factory in Hawick since the mid-1990s. The original local factory was established in Jedburgh in 1979, followed by a small Hawick factory in 1992. A new Hawick factory was built in 1998/9 at Haughhead, on the site of the former Town Dump, and specializes in telecommunications ducting.

Mains see Borthwick Mains

Mains see Cavers Mains

Mains (māns) n. farm near old Castleton. There are enclosures, field boundaries and earthworks nearby, close to the old railway line. It is recorded in the ballad ‘Hobbie Noble’ that ‘Sim o’ the Mains’ was the betrayer of Hobbie. In the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale it is ‘Manys’, with value 10 shillings and 8 pence, and tenanted by Thomas Armstrong. David Elliot ‘in the Manis’ was recorded in 1586/7. A later Thomas Armstrong ‘of Maynes’ was recorded in 1590. ‘Gilbert Elliot of the Maynis’ is recorded in 1599. James Murray was there in 1682. Adam Murray and Quentin Crozier were there in 1694. George Irvine was farmer there in 1797. William Thomson was a servant there in 1799 and Thomas Oliver in 1801. William Irving was farmer in 1821 and William Snowden in the 1860s – ‘At Kershope foot the tryste was set, Kershope of the lilye lee; And there was traitor Sim o’ the Mains, And with him a private companie’ [T] (marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map and Stobie’s 1770 map; it was presumably once the ‘home farm’ for the local baron).

the Mains (thū-mānz) n. former local name for Borthwick Mains.

Mains Haugh (mānz-hawch) n. former name for a piece of land in Minto Parish. It was ‘Main’s-haugh’ in 1779, valued at £21 17s 11d and still listed in the Land Tax Rolls of 1811.

Mainshiel Heid (mān-sheel-heed) n. Mainshiel Head, hill on the north side of the Borthwick valley, to the west of Harden and south of Borthwickshiels. It reaches a height of 258 m, although an unnamed peak to the west rises to 274 m. Harden Knowe is essentially its eastern spur.

Mains o Feu-Rule (mānz-ō-few-rool) n. former name for lands in the Barony of Feu-Rule, possibly the same as Hallrule. In 1632 Margaret and Isobella, sisters of Walter Turnbull of Rawflat were each served as ‘heirs portioner’ in a third part of the 10-pound land (of old extent) of ‘vil-lae et Maynes de Feualroull’. Also in 1632 Robert, son of Andrew Ker of Faldonside, inherited part of the ‘Maynes de Fewardail alias Fewroule vocatis Halroule cum molendino’.

the Mains o Wulton (thū-mānz-ō-wul’-in) n. another name for Wulton Mains.

Mains Park (mānz-pawrk) n. former name for a farmstead in Robertson Parish, presumably close to Borthwick Mains. Labourer Thomas Dodds and tailor Thomas Miller were there in 1812.

Main Street (mān-stree) n. street in Denholm that runs along the south side of the Green and is part of the A698. It is also called Eastgate. The houses were all white-washed until into the 20th century. It contains the Cross Keys Inn and the Fox and Hounds Inn and used to have several shops, including the Post Office and 2 butchers. The cobbles were removed in the 1930s. There were railings next to the Green from WWII until the 1960s.

Four hunder Cornets, four hunder an' mair' [JEDM], 'Ye sei, it's a hard job to walk wi' mair than yin at a time' [DH], additionally, furthermore – 'Decerns Andrew Deans, skinner, to content and pay ... £8, 18s., ...; mair 19s. 6d. for the inlack of wool sold to him; mair 36s. given to Walter Scott, called Gray, at his command ...' [BR], n., pron. more – 'That bid's us toil, on, on, frae year to year, Wha's ceaseless cry is, 'Gi'e us mair! mair! mair!' [JoHa], '... Kens weel the gossip o' the place That mak's him smile the mair' [WFC], 'Look about ye, was there ever Vista that could offer mair?' [WL].

mair (mār) n., arch. a moor, broad area of open land, often high and containing boggy regions – 'Where we roam o'er the hill, or tread heather mairs Or walk in the valley among scenes so rare' [JCa] (the spelling and pronunciation are problematic, since muir is often written down although mār is meant; see also moor in place names).

the Mair (thu-mār) n. Hawick Moor, part of the Common, usually referring explicitly to the area containing St. Leonard's race course. This is the location of the main social event of the Common Riding on the Friday and Saturday afternoons (since 1855 and 1868, respectively). Stalls, entertainments, beer tents etc. are in abundance. On Common Riding Friday the Cornet and his followers arrive at the back gate (towards Pilmuir) at about noon. The Cornet then rides round the course with the Flag, followed by the Right- and Left-Hand Men and Acting Father and then the other riders. The 'Big Fower' ride their horses back round the course to the Paddock and the Cornet climbs to the roof of the Committee Room, waving the Flag towards the hillside and then towards the Paddock side, before setting it there for the duration of the races. When he climbs down the Cornet, together with the Acting Father, are presented with riding crops by the Chief Guest. The race meeting then starts in earnest, with both the more serious 'fallping' races and the Cornet's Races (which are only for supporters who have ridden that day). The betting is fiercest on the 'Tradesmen's Handicap'. Before the Cornet has even arrived there has in modern times been a relay race run between children from the primary schools in Hawick. The Cornet leaves the Mair on the Friday at about 4 p.m., exiting by the top gate. Most people usually stay there for much longer, however, and the 'picnics' go on until well into the night if the weather is good. The race meeting starts later on the Saturday. Admission was first charged in 1883. In 1919 no licensed tents were permitted – 'We'll a' hie to the muir a-riding; Drumlanrig gave it for providing' [AB], 'But while the Common-Riding's on there's never yin'll care O' joining Bonnie Chairlie's flag They'll a' be at the Mair' [T] (also known as 'the Muir', 'the Moor' or more formally 'St. Leonard's Park').

Mair (mār) n. Adam (18th/19th C.) weaver in Newcastleton. He was listed among heads of households in 1835. He was surely related to Andrew. Alexander (1776–1842) carrier of Hawick, operating from Backdamgate. In the early 19th century his firm ran a service between Hawick and Galashiels every Tuesday, continuing on to Edinburgh and Leith, amongst other places. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He is listed in Pigot's 1825/6 directory leaving for Edinburgh on Tuesdays and Fridays and returning on Wednesdays and Saturdays, as well as going to Glasgow on Wednesdays. In 1837 he is listed going to Galashiels and Edinburgh every Tuesday. At the 1837 election one of the Tory voters escaped the mob by hiding in his house, which was stated to be 'by the Towerdyke-side'. He is recorded as a carrier near the Crescent (possibly the Mill Path) in 1841. He was heavily involved with the Relief Kirk. He married Elizabeth, daughter of carrier William Wilson, who died in 1847 aged 67. Their children included: William (1809/10–47), innkeeper at Gala Bank; Ann (1812/13–46); John; Janet; and Elizabeth (b.1821/2), who died young. One of his daughters became Mrs. Drummond. Andrew (18th C.) wright in Town-o-Rule. He was a wright in Kirknowe in Hobkirk Parish in 1739 when a child of his 'Naturally begotten' was baptised. His children included Jean (b.1739), John (b.1741), James (b.1743) and Bessie (b.1745). He seems likely to have been related to John, who owned Kirknowe. Andrew (18th C.) married Helen Armstrong in Castleton Parish in 1766. The bride's name is not given. Andrew (18th C.) married Janet Oliver in Hobkirk Parish in 1771. Andrew (b.1794/5) from Newcastleton, he was listed as a weaver among heads of a households in 1835. By 1841 he was a hand-loom weaver in Hawick, living at Lockiesedge, then 5 Bourtree Place in 1851 and 5 O'Connell Street in 1851. His wife was Isabella and their children included Andrew Jr., Adam, Jane and Isabella. Andrew (19th C.) married Janet Elliot in 1846, the marriage being recorded in both Hawick and Wilton Parishes. Gilbert (b.1785/6) born in Castleton Parish. He was an agricultural labourer living at Silverbuthall in 1841 and Wilton Roadhead in 1851. His wife was Margaret, and their children included William, Andrew, Walter, Francis, Thomas and Mary. James (d.1812) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His wife died in 1811 and he followed a year later. He could be the James, son of Andrew born in Hobkirk in 1743. James (b.c.1793) weaver in Wilton. He was listed among heads of households in 1840 and 1841 at Lockiesedge. He was also recorded at Lockiesedge on the 1841 census. His children included David, Catherine, Jane, Agnes, Mary and Margaret. John (17th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His wife was Margaret Scott and their son Thomas was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1673. The witnesses were Richard Elliot and Robert Scott. His name is written 'Mayr'. John (17th C.) recorded as resident at Stonedge on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. His name was listed as 'John Maire Elder', and the 'younger' John who was also there was probably his son. John (17th/18th C.) probably son of John, he was tenant farmer at Mackside. He may be the John 'younger' who was listed along with John 'Elder' at Stonedge in 1694. In 1704 (or perhaps a confirmation of the purchase of 1666) he purchased half the lands of Kirknowe from John Shiel. His son Richard married Janet, only daughter of John Shiel (and probaby grand-daughter of the man he bought the land from). John (18th C.) paid the cart tax in Lilliesleaf Parish in 1785–91. Rev. John (1822–1902) born in Paisley, 3rd son of John. He was educated in Paisley and at Glasgow University and was licensed by Paisley Presbytery in 1845. Then in 1847 he was ordained as assistant and successor at Southdean, and remained there for well over half a century. In 1887 he obtained a doctorate from Glasgow University. In 1871 he married Agnes (who died in 1900), daughter of George Grant of Glasgow, who founded a bursary in her father's name; she was benefactor of the church organ, as well as a bursary at Glasgow University. His publications include 'Memorial Sermon preached in the Old Parish Church of Southdean' (1876), 'Sermon on the Life and Character of Jane Grant' (published in Hawick, 1883), 'Sermon on the Life and Character of James Stewart, Min. of Wilton' (Hawick, 1886), and 'Pulpit Memorail of the Life and Character of the late Rev. John MacRae, D.D., Min. of Hawick (Hawick, 1892). There is a bronze plaque to his memory in Southdean Kirk. Richard (18th C.) significant parishioner of Hobkirk in the early 1700s, described as a 'portioner'. He was son of John, who had purchased half of Kirknowe in Hobkirk Parish. He was recorded as possessor of part of Kirknowe and Kirkstile in 1745. With the permission of his wife Janet Shiel he sold the lands to William Elliot of Wolfelee in 1751. His daughters Jane and Magdalen later possessed a cottage at Kirkstile. Dr. Robert (1864–1902) born in Tarbolton, Ayrshire, son of Archibald and Anne Vass. He graduated M.B. and C.M. from Glasgow University in 1886. He came to Hawick in 1890 to assist Dr. Bannerman, later becoming a partner. He first followed the Cornet in 1891, along with several of the town's other doctors. As well as being a popular doctor, he became a Councilor for North High Street Ward in 1894, serving on the Sanitary Committee and Lunacy Board. This led to him being Cornet in 1896, the only known non-Teri to hold that office. The explanation is that when a last minute Cornet needed to be found he was the only unmarried man on the Council, and was talked into accepting the position. Provost Barrie served as his Acting Father, and it appears that he did not serve as Right- or Left-Hand Man afterwards. He was a keen sportsman, being Captain of the Golf Club, and he was also involved with the Border Rifles and the Masons. He died at age 37 and is buried at Tarbolton. W. (18th/19th C.) teacher in Castleton. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. He could be the William, married to Janet Scott, whose son Andrew was baptised in Castleton in 1820. William (b.1823/4) blacksmith living on Ladylaw Place in 1851. His wife was Ann (also 'Maire' and 'Mayr').

Mairchbank (mārch-bawngk) n. (Marchbank)

David Affleck (b.1862) son of James and Margaret Affleck, he was born in Perth. He was a baker and restauranter at 75 High Street. He married Isabella Scott of Jedburgh. James 'Snuffy' (1829–92) from Maxwelltown, his parents may have been hand-loom weaver Walter and Henrietta Edgar. He appears to have moved to Perth, but returned to Hawick. He married Margaret Affleck (1832–98) in Perth in 1855. Their children included Henrietta Edgar (1856–97), David Affleck (b.1862) and Walter (1871–1924). James (1849/50–c.1905) born in Dove-mountain, he started working for the Hawick Co-operative Society at age 13 as an apprentice grocer, eventually becoming Secretary and Manager in 1887. He was a member of Lodge 111, a keen bowler and cyclist and deacon of St. Andrew's Church. He is buried in Wilton Cemetery (see also Marjoribanks).

Mairchbanks' (mārch-bawngks) n. former tea and lunch rooms, with adjoining bakery, at 75 High Street (the corner with Baker Street). The upstairs tea room was a popular meeting place in the post-War years.

mairriage (mā-reej) n. marriage – 'Cranston tried teh disown the wain an declare the mairreege illegal' [BW], 'The son o a mixed mairriage ...' [IWL], 'The times hae changed, and it's naething now To lichtly cherish the mairriage vow' [WL]. In modern times the favourite day for weddings has been Saturday, but formerly the normal day was the Friday following the 3 proclamations made in church. The ceremony was often preceded by a feet-washing tradition before the hen party, which usually took place on the Tuesday before. Prior to about the mid-19th century marriages in Hawick took place at the Manse, rather than in the Kirk. 'Irregular' marriages were performed in front of witnesses and not by the parish minister; they were common in the 17th and 18th century among the religiously disenfranchised. In the Border Magazine of 1902 there is a description of the practice among local factory workers of stealing the jacket and bonnet of the prospective bride and groom and decorating them with colourful yarn, ribbon and trinkets, to be worn at the dance on the wedding day.

mairriaged (mā-reejd) adj., arch. married – ‘...and purposed to cohabit together as mariaged persones, if not questioned by the magistrate of ye sd. toune’ [BR1689].

Maitland (mā'-lind) n. Barbara 'Babby Mettlin' (17th C.) said to have been housekeeper to the first Laird of Tushielaw (although it is unclear who this may have been). She taught the ballad 'Auld Maitland' to Andrew Moor, who taught it to the Ettrick Shepherd's mother, who recited it to Sir Walter Scott, leading to its publication. Edward Francis (1803–70) born in Edinburgh, he became Solicitor General for Scotland and was raised to the peerage as Lord Barcaple. He was living at Woll, Ashkirk in 1857. Sir Richard of Lethington (1496–1586) Privy Counsellor, Judge and Keeper of the Great Seal for James V, Mary Queen of Scots and James VI. His father, Sir William, had fallen at Flodden, and he married Mary Cranstoun. Becoming blind later in life, he wrote a series of satirical poems, e.g. 'Aganis the Theivis of Liddeadaill', which are important sources of information about the period, and he also importantly collected and preserved early Scots verse. Robert (15th C.) listed among local men as witness to the 1464/5 sasine for the lands of Kirkton Mains and Flex. His name is recorded as 'Roberto Mateland'. William of Lethington (1525–73) son of poet Richard, he was Secretary of State to Mary of Lorraine and also Mary, Queen of Scots. He was often referred to simply as 'Lethington'. He was originally an ally of the Earl of Moray, probably being involved in the murders of Rizzio and Darnley, but later sided with Mary. In 1559 he was appointed along with the Earl of Bothwell and Ker of Cessford to keep order on the Border. He acted to restore Mary to power, but was forced to surrender in a siege at Edinburgh Castle and died in Leith prison.

maitter (mā'-ur) n. matter – ‘...there’s often maitters being discussed that we ken noughts about, and ee wad be best to keep wheest and no’ let on eer ignorance’ [JHH], ‘...Nae maitter how wise an’ expert Ye may be, ye may argue a’ day An’ never a man ye’ll convert’ [FL], v. to matter – ‘...What maitter tho’ my tune be timmer’ [DH], ‘...There was nathing mair excitin’ And naething else wad maitter’ [AY], ‘There was jaist yin cless, didneh maitter the wecht ...’ [BW1974], ‘... Makerstoun (ma-kurz-tin, -toon) n. small parish on the north side of the Tweed, between Dryburgh and Kelso. It contains the village of Mekerstoun, as well as Makerstoun House (the origin of the name is probably ‘Mælcaerf’s fram’; it first appears in 1159 as ‘Malcarvaston’ and in a list from St. Andrews Priory about the same time as ‘Malkaruistun’; the ‘l’ disappeared in the 15th century; it is also written ‘Makerston’, ‘Makeairstoun’, ‘Makkayrstoun’, ‘McCairston’, ‘M’Caristoun’ and other variants; it is ‘Machanstoun’ on Blaeu’s c.1654 map and ‘Maccarstoun’ on Roy’s 1750 map).

Makerstoun Hoose (mawk-ur-stin-hoos) n. house in the parish of Makerstoun, standing in extensive grounds above the Tweed between St. Boswells and Kelso. Originally a tower of the Corbetts was there, it was home to the McDougalls (or Makdougalls) of Makerstoun from 1374. A new house was built on the ruins of a tower destroyed by Hertford’s men in 1545, constructed in 1590, with extensive later renovations. It was rebuilt in 1714 to designs by William Adam (father of Robert) and enlarged into a Victorian mansion in 1812, to plans of Archibald Elliot. The estate passed to Hay-McDougall, then to General Sir Thomas Brisbane, and then the Scotts of Gala, all through marriage. Sir Thomas Brisbane built an observatory in the grounds, where he carried out pioneering observations on magnetism. Although the house burned down in 1970, it was rebuilt to the original design by 1973. On the opposite side of the Teviot stands ‘The Law’, also known as ‘The Pleahill’, probably a Norman motte, where local courts were held.

make up (māk-up) v., arch. to ascend – ‘On the tother hand – the richt – the road wunds aboot the Green an makes up the brae’ [ECS], to plan, arrange, especially in the phrase ‘made it up’ – ‘...two young men, more resolute than their neighbours, ‘made it up’ to go and look in at the old woman’s window’ [EM1820], ‘...but wey made it up that aw was to come ower an’ see Malanoth (ma-la-noth) n. Adam (15th C.) received 2 sheep in the will of Sir David Scott of Branhholme in 1491/2. It is unclear if his surname is a variant of something else.

Malcolm (mawl-kum) n. name of 4 Scottish Kings. Malcolm I (d.954) King of Alba (i.e. northern Scotland) from 943. He signed a treaty with Edward I of England, gaining Strathclyde and Cumbria. He was never the monarch in the Scottish Borders. Malcolm II (d.1034) son of Kenneth III. He fought at the Battle of Carham, the outcome of which merged Strathclyde with Alba, leading to the formation of modern Scotland. He was thus the first 'Scottish' monarch for the Hawick area. Malcolm III (c.1031–93) eldest son of Duncan I, he was King from 1058. He was also known as Malcolm Canmore ('of the large head'). After his father died he took refuge in England, later invading with the help of the noblemen of Southern Scotland and killed Lulach I. He made an alliance with England, and married St. Margaret. It is thought that during this time Middle English became the dominant language in the Scottish Lowlands. In 1072 he was forced to swear allegiance to William I of England, but in 1091 invaded Northumbria and besieged Durham. This attempt to control Northumbria failed when William II of England sent an army north. But he tried again in 1093, besieging Alnwick. However, he was killed there, along with his son Edward. He was succeeded by his younger brother Donald III. Malcolm IV (c.1141–65) grandson of David I, he succeeded to the throne in 1153. Sometimes referred to as 'the Maiden', he died unmarried in Jedburgh and was succeeded by William I. He founded Soutra Hospital in 1164. He also granted additional lands and rights to the monks of Jedburgh Abbey.

Malcolm

Malcolm (mawl-kum) n. George (1722–1803) son of Rev. Robert, minister of Ewes. His father was granted the farm of Burnfoot-in-Ewes and he helped his father to run it and succeeded to the farm. He also merged it with the neighbouring lands of Douglas. He married Margaret Paisley of Craig and had a family of 17. Among these were the '4 knights of Eskdale', namely Col. Sir James, Adm. Sir Pulteney, Vice-Adm. Sir Charles and Gen. Sir John. Sir John (1769–1833) soldier and diplomat from a prominent family based at Burnfoot near Langholm, he and his 3 brothers being called the 'Four Knights of Eskdale'. He entered the military at the age of 12. He served as Governor of Bombay, is buried in Westminster, and had a 100 ft obelisk built in his memory on Whita Hill above Langholm in 1835. In about 1805 he helped the ailing Dr. John Leyden to recover from illness in his home at Seringapatam. He inscribed some complementary lines of verse in Leyden's 'Scenes of Infancy', to which Leyden reciprocated. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. In 1798 he acted as substitute for Alexander Fowler in the ballot for men serving in the Militia. John (19th C.) from Samuelston, he was schoolmaster at Hobkirk from 1857. He had a stove and a porch fitted to the schoolhouse. He taught through the transition from Parish to Board School. He was said to be an excellent teacher, although perhaps pedantic and with a hasty temper. He was keen on teaching his pupils about Border history. He was Secretary of the Border Association of Teachers. He married the sister of Daniel Henderson of the Bonchester Bridge Inn and they had children. He died at about age 50 and is buried in Hobkirk Kirkyard. Rev. Robert (1687/8–1761) son of David from the Lochore family. He graduated from St. Andrews University in 1707, became tutor to Lord President Dalrymple and was licensed by Haddington Presbytery in 1716. He was called Ewes Kirk in 1717 and remained there until his death. He failed to inherit the family estate near Cupar on account of his relative being an Episcopalian and leaving it to someone else. However, he was given the estate of Burnfoot (in Eskdale) by the Earl of Dalkeith, and this would remain in his family for several generations. He established a Poor House in the Parish. In 1722 he married Agnes, daughter of Rev. George Campbell, and she died in 1767. Their children were: George (1722–1803), farmer at Burnfoot, father of the '4 Knights of Eskdale'; Wilhelmina (b.1729); David; and Marion. William Elphinstone (1816–1907) from the family of Burnfoot in Dumfriesshire, he was son of Adm. Sir Pulteney. He served in the Royal Navy from the age of 14, but left 2 years later on account of weak health. After graduating from Cambridge he travelled extensively and then settled at Burnfoot farm in 1843. He was a Justice of the Peace, Commissioner of Supply and Deputy-Lieutenant for Dumfriesshire and commanded the Langholm Company of Volunteers. In 1857 he married Mary (d.1859) daughter of James of Cavers. When his wife's brother James died in 1878, the Cavers estate was inherited by his daughter Mary. After his first wife's death he secondly married Charlotte Leslie Melville (1826–92). William (19th/20th C.) from Norham-on-Tweed, he was Police Constable in Rulewater, being based at the Forkins. He married Jessie Johnstone.

Malcolm's Moss (mawl-kumz-mos) n. name for an area near Minto, roughly half-way between Minto Crags and Troney Hill, and now situated within woods (referred to by Sir James Murray in 1863).

Man

‘Man ... Ocht worth tippence gaun on i’ the toon ...’ [DH] (cf. mun).

Man (mawn) n. Francis (19th C.) native of somewhere along the Malay Archipelago. He was given as a gift to Gilbert Elliot, Lord Minto by one of the Rajahs of the kingdoms there in about 1811, as part of negotiations for support against the Dutch and French. Lord Minto emancipated these slaves, but kept the two eldest boys as domestic servants; he chose the surnames ‘of Homo [man] and Amicus [friend], that I may always be put in mind to treat my humble property like men and friends instead of cattle’, based on a quotation from Seneca. Along with Edmund Friend he became part of the household staff at Minto, one of them being groom. However, it is unclear what became of them.

Mangerton (mān-ger-, mang-ger-tin) n. former tower house of the chief of the Armstrongs, between Newcastleton and Kershopefoot, on the banks of the Liddel. It was the seat of 10 successive Armstrong chiefs, from the late 13th century to the early 17th. ‘Alyxandir Armystrand’ is listed as owner of the lands in a rental roll of c.1376. The remains of the tower are now just ruins of the lower storey, measuring about 10.4m by 7.7m. There is an armorial stone, which appears to bear the date 1563 and the initials ‘SA’ and ‘EF,’ for Simon Armstrong and Elizabeth Foster. The tower was partly blown up by a force led by the Regent Moray in 1569, when the Armstrongs refused to submit. The tower is now cared for by the Armstrong Clan Trust, and is situated about 300m south of the modern farmhouse. To the west of the farmhouse is Mangerton Mill, which lies on a lade built off the Liddel Water. The lands associated with the estate are listed on a rental roll of around 1376 in the charters of the Douglasses of Morton: Ragarth; Speteltoun; Mangerton; Mangertounholme; Grenys; Qwhythawlg; Westburneflat; Pouterlampert; Dominium inferius; Haldyikis; Poudercroft; Swyne Acre; Terra cisoris; Dominium superius; Hardenkaul; Tyocsonsted; Maldsonsted; Milnmore; Hungyrflat; Myln-cotis; Pratum aule; Flygh superior; Kelloy cum Mylneholme; Lanorowftany; Terra Philippi de Fausyde cum Holdoun; Strypschelden; Ricarden; Halyfyrsted; Hetreys; and Redehugh. Lands there were resigned by Thomas Armstrong of Mangerton in 1482, granted to David Scott of Buccleuch the same year (presumably as superior), and confirmed to Walter Scott of Branxholme in 1484/5. There was a further gift of non-entry of the lands to Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1550/1; they would pass fully to the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1629, when Francis Scott was granted ‘the castle, tower and fortalice thereof’. The Laird of ‘Mangertoun’ was listed among ‘Landit Men’ of Scotland in about 1590. The lands of William Scott of Mangerton were valued at £1800 in 1643. ‘Lady Mangerstowne’ was responsible for the land tax in 1663, including £852 for ‘towresfeild’, £100 for the ‘teind of the towre’ and £800 for her rents in Castleton. The ‘Laird of Mangerstain’ paid tax on a value of £1280 in 1678. John Armstrong, James Little and Francis Little were listed there on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. The farm was still valued at £1280 in 1707. The farm was surveyed in 1718, along with other properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, when it extended to 349 acres, bounded by Sorbietrees, Liddel Water and Tweeden Burn. At that time it contained the farmstead of Blacksidelees, there was also a common off to the north-east and the map shows the old tower and a farmhouse just to its west, as well as the current farmhouse and mill. James Renwick was tenant in the mid-1700s. In 1788 the lands were still valued at £1280 and owned by the Duke of Buccleuch. Robert Hogg was farmer there in 1797 and John Hogg was also there in 1799. John Scoon was a servant there in 1801. Thomas Elliot was farmer in 1851 and 1861. The name ‘Meriantoun’ (recorded in the 16th century) may be an alternative version of Mangerton – ‘I have Mangerton, Ogilvie, Raeburn, and Netherbie, Old Sim, of Whitram, and all his array. Come all Northumberland, Teesdale and Cumberland, Here at the Brecker Tower end shall the fray’ [ES], ‘Now fare thee weel, sweet Mangerton! For I think again I’ll ne’er thee see: I wad hae betrayed nae lad alive, For a’ the gowd o’ Christentie’ [T] (the name occurs at least as early as 1376 as ‘Mangertoune’ and is ‘Mangertone’ in 1482, ‘Mayngertoun’ in 1530, ‘Mengertoun’ in 1578/9, ‘Mangertoun’ in 1581, ‘Manjertoune’ in 1584, ‘Manderstoun’ in 1586, ‘Mangertoun’ in 1632, ‘Maingertoun’ in 1635 and 1644 and ‘Mengertoun’ in 1644 and 1694; it appears clearly on Sandison’s c.1590 map, is ‘Mangertone’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey and ‘Mangertonn’ on Stobie’s 1770 map; its origin is probably the Old English ‘mangera tun’, meaning ‘farm of the merchants’).

Mangerton Mill (mān-jer-tin-mil) n. former mill near the farm of Mangerton. It is marked on the 1718 Buccleuch survey, and still clearly on the modern Ordnance Survey map, beside the mill lade at the curve in the Liddel there. James Armstrong was tenant there in 1611. James ‘Littlemilne’ was tenant in 1683. Andrew Turnbull was miller there in the mid-18th century. Thomas Elliot was miller there in 1852 (it is ‘Mangertoun Myln’ in 1611; it is ‘Mangertonmill’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Mangertonholm (mān-jer-tin-hōm) n. lands formerly attached to the estate of Mangerton. It is listed in a rental roll c.1376 as ‘Mangertounholme’ and with a value of 13 shillings.

Mang Howes and Knowes (mawng-howz-in-nowz) n. prose piece written by Elliot Cowan Smith in 1914, around the time of his 23rd birthday. Its full title is ‘Mang Howes an Knowes, A Day’s Dander Throwe Border Waeter-Gates’, and it describes a journey from St. Boswells to Hawick. It was originally circulated among a few friends, but published in 1925, following Smith’s untimely death. It is a staggering piece of work, so replete with vernacular vocabulary that it is hard to read without the help of Smith’s article on the local dialect ‘Braid Haaick’.

manheid (mawn-heed) n., arch. manhood – ‘The discriptiōne of Valter Scot of Govdilandis his qvalities. . . . Heir lyis bvreit manheid & cheritie . . .’ [MI1596].

Manners (maw-nurz) n. Henry 2nd Earl of Rutland (c.1526–63) son of Thomas, the 1st Earl. He was Warden of the English Middle and East Marches in 1549 and was in charge of the sack of Haddington. He was later made President of the North. He married Margaret Neville, daughter of the 1st Earl of Westmorland, and remarried to Bridget Morrison. He was succeeded by his sons Edward and John. He is buried in Bottesford Church in Leicestershire, beneath an alabaster effigy.

mannie (maw-nee) n., poet. diminutive form of ‘man’ – ‘... A lean auld mannie, and shrewd As a Heiland body can be’ [WL].

Manor (ma-nur) n. parish in Peeblesshire, south-west of the town of Peebles, extending along the valley of the Manor Water from the Tweed towards Megget. It is also sometimes called Kirkton Manor. The barony was granted by Robert III to Sir William Inglis in 1396, as a reward for killing the English knight Thomas de Struthers at Rulehaugh. This was the same Inglis family who were barons of Braxholme. Sir William’s son John had a charter of the barony from Archibald, Earl of Douglas, who was already superior of the family’s lands in Roxburghshire. John Inglis of Manor swapped half of Braxholme for Murdiestoun with Robert Scotts of Buccleuch in 1420. And in 1446 his son, Thomas Inglis of Manor, swapped the other half of Braxholme with Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. The Inglis family sold their half to David Pringle of Smailholm in 1522. The other half of the barony belonged to the Lowis family, with Patrick ‘of the Lowis of Meaner’ being balie to Sir Walter Scott in 1434. A small part of the barony once also belonged to the Gledstains of that ilk. In this valley lived ‘Bowed Davie’, who was the inspiration for Sir Walter Scott’s character ‘Elshender the REcluse’ – ‘There stand three mills on Manor Water, A fourth at Posso Cleugh: Gin heather-bells were corn and bere, They wad get grist eneugh’ [T] (also written ‘Maner’, ‘Manner’, etc.; it is ‘Menar’ in 1431).

Manorhill (ma-nur-hil) n. farm on the north of the Tweed near Makerstoun (the origin of the name is simply ‘hill of the manor house’ and occurs at least as early as 1616).

manrent (mawn-ren) n., arch. agreement as part of the feudal system, where someone swears to be a faithful supporter, usually of a superior, and most often occurring in the phrase ‘band of manrent’.

manse (mawns, mans) n. the house of a minister, generally owned by the Church (from Mediaeval Latin).

the Manse (thu-mawns) n. usually referring to Hawick Parish Manse, situated on Old Manse Road, and later to the new Manse built on Buccleuch Road in 1844 (renamed Parkview and more recently Dunira). A new manse was built on Old Manse Road in 1763, at a cost of £200. This was for a while the only house beyond the Old Parish Church along the New Road. The phrase is also used sometimes to refer to the homes of other local ministers (see also the Auld Manse).

Manse Brae (mans-brā) n. former popular name for the road at Denholm Townhead, where the Church manse was located (now Beechlands), i.e. part of the road from Hawick into Denholm. Also the name for the road (north) up to the Manse in Robertson, at the top of which the older church stood.

the Manse field (thu-mans-feeld) n. popular name for the field on the left just before entering Denholm from Hawick, adjacent to the old Denholm Manse.

Mansefield Cottage (mans-feeld-ko’-eej) n. cottage in Cavers Parish, lying just to the south-east of the modern church.

Manse Lane (mans-lān) n. name used for Old Manse Lane before about 1860.

Mansfield (manz-, mans-feeld) n. area of town down-river from the North Bridge, generally referring to the part on the north side of the Teviot, lying along Mansfield Road. It consists of housing, factories, sports grounds, and an industrial area. It was named after Wilton Parish Church Manse, which was once the only property in the area (now in Mansfield Square), the Minister of Wilton owning a large tract of land there from at least the mid-17th century. The Mansfield Glebe land here was purchased by the Town Council in the late 1870s, with factories, housing and the sewage works built soon after. Eastfield Mills dominated the area in the late 19th century, with Blenkhorn, Richardson & Co. building most of the tenement blocks to provide convenient housing for their workers.

Mansfield (manz-feeld) n. Ralph (1556–1633) from Yorkshire, he was appointed as a deputy warden by Ralph Evers, Lord Eure. He served as Captain of Harbottle and Keeper of Tynedale. There were complaints against him by other Englishmen in 1597, including his ‘extortions of 15 score head of cattle and 400 sheep – conveyance of Cesford to Toplif to buy a horse – caused 2 Englishmen to fight before Buccleuch at Hawick – till one was slain’. It is separately referred to as an incident of ‘carrying Englishmen into Scotland to combat before Bawcleugh, where the one murdered the other’. His response to the last accusation is that he took no men to Hawick, ‘but 2 English fugitives, some time of Redesdale, one accusing the other of crimes, did combat before Buccleuch’, and when he got there he tried to stop the fight. The true details of these events,

the Mansfield Bar (thu-manz-feeld-bawr) n. public house at 16 Mansfield Road.

Mansfield Brig (manz-feeld-brig) n. Mansfield Bridge, or Footbridge, across the Teviot connecting Mansfield Road with the end of Noble Place. It was suggested by a petition of 308 names in 1886 and funded by subscription. The original wooden footbridge was opened by Provost Milligan in 1888, but washed away in 1938, being replaced in 1939. A completely new bridge was erected in 1986.

Mansfield Crescent (manz-feeld-kre-sin') n. street built in 1887 on land that was formerly part of Wilton Manse Glebe.

Mansfield Gairdens (manz-feeld-gār-dinz) n. street in Mansfield, being a continuation of Mansfield Park, built around 1925, with additional houses added in 1972.

Mansfield Hoose (manz-feeld-hoos) n. originally Thornwood House, built in 1870/1 for auctioneer James Oliver. It was designed in a Greek Revival style by J.T. Rothead, with italianate decor and splendid gardens. It retains much of the original ceiling plasterwork. Sold by the Olivers in 1936, it was owned by Lt.-Col. Mudue and by 1956 had become a hotel and night club, having several owners over the subsequent decades. In 1973 it was taken over by the Hawkinses, who changed the name to Mansfield Park Hotel. Later the McMannuses changed the name to Mansfield House Hotel. It was taken over by Ian and Sheila McKinnon in 1985 and renovated into Hawick's premier hotel, with 12 unique bedrooms and set in 10 acres of land. In 2009 it was purchased by the Midgee Company. It has been a very popular site for wedding receptions (see also Thornwud Hoose).

Mansfield Industrial Estate (manz-feeld-in-dus-tree-ul-ee-stā') n. area developed for knitwear and engineering businesses in 1976 on and around the site of the old Blenkhorn, Richardson tweed mill.

Mansfield Mills (manz-feeld-milz) n. name for knitwear mills on Mansfield road, which were built 1880–1929. Samuel Fingland, hosiery and glove manufacturer was there from around 1882. It may also have been associated with James Renwick & Co. From 1891 it house Turn & Rutherford's, which closed around 1950. There was a fire there in 1955. Braemar moved in around 1969, replaced by Jaeger in the early 1970s. The building was partly converted into flats in 1996, by Northern Rock Holmes. Clan Douglas moved into part of it in 1999.

Mansfield Mission Hut (manz-feeld-mi-shin-hu') n. independent evangelical organisation established for women in the Mansfield area in 1937. It was separate from the Hawick Home Mission.

Mansfield Park (manz-feeld-pawrk) n. home of Hawick R.F.C. since 1888, times each season. A new pavilion was opened in 1919, a new stand in 1955 and floodlights in 1993 – ‘As I view life's looking glass Where can any joy surpass The callants doon at Mansfield When they hold the final pass?’ [RMc].

Mansfield Park (manz-feeld-pawrk) n. street running parallel and to the north of Mansfield Road, becoming Mansfield Court at one end and Mansfield Gardens at the other. The original houses were built in 1890. The name was in use for the general area before it was feued for factories and housing in the 1880s.

Mansfield Quoitin Club (manz-feeld-kwoi'-in-klub) n. organisation for playing quoits, with ground in the Mansfield area. It existed in the late 19th century and first few years of the 20th.

Mansfield Reach (manz-feeld-reech) n. name sometimes used to describe the roughly straight part of the Teviot in the Mansfield area.

Mansfield Road (manz-feeld-rōd) n. main road through the Mansfield area. The original houses were built in 1882. At the corner opposite the Mansfield Bar was Tucker's grocer's shop, with Mary Hume's grocer's shop at No. 3 (which was formerly ‘A. Smith’).

Mansfield Square (manz-feeld-skwār) n. street named after Wilton Manse, which was the only building in the area when the Town Council bought the land in 1875. The buildings were erected in 1888, and the original manse was later made into private housing, surviving the demolitions of 1974.

Mansholme Mills (mans-hōm-milz) n. 19th century woollen manufacturing mill off Mansfield Road behind Waverley Mills. The factory was associated with yarn spinning for a number of smaller firms, specifically James Taylor, Robert Grierson & Co., Dunsmore, Johnston & Co., and Tant & Anderson.

mansweir (mawn-sweer) v., poet. manswear, swear falsely – ‘Thou salltna mansweir thysel, but sallt mak' guid untill the Lord thine aiths’ [HSR].

man-sworn (mawn-swōrn) adj., arch. forsworn, lying deliberately, used as an insulting phrase –

manteen (man-teen) v., poet. to maintain, exercise – ‘I ken that the Lord wull mainteen the caus o’ the afflicket, and the richt o’ the puir’ [HSR], ‘Ye ken that the chiefes o’ the Gentels manteen thrall ower the Gentels, an’ they that ar grit manteen powir ower thae chiefes’ [HSR].

Mantel Waas (mawn-tul-wawz) n. name use for a former ruin near Ancrum, around Nether Ancrum, to the east of the village. It was sometimes referred to as ‘Malton Walls’ (most likely in error, leading to a supposed association with the Knights of Malta), but ‘Mantel’ is how the locals referred to it, which means simply parapet walls. It was perhaps a palace of the Bishops of Glasgow, who held lands there, or otherwise remains of former fortifications at Ancrum. It was described at the end of the 18th century (by Dr. Somerville of Jedburgh) as being a parallelogram in plan, built of stone and lime, and having vaults under it. A high gable with a beautiful window as said to have stood until the mid-18th century and the last portion of the walls fell in about the mid-19th century. It was said that human bones were regularly unearthed there and in 1956 the remains of a statue were dug up nearby. A gravestone inscribed ‘1607’ is built into a house in the area. Nothing can now be seen of this former construction today. There is a fanciful tradition that an underground passage led from this place to Timpendean Castle (also written ‘Mantle’; it is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

manuale (ma-new-al) adj., arch. written with the hand – ‘... be the hand of our louit familiar clerk, Maister Richard Lawson, clerk of our Justiciary, wnder his subscripcioun manuale ...’ [SB1500].

Manuel (mawn-wel) n. George (17th C.) resident at Barnes in 1694 according to the Hearth Tax rolls. His surname is written ‘Mannall’. George (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isobel Hall and their children included Robert (b.1683). John (b.1806) master blacksmith in Lilliesleaf, son of William. His smithy was on the north side of Main Street. He may never have married, being listed living with his sister as housekeeper in 1851. He was also recorded in Slater’s 1852 directory. John (1838–1900) Burgh Surveyor and Master of Works from

1874–1900. Born in Perth, son of Peter, the Clerk of Works in Edinburgh, and Agnes Wilson. He was a journeyman joiner and became assistant to the Burgh Engineer of the City of Edinburgh. He came to Hawick in 1874, serving as Road Surveyor and Master of Works, following the death of Andrew Wilson. He supervised public works in Hawick in the period 1874–1900, which saw a huge amount of construction. His office was at 2 Wellington Street and later 28 High Street. He originally lived at 27 High Street, then 25 North Bridge Street, but designed his own house Elmbank in Fenwick Park in 1884, with the access road called ‘Manuel’s Brae’ long afterwards. He also worked as an architect for Hawick Working Men’s Building & Investment Company (on the Terraces). He designed several other buildings, including Howlands Mill and prepared plans for renovating several others, such as St. Leonard’s Farm, Drumlanrig School and Hawick Jail. He was responsible for the plans for the Mansfield Brig in 1888, for opening up O’Connell Street in 1889 and for the Fever Hospital at Burnfoot in 1900. He was one of the founders of Hawick Golf Club, and also keen on bowling, curling and fishing. In addition he was a Mason and manager at East Bank Kirk, as well as being known as a fine bass singer and Secretary of the Hawick Choral Society. One of his regular duties was to oversee the erection of the ring and platforms at the Common Riding Games. He married music teacher Isabella (or Catherine) Hunter of North Berwick (d.18986) and their children were: Margaret Agnes (b.1877), who became an artist in New York; John (b.1879); Catherine Hunter (1881–1969), who died in Vancouver; Francis Eric (b.1886), who went to India, worked as a banker, and retired to the south coast of England; and Florence Wilson (1888–1971), who died in Kelowna, British Columbia. John and the 3 daughters all eventually emigrated to North America. There is a possibility that another son may have been Robert, who emigrated to America and named the Hawick in Minnesota (although there is no evidence to support this, and the timing does not work very well). His wife died on Christmas day in 1896 and was buried in Wilton Cemetery (the lay-out of which he must have been closely involved in). He became ill in 1900, with his son John taking over his duties temporarily. He moved to Lilliesleaf, but died suddenly of a heart-attack and was also buried at Wilton. John (1879–1933) son of John, born at 25 North Bridge Street. He trained in Hawick under J.P. Alison as well as in Edinburgh, and worked in London. When his father became ill in 1900, he returned to Hawick to serve as interim Burgh Surveyor. But by 1904 he moved to Liverpool, then London, then Colwyn Bay in Wales. He exhibited designs and drawings at the R.S.A. in 1900 and 1901. He married Madeline, daughter of hardware merchant William Brown in 1908. After 1912 he emigrated to Canada (his 3 sisters following him there), where he contributed to the design of the Provincial Legislature in Winnipeg and the Labor Temple in Calgary. He was also resident architect at the Banff Springs Hotel. He died after falling from a 10th floor window at the Palliser Hotel in Calgary, and is buried there in the Burnsland Cemetery. Robert (17th/18th C.) possibly the son of George and Isobel Hall born in Hawick in 1683. He witnessed a baptism in Hawick Parish in 1705 for smith John Dryden. In the baptismal record of 1719 he is 'in ye toun of Hawick'. He married Janet Tullie and their son John was baptised in 1719, with witnesses candlemaker John Scott and James Paterson 'Duke'. Robert (17th/18th C.) recorded in 1719 being 'in ye toun of Hawick'. In 1719 he married Agnes, daughter to Henry Gibson, flesher in Melrose, and their son John was baptised in Hawick. Robert (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf. His son William was born in 1755. Robert (19th/20th C.) said to be son of John (although there is no evidence to support this). He became a railway manager in the U.S.A., and was responsible for the naming of Hawick, Minnesota (mis-typed 'R. Manvel' in the 1905 history of Kandiyohi County; also notice a possible conflation with Santa Fe Railroad President Allen Manvel). There is clearly some confusion in the story of how the Hawick in Minnesota got its name and any connection with the Manuel family remains unproven. Samuel (19th C.) blacksmith on the Sandbed, listed in Pigot's 1837 directory. He does not appear in the 1841 census. Simon (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf. His wife was Margaret Smail. Their children included: Janet (b.1764); Jean (b.1769); Jean (b.1771); and William (b.1775). William (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. He had children: Isabell (b.1737); Jean (b.1737), apparently twin of Isabell; Gilbert (b.1739); James (b.1742); Margaret (b.1744); and Jean (b.1747). William (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf whose children included: Robert (b.1755); John (b.1757); Margaret (b.1762); and George (b.1764). William (18th C.) married Margaret Fairlie. Their children included: Jean (b.1768);

Jean (again, b.1769); Jean (again, b.1771); and Riddell (b.1772). William (b.1770), with no mother's name given, may also be his son. William (18th C.) recorded as owner of land in Lilliesleaf in 1788, valued at £6 13s 4d. His surname was given as 'Manwell' and he was still recorded as owner in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. William (18th/19th C.) blacksmith in Lilliesleaf according to the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. He is listed as blacksmith in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories. He may be the son of Simon and Margaret Smail born in Lilliesleaf in 1775. He married Jean Swanston. Their children included: Margaret (1802); Simon (b.1803); Agnes (b.1804); John (b.1806); William (b.1808), blacksmith in Melrose; Jessy (b.1810); Mary (b.1811); and Agnes (b.1814). Simon (b.1798) and Jean (b.1800) may also have been his children (also spelled 'Manual' and earlier 'Manwell').

Manuel's Brae (mawn-welz-brā) n. former name for the road leading to the large houses that were built at Fenwick Park, off Weensland Road. It is the lower part of the street now known as Fenwick Park. The name came from John Manuel, who built 'Elm Bank'.

manufacturin (ma-new-fak-choor-in) n. manufacturing. Hawick's production of goods grew slowly, until the rapid expansion of woollens in the early 19th century. In the earliest records there are examples of various tradesmen in the town, making items from wood, metal, leather, etc. There was also small-scale, largely domestic, production of linen and woollen garments. The trades were governed through 7 'incorporations', namely weavers, shoemakers (or cordiners), skinners (and glovers), hammermen, fleshers (i.e. butchers), tailors and bakers (or baxters). A small factory making carpets appeared in Hawick in the 1750s, stocking frames were introduced in the 1770s, linen tape manufacturing started in the 1780s and yarn spinning commenced in the early 1800s. In 1839 the Minister described people being employed 'in the manufacture of thongs, gloves, candles, machinery, and in the tanning of leather and dressing of sheep skins', although woollen manufacturing by far dominated.

Manvers (man-vurz) n. Robert de (13th/14th C.), given part of the estate of Chisholme by the English King Edward in 1317 (along with Ranulphus de Home), although it was restored to John 'de Cheseholme' 3 years later.

the Maori flag (thū-mow-ree-flawg) n. artefact donated to Hawick Museum in 1921 by artist

Tom Scott. It had been captured by Crown forces in 1865 at the Battle of Omaruhakeke. In 2015 there was a request to return the flag to New Zealand.

Mar (mawr) n. Margaret (d.c.1391) daughter of Donald, 8th Earl of Mar, and sister of Thomas, 9th Earl. She married William, 1st Earl of Douglas. Her husband died in 1384 and she secondly married Sir John Swinton of Swinton. Her son James inherited the titles of both Douglas and Mar. However, she also seems to have been regarded as Countess of Mar in her own right, with that title going to her daughter Isabel. Thomas 9th (or 10th) Earl of Mar (c.1332–c.74) son of Donald, 8th Earl of Mar and Isabel Stewart, last of a line of 'Mormaers' of Mar (in Aberdeenshire), with no clear surname. Both Thomas Baliol and the Earl of Douglas are referred to as his brothers, but it seems this was likely to have meant step-brothers or brothers-in-law. He was apparently raised in England. He witnessed charters during the reigns of David II and Robert II and became High Chamberlain of Scotland. He also held many titles, particularly in northern Scotland, but also including the Barony of Cavers. He was certainly Lord of Cavers by 1357. In 1358 he witnessed the charter for the Barony of Hawick, granted to Sir Thomas Murray. He granted the lands of Denholm, Denholm Dean and 'Balleolhage' to Thomas Cranston in an undated charter (confirmed decades later in 1441). The grant excepted his domain lands within the Barony of Cavers and his lands of Stobs. He granted Cavers to Thomas Baliol, in fee. In 1368 he granted the patronage and advowson of Cavers Kirk to Melrose Abbey. Also in 1368 he gave his consent to a grant by Thomas Baliol to William, Earl of Douglas, of Earlside in the Barony of Cavers. It is unclear exactly when he died, and it seems there was some confusion after his death about the inheritance of the Cavers lands and titles immediately afterwards; however, in an investigation into the status of the Kirk of Cavers in 1406 he is still referred to as the former Baron, with his confirming gift of the Kirk to Melrose Abbey cited. He married Margaret Graham, Countess of Menteith (and widow of John Murray) and later Margaret Stewart, Countess of Angus, elder daughter of Thomas, Earl of Angus. He had no heirs and his titles fell to his sister Margaret, Countess of Mar, who married William, 1st Earl of Douglas and Earl of Mar. The titles then passed to their daughter Isabella, Countess of Mar, and eventually to the Douglasses directly.

the March (thu-mawrch) n. the Marches, or a particular March (West, Middle or East) – 'The March must feed her ravens ...' [WHO].

Marchbank see Mairchbank

Marchmount (mawrch-mown) n. alternative name for Roxburgh Castle.

Marcus (mar-kis) n. Walter 'Mr. Walter' (20th C.) from Westphalia in Germany, he had to leave because of Nazi persecution and founded a fashion house in London, along with his younger brother Otto. When they established a factory in Hawick in 1940, he came to live in the Town and stayed until the 1950s, being manager of the W. & O. Marcus factory on Commercial Road. He also organised regular fashion shows in the Tower Hotel. He joined the Home Guard during the War. He lived with his wife Anne and daughter Helen at Wellogate Villa. He had a reputation for being a strict, but fair employer. However, it was said that he was often bad-tempered during Jewish fast days, with his wife calling ahead to the factory to warn the workers. He moved to London in the mid-1950s after his brother became ill. But he continued to visit Hawick until the factory closed in 1964.

Marcus's (mar-ki-seez) n. W. & O. Marcus, former dress-making factory on Commercial Road. The firm was founded by Jewish refugees Walter and Otto Marcus (friends of Otto Weisz) in 1939, and became one of the top 10 fashion houses in London. The Hawick factory was set up in 1940 in part of the Willglen Mill building. It operated until 1965, managed by Frederica Rosenberger. The connection to Hawick was probably established from the brothers knowing Otto Wiesz, head designer at Pringles (as well as the known availability of textile workers and the relative safety of the Borders in wartime). During the London Blitz workers were brought up to work in Hawick and many of them stayed. At the height of production it employed 180 workers. The dresses were known for their use of luxury materials. The firm supplied dresses to many London department stores, such as Harrods, Liberty, Fortnum & Mason, Bourne & Hollingsworth, Debenhams and Selfridges, as well as Greensmith Downes and Jenners in Edinburgh. One of the reasons cited for closure was rising rail costs for transporting materials and finished goods to and from London. After the factory closed the building was used as the Scout Headquarters. The ladies garment tradition was carried on by 'Alison Russell', run by ex-Marcus employee Ella Russell at Loch Park for about 20 years after Marcus' closed. Another company, Simon Marcus, skirt manufacturers, was based at Loch Park 1979–93. The original building at 22 Commercial Road was demolished in the late 1990s. Herriot-Watt archives hold design books, loose patterns and an unpublished company history. There was a reunion of 52 former employees held in 2003.

Mare Sike (mār-sīk) n. small stream that rises on the Horn and flows roughly south-west to join Frostlie Burn near the farm of Linhope.

Marfaux (mawr-faks) n. house on Wilton Path, named after WWI to commemorate the area in France where a family member had been killed. The Inglis and Scott families lived there around that time.

Margaret (mawr-gri') n. (1283–90) Queen of Scotland from 1286, she was known as 'the Maid of Norway'. She was the great-grand-daughter of Alexander III and his only surviving descendant, being daughter of Eric II of Norway. Following the Treaty of Birgham (near Kelso), in which she was betrothed to Edward I's son in return for assurance of Scottish independence, but with Edward as her ward, she was brought by ship from Norway, but died en route. This left Scotland with at least a dozen claimants to the throne, including Sir Nicholas de Soulis. Michael Scot is said to have helped bring her back to Scotland.

Margaret Scott (mawr-gri'-sko') n. fictional daughter of the Laird of Braxholme in Sir Walter Scott's 'Lay of the Last Minstrel'. In the story she is in love with Henry of Cranstoun, who belongs to a family who are enemies of the Scotts, but through various twists they get married in the end. She is based upon a daughter of Sir Walter Scott of Braxholme, although it was Janet, not Margaret, who married a Cranston.

the Marina (thū-maw-ree-nu) n. picture house, bingo hall, pub and entertainment centre on Towerdykeside, previously known by many other names, including the Empire, the Kings, and the Odeon, having originally been the Exchange Hall. It was the last commercial cinema in Hawick, and stopped showing films in June 1985, when it became a bingo hall and then a night club; the last film showing was a double bill of 'Revenge of the Nerds' and 'Bachelor Party'. At the Snuffin, after the Tower Hotel closed, packets of snuff used to be thrown from a window here. The building burned down in 1992 and was largely demolished in 1998, although part was redeveloped as the Heritage Hub.

Marion's Hob (maw-ree-inz-hob) n. nickname for Robert Scott Bailie in 1612 and in the 1620s.

Marjoribanks (mawr-jō-ree-, mawrch-bawngks) n. George (c.1695–1740) said to have been born at Singdean, he was a Jacobite supporter who fought at the Battle of Preston in 1715 and was transported to Virginia. There he did well for himself as a tobacco and cotton plantation owner. He married Anne Echols in Virginia and they had at least 8 children. Many of their descendants later lived in the Carolinas. There is no local record of members of this family living at Singdean. John (16th C.) son of Philip, who was one of the first to use this surname. He was a younger brother of William (to whom he succeeded) and elder brother of Thomas (who represented Douglas of Cavers in 1541). He was a Guild Brother and Baillie in Edinburgh and served as Dean of Guild. He is probably the Burgess of Edinburgh of that name who in 1532 witnessed a sasine (recorded in Selkirk) for William Walker selling his tenement in Hawick to John Morlaw. Thomas of that ilk (d.1557), son of Philip and brother of John. He was one of 10 advocates appointed as procurators before the Lords of Session. He served as Lord Provost of Edinburgh and later became Lord Clerk Register, with the title Lord Ratho. In 1541 he represented James Douglas of Cavers and his tenants in asking for reparations from Walter Scott of Braxholme for burning the farm of Whitriggs. Perhaps the same Thomas served as procurator for a case in Selkirk in 1533 regarding Sunderlandhall. Probably the same Thomas acted as agent in 1539 to receive a large number of sheep from Patrick Murray of Falahill and others, owed to the King and passed to Robert Scott of Howpasley and Ninian Anderson (formerly 'Mairiorbankis' and variants; see also Mairchbank).

Mark (mawrk) n. Adam (18th C.) resident of Crumhaugh. In 1724 he married Jean Goodfellow, who was from Robertson Parish, the marriage being recorded in both Hawick and Robertson. Andrew (17th C.) resident at Burnfoot in Ashkirk Parish on the Hearth Tax roll in 1694. He was probably related to Robert, who was also listed there. In 1690 he witnessed a baptism for John Hastie and in 1691 probably witnessed another for Robert. In 1694 he and Robert witnessed a baptism for James Deans. George (19th C.) farmer at Hassendeanburn in the 1860s. John (17th C.) resident the Hawick area. He witnessed a Robertson baptism for Andrew Fisher in 1681 and a Hawick baptism for William Haswell in 1688. Robert (17th C.) resident at Burnfoot in Ashkirk Parish on the Hearth Tax roll in 1694. In 1694 he and Andrew witnessed a baptism for James Deans. He married Janet Henderson and their children included Marion (b.1691) and Margaret (b.1698). The witnesses in 1691 were Andrew [probably Mark] and Alexander [probably Wilson]. Simon (17th/18th C.) resident of the east-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He is listed as 'Simon Mack, carrier' among those contributing to funds for the new Kirk bell in 1693/4. He married Isobel Young and their children, baptised in Hawick, included Isobel (b.1701), Robert (b.1702), Janet (b.1708) and Agnes (b.1713). Janet (b.1694) may also have been his child. The witnesses in 1708 were Bailie George Martin and smith James Scott. Simon (17th/18th C.) carrier in Hawick Parish. His name appears to be written 'Merk' in one records. He married Helen 'Huison' and their children included Anna (b.1719). The witnesses in 1719 were tailor James Turnbull and 'Mr' John Purdom. William (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1651 he witnessed a baptism for James Elliot. Probably the same William married Janet 'Bran' and had children Marion (b.1657) and Bessie (b.1660). Agnes (b.1645) and Marion (b.1651), with no mother's name given, were probably also his children. The witnesses in 1651 were James Elliot and George 'dinre'. He may also have witnessed a baptism in 1656 for Walter Scott 'called of Huntlie' (also written 'Marke' and 'Merk').

the Marklair (thu-mawr-klār) n. former farmstead in the upper reaches of the Borthwick valley. It is recorded in a document of 1650, about a mile further out than Howpasley and with 2 'communicants' recorded. Adam Laidlaw was living there in 1716 and James Laidlaw in 1722. The lands were sold by the Scotts of Crumhaugh to the Duke of Buccleuch along with Howpasley about 1760. It is still shown as 'Mark Lair' near Mark Sike on the Ordnance Survey map, high above Howpasley, although there is now no sign of former habitation there (it is 'Marklear' in 1716 and 'Merklear' in 1722 and transcribed 'Maichlair' in about 1760; it is 'The marke Laire' on a parish map of 1650 and the farm of 'Mirk Lair' is on Roy's c.1750 map; 'lair' is either a boggy area or an area of shelter for sheep).

Mark Sike (mawr-sīk) n. small stream in the upper Borthwick valley. It rises near Mark Lair and joins the Howpasley Burn.

marl (maw-rul) n. lime-rich clay, used to neutralize acid soil. In the late 18th century opening up marl pits became a central element of agricultural improvement. Pits were developed on the Minto, Buccleuch and Harden estates, starting with Sir Gilbert Elliot opening a pit at Crow's Moss in 1755 and marling 200 acres. Groundstone and Blackcleuch (presumably at Teviothead) were also used. Broadlee Loch and Branhholme Loch were both drained to get at the marl on their bottoms, and not restored again until the mid-19th century – 'There is also marle in different parts of the parish, which is used successfully on land in pasture, as well as in tillage' [RRG] (also written 'marle').

marled (maw-ruld) adj., poet. mottled, woven with 2 colours – 'O, gif I kened but where ye baide, I'd send to you a marled plaid' [BS] (also marlt).

the Marl Loch (thu-maw-rul-loch) n. name used in the 19th century for Broadlee Loch, when it was drained to provide marl.

Marlside (ma-rul-sīd) n. former name for lands in Hassendean Parish. It was included along with Hassendean in the 1718 survey of properties belonging to the Scotts of Buccleuch, presumably corresponding to the part to the north, around Marlside Hill.

Marlside Hill (ma-rul-sīd-hil) n. small hill in Minto Parish, between Hassendean farm and Newlands. It reaches a height of 180 m.

marlt (maw-rul', -rult) adj., poet. mottled – 'The mune she shines sae bricht, Till a' the yirth is marlt wi' The grymins o' her licht' [DH] (also marled).

Marmion Road (mawr-mee-in-rōd) n. street between Weensland and the Orchard Road, reached by Fenwick Park and Weensgate Drive. The houses were built from 1966 and the street was named after the hero of Scott's novel of the same name. It was a popular street for teachers for many years.

maroon (maw-roon) n., adj. a very unpleasant colour, being a sort of muddy purple, and almost unknown within Hawick.

The Marquis (thu-mawr-kwis) n. nickname for Andrew Miller in the late 19th century.

Marr (mawr) n. Edward (b.1825/6) from Selkirk, he was a tailor in Wilton. He was at Ladylaw Place in 1851, employing one apprentice, and was listed in Slater's 1852 directory on Ladylaw Place. James (18th C.) recorded in 1788 as having purchased part of Knowesouth, which were by then in the hands of Thomas Ogilvie of Chesters. These lands were valued at £39 18s 1d.

marri (ma-ri) n. marrow – ‘hearing about the move ti Gala chilled is ti the marri’, ‘My saul sall be satisfiet as wi’ marra an’ fatniss . . .’ [HSR] (also written ‘marra’).

Marriot (maw-ree-i) n. Daniel ‘Reuben Watts’ or ‘Reuben Watt’ (1817–92) English stocking-maker, born in Ashover, Derbyshire, he came to Hawick in 1851. He worked diligently to promote improved public sanitation, conducting a voluminous correspondence with the newspapers, Town Council, and officials all the way up to the Home Secretary and even the Prince of Wales. He was considered a nuisance by many, complaining regularly about policing, municipal works etc. It was written that he ‘earned a lifelong notoriety by his ventilation of real and imaginary grievances’. However, he claimed credit for improving sanitary conditions in various parts of the Town. He married Mary Randle (nee Orr). After his son was killed during the Chase in 1868 he became staunchly opposed to the Common Riding. He also had sons Daniel and David. In 1861 he lived at 13 Back Row. He adopted the name ‘Reuben Watts’ in Hawick, particularly in his correspondence, and is buried at the Wellogate – ‘. . . While listening to its pleasing ripple Discuss great matters municipal. And sanitary measures pat To satisfy even Reuben Watt’ [VW]. George (1859–68) son of Daniel, he was killed by a horse at the end of Drumlanrig Place after rushing onto the road during the Wednesday morning Chase of 1868. This led the Council to ban galloping in the streets the following year – ‘Loan chase when a’ Hawick was grievin’, Wee George Marriot killed when leavin’ The Chennel quick, an’ horses hewed, The chase wad hev tae be reviewed’ [MB] (also written ‘Marriott’).

marrless (mar-lis) adj., arch. unmatched, having no pair – ‘The dishes on the table war marrless (marrowless); the verrih cups an saucers war nane neebers’ [ECS] (also written ‘mar’less’; cf. marrowless).

marrow (ma-rō, -ri) n., arch., poet. a companion, match, partner, mate – ‘He raise, and rax’d him whar he stude And bade him match him wi his marrows’ [CPM], ‘. . . I make nae wonder that ye dislike her as a marrow; but ye shouldna hate her, far less curse her, for its unseemly and wrang to do sae’ [JTe], v., arch., poet. to match, marry – ‘. . . Among them aa there was

nane to marrow Auld Harden’s leddy, the ‘Floer o’ Yarrow’ [WL].

marrowless (ma-rō, -ri-les) adj., arch. odd, unmatched – ‘Marrowless buits an’ stockin’s’ [GW], widowed (in [JL]; also marrless).

Mars (mawrz) n. Peter (b.1832/3) probably son of James and Elizabeth Birnie, he was a gardener at Dickson’s nurseries. His wife Margaret Murray (d.1864) is buried in Wellogate Cemetery, along with 2 children who died in infancy. He may have been related to an S. Mars, who had ground in St. Mary’s. It is also possible that ‘Tidy Mars’ was a relative. James (b.c.1800) agricultural labourer who lived on the Back Row. His wife was Elizabeth Birnie and their children included Margaret, Peter, Mary, John and James.

Marsden (mawrz-din) n. Philip ‘Phil’ (1931–2010) born in Yorkshire, he was a semi-professional football player with Wolverhampton Wanderers. He married Jean in Hawick in 1955, and the couple settled permanently in Hawick in 1963, where he worked in the construction industry, at the Hawick Community Workshop and lastly as custodian of Hermitage Castle. He was the first S.N.P. councillor in Hawick and became a Bailie and Justice of the Peace, as well as being involved in many of the Town’s clubs.

Marten (mer'-in) n. Elliot H. (??-??) Scottish landscape painter, best known for his views of the Lake District, Sussex, Dorset and the Highlands. He exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1886, listing his home address as Hawick. He also exhibited in 1901.

Martin see Mertin

Martini (mar'-tee-nee) n. John (15th/16th C.) Archdeacon of Teviotdale, succeeding William Elphinstone (senior). He resigned his rights some time before 1510, and may have served 1486–91.

Martinlee Sike (mer'-in-lee-sī) n. stream in Southdean Parish, crossed by the A6088 shortly before the turn-off for Lethem. On the north side of the road there, between Steele Knowe and Crink Law, are the remains of a settlement, consisting of an oval enclosure about 30m across (perhaps from the first millennium B.C.E.). A little further east, also on the north side of the road are further archaeological remains, comprising a roughly circular enclosure 14m across and a hut circle 7m in diameter. And further to the west of the stream are more field boundaries, a homestead site, 2 disused quarries and rig and furrow lines seen on aerial photographs. On the south side of the road there are the remains of 2 farmsteads, rig lines, cultivation terraces, small cairns and pens, surrounded by 2 large enclosures. Also on the south side of the road, but the other side of the stream is the remains of yet another homestead and hut platform. The age of all of these farmsteads is unknown, and there are no correspondong settlements on any old maps of the area. The forest there is known as Martinlee Plantation.

Martinmas (mar-, mer-tin-mus) n. one of the Scottish quarter days, falling on 11th November. It was a Christian feast in commemoration of the death of St. Martin of Tours. It was formerly one of the main days used for the payment of annual rents. The land-holders of Hawick formerly had to pay the token rent to the Baron on this date, as well as on Whitsunday. The first Thursday after Martinmas was called ‘Term Thursdi’ and was once an important fair day in Hawick. In country areas the ‘mairt’ was killed about this day to be salted and stored for the winter – ‘...account promised be the said Adam Scott to him for his shonne fra Martinmas last to Whitsunday next’ [BR], ‘Yon gowd o’ Martinmas Cleeds timely daith. I mind o’ braw Whutson lads: Green was their graith’ [DH].

Martinshouse see Mertin’s Hoose

Mart Street (mar'-stree') n. road created in 1976–78 when the railway embankment was removed. It was laid out following part of the old line, and adjacent car parking was developed. The street was named after the nearby Auction Mart.

marvellit (mer-ve-lee', -li') pp., poet. marvelled – ‘...insaemeikle that the governor marvellit gritly’ [HSR].

Mary o Guise (mā-ree-ō-geez) n. (1515–60) daughter of Claude de Lorraine, duc de Guise, she married Louis d’Orléans, 2nd duc de Longueville, who died in 1537. She then married James V of Scotland and became Regent after his death in 1542. She stopped her daughter Mary (later Queen of Scots) being arranged into a marriage with Prince Edward of England, thereby initiating the ‘Rough Wooing’. In 1548 there is a letter in which she undertakes to support Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme in recognition of his ‘band of manrent’ to her. She later prosecuted Protestants in Scotland, with the aid of Archbishop Beaton, which helped accelerate the Scottish Reformation. Her death effectively brought an end to the Auld Alliance.

Mary Queen o Scots (mā-ree-kween-ō-skots) n. (1542–87) Mary Stuart (or Stewart) daughter of James V and Mary of Guise, born at Linlithgow, she became Queen of Scotland 6 days later. She was sent to France at age 6, and married Francis, which later made her Queen of France. She returned to Scotland in 1561, and after much political intrigue was forced to abdicate in favour of her son James in 1567. She went to England for support, but never met Elizabeth, instead being imprisoned for 19 years, becoming implicated in various Catholic plots, and finally being beheaded at Fotheringay. In Hawick she was significant for confirming (as required by law) Douglas’ Charter to Hawick in 1545, when she was just 2½! Attempts to have her wed Henry VIII’s son Edward led to the ‘Rough Wooing’ and the burning of Hawick along with much of the rest of the Borders. She stayed temporarily in Jedburgh, and famously rode from there to visit the wounded Earl of Bothwell at Hermitage Castle in 1566, returning the same night, possibly causing an illness that incapacitated her for weeks. It has been suggested that her route proceeded via Jedburgh Castle, the Dunion, Swinnie Moor, Earlside, Coliforthill, Whitlaw, Flex, Priesthaugh and the Braidlie Burn (the headwaters of which are still called the Queen’s Mire). Memorabilia can be seen at ‘Mary Queen of Scots House’ in Jedburgh and in Abbotsford.

Mary’s Well (mā-reez-wel) n. former spring by the side of the road near Denesyde, on the left-hand side while ascending the hill towards Hawthornside. It was described by Oliver of Langraw in 1870 as being ‘on the lower side of the turnpike road below Hawthornside’ and suggests a possible association with Mary Queen of Scots’ ride to Hermitage. Adam Turnbull of Denesyde (said to be a Jacobite supporter in 1715) convinced Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs to preserve the Well as a roadside watering-place when he took over the lands. It disappeared some time before the mid-19th century, probably as a result of farm improvements (also called ‘Queen Mary’s Well’; the origin of the name is uncertain, and there may be confusion about the position, cf. St. Mary’s Well).

Maryswud (mā-reez-wud) n. Maryswood, area south of the Hoscote Burn, north-east of Flake Hill. It is now within Craik Forest.

masel (maw-sel) pron. myself – ‘A was in masel aa night’, ‘...Says aw half alood – aw’ll e’en harness auld Nell Tae the little spring cairt, an’ the wife an’ masel’ [BM1900], ‘Aa hed to sei for masel’. And it was shundert ...’ [DH], ‘...An’ aw said tae masel’, ‘By jings, but he’s richt’ [IJ] (mysel is less common).

masher (maw-shur) n., poet. a smasher, dandy – ‘The dressmaker masher wi’ scarcely a flaw ...’ [WAP] (not a common word).

mash (mawsh) v. to brew or steep (less common than mask).

mask (mask) v. to brew or steep, particularly tea – ‘did ee mask the tei yet?’, ‘...hed kinnelt a hunt an war thrang poatchin aboot an maskin tei’ [ECS] (cf. the less common mash).

maskin (mas-kin) n., arch. a brewing – ‘...wi’ the maskins o’ peppermint leaves sweetened wi’ trycle ...’ [V&M].

maskis (mas-kis) n., poet. a mastiff – ‘The maskis will not move his tongue, But wag his tail, if she pass by’ [JoHo], ‘He turned himself to a maskys hounde, And the kerlyns to beagles keen ...’ [JTe] (suggested to be an error for Old Scots ‘mastis’).

mason (mā-sin) n. a mason (note the usual pronunciation with the second vowel swallowed).

Mason (mā-sin) n. George (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Agnes Easton and their son George was baptised in 1780. George (b.1780) son of George. He was a tailor at Birkwood according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Ashkirk Parish. He may be the George who married Janet Riddell and whose daughter Nelly was baptised in 1802. George (19th C.) resident of Ashkirk and Selkirk Parishes. He married Mary Scott and their children included: Margaret (b.1821), Janet (b.1823), George (b.1825) and John (b.1827), baptised in Ashkirk; and Gavin (b.1833), Mary (b.1839) and George (b.1842), baptised in Selkirk. John (b.c.1813/4) from Selkirk, he was a farm worker in Robertson and Ashkirk Parishes. In 1841 he was living at Robertson Woodfoot, in 1851 at Borthwickbrae Haugh and in 1861 at Langtonheight. He married Margaret Shakleton in 1833 and their children included: Janet (b.1833); Thomas Hogg (b.1835); George (b.1837); James (b.1839); Christian or Catherine (b.1841); John (b.1843); Elizabeth (b.1845); Margaret (b.1847); and William (b.1850). Patrick (15th C.) recorded as Rector of Minto Church in 1483. He made a request to the Pope that he be allowed to hold another benefice. Thomas (1824/5–94) farmer at Blackburn in Castleton Parish. In 1861 he is recorded as farmer of 800 acres, employing 2 shepherds. He was still at Blackburn in 1868. He married Janet Inglis (1827–1909), who was born and died at Blackburn. Their children included: James Inglis (1854–1904); Helen (1856–1933); Elizabeth Janet (1860–1932); Margaret (1864–1927); Thomas (1868–1911), ‘after 30 years of limitation, and suffering the prison of his body’. His wife also had children Jane and Alexander (Ingles) from a previous marriage. The family are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. William (17th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. His name is written ‘Measone’ (see also Masson).

the Masonic (thu-maw-so-neek) n. popular name for the Masonic Hall, referring to the former building at Myreslawgreen or the one on Union Street. There were dances organised at the Union Street hall during the 1930s, continuing during and after the War years for the benefit of troops stationed at Stobs, and often organised by Jocky Thomson.

the Masonic Hall (thu-maw-so-neek-hawl) n. former Freemason’s building at Myreslawgreen until 1922, after which No. 111 moved to Commercial Road. The other Lodge, No. 424, has been on Union Street since 1893, and often held functions in its adjoining hall. The hall at Myrselawgreen had previously been the ‘Green Kirk’, and was later used for dances, when it was referred to as ‘the Rabble’.

the Masons (thu-mā-sinz) n. the Masonic Lodge, associated with the Free and Accepted Masons, an international fraternal and charitable organisation, founded on Christianity, with its own set of rituals, acting as a meeting place for men, for social enjoyment and mutual assistance. In Hawick there have been Masons since at least 1768 and there are two separate clubs: Lodge St. John, No. 111 on Commercial Road; and Lodge St. James, B.U.R.A., No. 424 on Union Street. The second was set up after a dispute arising in the first in 1863 connected with the Volunteers. These lodges have typically had a number of the town’s most prominent men as members. There was also in the late 19th century another chapter, ‘Border Union Royal Arch Chapter No. 89’ in Hawick. The Lodge of Melrose St. John claims to be the oldest in Scotland and celebrates with a torchlight procession each 27th

December. In the 19th century the local Freemasons were conspicuous at opening ceremonies and processions, e.g. for laying the foundation stone for the Subscription Rooms in 1821 and the Exchange Buildings in 1865 and at the opening ceremony for the Dod Burn water supply in 1882 – ‘These only, through their power o’er thee, Are valueless or fraught with good; There’s but one upward path for me, That path through deeds of Brotherhood’ [JEDM].

massie (maw-see) adj., arch. haughty, bump-tious, overly proud – ‘Never devaaldin ti crack prood an massy about its bonnie bits an its history’ [ECS], ‘...lang or monie a massy jumpeet-up toon was buggen or thocht o’ [ECS], ‘...Elect a trader ca’d John Kyle, Massy, in iz merchant style’ [MB], adv. haughtily, proudly – ‘...never devaaldin ti crack prood an massy about its bonnie bits an its history’ [ECS], ‘But I’ll up throwe thir divots Afore him, massy, his lane, Ablow thon lee’in’ hunderwechts O’ marble stane!’ [DH] (also spelled ‘massy’).

Masson (maw-sin) n. Alexander (18th/19th C.) weaver in Lilliesleaf. His children included: Margaret (b.1784); Agnes (b.1790); Joseph (b.1800); and Alexander (b.1802). George (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. His children included: William (b.1752); ‘Nanse’ (b.1754); and Elizabeth (b.1760). George (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. He is recorded as ‘Junior’ in 1790, so he is probably son of the earlier George. His children included: Isabel (b.1784); Elizabeth (b.1786); Rabina (b.1788); George (b.1790); George (again, also b.1790); Robert (b.1792); Margaret (b.1795); and Janet (b.1797). He may be the farm servant at Lilliesleaf listed on the 1801 ballot for the Militia; however, he would have been too young to be the father of Isobel in 1784. William (20th C.) head forester on the Cavers estate. He lived with his family at the Overseer’s Cottage from about 1923 until the late 1940s. His wife was Nellie and their children were: Marjory, who married Johnnie Bryce and was postmistress at the Sandbed Post Office; Hellen, who married Allan Watt of Dovemount newsagent’s; and Ina, who married Thomas Brockie of Hawthornside farm (this name may be a variant of Mason).

rising between Millstone Edge and Langtae Hill. It is marked on a 1718 survey of Skelfhill farm.

Masterton (maw-stur-tin) n. Thomas (b.1828/9) from Edinburgh. He was a grocer and spirit dealer on the Sandbed, along with William Richmond. The pair are listed in the 1851 census and as ‘Richmond & Masterton’ in Slater’s 1852 directory.

mateit (mā-tee’, -ti’) pp., poet. mated – ‘Dame Fortune hath unto thee mateit Mair hamilt place ...’ [JoHa].

Mathane (maw-thān) n. Thomas (14th C.) recorded as ‘de Mathane’ when he was Archdeacon of Teviotdale in 1394. He is described as ‘teacher and schoolmaster’ of David, Earl of Carrick, eldest son of the King of Scotland, who petitioned for a benefice for him. It is unclear where he was from. Nothing else appears to be known about him.

Mather (ma-dur) n. Andrew of Lanton (16th C.) listed in 1549 among the associates of Walter Ker of Cessford who were accused of helping the English raid Goldielands and neighbouring farms. His name is recorded as ‘Andro Mader of Langtoun’. In 1553/4 he was ‘Andream Mader de Langtoun’ when he was on the panel for the inheritance of Walter Scott of Branhholme. He could be the ‘Andrew Meyther’ who signed a bond of assurance with Somerset at Kelso in 1547, along with many other Border lairds. Andrew (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He probably farmed near Newton and was closely related to James, John and Margaret, who are listed separately. He may be the Andrew who married Isabel Haliburton in Bedrule in 1699. Andrew (17th C.) recorded as ‘cottar’ at Ruletownfoot according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Andrew (b.c.1770s) servant at North Synton according to the 1799 ballot for the Militia in Ashkirk Parish. Daniel (1716/7–99) tenant farmer at Ashybank. He paid tax for having a saddle horse at Ashybank in the years 1789–97. He was recorded as owner of 10 farm horses and 1 saddle horse there on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was additionally taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. He married Jean Chisholme, who died in 1795, aged 72. Their son James succeeded as tenant of Ashybank. Daniel (1808–69) son of James, he was born at Ashybank. He took over from his father as tenant of Hallrule when he reached majority. Sometime during his tenancy of Hallrule a large cairn was removed, inside which was discovered an ‘urn’ (which has not survived). He was said to be a big, powerful-looking man, with a slow, deep voice and possessed of an abundance of common sense. He lived in Rule Water for more than 50 years. He was responsible for ploughing Ruberslaw almost up to the crags (although this resulted in the removal of an ancient cairn). He was a keen horseman and rode with the Buccleuch Hunt. He also purchased land in Ireland and improved the farms there, although in 1855 he was shot in the back there, taking several months to recover, despite attempting to follow his assailant on horseback. He also had some pellets embedded in his forehead until his death. As a result of this purchase in Ireland he was referred to as 'of Falty Park, Ballinasloe'. In 1851 he was recorded as farmer of 600 acres of arable land and 7000 acres of hill pasture, employing 41 men and 10 women. He was still recorded as farmer at Hallrule in 1868. He died unmarried and left his property to his sister's son John Arres (who added his surname). John and James Arres erected a memorial to his memory (and including other family members) in Jedburgh Abbey cemetery. George (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1504 as 'george mader of langtoun'. He was surety to enter Tom and James (presumably relatives) as well as 2 men named 'finlo' to answer for the murder of 'David bachelor'. George (17th C.) tenant in 'Langtoun' (i.e. Lanton). The will of his wife Helen Brown is recorded in 1686. George (18th C.) dyker in Lanton. His wife 'Isble Madder' died in 1762, aged 39, and is buried in Bedrule kirkyard. Helen (17th C.) resident of Spittal-on-Rule on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. James (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1598 as schoolmaster at Longnewton. He is also recorded in deeds of 1608 and 1609 as schoolmaster at Bedrule. Probably the same James was schoolmaster at Jedburgh and Hundalee in 1610. James (17th C.) recorded as owner of lands at Lanton in the 1643 valuation rolls. He also held 'the lands called Turnbull's lands' in Jedburgh Parish. He was probably son or brother of John of Lanton, who is also listed in 1643. Probably the same James is recorded at Lanton in 1663. James (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He probably farmed near Newton and was probably closely related to Andrew, John and Margaret. He may be the James recorded as owner of lands in Lanton valued at £580 in 1678 (and also lands in Ulston); at the same time William of Lanton held the bulk of the lands there, and so was probably his father or elder brother. James (1761/2–1826) farmer, who was tenant at Ashybank in the first quarter of the 19th century. He was son of Daniel, who farmed there before him. In 1813 made an offer to be tenant of Langburnshiels, his success being announced after the Laird, James Elliot of Harwood, dined with all the prospective tenants in the Tower Inn in Hawick. A few years later he leased Hallrule farm. He married Rachel Ogilvie, who died in 1837, aged 71. Their son Daniel took over the farm, and they also had a daughter, Jessie. James (18th/19th C.) lived at Mosshouses, Dykeraw and Southdean. He married Janet Sinton in Southdean in 1803. Their children included: John (b.1804); Peter (b.1805); Janet (b.1808); Agnes (b.1811); James (b.1812); Margaret; Ann, who married Matthew Henderson in Oxnam; and Cecilia, who married William Telfer in Jedburgh. James (c.1810–bef. 1857) gardener, grocer and spirit dealer in Wilton. He is listed in Pigot's 1837 directory in Wilton, as grocer and spirit dealer. He is recorded among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1840, when he was a gardener at Damside. He was a gardener and spirit dealer at Damside on the 1841 census. By 1851 his widow was a vintner on Wilton Path and she was listed as grocer on Wilton Path in Slater's 1852 directory, suggesting that he was already deceased by then. He was also a master gardener. He married Janet Lillico. Their children included: Andrew (b.1831); Robert (b.1834); Agnes (b.1835), who married Robert Weir and secondly Robert Cavers (in 1857, by which time he was deceased); and James (b.1839). His father may be the 'Mr. Mather' whose property is marked on Wood's 1824 map along what became Baker Street. This may thus be the family that gave its name to Mather's Close. Janet (b.1800/1) grocer listed on Wilton Path in 1851 and in Slater's 1852 directory, as well as in 1861. She was married to James, who appears to have died at least by 1857. In 1861 she was living with her daughter Agnes Cavers (also a widow) and granddaughter Robina Cavers. Rev. John (d.bef. 1642) son of William of Lanton, he graduated from Edinburgh University in 1598. He became minister at Minto in 1601 and was translated to Hassendean in 1602. He was deposed in 1609 for 'divers slanders (keeping licentious company, &c.)'. His widow is described as being destitute in 1642. Robert Collace was recorded as being Reader at Hassendean in 1606, so it may be that Collace was the actual preacher, while Mader simply held the living. John of Lanton (17th C.) recorded as owner of lands in Jedburgh Parish in 1643. It is possible he is the same man as Rev. John. Andrew and the recently deceased John, recorded as owners of lands in Lanton in 1788, were probably his descendants. John (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He probably farmed near Newton and was related to Andrew, James and Margaret. John (18th C.) Town Piper in Hawick, probably around 1732–41. His surname is recorded as 'Meadar'. In 1732 he was recorded being paid for playing at the King's Rantin. John (18th C.) married Isabel Rutherford in Minto Parish in 1736. Margaret (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. She was probably widow of a farmer near Newton. Nichol (b.c.1770s) listed being 'with Mr Graham Surgeon' in Hawick on the 1799 ballot for the Militia. He was presumably an assistant to Hawick's doctor at that time. His surname was written 'Maidar'. Thomas (16th C.) listed among the occupiers of the lands of Newton in Bedrule in 1531. Thomas (17th C.) tenant at Little Whithaugh in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Walter (18th/19th C.) son of Daniel and probably father of James. He farmed at Ashybank for 12 years up until 1802, which may have been when he died. William (16th/17th C.) recorded as 'Willelmus Mader of Langtoun' in 1569 when he was on the panel of inquest for Grizel Borthwick inheriting superiority of her father's lands in Wilton. He is probably the William of Lanton whose son was Rev. John, minister of Minto. William (16th/17th C.) recorded as 'William Mader of Langtoun' in 1610 when he was listed on an inquest for lands in Rulewater. William of Lanton (17th C.) leased the lands of 'Kaimes and the Hills' from Walter Riddell of Minto in 1683. He paid the land tax in Jedburgh Parish in 1678, his lands of Lanton being valued at about £680; at the same time James (probably his son) had land valued at about £580. He was described as 'in Longtoun' in 1686/7 when Walter Scott, Earl of Taras took him to court for non-payment of duties for the lands of 'Kaimes and Minto hills'. But he sub-leased the same lands to Thomas Rutherford of Knowesouth in 1687. He is probably the William of Lanton recorded in 1707 with lands valued at about £650; at that time 'J. and W. Madders portioners there' had land valued at about £520. William (b.1806/7) tailor in Minto. He is recorded there in 1852. His children included Helen and Isabella. William (b.1857) son of Rachel Tait, born at Wauchope Waas. He took over the local carrier's business from his grandfather William Tait in the mid-1880s. In 1884 he married Elspeth Scott from Twislehope and they had a daughter Margaret Jane. His wife became the local post-mistress (also formerly spelled 'Mader', 'Madder', 'Maidar', 'Maither' and 'Meadar').

Mather's Close (maw-thurz-klōs) n. former passageway off the High Street situated where Baker Street is now. It was once an area of severely over-crowded housing, with shops at the top, and only a narrow passageway connecting to the High Street. There was also a smithy near the top. The 1858 Ordnance Survey map shows a bridge over the mill lade at the bottom. The close was opened up into a street about 1868 when No. 75 High Street was rebuilt.

Matheson (maw-thee-sin) n. James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. His children included Isobel (b.1632), James (b.1635), George (b.1639) and an unnamed child (b.1646). James (17th/18th C.) smith at Kirkhope in at least the period 1698–1702. He married Agnes Coltart and their children included: Jean (b.1695); Walter (b.1698); an unnamed child (b.1702); and Janet (b.1705). James (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Anne Scott and their children included: Elspeth (b.1758); Walter (b.1760); William (b.1763); George (b.1765); Margaret (b.1769); Elspeth (again, b.1772); James (b.1774); and Anne (b.1778). James (b.c.1780) smith at Ashkirk Mill according to the ballot for the Militia in Ashkirk Parish in 1801. He was also listed as a 'Constable', which meant he was excepted from selection for the Militia. He was recorded as blacksmith in Ashkirk in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories, where his name is recorded as 'Matthewson'. His widow Mary was living with 3 of their children at Ashkirk Mill in 1841. He married Mary Gray and their children included: Isabel (b.1807); James (b.1808); John (b.1811); Ann Scott (b.1813); Walter (b.1816); and Robert (b.c.1820). John (b.1812/3) veterinary surgeon and blacksmith in Ashkirk. He may be son of James, who was blacksmith earlier in Ashkirk. He was at Ashkirk Mill in 1841 and was resident of the smithy also known as Crowknowe. In 1861 he was alisted as 'Landed Proprietor & Veterinary Surgeon, Farmer of 22 acres & Blacksmith'. In the Land Tax Rolls of about 1874 he was listed as owner of the lands in Lilliesleaf that had formerly belonged to Andrew Gray. He married Isabella Redford and their children included: Margaret (b.1843); Mary Anne (b.1845); and Isabella (b.1850). Peter (b.1816/7) gardener living at Borthwickshiels Cottage in 1841. In 1851 and 1861 he was gardener at Wolfelee. He married Agnes Gledstains in Peebles in 1838 and their children included: Helen; Louisa; Jane; Euphemia; Andrew (b.1844); Elizabeth (or 'Betsy', b.1844); Thomas (b.1847); Margaret E. (b.1849); James; and Robert (b.1857). Walter (18th C.) married Margaret Lillico in 1722, the marriage being proclaimed in Bedrule and Minto Parishes. Rev. William (1849–1913) training at Edinburgh Theological Hall, he was the last minister of the old Congregational Kirk in Hawick, replacing Rev. W.L. Walker, but only staying for part of 1877. The congregation had already dwindled, and probably those remaining joined the Evangelical Kirk, which later changed its name to become today's Congregational Kirk. Perhaps the same 'W.W. Matheson' was appointed in 1886 as an Honorary Missionary for the Edinburgh Benevolent Society for the Deaf and Dumb, serving Hawick. He was later minister at Stuartfield, Aberdeenshire and Cumnock, Ayrshire (sometimes written 'Mathewson' or 'Matthewson'; see also Mathieson).

Matheson's (maw-thee-sinz) n. bakers and confectioners on the west side of North Bridge Street through much of the 20th century.

Mathieson (maw-thee-sin) n. Alexander 'Sandy' (19th C.) brother of James. He was gardener at Weens, and together with his brother and John Halliday ('the Rustic Bard') founded the Hobkirk Flower Show. In 1851 he and his nephew saw 'a man walking in the sky', i.e. a 'Brocken spectre' or mirage illusion of a man's shadow, as reported by John Halliday. He could be the Alexander living at Borthwickshiels Cottage with gardener Peter in 1841. James (19th C.) brother of Sandy, he was gardener at Wauchope, and one of the founders of the Hobkirk Flower Show. James (1825/6–1900) grandson of Sir Walter Scott's coachman, Peter. It was said that he could remember being bounced on the knee of the great author. He was a foreman at Weensland Mills. He married Charlotte Sinclair, who died in 1889, aged 62. Their children included Charlotte, Alison and Thomas (all of whom died young), as well as another Charlotte and William Sinclair (who was a confectioner and tobacconist). He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. John (17th/18th C.) tenant of lands at Bewlie along with James Shiel. They leased the Kirklands of Bewlie from Walter Scott of Whitfield in 1720. John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1770 he witnessed a baptism for Robert Cowan at Borthaugh, and another for James Turnbull at Courthill. In 1772 he witnessed a baptism for George Turnbull at Appletreehall and another for Thomas Turnbull at Damside. Robert (17th C.) resident of Ashnkirk Parish. He witnessed baptisms in 1651 for James Elliot, in 1652 for Thomas Fletcher and in 1661 for James Rathie and Isobel (who was likely related). He married Margaret Turnbull and their children included James (b.1659) and William (b.1660). Robert (18th C.) resident of Castleton. He is said to have married Elizabeth, daughter of William, who was a cooper and farmer at Dinlabyre. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. He was smith at Forkins in 1751 and 1759. His children included: Thomas James (b.1748); Isobel (b.1749); Anne (b.1751); Margaret (b.1754); Thomas (b.1756); Robert (b.1759); Andrew (b.1761); Betty (b.1764); and William (b.1767). Thomas (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His daughter Isobel was baptised in 1791. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident at Newcastleton, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He may be the Thomas, who married Margaret Plenderleith in Hawick in 1792, whose children included Mary (b.1792), Helen (b.1794), Isabel (b.1795), John (b.1797) and William (b.1798), baptised at Pathhead. W. (18th/19th C.) carter in Castleton. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. William Sinclair (1867–1932) son of James. For almost 40 years he was a confectioner and tobacconist at 16 Bridge Street. He married Annie Yule, who died in 1935, aged 64 (formerly written 'Mathisoun', 'Matthison', 'Matthisoun', etc.; see also Matheson).

mauky (mawk-ee) adj., arch. infested with maggots – ‘Maaky, maukie = maggoty (Gaun o maaks)’ [ECS] (also written ‘maaky’ and ‘maukie’).

mauky-flei (mawk-ee-flī) n., arch. the blue bottle or blow fly – ‘Maukie-flei = ‘maggoty-fly’, the bluebottle’ [ECS], ‘Dirty white-wesh, deid-rot treis, Baked bean tins and mawky fleis ...’ [DH] (also written ‘mawky flei’ and see mauk-flei).

Mauley (maw-lee) n. Sir Robert (13th/14th C.) son of Peter and brother of Peter. He was Constable and Sheriff of Roxburgh. He was thus recorded on several charters covering about the years 1305–07. He was the English Sheriff at a time of great upheaval, when the castle may have changed hands. It is thus unclear whether he really had administrative authority in the county during this period.

maun (mawn) v., arch. must – ‘Then up and spake the laird’s ain Jock: There’s naething for’t, the gates wi’ maun force ...’ [CPM], ‘And ye maun gae to the Ferney Tower, The road ye maunna tarry ...’ [JTe], ‘And I maun gae over the sea, Mary, And I maun gae over the sea’ [JTe], ‘E’en sae, the poet says, Amen, For he main drop the praying strain’ [JoHa], ‘Hame o’ my happy days, now I maun leave thee, Scenes o’ my joys and waes, O I maun leave thee’ [JoHa], ‘It maun be to you, for ’twas you that he socht ...’ [JJ], ‘However, the Great Chief maun ken some English or he wadna’ be here’ [JEDM], ‘... thou, O Solomon, maun hae ane thousan’ [HSR], ‘... whase mooth maun be haudden in wi’ bitte an’ brydle’ [HSR], ‘... mauna see mauni

mauni (maw-ni, -nu) contr., arch. mustn't, must not – 'ee mauni dae that', 'I canna take it, Sir – I maunna take it – ye maun take it back' [JTe], 'It manna gaun tae ma heid or Aw'll no' can tell ma story' [JEDM], 'There's nocht without trouble, Ye mauna complain' [GWe], 'I wish he maunna fell a wean Wi' some unlucky stroke, For catapults an' slings there's nane Like our Little Jock' [JT], '...and that 'we maunna become like the Auld Kirk which, etc., etc.' [RJW], 'My best deerskin was badly torn, But I maun hie an' mauna mourn' [WP] (there are several spelling variations, including 'manna', 'mauna', 'maunae' and 'maunna'; cf. mustni).

Maurice (maw-ris) n. (13th C.) described as Parson of Hawick when he witnessed a letter of dedication for St. Peter's churchyard in 1235. He is thus one of the earliest Hawick ministers on record. His surname is unknown, although he may have been a Lovel, since another Maurice from that family was Parson at 'Little Cavers' later the same century.

maut (maw', mawt) n., arch. malt, sprouted barley mainly used for brewing, ale brewed from malt – 'I'd rather be ca'd Hobie Noble, In Carlisle where he suffers for his faut, Before I were ca'd traitor Mains, That eats and drinks of meal and maut. Fala, &c.' [CPM], 'Some toil'd for meal, an' some for maut, While some were just niff-naffin'' [JR], 'Hale be your heart, my cantie cheel', May gudeness gie ye maut and meal' [JoHa], '...might partake of pot-luck with him, taste his maut and mountain dew ...' [RW], '...His last drop o' maut licker – But gin heid hained The odd hauf-croon Hei wad hae druckent quicker!' [DH].

the Mauthaugh (thu-maw'-hawch) n. former name for an area in Hawick near the Slitrig, named after the malt kiln that was once there. It may be the same place that was later called 'the Deid Haugh' or 'the Brewery Haugh' (recorded in a sasine of 1728).

mautman (maw'-mawn) n., arch. a maltman, someone who makes malt, a brewer. Hawick had 3 of these recorded in the late 17th century – 'The bailies adjudge Robert Inglis, maltman, to pay £30 to the town's use, because he was not burdened with quartering the English army ...' [BR1651], 'William Hardie maltman and Christian Lookup both in Hawick were married April 3rd' [PR1724].

Mautsteep see the Maut Steep

the Maut Steep (thu-maw'-steep) n. the 'Malt Steep', an area noted on old maps, north of Lockieshedge, which contained premises used for steeping barley and other grains in preparation for brewing. John Laing's field there was one of the earliest to be divided into allotments in the mid 19th century. It was an address used in the 1841 census, with 2 families separate from those at Lockieshedge (also written as one word).

mavis (mā-vis) n., poet. song thrush, Turdus philomelos – 'Nor yet because the mavis sings his mellow morning glee Sae sweetly frae the branches o' the auld aik tree' [JoHa], 'As arm in arm we walk'd alang, The mavis lilted up his sang ...' [JoHa], 'To list the mavis in the dean, The merle within the grove' [JTe], 'The mavis chants a merry glee, The blackbird answers frae his tree' [DA], 'A mavis might pike at yer nose for a cherry ony day, ya guid for naething vagabond' [JEDM], '...every blackbird, mavis and starling Jock saw ...' [RM], 'The mavis, lintie and laverock lilt Their love-lays in cadence sweet' [TK], 'Nor mavis on thy topmost twigs Pour forth his ardent evening sang ...' [WP], 'The mavis wales an up-stage brainch The first act aria begins ...' [DH], '...when a mavis cam and lichtit on the top o yin pole and syne a blackie on top o another' [DH], 'For her the mavis sings a sweeter note ...' [WL] (from Old French; note that the name is not applied to the larger mistle thrush).

maw (maw) v., arch. to mow – 'Muirmen were mawin' hay far down The hill-side, lowne an' braid ...' [ECB], 'When Tam and Will, wi' mawin' stiff and sair, Laid doon their scythes, that night to maw nae mair' [JoHa] (the past tense is mawd and the past participle mawn).

maw (maw) n., arch. whit, bit, particularly in phrases such as 'fiend a maw' – 'Feend a maw o um! = Not he! or Not him!' [ECS].

maw (maw) n., poet. a gull – 'Whiles, at the Daisy and the Bard, They [gulls] tak their spite – But it's a gey coorse maa daur fyle Wallace, wight' [DH] (also written 'maa'; cf. gill-maw and pick-maw).

mawe (mow) n., arch. the mew of a cat – '...and about hauf a score o' great big grey cats cam in ane by ane, – gaed a loud mawe ...' [EM1820], v. to mew.

mawer (maw-ur) n., arch. a mower – ‘Wharewi’ the mawer fillsna his han’, nar the bandstir his bozim’ [HSR].

mawky-flei see mauky-flei

mawn (mawn) pp., arch. mown – ‘He sall cum doun like raine apon the mawn gerse, as shoors that water the yirth’ [HSR] (cf. mawd).

mawkin see maukin

Maxpoffle (mawks-po-ful) n. Victorian red sandstone house near Bowden. It was built in the 1860s to replace a house constructed c.1810. The lands also contain the remains of a cylindrical dovecote, probably from the 17th century. ‘Adam de Maxpoffel’ swore fealty to Edward I in 1296 and was ‘Adam Makepoffel’ that same year when he had his lands in Roxburghshire restored to him. Rev. Andrew Duncanson of Maxton paid the land tax there in 1678 (the name derives from Old English ‘small piece of land belonging to Maccus, where Maccus is an Irish or Scandinavian form of Magnus, cf. Mackside; it is ‘Maxpople’ on Blaeu’s c.1654 map).

Maxside see Mackside

maxter (maks-tur) n., arch. a mixture – ‘Humour and faith weel blent thegither To match the maxter o’ the days’ [WL] (cf. the more common mixtur).

Maxton (maks-tin) n. village on the A699 between St. Boswells and Kelso, a former station on the Kelso Branch of the North British Railway, and a Parish bordering on St. Boswells and Roxburgh. Destroyed by Hertford’s men in 1545, it was made a Burgh of Barony in 1587, with the Ker’s the original landowners. The parish church is mid-18th century, with portions of an earlier building, and the Maxton Cross is on the former village green. A history of the Parish was published by Charles Denoon in 2000 (the origin is probably ‘the farm belonging to Maccus’ and first appears as ‘Mackestun’ in 1116).

Maxton Court (mawks-tin-kōr) n. part of Stirches, adjacent to Oxnam Court, built in 1976 and named after the village.

Maxwell (maks-wul, -wel) n. Agnes (c.1534–94) 4th Lady of Herries. She was the only daughter and heir of William, 3rd Lord Herries. Her maiden name should probably be considered as ‘Herries’. She married John Maxwell, son of the 5th Lord Maxwell (after Maxwell had sought agreement from her guardian, the Earl of Arran, using 2,000 horsemen!; Maxwell eventually became Lord Herries himself, but later suffered for his support of Mary Queen of Scots). They had

4 sons and 7 daughters, including William, who succeeded. She was the superior of part of the Barony of Feu-Rule (essentially Hobkirk Parish), inherited from her father. There was a major dispute with Sir John Kerr of Ferniehirst in 1561 and 1562 over the Barony, resulting in her lands being fixed at $\frac{1}{3}$ of half of the Barony. Alex see Mowdie Maxwell. Alexander Harley of Portrack (1782–1853) Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch for Eskdale and Liddesdale in the period 1833–51. He married Sarah Telfer Hyslop. Alexander (b.1895/6) originally from Lanarkshire, he was an itinerant pedlar in the Borders, specialising in small hardware items. He was a regular visitor to Newcastleton and elsewhere. He carried a brass-bound wooden box on his back from which he sold cheap jewellery, pocket knives, shaving necessities, etc. He was said to resemble Father Christmas and wear a very tall hat. He was living at 5 High Street on the 1861 census, along with his son William, daughter Ellen and 2 grandchildren. His occupation was given as ‘Travelling Toy & Jewellery Mcht.’ Archibald of Liddelbank and Liverpool (19th C.) along with Thomas (probably his son) he was on the Borders Union Railway Committee for Liddesdale in the 1850s. Sir Aymer (d.1266) son of John, who was Chamberlain of Scotland. He was also Chamberlain, as well as Justiciar. His name was written ‘Eymer’ and other variants. Along with his father, he witnessed a charter for Melrose Abbey’s lands in Ettrick in 1235/6. He granted the lands of Todrig to Alexander de Synton in about 1260. He may be the same as the ‘Elmero de Maxwell’ who was ‘vicecomite’ (i.e. Sheriff) of Roxburghshire in about 1250 when he witnessed a deed of Lempitlaw to Soutra. He was removed by King Alexander from his Council, because of offences against England, in a document drawn up at Sprouston in 1255. Lands in Tynedale were delivered to him in 1260/1. He was recorded as the King’s Sheriff in 1262. He married Mary (or Maria) McGeachen of Mearns and was succeeded by his son Sir Herbert. Charles (b.c.1765) surgeon recorded at Riccarton in 1835. He was also there in 1841, along with 2 Janes, probably his wife and daughter. He probably married Jean Jardine and they had a daughter Mary in 1800. He may be the ‘Mr. C. Maxwell, surgeon’ in Jedburgh in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’. He is probably the Dr. Maxwell who was on the Committee of the Proprietors of Castleton Library in 1832. Edward (b.c.1790) originally from Morton in Dumfriesshire, he was a stockingmaker in Wilton. He was listed as a head of family at the Dean in 1835. In 1841 he was a 'Woollen Hosier' living on Burn Row in the Dean and in 1851 was a 'Stockingmaker' at No. 5 Front Row in the Dean. His wife probably died before 1841. His children included Jean (b.c.1815), James (b.1817/8), Edward (b.1822/3), Janet (b.1824/5), William (b.1826/7) and Isabella (b.1828/9). He was probably also father of John (b.1814), who became a prominent textiles manufacturer in the U.S.A. He could be the Edward, son of John and Sarah 'Hoat' born in Morton in 1788. George (16th C.) Hawick merchant mentioned in the will of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1574. He is listed as being owed money for 'merchandise and furneising of the Lairdis seruandis', however, it is unclear what sort of merchant he was. Perhaps the same George was listed in 1571 as one of 4 inhabitants of Hawick who entered themselves to remain in ward in Leith, with Sir William Ker of Caverton as cautioner. In 1572/3 the same men swore allegiance to the Crown and gave assurance that they would not help or reset Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst and others, with Sir James Douglas of Drumlanrig as cautioner. Gilbert (13th/14th C.) received the eastern half of the Barony of Wilton (with Henry Wardlaw being granted the other part) in 1306, presumably for helping Robert the Bruce in his struggle to achieve independence for Scotland. However, in 1342 he pledged the estate to the monks of Melrose Abbey for the payment of one silver penny at the festival of the nativity of St. John the Baptist, while holding the right for himself or his heirs to redeem the land for the payment of £40 sterling. It appears that the land was indeed redeemed, and was later forfeited and returned to the Crown. His seal bore a lion rampant with a saltire on top and the words 'S' GILBERTI DE MAXWELE'. Sir Herbert de (d.c.1206) Sheriff of Teviotdale as well as Dumfries. He is only the 2nd or 3rd recorded generation of Maxwells, but little is known about him. He witnessed the confirmation of the church of Hassendean to Paisley Abbey in the 1180s. He is recorded in a document relating to lands in Yorkshire in 1190/1. He had 3 sons: John, who was Sheriff of Roxburgh and Chamberlain of Scotland; Aymer; and Robert. The later Baron of Wilton, Gilbert, was probably a descendant of his. James (16th/17th C.) member of the court of James VI, who was rewarded in 1605, along with Robert Douglas, with the former Debatable Lands. These were erected into the Barony of Tarras. However, in 1607 the two men brought a case against many Armstrongs and others who had tried to prevent them from possessing the lands. In a second Act of 1609 the lands were granted to him alone. James (b.1808/9) from Kirkcaldy, he was a tin-smith in Hawick. He was on the Kirk Wynd in 1841 and on the Roond Close in 1851. His wife was Janet and they had children Robert, Isabella, Elizabeth ('Betsy'), Agnes, Jane, Hannah and Mary Ann. John (d.1241) Chamberlain to King Alexander II, he also served as Sheriff of Berwick and Sheriff of Roxburgh. He was son of Herbert and brother of Aymer. He witnessed a charter between Gervase Avenel and Melrose Abbey in 1214. He is recorded as Sheriff of Roxburgh when he witnessed grants involving Kelso Abbey from at least 1214 and also another in the period 1213–19 for Patrick of Whitton to Melrose Abbey. In 1215 he was among a few men sent by the King to the English court to attend to his affairs. In 1220 he witnessed a pledge by King Alexander to marry King Henry of England's sister Joan, and in 1221 he witnessed the dowry charter for Joan of England, which included Jedburgh and Hassendean. He was also recorded as Sheriff in 1225 and 1226. As Chamberlain he is also named in many other documents in the 1220s and 1230s. He witnessed the charter granting lands in Ettrick to Melrose Abbey in 1235/6. He was succeeded by his son Aymer. John (d.1513) 4th Lord, son of John. He succeeded his father in 1486 and also then became Warden of the West Marches. He was recorded at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1502, when he was fined for non-appearance for his Roxburghshire lands of Maxwellfield. He was also fined for non-appearance at the court in Dumfries in 1504. In 1508 he, along with William Douglas of Drumlanrig and their men attacked the Crichtons and others in Dumfries. He married Agnes, daughter of James Stewart, 1st Earl of Buchan. They had at least 8 children, including Robert, who succeeded. He was killed at Flodden. John (15th/16th C.) listed among the Borderers (led by the Homes and Walter Scott of Branxholme) pardoned in 1526 for an attack on the Earl of Arran. Sir John 4th Lord Herries of Terregles (c.1512–82/3) younger brother of Robert, 5th Lord of Maxwell. He served as Warden of the West Marches in 1552 and was reappointed in 1561. He was said to be a great supporter of Mary, Queen of Scots. He was listed

(on the side of Sir Walter of Buccleuch) on the 1564/5 bond between the Scotts and the Kerrs. The situation was sufficiently lawless in the West Marches that in 1565 the Privy Council laid out what would happen to his wife and children in the event that he should die performing his duties as Warden. In 1579 he made pledges to bring certain Armstrongs before the Privy Council, and also had a disagreement about ownership of lands with Christie Armstrong of 'Barngleis'. He married Agnes Herries (daughter and heiress of William, 3rd Lord Herries), from whom he inherited his titles. He was succeeded by his son William, the 5th Lord. John 7th Lord Maxwell (1553–93) posthumously born 2nd son of Robert, the 5th Lord. He succeeded after his older brother Robert died aged 4. He and other Maxwells were sureties in 1569 for 5 Scotts of Ewesdale. In 1572 he was among the men who signed the retour for James Douglas to the Barony of Hawick. He signed the 'Band of Roxburgh' in 1573. He was made Warden of the West Marches in the 1570s, although for a while the title was given to his rivals the Johnstones. He was recorded in the register of the Privy Council several times in the 1570s. He and Robert of Cowhill served as sureties for several Amrstrongs and others who were being held in ward. He temporarily received the Earldom of Morton, after the Regent Morton was executed in 1581. He was denounced as a rebel in 1581 for failing to present Armstrongs and Beatties to answer their rieving crimes. He was a strong supporter of the old Catholic religion and was involved with other Lords in struggles for power in Scotland. In 1585, for his good service to the King, he and his followers (a huge number named explicitly) had relief for all their crimes committed since 1569. However, in 1587 he was again out of favour with the King, and was plotting to help the Spanish Armada invade England. He was captured and imprisoned in Edinburgh, but released in 1589. In 1590 he was among Border landlords and heads of families ordered to find caution for the conduct of their dependents. He was again Warden of the West Marches 1590–92. He gathered allies in order to attack the Johnstones, the conflict taking place at Dryfe Sands near Lockerbie in December 1593. These allies included Drumlanrig, who, however, left the battle early with his men. On the Johnstone side were many Scotts, Elliots, Armstrongs, Chisholmes and others from the Hawick area. His force suffered a complete rout and he himself was killed, after being cornered and having his right hand cut off. A letter of 'respite' by

James VI in 1594 lists about 160 men implicated in his slaughter, including many from Teviotdale and Liddesdale. 2 thorn trees 'Maxwell's Thorns' were said to have been planted where he fell. He married Elizabeth, daughter of David Douglas, 7th Earl of Angus. He was succeeded by his son John. John 6th Lord Herries (1583–c.1627) son of William, 5th Lord of Herries. In 1604 he was served heir to his father William in the Barony of Feu-Rule, which was erected with other lands into the Barony of Herries. He was recorded in 1614 when he failed to produce documents relating to the lands of Feu-Rule when requested by Sir Andrew Ker of Oxnam; in 1619 Ker complained that he remained 'unrelaxed from a horning'. He married Elizabeth, daughter of John, 8th Lord Maxwell and was succeeded by his son John, 7th Lord Herries. John 8th Lord Maxwell (c.1585–1613) son of John, who was killed at Dryfe Sands. He was probably the John, Lord Maxwell, who was warded in Edinburgh Castle in 1599 for the obedience of the men of the West March. He was served heir to his father's extensive properties in 1604, including farms in Ewesdale. In 1601 he found caution for the Maxwells in a feud with the Johnstones, with the assurances renewed in 1602. He was a Catholic, like his father, and was imprisoned in 1601 for 'favouring Popery'. In 1602 he was ordered not to be released from Edinburgh Castle for refusing to sign a bond of assurance with Sir James Johnstone, Warden of the West Marches. He escaped Edinburgh Castle in 1602 and had 2 of the Johnstones killed, although there was supposedly a reconciliation in 1605. He challenged William Douglas of Lochleven to a duel over the Morton title, and was again imprisoned in Edinburgh in 1607. However, he once more escaped (although his fellow prisoner Sir James Macdonald was found hiding in a dung hill). Another meeting was arranged to attempted reconciliation with the Johnstones, at which he shot Sir James Johnstone in the back. Tried in his absence in 1609 he fled to France, returned to Scotland in 1612, was captured and executed. The lands and titles he forfeited included the Lordship of the lower part of Ewesdale. He married the only sister of James, 2nd Marquis of Hamilton. His titles and lands were forfeited, but eventually reacquired by his brother Robert. His tale is told in the ballad 'Lord Maxwell's Good Night'. John 3rd Earl of Nithsdale, 7th Lord Herries (d.1677) son of John, 6th Lord Herries of Terregles, his mother being Elizabeth Maxwell, sister of Robert, 1st Earl of Nithsdale. He succeeded his great-grandfather's brother Robert in

1670, as Lord of Maxwell, Eskdale and Carlisle. He was also superior of lands in Arkleton, Meikledale, Ewesdale, including Flask, Howgill, Glendivan, Burngrains, Wolfhope, Park, Terrona and Whitshiels. He married Elizabeth Gordon and was succeeded by his son, Robert, 4th Earl of Nithsdale. John of Broomholm (d.1806) son of William of Broomholm and Agnes Scott of Woll. He was one of the Commissioners appointed in the court case regarding the division of Hawick Common in 1767. He married Wilhelmina Malcolm and was succeeded in turn by his sons George and David. John (1802/3–bef. 1851) stocking-maker who was noted as one of those who helped during the cholera outbreak of 1849. In 1841 he was living at Weensland Mill. He married Helen Nisbet and their children included: Margaret (b.1840); Charlotte (b.1844); John (b.1847), probably the plumber and bandleader; and William Nisbet (b.1850). 3 of the baptisms were also registered with Hwick Free Kirk. His widow and children were living at 4 Teviot Crescent in 1851 and in 1861 his widow, now known as ‘Helen Cook’, aged 42, was a grocer and spirit dealer at 29 High Street. John (b.1814) born in Hawick, son of a hosiery manufacturer who came from Thornhill. He attended the Parish school and learned the business from his father. He emigrated to the United States at the age of 26, arriving in New York in 1840. In 1843 he moved to Cohoes where he made ribbed cuffs. He then invented an attachment enabling knitting machines to make plaid patterns and in 1853 secured a patent for an improved knitting machine. He eventually became President and Treasurer of the Wilton Hygeine Underwear Knitting Company, Philadelphia. John (19th/20th C.) plumber and conductor of the Saxhorn Band. He was probably the son of stockingmaker John born in Hawick in 1847. His plumber, slater, gas-fitter and glazier business was based at 23 Wellington Street. He was known for arranging the hot-water system at Drumlanrig School and others in the town. He took over as Saxhorn Bandleader in 1871 and remained until 1877, after which the band briefly dissolved. The same John appears to have been leader of the Cockermouth Rifle Band in 1876. He was also known as a sportsman, competing in the 18-yard dash at the 1872 Common-Riding Games. In 1868 he married Grace Greenwood from Weensland and they had at least 1 son and 1 daughter. Mina (b.1798/9) recorded as ‘Ind.’ at the farm of Wrae in Ewesdale in the 1841 census. Mysie see Mysie Maxwell. Peter

(18th/19th C.) resident of Edinburgh. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825, and hence presumably had a local connection. Robert 4th Lord of Caerlaverock (d.1546) son of John, who was killed at Flodden. He was part of James V’s Royal Council, also serving as Extraordinary Lord of Session and High Admiral. In addition he was Warden of the West Marches and in 1526 was appointed as Justiciar. He was one of the Border chiefs imprisoned briefly in 1530 for failing to keep control of thieves. He was said to have been terrified of the power of Johnnie Armstrong and when James V had Armstrong hanged, he received a charter for his lands, signed by the King at Priesthaugh. In 1530/1 he was a surety for the entry of John, son of Walter Scott of Synton and William, son of Robert Scott in Allanhaugh. He served as interim Keeper of Hermitage in the 1530s while the Earl of Bothwell was imprisoned or exiled; in 1534 there is an entry in the Lord High Treasurer’s accounts to him ‘for keeping the House of Armytage and Rewling of the inhabitants of Liddesdale for ye space of seven months’ and another entry in 1540 for repairing the castle. He resigned the lands of Park in Ewesdale, for which David Armstrong had a charter in 1535. In 1537 he was granted the lands and possessions in Ewesdale previously belonging to Simon Armstrong of Whitehaugh. In 1540 Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch offered to take over the rule of Eskdale, Ewesdale and Wauchopedale if he would not take it. In 1541 an English letter claims he had met at Langholm with 2 Armstrongs, 2 Elliots and 2 Croziers, to encourage them to carry out raids on England. He was captured by the English at the Battle of Solway Moss in 1542. He married Janet, daughter of Sir William Douglas of Drumlanrig and secondly married Agnes, daughter of James Stewart, 1st Earl of Buchan. His children included: Margaret, who married Archibald Douglas, 6th Earl of Douglas; Robert, who succeeded; and Sir John, Lord Herries of Terregles. Robert 5th Lord of Caerlaverock (d.1552) son of Robert. He succeeded his father in the Barony of Caerlaverock and other lands in 1550. He also held several farms in Ewesdale and Eskdale. In 1545 he was ‘Master of Maxwell’ when listed among Border lairds who gave assurance to ‘have na intelligence with Ingland’. He married Beatrix, daughter of James Douglas, 3rd Earl of Morton. He was Warden of the West Marches from 1550 (but perhaps replacing his father as early as 1542) until his death. He was succeeded by his sons Robert and John. Robert 6th Lord of Caerlaverock (d.1554) son of Robert and Batrix Douglas. He succeeded his father as an infant and died when still just 4, being in turn succeeded by his brother John. Robert 4th Earl of Nithsdale (1628–96) succeeded his father John in his many titles and lands. This included superiority of the farms of Nether Ewesdale. He married Lucy Douglas, daughter of William, 1st Marquess of Douglas. He was succeeded by his son William. Robert G. (1877/8–1916) elder brother of William, founder and head of the woollen manufacturers Robert G. Maxwell & Co., based in Dovecote Street. He lived at the Limes on Raeson Park. He played for Hawick R.F.C. and was President of the South of Scotland Chamber of Commerce. He enlisted into the Seaforth Highlanders in 1914, became Captain and died during an advance on Kut, Mesopotamia. Stewart (b.c.1795) woollen hosier, living at ‘Wilton Lodge Park cottage’ in 1841. This was probably somewhere near the end of Langlands Road. He was there with Elizabeth, who was probably his wife. William (14th C.) holder of the (eastern) half barony of Wilton, and hence probably the heir of Gilbert. He appears to have redeemed the estate from the monks of Melrose Abbey and then forfeited it to the Crown, sometime around 1340. It was then granted to John, son of Margaret (surname not given). He is possibly the William, who along with his wife, was granted the lands of ‘Apiltrie’ by King Robert, after being forfeited by Thomas Carnoto (probably Charteris); this is likely to be Appletreehall, although there are other possibilities. William (1555–1604) 5th Lord Herries, son of Agnes Herries and Sir John Maxwell. He held part of the Barony of Feu-Rule. In 1587 he served as Warden of the Western Marches and in 1587/8 he was instructed to enter a number of Elliots, Armstrongs and others to the Privy Council. In 1597 he complained against Englishmen for stealing large amounts of livestock from his farms, as well as ransoming 4 of his servants. He was Warden of the West March in 1600 when listed among leaders ordered to appear before the Privy Council to give advice about peace on the Border. In 1602 he granted the wardship of Appotside and Tythehouse to James Hamilton and also the lands of Harwood and Hawthornside to him during the minority of Hector Lorraine. In 1603 he granted a marriage contract between Turnbills in Feu-Rule. He married Catherine, daughter of Commendator Mark Kerr and was succeeded by his son John, 6th Lord Herries. Rev. William (1600–51) graduating from St. Andrews University in 1620, he was presented to Minto Parish at the end of 1624 and admitted there in 1625. He was the minister of Minto who signed the National Covenant in Hawick in 1638 (although his name was transcribed ‘Mr Wm. Murray (?)’). He preached at Bedrule in 1640, during the ceremony to admit Henry Elliot as the new minister there. He was presented to St. Mary’s Kirk of the Lowes in 1641, but the move did not happen, instead he remained at Minto until his death. He married Anna Inglis and was survived by his wife and 4 children. William 5th Earl of Nithsdale (1676–1744) succeeded his father Robert in his many titles and lands in 1696. In 1698 he was also served heir (perhaps just to reconfirm his rights) to the lands and titles of his ancestor Robert (great-grandfather of his father and older brother of John, Lord Herries, who was grandfather of John, Earl of Nithsdale, also his grandfather). This included superiority of the farms of Nether Ewesdale. His mother was Lucie Douglas, daughter of William, 1st Marquess of Douglas. He took part in the Jacobite rising of 1715, was captured and imprisoned in the Tower of London, but escaped by changing clothes with his wife’s maid. He fled to Rome, but lost all his titles and properties. William (18th C.) recorded in 1788 as owner of the lands in Lilliesleaf valued at £10. William (d.1916) brother of Robert G., and partner in the Dovecote Street manufacturing business. He was killed at the Somme (formerly spelled ‘Mackuswell’, ‘Maxwall’ and variants).

Maxwellheugh (maks-wul-hewch) n. hamlet just south of Kelso (the origin of the name is probably from the Old English personal name ‘Maccus’, along with ‘wiella hoh’ meaning ‘height beside the pool’; the name is first recorded as ‘Mackus well’ about 1200).

Maxwell’s (maks-wulz, -welz) n. former woollen manufacturer and cloth merchants, R.G. Maxwell & Co., located in the building in Dovecote Street which was converted into Horne Court. Both brothers Robert and William were killed in WWI, their combined wills being equivalent to well over £1 million today. The firm folded soon afterwards.

Maxwell Street (maks-wul-stree) n. original name for Carnarvon Street, built in 1877, named after local engineer Robert Maxwell Chambers. The name lasted only until 1882.

Mayfield (mā-feeld) n. council housing scheme in the north-west of town, comprising Mayfield Drive and connecting streets, Bothwell Court, Bruce Court and Wallace Court. It was developed after the ground was purchased in 1962, and named after Mayfield House. There was also some private housing developed in the same area, called Mayfield Park.

the Mayfield Bar (thū-mā-feeld-bawr) n. pub on Mayfield Drive, situated in the former Lodge for Mayfield House. It was converted to a bar and restaurant around 1970 and closed in 2020.

Mayfield Drive (mā-feeld-driv) n. part of the Mayfield housing scheme, built in 1970 and named after Mayfield House and estate. It is a loop off the top of Dickson Street.

Mayfield Hoose (mā-feeld-hoos) n. Mayfield House and estate stood where the Mayfield housing scheme is, and was named after the may (hawthorn tree blossoms) which occurred there. It was construction by local building firm George Tait. It was the home of James Oliver, partner in George & James Oliver.

Mayfield Lodge (mā-feeld-luj) n. Mayfield Lodge, the gate-house for Mayfield estate, situated on Wilton Crescent. It is now the Mayfield Bar.

may-flooor (mā-floor) n. the wild primrose, Primula vulgaris, but also the lady's smock, Cardamine pratensis.

May Hirin Fair (mā-hī-rin-fār) n. formerly the main fair in Hawick for the hiring of farm workers etc., up until the latter part of the 19th century. The date was generally the 17th of May, but for many years it extended over 2 days, with the first day considered to be for the country people and the second for the townspeople. It was held at the Sandbed until 1815, with gypsies' carts etc. filling the area and other 'krames' spilling up into the High Street. The North side of the street typically had gingerbread, nuts and other edible wares, while the South side was generally for shoes, wooden vessels, china, crystal, etc. These stalls were closely packed together all the way to the Town Hall. As well as being a festive fair there was also hiring of farm workers and servants and a cattle market. It was additionally the occasion for a parade around town by the Cornet and his supporters, headed by the drums and fifes, which was followed by a dance, without female partners; this tradition ended in the 1880s, by which time the Fair had also died out. The earlier fair was effectively replaced with the modern stalls at the Mair and Shows on the Haugh during the Common Riding.

May o Gorrenberry (mā-ō-go-rin-bu-ree) n. probably fictional beauty in John Leyden's poem 'Lord Soulis'. She was supposedly betrothed to the young heir to Branxholme – 'O May she came, and May she gaed, By Goranberry green; And May she was the fairest maid That ever yet was seen' [JL].

Maypole Plantin (mā-pōl-plawn-tin) n. former name for a plantation to the south of the grounds of Wells House (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

maze (māz) v., arch. to amaze, bewilder.

mazin (māz) v., arch. amazing, astonishing, but not necessarily in a good way – 'She's a mazin' concern', said of a third (absent) woman by one gossip to another' [GW].

McAllister (muk-aw-lis-tur) n. Daniel (b.1799/1800) from Argyll, he was a gardener at Borthwickbrae. He was living at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot or Borthwickbrae Cottages in 1841, 1851 and 1861. His wife was Margaret (from Lanark) and their children included Isabella, Amelia, Margaret, Jane, Janet and John.

McArthur (muk-awr-thur) n. Duncan of Bardrairie (17th/18th C.) Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch for Liddesdale and Canonbie in the period 1686–1713. He also held the title of Bailie of the Regality. He was named as an agent of the Duchess of Buccleuch on the rental rolls for Branxholme in 1690, 1692, 1694 and 1698. He is also recorded (presumably incorrectly) as David.

McAteer (mawk-a-teer) n. Watson (1953–) from Hawick, he worked in the police force, becoming head of the Hawick sub-division before moving to the Serious Crime Squad in Edinburgh and eventually to Divisional Police Commander. He was part of the investigation into the Lockerbie air disaster. He became a local Councillor in 2014. In 2017 he was selected to be Honorary Provost.

McBean (muk-been) n. Hector (b.1828/9) from Edinburgh, he was a plumber and gas-fitter at 4 Orrock Place in 1861. His wife was Margaret and their children included Beatrice and Mary H.

McBirnie (muk-bir-nee) n. Samuel (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Janet Turnbull and their children included: Janet (b.1805); John (b.1808); Bell (b.1810); and Bell (again, b.1812).

McCabe (mu-kāb) n. Thomas (b.1827/8) from Ireland, he worked as a tailor in Hawick. In 1861 he was living at 7 Back Row. In 1852 he married Janet (c.1832–1904), daughter of shoemaker Adam Kersel. Their children included Patrick, Elizabeth and Margaret.

McCall (mu-kawl) n. Charles B. (20th C.) son of Malcolm, he was a solicitor in Hawick with Thomas Purdom's. He was also Depute Town Clerk of Hawick. He served as Clerk of the Deacon's Court of St. George's Kirk in the 1930s. Malcolm (1856/7–1924) Honorary Sheriff Substitute and agent of the British Linen Bank. He held several offices at St. George's Kirk, including Clerk of the Deacon's Court and Treasurer. He married Susan Janet Hogg (who died in 1933, aged 63) and their son Archibald died of wounds inflicted at Ypres in 1917. He is buried in Wilton Cemetery. Thomas (17th C.) listed as 'now servant' to Walter Earl of Buccleuch in the deceased Earl's inventory of 1633. It is unclear if he was a servant at Branksome or in Edinburgh or elsewhere (formerly written 'Makall' etc.).

McCallum (mu-kaw-lum) n. Ann (b.1807/8) school mistress living on the Kirkwynd in 1841. She lived there with her mother Elizabeth Scott and her son James F. Edmondson. This suggested she had been born Scott, and married to a Mr. McCallum and also perhaps a Mr. Edmondson. She is on Buccleuch Street in Pigot's 1837 directory, at Slitrig Bank in 1852 (but this is probably the same place as the Kirkwynd) and had moved to Myreslaw Green by 1861. J. (d.1897) assistant to Mr. Dodds at Hawick Grammar School, where he taught the older boys around the 1860s. He then became Parish Schoolmaster at Kirkton and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery.

McCann (mu-kan) n. George Auxiliary Minister at Selkirk, linked with Ashkirk, in the 1990s. James (19th C.) married Janet Thomson in Wilton in 1843.

McCartney (mu-kawr'-nee) n. Rev. Alexander C. (1930–2009) raised in Ayrshire, he was educated at Cumnock Academy, trained as an engineer in Kilmarnock and became an engineering officer in the Merchant Marines. He later worked at Prestwick and the electricity board, but late in life trained for the ministry. He was assistant at Castlehill Church in Ayr, then minister at Kelty Parish in Fife from 1974. In 1985 he became minister of St. Mary's Church (linked with Cavers and Kirkton). The link with Cavers and Kirkton was broken in 1988, and he remained as minister of St. Mary's until 1987. He was keenly involved in local music, and took riding lessons so he could gain his Mosstroopers' Badge. He was also a regular speaker at Burns suppers, and a football fan. From 1987 he was minister of Caputh, Cluny and Kinclaven in Perthshire and retired in 1995. He and his wife Nancy then moved to Crail. They had a son Keith and daughter Elna. Robin Bruce 'Bruce' son of Robert, he was a chemistry teacher at Langholm Academy. While at Edinburgh University he was President of the Railway Society, and took part in the protests related to the closure of the Waverley Line in 1969. He wrote 'The Railway to Langholm: An Illustrated Record' (1991) and was co-compiler (with Brenda I. Morrison) of 'The Ewes Valley' (2000). Kenneth 'Kenny' (1953–) played for Hawick R.F.C. in the 1970s and has refereed at all levels, including internationals in the 1990s. He is a fireman by trade. He was also Acting Father in 2000, has been a Scottish Borders Councillor and became Honorary Provost in 2005. Robert (1909–96) writer of 'A Song O' Hawick'. He was born in Wilton Dean, brought up in the Westend and lived later at Lockhart Place. The family originally came from the Langholm area and he was a cousin of the father of Kenny. He was a Kennedy-Dechan gold medallist at the High School in 1924. He spent the years of WWII with Montgomery's 8th Army, but otherwise spent his working life as a solicitor's clerk with Purdom's. He was Treasurer of the Liberal Club for many years and was heavily involved in the P.S.A. Choir. He always enjoyed music and played the mouth organ. He spent his later life in Buccleuch Rest Home, where he started writing local verse. He recorded his 'A Song O' Hawick' on cassette tape, and it was transcribed by Ian Seeley in 1990. He died in the Cottage Hospital and was buried in the Wellogate.

McCaskie (mu-kaw-skee) n. Thomas (19th C.) owner of a hat factory in Under Damside in the early 1800s. This was probably formerly the business premises of William Wilson's, with shop on the Howegate. William Wilson was his apprentice and son of the manufacturer of the same name, who purchased the business from him, so that he became the journeyman to his former apprentice. James Wilson (later of the Economist) joined in 1822, the business moving to Orrock Place and then the Kilnpath. When William and then James Wilson moved to London in 1824, the business in Hawick probably closed. In 1821 he married Elizabeth Taylor (aunt of another Elizabeth Taylor, mother of David Hardie of Blenkhorn, Richardson), and she died in 1863, aged 70. They had a son George, who died aged 20. Their daughters Charlotte and Margaret ran a girl's school in Bourtree Place for a while, but later emigrated to Australia. His wife was living with his daughters at 4 Bridge Street (perhaps the modern No. 22) in 1861.

McClelland (mu-kle-lind) n. Thomas (19th C.) Precentor in Kirkton Kirk at the end of the 19th century. When a new organ was installed in 1893 the post or organist was combined with that of precentor and he was given a marble clock for his service.

McClymont (mu-kli-min) n. Rev. James (1809–86) Denholm Minister, born at Dalmellington in Ayrshire. He was educated at Glasgow University and the Divinity Hall in Edinburgh, became minister at Birdhopecraig in Northumberland, then was assistant in Ayrshire and was ordained in 1837. However, he left the Established Church to join the Free Church, and was called to Carsphairn and Dalmellington, but was not settled there. He was translated to New Hampstead in London in 1846 and then became minister at Denholm Free Kirk 1847–86, one of the longest serving ministers there. For the last few years he was assisted by Thomas Pitt. He married three times, one wife being Mary Roxburgh, with whom he had a son, James Roxburgh. His last wife was Elizabeth Rutherford Turnbull. Their children were: Andrew Colville (b.1872); John Campbell (b.1874); William 'Willie' (b.1876); Anna Marion (b.1877); and Alexander Watson 'Alec' (b.1879), who was a United Free Church minister. His last child was born when he was 70 years old. He died in Edinburgh.

McColl (mu-kōl) n. Rev. Alexander Munn (1831–66) born in Liverpool, only son of Alexander, a sailor from Greenock, he was educated at Glasgow University. He was ordained as minister of Cavers in 1854 and remained there until his death. He married Jane Carfin, daughter of William Elliot of Hawick. She later married advocate David Duncan and died in 1893 (also written 'Maccoll' and 'M'Coll').

McCombe (mu-kōm) n. Jake (1930–) Hawick man who won the European and World Freestyle Archery Championships in 1971. He worked in a number of jobs, ending up as a Hoover repair man.

McConnell (mu-ko-nul) n. Brian (1950/1–) brother of David, he played centre forward in football. Both brothers excelled at swimming and represented Scotland in water polo. They first played football for a team in Denholm, moving to Hawick United Colts and then the senior team. They were also part of a successful five-side team and both moved to play for Selkirk. He later played for Hawick Royal Albert (including in their Scottish Qualifying Cup-winning team). He then returned to Hawick United and finished his playing days at Hawick Legion at the age of 48. David (1951/2–) brother of Brian, he initially played football at full-back, but was best remembered as a goalkeeper. After a defeat to Montrose in the Scottish Cup in 1974 he was asked to play in a trial for St. Mirren reserves, followed by a trial in goal for the first team against Rangers. He was signed by Alex Ferguson for St. Mirren and stayed for a season. He then played for Berwick Rangers, had to quit because of injury, but returned to play for Hawick Royal Albert before coaching Hawick Legion. Rev. Robert minister of Robertson Kirk 1966–83. He was also responsible for Teviothead 1966–72. Rev. Samuel David (1858–1918) born in Londonderry, he was ordained as assistant and successor at Pollokshaws in 1888. While Rev. John Rudge Wilson was serving in the Boer War in about 1900, he officiated at Wilton Kirk.

McCrae (mu-krā) n. Lt.-Col. David (1845–1930) from Balmaghie in Kirkcudbrightshire, he emigrated to Canada with his father Thomas and lived in Guelph. He was partner in the firm McCrae & Armstrong, along with John Armstrong of Hawick, and they employed many weavers who had come from around Hawick. Robert Ewan describes being shown around Guelph by him in 'Through Canada in 1878'. He was father of John, writer of the WWI poem 'In Flanders Fields'.

McCrierie (mu-kree-ree) n. Charles W. 'Charlie' Cornet in 1975, often referred to as 'the Sunshine Cornet' because of how sunny it was at the Common Riding that year. He was also one of the founder members of the Border Horse Racine Association.

McCrone (mu-krōn) n. Senga (1933/4–2020) born in Kilmarnock, she grew up in Ayrshire and later lived in Northern Ireland before moving to Hawick. She worked in Bantel her entire working life. She was a successful lawn bowler, starting in Northern Ireland, where she was part of the winning fours team in Irish national competition in 1971 and the British Isles fours championship in 1972. In Hawick she became a member of the Buccleuch Bowling Club. She first represented Scotland in 1981, paying as skip for most of the next 13 years, which included winning the silver medal in Singles at the 1986 Commonwealth Games. She won the Scottish Pairs in 1992, the Scottish Triples in 1993, as well as 3 World Championships. She married James ('Jim') and had sons Stewart and Alan.

McTurk (muk-turk) n. Andrew (15th/16th C.) attorney appointed as the agent of James Douglas of Drumlanrig in the sasine giving him the Barony of Hawick in 1514. It is unclear whether he was local or from Dumfriesshire (written 'Makturk').

McCullough (mu-ku-loch) n. Francis 'Frank' (b.1879/80) pedlar who was charged with murder at the Howegate and High Street in 1906. Rev. William Cupples (1867–1939) born in Aghadoey, County Down, he was educated in Belfast and was licensed to preach by Banbridge Presbytery in 1892. He was ordained at Mullingar in 1895 and translated to St. Margaret's, Hawick, in 1905. He demitted his charge in 1935 and died in London. He married Marion (who died in 1934), daughter of Richard Jones, and their children were William Donald Hamilton (who worked for the B.B.C.) and Richard Denis Miller.

McDonald (muk-do-nuld) n. Alexander (b.1811/2) tailor on the Cross Wynd, listed in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was still on the Cross Wynd in 1841, but by 1851 he was on the Howegate (at about No. 15). In 1851 and on Slater's 1852 directory he is recorded as 'Tailor & Pawnbroker'. His wife was Isabella and their children included Esther, John, Elizabeth E. and Isabel. Colin (b.1814/5) from Glen Urquhart in Inverness-shire, he was recorded in the 1861 census as 'Railway Manager' at Shankendshiels. He lived there with his wife Janet and son Peter. He could be the 'Mr. MacDonald' who operated the Turf Hotel at Shankend and some other sod-built pubs to serve the navvies working on the Hawick to Carlisle railway line. James (19th/20th C.) referred to as 'Pastor' and 'the Kilwinning Martyr', he was a fraudulent anti-Catholic preacher. He started a Protestant Guild in Hawick in about 1913, but was arrested for deserting his family in Hamilton. There were wild scenes in Hawick when he tried to return, caused by an antagonistic crowd, outnumbering his supporters. He was later fined for drunkenness in Hawick. Robert (b.c.1780) born in Wigtown, he was a nailer at the Sandbed, recorded on Pigot's 1825/6 directory. In 1841 he was living on the Back Row with wife Elizabeth and children Joan, Flora, Elizabeth, Jane, Anne and Margaret. In 1851 he was on the Kilnpath, with his daughters Flora, Jane and Ann. Robert (19th/20th C.) proprietor of a restaurant at the Station Buildings. A photograph taken in the 1920s shows him outside his business. Simon (b.c.1780) listed as 'Chaise Driver' at Cavers on the 1801 ballot for the Militia. William (b.1807/8) from Knockando in Invernesshire, he was a limeburner at Limekilnedge. He was recorded there in 1861. His wife was Jane and their children included William and Ann (see also MacDonald).

McDonald's (muk-do-nuldz) n. former restaurant at the Station Buildings, run by Robert McDonald. It did a roaring business in the heyday of the railway, serving breakfasts, teas and dinners. McDonald and staff can be seen outside the business premises in a photograph of the 1920s. The location was later the Station Launderette and the Shugonda Balti House.

the McDonald Shelter (thu-muk-do-nuld-shel-tur) n. public shelter constructed on the Station side of the North Bridge in 1959, constructed of concrete slabs, with public toilets attached. Construction was made possible through a bequest of the McDonald family (related to Swintons). It was demolished around 2000 during construction of the Waverley Bridge.

McDougall (muk-doo-gul) n. Andrew (15th/16th C.) son of Dungall. He was listed as son and heir of his father in 1477/8, in the lands of Makerstoun and Yetholm. He is 'And. Makdowell de Makearstoun' in 1490/1 when he witnessed a charter for Patrick Hepburn, Earl of Bothwell. He witnessed a confirming charter for the Barony of Wilton (for John Scott) in 1494. He had a confirming charter for the Barony of Yetholm in 1495. He witnessed a charter for Adam Hepburne of Craigs in 1505 and another for Patrick Hepburn, Earl of Bothwell, in 1506/7. In 1510 he and about 20 of his associates were charged with robbing and harassing Katherine Hoppringle (perhaps the widow of his father), depriving her of the lands to which she was legally entitled. He married Elizabeth daughter of Patrick Hepburn, 1st Lord of Hailes. He was probably father of Thomas (who married Janet Scott of Howpasley in about 1532), William (who is said to have succeeded, although this may be confused), Elizabeth (who married Andrew Haig of Bemersyde) and Maragret (who married Gavin Elliot). Andrew (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1616 as tenant in Stonedge along with Cuthbert when they were caught 'with the bloody hand' for the murder of Fergus Lorraine in Gatehousecote. He is recorded as 'Andro McDowall in Stainedge'. In 1618 Andrew Ker suggested that the men on the assize should be changed, since they were his tenants, but he had a feud with 2 of the commissioners (namely Thomas Turnbull of Minto and William Douglas of Bonjedward). It seems likely he and Cuthbert (probably his brother) were hanged for the murder in 1618. Cuthbert (16th/17th C.) listed along with Andrew in 1616 when they were caught red-handed for the murder of Fergus Lorraine. The pair were committed to Jedburgh Tolbooth in 1618 and although the outcome is not recorded, they were probably hanged. David (18th/19th C.) wright at Weensland Mill. He is recorded in 1797 among Hawick men on the ballot to serve in the Militia. In 1799 he was listed among those whose names had not been drawn, but were no longer living in the area. Dungal of Makerstoun (15th C.) had a sasine for an 80 merk land in 1461. He was part of the panel of 1464/5 which ruled on the dispute between William Douglas of Drumlanrig and Alexander Gledstains over the lands of Kirkton Mains and the Flex. He had a confirming charter for the lands of Makerstoun and Yetholm in 1477/8. He witnessed a charter for Robert Ramsay of Cockpen in 1485/6. He was probably son of Duncan, father of Andrew and brother of Barbara, who married Gilbert Haig of Bemersyde. George (16th/17th C.) probably son of Thomas and Margaret Home. He signed the 'Confessions of Faith' in Hawick in 1638, his name being recorded as 'G. Makdougall of Makrarstoun'. He may be the McDougall who represented Roxburghshire in Parliament in 1625. He appears to have been succeeded by Sir William, presumably his son. Henry 'Harry' (17th C.) probably son of Sir William of Makerstoun. In 1658 he was among 20 'gentlemen and heritors' of Roxburghshire who signed a commission to oppose payment requested from the county. He was one of the Commissioners for Roxburghshire (i.e. an M.P.), appointed in 1665, 1678 and 1681. He was probably the 'M'Doual of Mackerston' who was listed in 1684 as one of the men appointed as a commissioner in Roxburghshire for prosecuting Covenanters. He was a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1685. His wife was Barbara and there was a ratification of Thomas as his heir in 1670. Sir Henry Hay (d.1825) son of Sir George Hay and Barbara, only child of Henry McDougall of Makerstoun. He served as a Deputy Lieutenant for Roxburghshire in at least 1797–1801. In 1782 he married Isabella, daughter of Admiral Sir James Douglas and they had 3 daughters: Anna Marie, who married Sir Thomas Brisbane; Henrietta; and Elizabeth. On his death he was succeeded by his cousin Sir Thomas Hay. John (19th C.) law clerk in Hawick in the 1860s. Robert (17th C.) listed among the 'Deficients in Hauick Parich' in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. Robert (18th/19th C.) cart-wright on the Round Close, listed in Pigot's 1837 directory. Thomas (15th/16th C.) recorded being in Makerstoun in 1502. Along with William Ormiston, in the same place, he was absent from the indictments given at Jedburgh, although the crimes are not recorded. His name is given as Thomas makdowell. Thomas of Makerstoun (d.1571) recorded in a marriage contract of 1532 with Janet Scott of Howpasley. He is probably the Thomas 'McDuell' who witnessed a document in Selkirk in 1533. He witnessed a document in Selkirk between the Kers of Mersington and Shaws in 1534. He is recorded in 1537 among Kers and others who were accused of burning Cunzierton and killing 2 men called Hall. He is also listed in 1549 among the associates of Walter Ker of Cessford who were accused of helping the English in raids upon the farms of Sir Walter Scott of Branhholme; Alexander of 'Stedrik' is also listed and probably closely related. In 1551 he signed the 'Auld Band of Roxburgh'. In 1560 he was named (as guarantor on the Ker side) on the bond to settle the feud between the Kers and the Rutherfords. He is probably the Thomas listed in 1569 among the lairds who signed a bond to keep peace on the Border. He married Janet Scott of Howpasley and their children may have included: James, who succeeded; Euphemia, who married Robert Lauder of that Ilk; and Isobel, who married Andrew Haig of Bemersyde. These generations seem confused. Thomas of Makerstoun (d.1604) son of William. His sister Elizabeth married Andrew Haig of Bemersyde. He is probably the 'M'Dowell of M'carstoun' listed among Lairds who appeared before the Privy Council in 1591 to promise to support the Warden of the Middle March. In 1592 his was cautioner that Gavin Elliott of Stobs he would not reset any of those who had supported the Earl of Bothwell. He is probably the Laird of Makerstoun who served in Parliament as a minor baron in 1597. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir George Home of Wedderburn. He was succeeded by his son James, who was in turn succeeded by his grandson Sir William. He also had a daughter Eupheme (or Mary), who married Richard Lauder. Sir William (17th C.) probably grandson of Thomas, with the name of his father perhaps being George. He or his father represented Roxburghshire in Parliament in 1625. In about 1625 he married Margaret, daughter of Walter ('Auld Wat') Scott of Harden with Wat's 2nd wife Margaret Edgar. His children included: Henry, who succeeded; and Anne Isabel, who married Walter Scott of Raeburn. William (18th C.) miller at Spittal. His son David was baptised in Cavers Parish in 1725. William (b.c.1780) gardener in Hawick according to the ballot for the Militia in 1801. His surname is recorded as 'McDowal' (also 'MacDougal', 'Makdougall', 'Mckdougall', and variants; formerly interchangeable with MacDowall, Macdowall, Makdowell, McDowell, etc.).

McEwen (muk-yoo-win) n. Rev. James (1831–1924) from Kirkcudbright, he graduated M.A. from Glasgow University in 1852. He was ordained as minister of Ford in 1856. In 1862 he was translated to become minister of the East Bank Church. He introduced hymn singing, as opposed to the traditional unaccompanied psalms, led by the precentor. He remained until 1873, when he moved to Sydney Place, Glasgow. In 1858 he married Jane Blackwood (1839–71), who died at East Back Manse, and is buried in the Wellogate. In 1873 he secondly married Margaret (b.1851), daughter of engineer John Melrose, and she died in 1937, aged 87. His children were: Jane (1861–90); Thomas (1863–1937), who was born in Hawick; William; Sir John Blackwood (1868–1948), also born in Hawick; George Cavet (b.1871); Katherine; Marion Cavet (1875–1961); Jessie Seath (b.1877); Helen Melrose (b.1879); and Sydney Melrose (b.1881). He was described as 'of thin, wiry make, nimble in mind and body, he seemed to be endowed with a tireless energy'. A photograph of him exist. Sir John Blackwood (1868–1948) composer and college head. He was born in Hawick at the East Bank Manse, son of Rev. James and Jane Blackwood. At age 17 St. John's Kirk appointed him as organist and choirmaster. He graduated from Glasgow University in 1888, then studied music, while being employed as choirmaster. Afterwards he attended the Royal Academy of Music in London, returning to Scotland in 1895, but being invited back to the Royal Academy 3 years later as a professor of harmony and composition. He was a prominent member of the Philharmonic Society, as well as a founder member and first Honorary Secretary of the Society of British Composers. He became Principal of the Royal Academy of Music in 1924, holding this position until 1936. He produced a significant body of music, particularly chamber music. The first public performance of his work was in 1894. Probably his best-known piece is the 'Solway Symphony', composed in 1911, first performed in 1922, and performed for the first time (at least the first movement) in Hawick in 2014. It was the first piece by a British composer to be recorded on the HMV label. His music is described as 'post-Wagnerian', with influences from Scottish folk traditions. He wrote a large amount of chamber music, including 17 string quartets and 7 violin sonatas. He also wrote orchestral music, including settings of 3 Border Ballads. In 1913 he suffered some sort of personal crisis, which led him to focus on chamber music thereafter. He received an honorary degree from Oxford in 1926 and Glasgow in 1933 and was knighted in 1931. He had left-wing political views, set out in pamphlets such as 'Abolish Money' and 'Total Democracy'. In 1902 he married Hedwig Ethel, daughter of naval architect Henry Alwyn Bevan Cole; they had no children. The Provost of Hawick sent him a congratulatory note on his 80th birthday. He died at his home in London and left a large legacy for the promotion of new Scottish chamber music. Most of his manuscripts are held at Glasgow University. An exhibition and concert to celebrate his music were organised in Hawick in 2013 (also written 'McEwan').

McFadden (muk-faw-din) n. David Kerr (1885–1961) son of John and Sarah Kerr. He worked as a gamekeeper in Liddesdale and died at Flatt Cottage. In 1919 he married Robina Agnes Kyle (1881–1948), daughter of Mary Kyle and grand-daughter of William Kyle and Robina Cavers. His wife died at Thistlesyke in Castleton Parish. Donald (19th C.) married Jessie Sinton in Southdean Parish in 1829. Their son James was baptised in 1831.

McFarlane (muk-fawr-lin) n. James (b.1825/6) from St. Boswells, he was listed as blacksmith on Mather's Close in 1851. His wife was Helen Thompson and they had a son, James. John (18th C.) resident of Denholm. His son Peter was baptised in Cavers Parish in 1784.

Robert (b.c.1840) shoemaker in Hawick, listed on the Howegate in 1837 and on the 1841 census. His wife was Janet and they had children William, Robert, Jane and Anne. Tib (18th/19th C.) probably Isabel or Elizabeth, she was a resident of Cavers Parish. In her old age she was quite bent, and reputed by local people to be a witch. One day she was caught by Thomas Turnbull stealing harvested oats from his farm at East Middle, and he turned her off his land. However, a deputation of reapers from Denholm came to complain to him that they would all be cursed.

McGarrity (mu-ga-ri'-ee) n. Rev. Robert Forsyth (1869–1933) born in Armadale in West Lothian, he was a minister at Carfin and then Burray (Orkney). He became minister at Saughtree Kirk in 1929 and remained until his death. He married Jeanie Gloag and died in Edinburgh.

McGaughey (mu-gaw-chee) n. Sean (1961/2–) attended St. Margaret's and the High School. After leaving school he worked in the knitwear industry. He played rugby for the Y.M., then for Hawick R.F.C., firstly in the 1979/80 season; he became a regular in the back row in the team that won the title 3 years in a row, 1984/5, 1985/6 and 1986/7. In 1983/4 he toured with the Grand Slam-winning Scottish team, gaining a single cap in 1984. He also played for the South of Scotland and the Barbarians. He was forwards coach in Hawick 2001/2.

McGee (mu-gee) n. Allan Hawick paramedic who has long been involved with the Tweed Valley Mountain Rescue, Duke of Edinburgh's Award Scheme and Borders Exploration Group. He has been awarded the Winston Churchill Award and the Honorary Provost's Achievement Award. William (15th/16th C.) tenant in Bedrule, listed among a number of Turnbells who had remission in 1516 for assisting Alexander, Lord Home. He is recorded as 'William Makge in Bethroule'.

McGeorge's (muk-jör-jeez) n. J. & D. McGeorge Ltd., Hawick knitwear manufacturers of the latter part of the 20th century. Records of the company covering the period 1960–96 exist. The original company was founded by James McGeorge in Dumfries in 1881.

McGibbon (mu-gi-bin) n. Fr. Charles Mungo (1905–90) born in Joppa, Edinburgh, his father died in WWI. He was ordained a priest in 1930 and served in Grenada, Tivoli and Victoria. He returned to Britain in 1950, serving in Edinburgh and Leicester, before returning to Barbados. In 1964 he was appointed Chaplain to the Dominican sisters in Hawick, remaining until

St. Margaret's Convent was closed in 1988. He spent his last years back in Edinburgh.

McGill (mu-gil) n. Anna see Lady Symington. Rev. Francis (1588/9–1664) licensed by the Presbytery of Jedburgh in 1611, he obtained half the living of Borthwick from the minister of Wilton (William Clerk) in 1612. It is unclear for how long he may have preached there, but he became minister of Kirkmichael in 1620. He married Elizabeth McMoran, who died in 1670 at 93 years old. Their children were Margaret and Marion (who married William Herreis of Harthwaite). John (18th C.) tenant farmer at Hassendean Townhead. In 1725 the schoolmaster of Minto, Walter Turnbull, rased 'letters of horn-ing and poinding' against him, presumably to try to recover a debt. Rev. Walter (d.1651) possibly related to Sir James Douglas of Cavers, whose children with his 2nd wife (a daughter of Sir James McGill) are said to have taken the surname McGill. He was probably born too early to have been a son of Sir James Douglas, and so may have been his brother-in-law or similar. He graduated from St. Andrews University in 1593. He is recorded as minister and vicar of Cavers in 1603 when he gave the 'tack of the teinds' to Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme, and again in 1607. He held the parsonage and vicarage of Kirkton from 1606, as well as the parsonage of Cavers (although he was only presented to the vicarage in 1609). In a Scottish statute of 1622 he is recorded having the right of the vicarage of Cavers Parish. He was minister in 1627 when William Henderson ('Ratlin Roarin Willie') was excommunicated for the slaying of William Elliot. He witnessed a charter transferring Harwood from Edward Lorraine and Rev. William Weir of Hobkirk to Gilbert Eliott and another regarding Appotside and Tythehouse in 1632. He gave £20 towards building the Library at Glasgow University in about 1636. He signed the National Covenant in Hawick in 1638. In 1642 he was stated as being aged and infirm and requiring an assistant. His lands in Cavers Parish were valued at £100 in 1643 (and were part of the estate of Douglas of Cavers by the 1678 valuation). He is recorded as minister of Cavers in a Hawick Burgh records entry of 1644. Also in 1644 he reported to the Presbytery about 2 men at Fastcastle (in Bedrule Parish) who refused to sign the Covenant. He remained Cavers minister until 1647, when succeeded by James Douglas. He preached to a visitation of Cavers in 1645 when there is a record that he was 100 years old (although this scarcely seems credible, given that he graduated in 1593). He was said to have died in his 107th year (which also seems unlikely). He married Lilius Bartane (or Bartoun, who died in 1671) and their children included: Jamesi, mentioned in 1642, who died before 1651; Walter (d.1694), Minister of Leswalt, Wigton and Kilsyth, who was next of kin in 1651; and Samuel, Minister of Trailflat from 1627. His wife is recorded in a bond of 1651 with John Wynram of Libberton. A gravestone in Cavers old Kirkyard, marked 'Johanna Magel, 1630' is probably his daughter (spelled 'Makgill' and variants; see also MacGill).

McGinn (mu-gin) n. Matthews 'Matt' (1928–1977) prolific song-writer from the east end of Glasgow. His children's songs, such as 'The Red Yo-yo' and 'The Kirkcudbright Centipede' are well known to children, and some of his baudier (such as 'The Bee from The Old Town of Effen') or political ones (such as 'The Man They Could Not Hang') to adults. He wrote the song 'The Rolling Hills o' the Borders' popularised by the John Wright Band and Scocha. Rev. Thomas minister of Bedrule Kirk from 1945 until it merged with Denholm in 1963.

McGivern (mu-gi-vurn) n. Alec owner of the Tower Hotel in the latter half of the 20th century. He had the bungalow Linden House built on the site of Linden Park.

McGowan (mu-gow-in) n. Adam (15th C.) recorded as 'Ade Makgowan' when he was bequeathed 6 shillings in the will of Sir David Scott of Branhholme in 1491/2. He is listed among servants of the Laird. George (??–) Hawick born and bred, he worked for the Hawick Express and the Hawick News, mainly covering rugby and other sports. He was a rugby player and sprinter, and also on the Town Council. In 1974 he emigrated to New Zealand, and wrote the books 'Memories From Afar' (1992) and 'The Way We Were' (1997). William (16th C.) public notary from at least 1553, as recorded in Wigtown. He held the parsonage and vicarage of Minto from 1574. He was a member of the Assembly of 1575 and was also Commissary of Wigton, probably residing there rather than in Minto. He was accused of non-residence, and appears to have been deprived in 1576, but may have continued until about 1585, or else that was the year he took up residence (formerly spelled 'M'Gowen', etc.).

McHenry's (muk-hen-reez) n. former corner shop on Mansfield Road, visible in a photograph of 1905.

McInnes (mu-ki-nis) n. Rev. Æneas Ede (1861–1931) born in Bower, Caithness, he was son of schoolmaster Angus and Charlotte Brown. He received his M.A. from Edinburgh University in 1884 and was licensed to preach by Caithness Presbytery in 1887. He became assistant at Selkirk and then in 1894 was ordained assistant and successor (to Rev. Mercer Hall) at Robertson. He had a poem 'Borthwick Water' published in 1909. In 1904 he married Kate, daughter of George Spackman. He retired around 1929 and died at Earlston.

McIntyre (maw-kin-tIr) n. Robert (20th C.) from Hawick, he became Rector of Kilmarnock Academy and authored or edited 19 school textbooks in English.

McIvor (muk-I-vur) n. Rhoda Maude (d.2004) last Burgh Librarian in Hawick. She was educated in the Helensburgh area and graduated with an Arts degree from Glasgow University in 1938. She then took a diploma in 'Library Studies in London and became a Fellow of the Library Association in 1940. She then worked as a librarian in Clydebank and Norfolk. She moved to Hawick Library in 1947 and was there until her retirement in 1977. She was also Librarian for the Archæological Society, as well as acting as Treasurer for 10 years. Known for her non-conformist dress and idiosyncratic manners, she made many friends in Hawick, including teachers Cuthbert Robb and James Finlayson. She was interested in music and had broad linguistic skills, being fluent in French and German and familiar with Latin, Norwegian and Russian. In the Library it is said that her cataloguing skills helped keep things organised; she helped introduce the first home-bound readers service in Scotland and pressed for the Children's Library to be opened in 1974. She is also remembered for providing sandwiches for 'gentlemen of the road' who sought out the comfort of the reading room. Also a great cyclist, she was long recalled for riding through the town in her upright lady's bicycle, the front basket full of books, and shortly after WWII she rode solo from Calais to Marseilles. She moved to Hume Berwickshire after retirement.

McKain (mu-kān) n. John (b.c.1770s) labourer at New Woll according to the 1799 ballot for the Militia in Ashkirk Parish. He was probably brother of Samuel. Samuel (b.c.1770s) labourer at Essenside on the 1799 ballot for the Militia in Ashkirk Parish.

McKelvie (maw-kul-vee) n. William (d.1906) police Constable who was beaten while making an arrest in Hawick and died. Possibly the only police officer in modern times to be killed on duty in the town.

McKenzie (mu-ken-zee) n. Alexander (18th/19th C.) shoemaker in Denholm, recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. Catherine (19th C.) servant to pub proprietor Robert Newall. She was one of the people who contracted cholera in the 1832 outbreak, but recovered. Charles (18th C.) writer (i.e. lawyer) of Edinburgh who was made an Honorary Burgess in 1779. Francis (d.1804) wigmaker and barber in Hawick. In 1788 he witnessed a baptism for watchmaker John Stewart. His death 'unseen' is recorded in Hawick. Francis 'Frank' (1824–1900) hairdresser at 15 Howegate, having learned the trade from his grandfather Dick. His mother was Ann, who later married David Affleck. He was listed as a Howegate hairdresser in Slater's 1852 directory, as well as a toy dealer. He was the 5th listed member of the Archæological Society and served as President in 1889. In 1856 he gave to the Museum 2 white bear skulls and an old lock from Harden, as well as a stone hammer in 1857. He also donated some coins and fossils to the Museum in the 1860s. He was Councillor for Slitrig Ward for 6 years. It is said that his shop was a focus for discussion of the Town's affairs. He married Euphemia Notman, and their children were James (a painter, whose daughter Isobel was a High School teacher), Walter (an Edinburgh Town Councillor) and Margaret (who became Mrs. Douglas). He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. Gilbert (18th/19th C.) listed at Limekilnedge in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border'. Sir James (17th/18th C.) son of George, who became Viscount Tarbet. He became a lawyer, and was a Senator with the title Lord Royston. He dealt with some of the business affairs of the Duchess of Buccleuch in her senior years, the Session of Hawick writing to him in 1725 to seek assistance with the parish's poor. Rev. James (b.1890) translated from St. Paul's, Perth to become minister of Lilliesleaf in 1929, serving the Parish until 1961. He wrote two articles on 'Lilliesleaf' in the 1947 and 1949 Transactions. Richard 'Dick' (b.c.1780) hairdresser. His business premises were initially in the row of houses that stood in the middle of the Tower Knowe, moving to 14 Howegate when this row was demolished and then to No. 15. He is listed on the Howegate in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories. His business was taken over by his grandson Frank. Catherine, who contracted cholera in 1832

(but recovered), servant at Robert Newall's public house, was his daughter. He himself also had a bout with the disease, but was cured. Walter (19th/20th C.) son of Frank. He worked as a railwayman and became a Town Councillor in Edinburgh. He married Jeanie, sister of the Provost of Haddington William Davidson, and daughter of Hawick manufacturer William. William (18th/19th C.) recorded as servant at Lilliesleaf Mill in the Lieutenancy Book for 1799 (see also Mackenzie).

McKie (mu-kee) n. William (b.1821/2) from Dumfries, he went into partnership with William Nixon, forming Nixon & McKie around 1850. He led the hosiery part of the business, with Nixon in charge of the spinning. However, the firm folded in about 1866 and the premises were sold to Thomas Laidlaw and Robert Pringle & Son. He was one of the founder members of Hawick Bowling Club in 1854. In 1861 he was living at 17 Buccleuch Street and was unmarried; he employed 87 people at that time.

the McKinley Act (thu-mu-kin-lee-awkt) n. U.S. act of 1890, imposing large tariffs on imported high quality woollen goods (among other items), which led to economic difficulties for many Hawick tweed manufacturers.

McKinnon (mu-ki-nin) n. Hugh (b.1782/3) from Dumfriesshire, he was a stocking-maker in Hawick. In 1841 and 1851 he was living at Roadhead in Wilton. He married Isabella ('Tibbie') Aitken, maternal aunt of the writer Thomas Carlyle. His children were: Alexander; Angus; Mary Ann, who married James Jamieson; Sarah, who married George Turnbull; and Marion (d.1844), who died of consumption. There are mentions of some members of the family in the letters of Thomas Carlyle, with the name sometimes being spelled 'McKinnow'. James 'Jim' (1931/2–) road sweeper for the Council and horse-racing enthusiast. He was Cornet's groom for over 15 years.

McLagan (muk-law-gin) n. Thomas Burns (1875–1965) native of Ladybank in Fife, he came to Hawick in 1895 as a postal sorting clerk, eventually becoming overseer. He was a Town Councillor for North High Street Ward from 1938 until 1955, being appointed Dean of Guild in 1939, Junior Bailie in 1940 and serving as Provost 1940–45. Because of the War years, he is the only Provost to have never officiated at a Common Riding. He was Convenor of the County Health and Welfare Committee, a member of the Archæological Society and an elder in St. John's Church. As Provost he gave the V.J. Day address to the town from the balcony of the Council Chambers in 1945. Married to Elizabeth Grierson of Hawick, he had no family, and shunned publicity. Later he became Postmaster at Keith and Head Postmaster at Forfar, before retiring back to Hawick. McLagan Drive was named after him.

McLagan Drive (muk-law-gin-driv) n. part of Burnfoot, built in 1949, extended in 1963 and named after Provost Thomas B. McLagan. Several of the houses were redeveloped by Eildon Housing.

McLaren (muk-law-rin) n. Ebenezer (b.c.1770s) gardener in Hawick. He is listed on the 1799 and 1801 ballots for the Militia. It is possible he is the man of that name, married to Janet Provan, whose son John was baptised in the Parish of Barony in 1819. Sandy (1945–) born in Ballinluig, he worked on the family farm until a dust allergy forced him to find a new career. In 1972 he came to Hawick as a policeman, becoming a Sergeant in 1980. He spent several years in Edinburgh and other Border towns before returning to Hawick in 1998 as Inspector in the traffic department. He retired from the Police in 2004, but later had some part-time jobs in Hawick as well as volunteering as a drover with the Royal Voluntary Service. At age 60 he took up the pipes, joining the Hawick Scout Pipe Band. He also has the distinction of having been a member of the Atholl Highlanders, the only lawful private army in Europe. His wife Sheila came from Strathtay and had several jobs in Hawick. The couple celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in 2020. Their children are Shonagh (the first full-time female firefighter in the Borders) and Allison (Deputy Head in Earlston). William Pollock ‘Bill’, M.B.E. (1923–2010) born and brought up in Hawick, he attended Trinity and the High School, and was commissioned with the Royal Artillery in WWII. A bout of T.B. ended his rugby playing career early, but he taught rugby to primary school boys until 1987. He worked with the Hawick Express, later becoming well known as a radio and TV commentator, and has also written or edited several books on rugby, for example ‘100 Years of Hawick Rugby’ (1972), and narrated TV programmes and videos on the Borders. He was awarded an M.B.E. for services to rugby in 1979, followed by an O.B.E. in 1995 and a C.B.E. in 2003. He finally retired from rugby commenting in 2002. His autobiography ‘The Voice of Rugby’ was published in 2004. McLaren Court is named after him. A memorial bust was unveiled in Wilton Lodge Park in 2012, sculpted by Rory Maciver, and inscribed ‘The Voice of Rugby’. He can be heard recounting rugby memories on on ‘Sounds of the Borders’ (2012).

McLaren Brig (muk-law-rin-brig) n. bridge across the Teviot, adjacent to the Cafe in Wilton Lodge Park. It was named after rugby commentator Bill McLaren and opened in 2018 by Bill’s widow Bette and daughter Linda.

McLaren Court (muk-law-rin-kōr) n. part of the Meadows, built in 1964, refurbished later as luxury flats, and named after rugby commentator Bill McLaren.

McLawson (muk-law-sin) n. John (b.c.1770s) wright in Newcastleton according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. His surname is written ‘MacLauson’.

McLear (muk-leer) n. Margaret (18th C.) housekeeper at Branhholme in 1789 when she was working for Adam Ogilvie.

McLean (muk-lān) n. Rev. Joseph William (1850/1–1903) came to Saughtree Kirk as licentiate in 1902. However, he died the following year. William (15th/16th C.) listed on the pardon granted in 1526 to a large number of Scotts, Turnbells and other Borderers who had assisted the Homes in attacking the Earl of Arran. His surname is recorded as ‘Makclaine’. Rev. William (19th C.) presented to Ashkirk Parish by Gilbert, Earl of Minto in late 1854 and ordained there early the following year. He was translated to Merton in 1860 and then to Peningham in 1864.

McLellan (muk-le-lin) n. Ebenezer (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish, probably the son of Peter born in Forganenny, Perthshire in 1769. He married Jane Turnbull in 1794; she may have been the eldest daughter of Thomas Turnbull and Beatrix Ruecastle. They had a son, Peter (b.1796). Even although his name is transcribed as ‘McLennan’ in the parish records, it seems likely he was a McLellan. He is probably also the Ebenezer who later married Janet Wilson and whose children (baptised in Hawick Parish) included: John (b.1805); and James (b.1809), with the surname recorded as ‘McClealand’. Patrick (17th C.) gardener listed among those contributing to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He witnessed baptisms in 1700 for tailor Alexander Hislop, in 1703 for fellow gardener John Vair, in 1704 for thatcher John Shiel and for John Turnbull ‘oye’ to Rev. James Ker and in 1705 for workman John Douglas. He is probably the Patrick, married to Marion Scoon, who had an unnamed son baptised in Hawick in 1683. He is probably also the Patrick whose children baptised in Hawick included Mary (b.1701) and Patrick (b.1703). Peter (18th/19th C.) resident of London. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He was probably the son of Ebenezer and Jane Turnbull born in Hawick in 1796 (formerly 'Maclelan' and 'Mclelan').

McLennan (mu-kle-nin) n. Rev. Findlay (18th C.) minister of Kelso Qualified Chapel 1750–7. He carried out Episcopalian services in Hawick around this time, probably in a building on Kirk Wynd. The Hawick Parish register in the 1770s records an earlier baptism: 'Mira Gladstains Daughter of John Gladstains of Whitlaw baptized by the Rev. Mr. Finley Mcleanen Minister of the Episcopal Congregation of Hawick before these witnesses Mr. Robert Scott Whitlade Surgeon in Hawick & John and James Gladstains both of Hawick in November 1753'. There are men of the same name recorded in Ross & Cromarty in the later 18th century. John (b.1849/50) from Inverness, he was recorded as Police Sergeant in Hawick in 1891 (also written 'MacLennan').

McLeod (mu-klowd) n. Brian, B.E.M. (1946/7–) son of a soldier, he attended school in Berlin, Burnfoot and Hawick High. After being in the Army for 23 years he settled back in Hawick. After retiring he took command of the Hawick Army Cadet Force and had for a long time been on the Committee of the local British Legion, for which service he received the B.E.M. in 2016. He has also been a Community Councillor. He married Marilyn in 1970 and the couple celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in 2020. They had children Tracy and Iain. Christine (1934–) Hawick born and bred, sister-in-law of Hugh. She worked in Pringle's, and has been a Girl Guide leader most of her life, becoming a District Commissioner, and for which she was awarded the B.E.M. Daniel (b.c.1780) gardener at Hassendeanburn according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Minto Parish. Dr. Donald J.A. (c.1828–1903) born in the Hebrides, educated at Edinburgh University, he came to Denholm in 1849 to assist with the cholera outbreak. After the last case in Denholm he moved to help in the Hawick cholera outbreak, when 141 people died in the parish. He was a partner of Hawick's Dr. John Douglas (following the death of Robert Douglas, the former partner and brother of Dr. Douglas). His business premises were at 7 Buccleuch Street. He became joint Medical Officer of the Parish in 1851 (in connection with the Poorhouse), Medical Officer in 1856, Medical Officer for the Burgh in 1868 and local Police Surgeon in 1896. He also acted as medical officer for several other local organisations. He later practised in partnership with Dr. Barrie. In all, he was a doctor in the town for more than 50 years. He was an active member of the Con Club, a leader in the efforts to establish public swimming baths in Hawick, and a founder member of the Hawick Bowling Club and Hawick Billiards Club. Although initially opposed to the idea of a Cottage Hospital in Hawick, he was later its Honorary Medical Officer. His caricature from 1856 appears in the book 'Noctes Hawickianæ'. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. Hugh F., O.B.E. (1932–2014) rugby prop forward, born and bred in the town. He supposedly played his first junior rugby game at 17, when walking past the ground and asked to join in when one of the players was ill. He played for Hawick R.F.C. 1949–62, and was capped forty consecutive times 1954–62. He played 14 times for the Barbarians and toured with the British Lions. He was awarded the O.B.E. in 1962 for services to rugby and was President of Hawick R.F.C. 1983–85. He ran a plasterer's business and sports shop. Mary (19th C.) resident of Wilton whose death is commemorated in a poem by Thomas Chapman – 'Farewell to my Mary, nae mair shall I see her Amid her companions in woodland or street ...' [TCh] (also MacLeod).

McLuckie (muk-lu-kee) n. John Morrison (1867–1926) born at Gartsherrir, Lanarkshire, he was educated at Glasgow University. He was licensed by Hamilton Presbytery in 1891, was missionary in Cambuslang and ordained to the Scots Church, St. Vincent in the West Indies. He was then minister at Ruthrieston in Aberdeen, Wallacetown in Dundee and at Lady Yester's. In 1918 he became minister of Castleton Parish and remained until his death. He married Mabel Annie Johnston and they had a daughter, Joyce Elinor MacLuckie (b.1905), who married Robert Bernard Benson of the Natural History Museum, Kensington.

McManus (muk-maw-nis) n. Patricia Margaret, O.B.E. (??–) Hawick health visitor and Chairman of the Royal College of Nursing Scottish Board. She was awarded an O.B.E. for services to health care in 1998.

McMath (muk-mawth) n. John (1795–1834) stockingmaker, appointed precentor of the Relief Kirk in Hawick in 1821. His widow Janet was living on the Kirk Wynd in 1841, along with children Margaret, William, Janet, Agnes, Helen and Jane. William (15th C.) received 6 sheep in the will of Sir David Scott of Branhholme in 1491/2. His name is listed as 'Willelmo Makmath'.

McMorren (muk-mo-rin) n. James (19th C.) Police Judge, once based in Hawick, but moved to Selkirk. He was in Hawick in 1825 when he subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick'. He is listed at the Dean among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835. He married Mary Douglas, daughter of Hugh and Agnes Laidlaw of Hawick. She may be the Mrs. McMorran who had a cottage built for her on land at Loch Park about 1879. James (19th C.) spinner in Wilton and Hawick. He is listed among heads of households at the Dean in 1835 and in the Village in Hawick in 1840 and 1841. Peter (19th C.) married Anne Sutherland in Wilton Parish in 1837 (there are various spellings, including 'McMorren').

McNairn (muk-nārn) n. George S. (19th C.) son of John of Edinburgh and brother of the editor of the Hawick News. He was appointed as second librarian in Hawick in 1894, serving until 1906. He modernised the library and produced a printed catalogue. He moved to Motherwell Public Library, where he remained for the rest of his life. John (19th C.) father of John, he lived in Edinburgh, but developed strong connections with Hawick. For Thomas Laidlaw of Sillerbuthall he painted a view of Hawick from the West Braid Road about 1870, useful as a record of the growth of the Town. The painting was acquired by the trustees of Sheriff Anderson and presented to the Magistrates and Council, and is now in the Museum collection. He was married twice, secondly to Christina, daughter of William Somerville. He had 8 children, including John (of the Hawick News), George S. (librarian) and Arthur Stuart (secretary of the Evangelical Union of South America). John (1856–1925) co-founder of the Hawick News, with James Vair, and co-publisher of 'Pictures from the Past of Auld Hawick' (1911) with J.J. Vernon, 'Hawick and the Great War, 1914–1919' (1920) with Vair and several other books. He was born in Edinburgh, son of a painter, and moved to Hawick in 1871, working on the Hawick Advertiser. He took sole control of the Hawick News in 1908, passing it on to his family when he died, and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery.

McNaughton (muk-naw-tin) n. Peter (b.c.1780) footman at Synton according to the 1801 Militia ballot for Ashkirk Parish.

McPherson

McNay (muk-nā) n. Gillian Area Librarian for Hawick in the period 1997–2000. She had previously worked in Glasgow and Selkirk.

McNeish (muk-neesh) n. Rev. Kenneth W. pastor of Hawick Baptist Church 1980–88. He was later pastor in Helensburgh.

McNicol (muk-ni-kol) n. Rev. Donald (19th/20th C.) from Clydebank, he was minister at Hawick Baptist Kirk from 1903. He took over after a roughly 1½ year long vacancy. He was said to be a powerful preacher, and attracted many new young people to the Church. During his time a balcony was added to the church and a new baptistry introduced. In 1907 he moved to Edinburgh to become the first minister of the Baptist Church in Gorgie. In 1910 he moved to South Australia. He returned to Hawick in 1916 as Chaplain for visiting Australian troops.

McPhail (muk-fāl) n. Rev. Archibald Connell (1827–1907) born in Southend, Campbeltown, son of Dougal (or Dugald) and Margaret Connell, his grandfather being a tenant farmer on Mull and his middle name coming from a maternal uncle who made a fortune in Tobago. He was educated at Dalintobar and Edinburgh University. He was licensed by Kintyre Presbytery and became a missionary at Crofthead in Whitburn Parish. He was ordained as minister at Quarter Chapel in Hamilton Parish 1862, translated to Beath, Fife in 1870 and then became minister of Hobkirk in 1876, where he remained until his death. He married Mary Georgina, daughter of Dr. George Welsh (a medical missionary in India), who was widow of Capt. Robert Roy. His wife died in 1900. Their only daughter Georgina Louisa married Walter Turnbull, farmer at Hartshaugh. He is buried in Hobkirk Kirkyard.

McPherson (muk-fer-sin) n. Donald (1842–1907) born at Berriedale in Caithness, he learned gardening, moved to Oban and trained in forestry. He moved to Wolfelee in 1871 as gardener to Sir Walter Elliot. He became manager and helped James Elliot (younger of Wolfelee) run the estate. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1883. Gordon (1938–2020) born in Newcastle, son of Hugh and Elizabeth, he grew up in Newcastleton and attended Hawick High School. He did National Service with the Engineer Regiment then worked on farms, as a fireman on the Waverley Line, in the mills and as a lorry driver. Although leaving the area for a while, he lived in Hawick for more than 50 years, first at Trevelyan Terrace and then Churchill Road. He played football, was involved in flapping (winning the Common Riding double in 1983), darts and bowls (being President of the Wilton club twice). He married Margaret and they had sons Alex and Scott. Mrs. ?? (17th C.) one of the tenants in Mervinslaw according to a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Her name is written 'M'Feisoon'. She was probably a widow of the former tenant.

McQuarrie (mu-kwa-ree) n. Capt. (18th/19th C.) of the 42nd Royal Highland Regiment (Black Watch). Along with 2 other officers he was made an Honorary Burgess when they passed through Hawick in 1802 after defeating the French in Egypt. It is possible this is the same man as Lachlan MacQuarrie (1762–1824), who became governor of New South Wales.

McQueen see MacQueen

McQueston (mu-kwes-tin) n. Peter (18th/19th C.) gardener at Riddell in 1797, when he was working for Sir John Riddell.

McRobbie (muk-ro-bee) n. Peter (1943–) born in Hawick, son of shopkeeper William and Mary Fleming, who was a writer. His family emigrated to the U.S. when he was a child and he grew up in Milford, Connecticut. He studied Theatre at Yale University and served in the U.S. Army. He moved to New York to pursue an acting career, supporting himself in advertising before finding success in the mid-1970s. He became a professional actor, appearing in stage productions, as well as on screen. He may be best known as a regular on the television show 'Law & Order' and for playing Jake Gyllenhaal's father in 'Brokeback Mountain', as well as Maggie Gyllenhaal's father in 'World Trade Center'. He married Charlotte Bova in 1977 and they have 2 children, Oliver and Andrew.

McRobert (muk-ro-bur) n. George (19th/20th C.) resident of Edinburgh who described a trip in the Border Magazine that he took in the Spring of 1798. By train, he arrived in Hawick about midnight, and finding no conveyance, set out on foot to Langholm. He arrived at the foot of Ewesdale at dawn, where he was greeted by a chorus of birdsong, the like of which he had never heard before. Rev. John (b.1794/5–1876) born at Kirkbean in Kirkcudbrightshire, he was the last minister of Denholm Congregational Kirk. He trained at Glasgow Theological Hall and was minister at Ellon 1828–34, Falkirk 1834–36, Grangemouth 1836–38 and Cambuslang 1838–46, before coming to Denholm in 1846. He remained as minister until 1876. He also ran the Free Library in Denholm in the 1850s. In 1831 he married Catherine Copland, from Glasgow, and she was a teacher. They lived at Deanburn Cottage in 1851 and on Westgate in 1861. Mary McRobert, listed as infant school teacher in Denholm in 1852, was probably his daughter.

McVittie (muk-vi'-ee, -vee') n. Alexander (1819–77) son of Robert, road contractor at Fiddleton. He was a 'Roadman' living at Kirkton in Ewes Parish in 1851 and 'Road Contractor' at Flaskholm in 1861. He married Elizabeth Elliot (from Castleton, 1818–1900) and their children included Robert (b.1847), Mary (b.1849), William (b.1851), Hendry (1852–1901), James (b.1854), Jane (1856–75) and John (1858–1910). George (17th C.) recorded in the Town Book for 1655. He was absolved from the claim brought against him by John Scott 'pethar' for 6 or so boots taken from his stall in Hawick. He is probably the George who witnessed a baptism for Robert Scott of Glack in Hawick in 1680. James (19th C.) minor poet who wrote under the pseudonym 'Eskdale'. James (1848–1925) son of Robert, roadman at Fiddleton, with his 2nd wife Janet Armstrong. He married Jessie (c.1850–c.1910), daughter of James Henderson, in Allars Kirk in 1871. His wife was a farm servant at Unthank in Ewesdale when they got married. Their children included: Margaret (b.c.1870); Janet Armstrong (1873–1958), who died in Hawick; William (b.c.1874); John Henderson (b.c.1875); Mary (b.c.1875); Robert Henderson (c.1875–1945); James (c.1875–1949); George (1876–1963); Anne (1877–1959). He died in Hawick. Jess (19th C.) seller of tripe, toffee and other wares in the later 1800s and early 1900s. Her shop was at the corner of Drumlanrig Square and the Kirk Wynd. She could be the same woman as Jessie Henderson, who married James. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Ewes Parish. His daughter Ann was baptised in 1795. John (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Jean Thomson and their children included Robert (b.1839), Jean (b.1842) and William (b.1845). Michael (1815–96) son of Robert, roadman at Fiddleton. In 1851 he was a 'Road Contractor' at Glendivan, living with his brother Henry and his aunt Janet Jackson. In 1861 he was a farmer of 22 acres at Upper Glendivan, living with his sister Mary. In 1867 he married Jane Scott (c.1838–1905) in Ewes. Their children included: Robert (b.1867), who died in infancy; Janet (b.1872); and Jane (b.1874). Robert (1791–1873) resident of Fiddleton, originally from Langholm. He was a road-maker living at Fiddleton in 1841, a 'Road

Contractor' in 1851 and a road contractor and farmer of 21 acres in 1861. He married twice: firstly to Jane (or 'Jean') Jackson, who was born at Fiddleton and died there in 1838, aged 48; and secondly to Janet Armstrong from Canonbie, who died at Priesthaugh Cottage in 1897, aged 75. His children included: John (1813–67), who married Jane Thompson from Castleton; Michael (1815–96); James (1817–43); Alexander (1819–77); Helen (1821–63), who married William Elliot; Janet (1823–1913), who married John Hislop; Jean (1826–1905), who married John Elliot in Castleton; Henry (1828–1900), who died in Ayr, Ontario; Thomas (1829–1901); Elizabeth (1832–1906); Mary (1833–1919), who married Andrew Scott from Lockerbie; Barbara (1836–95); William (b.1842); Walter (1843–1924); James (again, 1848–1925), who died in Hawick; Margaret (1851–65); Andrew T. (b.1853/4); and Christian E. (b.1855/6). He is buried at the old cemetery at Unthank. Thomas (1829–1901) son of Robert. In 1861 he was a road contractor at Kirkstyle in Ewes Parish, living with his aunt Janet Jackson. Walter (1843–1924) son of Robert, he was also a road contractor at Fiddleton. He was there in 1912 when he pointed out nearby archaeological sites to Alexander Curle of the R.C.A.H.M.S. He is probably the Walter who wrote 'A Lament for MossPaul' in 1897. He married Margaret Murray, who died at Effgill in 1930, aged 75. His children included Robert (1873/4–99). He died in Langholm. William (17th C.) one of a list of 16 'idle and masterless men' suggested by the Hawick Bailie to the Privy Council in 1627 as suitable for sending to the wars in Germany. While in Edinburgh Tolbooth he was among 7 of them who complained that they were not in fact the sorts of men who should be pressed into military service, but nevertheless were transported to the wars in Germany (also written 'Mackvetie', 'McVite', 'McVitie' and variants).

William 'Billy', M.B.E (1940–) born and bred in Hawick, he worked in Braemar, the Town Hall and as Bursar of St. Margaret's Nursing Home. His work on behalf of the Duke of Edinburgh's Award Scheme was rewarded by an M.B.E. He has also performed as a magician under the name of Bill Stewart.

mead (meed) n., poet. a meadow – 'Be mine to sing the meads, the pensile groves, And silver streams, which Aurelia loves' [JL], '... as it rows by muir and mead' [TK], 'Farewell ye blithesome braes and meads Our hearts have loved so long' [TPr].

the Meadi (thu-me-di) n. name of the field on the Common just to the south of Pilmuir farm.

the Meadis (thu-me-diz, -dōz) n. the Meadows, area of Burnfoot, named after the meadows on which they were built in 1964. The houses were largely refurbished as private flats in about 1986 and renamed Beattie Court, McLaren Court, Robson Court and Teviotdale Court.

Meadowcleugh (me-dōklooch) n. former quarry near the Carter Bar, also known as Carter Quarry. In 1841 there were 28 people living there, mostly lime contractors, miners, merahcents and their families.

the Meadows see the Meadis

Meadowshaw see Meadshaw

Meadsgrove Plantin (meedsgrov-plawn-tin) n. plantation on the former Wells estate, situated to the north of Blawearie cottage.

Meadshaw (meed-shaw) n. farm on the north side of the Borthwick valley just past Philip. It has sometimes been marked 'Meadowshaw' on maps. 'Archie, hantand [habitually] in Meidshaw' is recorded in 1586/7, but with no surname given. There were 5 'communicants' recorded there in 1650, namely James Todd, Jean Scott, Walter Beattie, James Chisholme and Janet Bap-tie. There was a skirmish between Royalist and Commonwealth forces near here in 1653 (perhaps the last military conflict near Hawick). It was part of Wilton Parish until Robertson was formed in 1689/90. Robert Scott was there in 1702 and Walter Stoddart in 1710. It was surveyed in 1718 along with other Scott of Buccleuch properties; at that time the farm covered 344, 'but very inconvenient it being long and narrow', bounded by the Borthwick Water, Craik, Henwoodie common and Outsiderig. It was rented from the Buccleuch estates by William Ogilvie in 1723. Cooper James Scott was living there in 1753. Robert Beattie was there in 1766, James Laidlaw in 1780–86 and John Nichol in 1792. It was valued along with Craik and Whinneycleuch in 1785 and 1803. James Douglas was shepherd there in the early 1800s. Thomas Brydon was ploughman there in 1812. Walter Lawson, Walter Lunn and their families were there in 1841. About 500 m to the west, near the northern bank of the Borthwick, are the remains of a settlement, roughly circular, about 45 m in diameter. To the north-east of this settlement is another circular enclosure, probably an old sheepfold (formerly also written 'Midshaw', 'Meidshaw', etc.; it appears to be 'Meitsheills' in 1650, ‘Mitchshaw’ in 1690, ‘Mitsha’ in 1702, ‘meatshaw’ in 1710 and ‘Midshaw’ in 1785; it is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Meedshaw’, on Stobie’s 1770 map as ‘Milshaw’ and on Ainslie’s 1773 map as ‘Midshaw’).

Meadshaw Rig (meed-shaw-rig) n. ridge on the south side of the Borthwick valley, south of Eildrig farm, lying between Mid Hill and Rashly Hill. Note that it is a couple of kilometres from the farm of Meadshaw. There is a linear earth-work there.

Meadshawshiel (meed-shaw-shiel) n. former cottage near Meadshaw. James Rieve was there in 1794.

meal (meel) n. any kind of ground grains, but particularly oatmeal – ‘Overhall sett the one half to James Scott for 18 bolls the othr half to Adam Scott for 18 bols half meall half half bear’ [Buc1692].

meal-ark (meel-awrk) n., arch. a tub for holding meal – ‘...the woman in green returned with an equal quantity of meal, which Mrs Buckham put into the meal-ark’ [EM1820], ‘...by pressing both hands open into the meal-ark and pressing them firmly together, yet open ... this was styled a ‘gowpen-fu’ [V&M].

mealie puddin (mee-lee-poo-din) n. a savoury dish containing oatmeal, also known as white puddin.

meal-maker (meel-mā-kur) n., arch. a maker of meal, farmer who produces oatmeal or other grains – ‘Before these witnesses – Alexander Scott, meillmaker in Hawick ...’ [BR1701], ‘...compeared Wm. Hardie, mealmaker, and James Weins, merchand, collectors for the uplifting and inbringing of the stent ...’ [BR1706].

meal o meat (meel-ō-mee) n., arch. amount of food eaten at one meal, meal’s worth of food – ‘Next A speerd if A cood geet ochts ti eat, – if there was a mael o meat ti be bocht’ [ECS] (cf. mael).

meal-poke (meel-pōk) n., arch. a bag for carrying meal, particularly used by beggars – ‘...and to give to the nomadic species known as ‘meal-poke beggars’ a handful of oatmeal ...’ [V&M], ‘An empty purse, a toom meal-poke: To crown my misery, My wifie, greeting in the neuk, Thraws a’ the blame on me’ [DA].

mean (meen) v., arch. to moan, lament, pity – ‘Even my douce auld neebor the Moat Looks muckle to mean and lane’ [DH], n., poet. lamentation, complaint – ‘Thair priests fell bie the sword, an’ thair widaws mæde nae meane’ [HSR], ‘I teemet out my meane afore him; I shawet him

mean (meen) adj., arch. mid, intermediate, intervening – ‘...that in the meane instant of tyme, when Baylyea Hardie was to mount upon horsebacke and carrie the pencill ...’ [BR1706] – ‘Granny cam i’ the mean stour’ [JoHo], possessed jointly, shared by neighbouring farms, common, used in the phrase ‘mean ground’ in the 18th century to refer to land lying on a boundary between farms – ‘A mean wa’, dyke, fence, entry, etc.’ [GW] (also written ‘meane’).

meat (mee’, meet) n., arch. food in general, solid food rather than drink – ‘Twas in thae blest an’ happy days Whan poor fo’k could get meat an’ claes’ [JR], ‘Never mind meat the now Watty. French Jacques fed mei up afore Aw sterted’ [JEDM], ‘And tak’ nae thocht what ye shall eat, And what ye’ll drink or wear; For claes ye’ll get, and drink, and meat, If you the Lord but fear’ [DA], ‘I fairly did him! I went nane tae the puirhoose. I juist went an’ bought some meat wi’ the money’ [JGG], ‘...no a beite o meat hed a etten threh ma brekfist ti the now’ [ECS].

mebbe (me-, mi-bee) adv. maybe – ‘mebbe A wull, mebbe A wunni’, ‘... ‘Mebbe’, he said, offendit like ‘But what will’t be or nicht?’ [WL], ‘... O’ auld mason-tredsmen Lang-syne deid, that built, And built weel wi this thrawn stane Sae like their-sels – mebbe watchin ...’ [DH], ‘...and a ferrule, mebbe, if ye’re the kind that likes to gaun clankin’ along a road’ [DH] (also spelled ‘mebbie’; cf. the more common mibbe).

mebbies (me-, mi-beez) adv., arch. maybe – ‘Yince an ‘Yince an A’d wun there, A thocht, A nicht mebbies cood geet a hurl the lenth o Hawick’ [ECS] (cf. mebbe and mibbe and mibbies).

mechanics (me-ka-nics) n., pl., arch. manual workmen, craftsmen, artisans – ‘...it was found therein specified that ye loft bewest the church door was allocat to the Mechanicks in ye toun as is att more length set down in Anno 1683 ...’ [PR1717] (it is unclear whether the word was used to refer to all the incorporated trades in the Town, or only some of them, e.g. the hammermen).

the Mechanics' Institute (thu-me-kaw-neeks-in-sti-choo') n. organisation active in Hawick in the mid-19th century, which ran lectures to promote general knowledge among the working class. There were many 'Mechanics' Institutes' set up in other towns in this period. It ran a library on O'Connell Street. It may have been the same as the I.O.U.S. Mechanics Friendly Society.

Meda (mee-da) n. the scout in the play 'The Gutterbludes', described as 'A Veteran Canadian Pioneer, originally named 'The Medicine Man' by the Mohicans, of Scottish Descent'.

Meda's Song (mee-duz-sawng) n. song written for the play 'The Gutterbludes' in 1905, with words by J.E.D. Murray and music by Adam Grant. It is about an Indian scout (Meda) who is really an exiled Teri in disguise, with the role first performed by W.F. Crosby. It is also sometimes called 'The Song of Meda'. It was first published in 1905 as part of the song sheet for 'The Gutterbludes', but the 3rd verse was not published until 1913 (in an edition by Adam Grant, published in memory of his daughter Nan), so it is unclear if this verse was included in the original. A version was recorded by Hamilton B. Little on a 78 r.p.m. record in the 1930s. Grant's simple accompaniment was embellished by Adie Ingles for the 1957 song book. It was changed again by Ian Seeley for the 2001 edition of 'The Hawick Songs', making it again chordal, but more modern. It is a powerful song, and retains its popularity. Despite having no chorus, the audience typically join in gradually as the song progresses, until all are singing by the end.

Medlicott (med-lee-ko') n. Capt. Walter Sandfield (1879–1970) son of Henry Edmondstone and Kate D'Oyley Gale. He was an officer in the Northumberland Hussars. He married Lavender Mary Pease. Later in life he lived at Old Fodderlee, where he died, aged 90.

the Medway Cup (thu-med-wā-kup) n. the Medway Challenge Cup, competed for at the Common Riding races, presented by Oliver Kennedy in 1927, when it replaced the Bransholm Stakes. Kennedy moved to Southend to set up his own knitwear company, using 'Medway' as his trade name (because the factory looked across the Thames Estuary to where it is joined by the River Medway). The cup was won by Marjorie Haddon on Rufus on Common Riding Saturday of 1927. Cornet Ian Mactaggart, also riding Rufus, won it in 1929, was second in 1930 and 1931 and won again in 1932 and 1933, getting it outright following his 3 victories. However, the cup was given back for competition again in 1966 by the widow of ex-Cornet Ian Mactaggart. The Kennedy family continues to provide sponsorship for the race.

meed (meed) n., poet. merit, reward – 'O heaven and earth! but death is a meed, Which sorrow like her's might desire ...' [JTe], '... Baffling despair with a Border blow, and deeming our brightest meed, The sunny smile of an auld, auld toon, Where the Teviot twines to the Tweed' [JYH], mood, disposition.

Meek (meek) n. Brian, J.P., O.B.E. (1939–2004) born in Leith, he spent time in Hawick during WWII, then attended the Royal High School in Edinburgh before embarking on a career in journalism. He worked largely as a feature and sports writer, with long involvement with the Scottish Daily Express and later the Herald. He was a Conservative politician on various levels of local government in Edinburgh. He was columnist of the year 4 times and sports writer of the year twice.

meenint (mee-nin') n., arch. minute – '... an clappeet masel doon a meenint on ov a foggie bank' [ECS], 'It wad want a twae-threi meenints a twae i the efternuin ...' [ECS] (of time; meenite is more common).

meenister (mee-nis-tur, mi-nees-tur) n. a minister – 'Baith elder an' meenister left her alane, Her neebours were aw'd wi' her croon an' her grane' [BM1901], 'The meenister said, When he gied us a ca', 'We ken some folk that weel, We dinna ken them ava' [IJ] (also sometimes 'mineester').

meenisters (mee-nis-turz) n., pl. ministers, being appointed to each parish in the post-Reformation Church of Scotland, as well as other related churches. They also served as Moderators for their parish Sessions. The Hawick minister lived in the Manse, which for centuries was on Old Manse Lane. In the 18th century the Hawick minister enjoyed the privilege of cutting peat and turf on the Common and of grazing on the Common any horses, cows or sheep that he possessed; he also received a 'teind' for any newborns to the Town's livestock, 4d for a lamb, 1s for a calf and 1s 8d for a foal. Parish ministers of Hawick can be traced back for several centuries, although the early days are actual duties to the parish. The first Hawick clergymen on record are Henry, 'persona' (i.e. Parson), and Algar and William, both

'capellano' (i.e. Chaplain) in about 1183. Then comes William ('Willo Clerico de hauwic'), probably the same man 4 more times in the next decade or 2, followed by 'Maurice, Parson of Hawick' in 1235. Then there is Radolphus (or Ralph) in the 1260s and Richard de Witton in 1296. There then follows several Rectors who held the 'benefice' of the church of Hawick, although probably never visited the town, and may have had a curate performing the pastoral duties. The roll afterwards is: Robert de Ormesby in 1297; Richard de Clare for a few years up until perhaps 1311; an unnamed appointee of Edward II in 1319; Gerard Kereti, from about 1346–53; John of Hawick, from 1355/6; John Fleming (possibly the same as the previous Rector) until some time before 1363; John Leche, from before 1363 until at least 1378; John Cromdale, probably after 1378; William Turnbull, from before 1431; James Lindsay, Rector from 1447, Prebendary from 1470; Thomas Falconer, Chaplain in 1452; Hugh de Douglas noted in 1460; Gilbert Kennedy, Prebendary until 1470; Alexander Murray at least 1476–82; John Preston, Parson in 1481; James Merchiston in the years around 1504; Robert Lutherdale, Chaplain in at least 1511/2–14; Alexander Newton, Vicar in 1514; William Cunningham, Parson in 1519/20; John Hardie, Chaplain in 1519/20; John Scott, Vicar in at least 1528–39/40; John Hepburn, Rector in 1532; Pate Witelow around 1532; and John Scott, Rector from 1536. John Young was burned in his tower in 1548. George Hepburn was Parson around 1559, probably the last before the Reformation. John Sandilands was recorded as Rector in 1554 and 1558, and after the Reformation was Parson, probably from 1563 until 1583. John Spottiswood was also recorded as a Rector in 1558 (so there were apparently 2 men sharing this benefice). William Fowler held the post of Parson from 1585 until 1601. However, Henry Scott was Reader in 1574–79, while William Auchmowtie was Minister for Hawick, Wilton, Kirkton, Hassendean and Cavers (at the same time) from 1575 until at least 1591, i.e. he was the actual minister during the time of at least a couple of Parsons and Readers. The charge was vacant in 1599 (and possibly for several years around that time). We then have the post-Reformation bona fide Hawick Parish Ministers: Thomas Abernethy, from 1601 until about 1610; Adam Scott 1612–c.24; Robert Cunningham 1625–56; John Scott 1657–62; and Alexander Kinnear about 1663–67. John Langlands was the last Episcopalian, appointed in 1667 and deprived

the Meetin-hoose

in 1689. There was then a vacancy for about 2 years in the confusing times after the Revolution. The following is a list thereafter: Alexander Orrock 1691–1711; Robert Cunningham 1712–22; Charles Telfer 1723–31; William Somerville 1732–57; James Laurie 1757–83; Thomas Sharp 1784–89; Robert Gillan 1789–1800; James Arkle 1800–23; John Cochrane 1823–32; John A. Wallace 1833–43; John MacRae 1843–92; David Cathels 1892–1925; John A.G. Thomson 1925–??; David L. Wright 1972–86.

Meg (meg) n. Christian name, usually a familiar form of Margaret – ‘...Aw wunder what Meg’ll say?’ [RM] (also Mag, Maggy and Meggie).

Meg an the Bairns (meg-in-thu-bärnz) n. popular name for two small cairns on top of Needs Law in the north-eastern part of Castleton Parish. The ancient cairn there is about 17 m in diameter and has these 2 modern cairns on top, one smaller than the other.

Meggat’s Ade (me-gits-ād) n. nickname for Adam Crozier.

the Megget (thu-me-gi) n. reservoir created in the 1983, when a valley to the west of St. Mary’s Loch was flooded, covering the ruined 16th century Cramalt Tower. It has the biggest earth dam in Scotland and supplies water to Edinburgh and the Lothians. The area was referred to as ‘Megotland’ around the early 1500s when it was a favourite hunting centre for the King, and also used as a base for suppressing rievvers. It is also the name of the river that rises near Broad Law, passes through the Reservoir and empties into St. Mary’s Loch – ‘Meggat Water and Tema, They tumble down from the hills, With the scent of peat In their tinkling feet, And the brown trout breasting their rills’ [WL] (also spelled ‘Meggat’; marked ‘Stanhouse or Meggat Riv.’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Meggie (me-gee) n. form of Christian name ‘Margaret’ – ‘Na, never na! never afore, Was seen sic a brainyell o’ riot and revelry; Gudeness be wi’ us now! siccan a splore – Plagues i’ the charms o’ sweet Meggie M’Givelry’ [JoHa] (see also Meg, Mag and Maggy).

meggins (me-gins) interj., arch. exclamation of surprise, mercy – ‘Aih meggins, is that railly yow!’ [GW] (short form of megginstie).

megginstie (me-gin-stee) interj., arch. exclamation of surprise, particularly in the phrase ‘Megginstie mei!’ (cf. mergenstie and meggins).

Castleweary and Linhope. It reaches a height of 353 m.

meg sakes mei (meg-sāks-mī) n. interj. expression of surprise or exasperation – ‘Bidden, meg sakes mei mother, bidden, how could Aw, an’ yow a’ eer lane on a Common Ridin’ night?’ [JEDM] (presumably a variant of Lod-sakes-mei).

Meg the Manty (meg-thu-mawn-tee) n. popular name for Margaret Watson (or possibly Walker). She is also referred to as ‘Meg the Mantua’ – ‘Then Meg the Mantua sails along, Auld Nancy leads her cuddy aboot, And Gleska Jamie lilt a sang Tae Shauchles, Chinnie and Roll-aboot’ [HI] (probably derived from ‘Mantie’, a Scots version of the English ‘manteau’ or ‘mantua’, being a loose flowing gown, with a connection to ‘mantua’, referring to bonnets made in this Italian city).

meh’i (me) contr. meant to – ‘A meh’i gaun yesterdi, bit A hink A’ll gaun the day instead’ (see i).

mei (mī) pron. me – ‘mei an yow can dae eet’, ‘A deh ken, mei’, ‘so that was mei then’, ‘deh roll yer een it mei’, ‘And this she said tae mei ...’ [JSB], ‘...an’ that didna care to speak to the like o’ mey’ [BCM1880], ‘...That some day they, Like mei will turn grey’ [JEDM], ‘...Mei! the Meikle Brig (thu-mee-kul-brig) n. former name for Hawick's main bridge, perhaps suggesting there was a second one, as also indicated by other records of the early 18th century. The Session books of 1722 state that 2 elders are to collect money 'from ye west side of ye toun to ye Bridge' and the next 'from ye Meikle bridge to Wm. Dickson's house'. This is suggestive of 2 separate bridges across the Slitrig, this being the popular name for the larger one, but this is far from certain. It may be that the 'Meikle Brig' was the 'Auld Brig' (not perhaps so old back then), with the other being a bridge over the Slitrig mill lade.

Meikle Cavers (mee-kul-kā-vurz) n. former name for 'Cavers Magna', i.e. the main Parish of Cavers, recorded in an instrument of 1404/5 and a papal bull of 1419.

Meikledale (mee-kul-dāl) n. farm near where the Meikledale Burn joins the Ewes Water on the A7, about 5 miles south of Mossypaul. The lands there were long the seat of the Littles, from before 1426 when Simon Little had an earlier grant confirmed. They were described as a 20-merk land in 1550, when inherited by Robert, Lord Maxwell, by John, Lord Maxwell in 1604, by Robert, Lord Maxwell in 1619, by John, Earl of Nithsdale in 1670 and by William, Earl of Nithsdale in 1696. They were then owned by the Elliots. The farm was valued at £900 in 1671 when Adam Elliot was owner. When inherited by Adam's son William in 1682 the farm (together with Meikledalehope) was described as a 19-merk land of old extent. It was said that Adam Elliot (perhaps son of William) was forced to sell it in 1725 to pay off his creditors, particularly his father's cousin William of Thorlieshope. William Scott of Rowanburn (a descendant of the Scotts of Thirlestane) acquired it in 1733 and sold it to William Laing (Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch) in 1750. Thomas Beattie was then the tenant, and wrote a diary, which survives; he was still there until at least 1797. Mr. Laing sold it to William Elliot Lockhart of Borthwickbrae, his nephew. The tenant in 1841 and until at least the 1860s was John Common.

An ancient standing stone, the 'Grey Wether' stood in front of the house. There are remains of an ancient settlement just to the north-east, and another further up the Burn at Riogfoot. There was also formerly a mill there (sometimes 'Muckledale'; it is 'Meikildale' in 1426, 'Mekyldail' in 1499, 'Mekilldail' in 1550, 'Mekildail' in 1569 and 'Muckledeal' in 1785; it is 'Meikildale' on Blaeu's 1654 map and 'Muckledale' on Crawford's 1804 map).

Meikledale Burn (mee-kul-dāl-burn) n. major stream that rises at Faw Side and Rashiegrain Height (on the boundary between Roxburghshire and Dumfriesshire) and joins the Ewes Water near the farm of Meikledale. There are signs of a rectangular platform near the head of the burn and signs of a settlement further down.

Meikledale Haugh (mee-kul-dāl-hawch) n. cottage near Meikledale. There were Jacksons and Douglasses there in 1841.

Meikledalehope (mee-kul-dāl-hōp) n. former lands near Meikledale. This could be the 'mekil-hop' where Simon Scott was recorded in 1494/5. The lands were inherited along with Meikledale by William Elliot in 1682 (it is 'Meikledaillhope' in 1682).

the Meikle Door (thu-mee-kul-dōr) n. former name for the main, large entrance to St. Mary's Kirk, situated at the west end. This is in the pre-1763 Kirk – 'Falnash, Bailies Ruecastle and Graham to stand att the meikle kirk door' [PR1718].

Meikle Whitlaw (mee-kul-whi'-law) n. former name for a farm at Whitlaw, to the north of the Flex road, opposite 'Little Whitlaw'. The 2 former farms were separated by the Flex Burn. The farm was surveyed in 1718, along with other properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, at that time covering 188 acres and being bounded by the Slitrig, Little Whitlaw and Hawick Common, with the farmhouse at the south end, on the Flex Burn. The old boundary of the Common came to a point there, with the boundary line running through one of the farm buildings; this was the house of Janet Martin at the time of the 1767 description of the Common. At the Riding of the Marches a cut sod was placed on the roof and the Flag passed over it also (presumably by the Cornet). The farm was formerly owned by the Gladstains, then became a tenanted farm belonging to the Duke of Buccleuch. There is a record of a band of English and Scottish thieves stealing cattle from John Gledstanes' byre there in 1580 and being followed by a band of Gledstains and Scotts; on their return through Liddesdale they were ambushed by Armstrongs and others and Walter, brother of James Gledstains of Cocklaw was killed. In 1692 Francis Gledstains renewed his lease, which he held by right through 'gentleman service'. In the 1750s there was a dispute over the apportionment of the 'cess' between these lands and the Flex. 'Mickle and Little Whitlaws' were valued together at £152 2s 7d in 1811, when owned by the Duke of Buccleuch. The farmer in the mid-19th century was William Knox; he was said to have succeeded 2 of his uncles, who became tenants in about 1746 (although it was probably later), succeeding John Gledstains. The site of the former farm buildings is now the main part of Flex farm (also known as 'Muckle Whitlaw'; it is 'Mekle Quhitelaw' in 1580 and 'Meikle Whittlawes' in 1718).

Mein (meen) n. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Huntly and their son Andrew was baptised in 1797. The witnesses were Robert Tinlin and James Rae. He was recorded as servant to Mr. Dickson on the 1799 ballot for the Militia. James (b.c.1800) born in Stow, he was farmer at Weensland Farmhouse in 1851 and 1861. His wife was Janet and they had a son James. James (19th C.) boot and shoemaker in Lilliesleaf, listed in Pigot's 1837 directory. His widow Isabella Mitchell, and daughters Williamina and Jane, are recorded on Mian Street in Lillieleaf in 1851. James (b.c.1810) framework knitter. He lived on the High Street in 1841 and at Kirkgate in 1851. His wife was Elizabeth ('Betsy'), and they had children James, Eliza and Adam. He may be the 'Mensie Mein' who is mentioned in 'Hawick Immortals' – 'Peggy Duncan and Jenny Din, Nellie Herkness and Mensie Mein; The Wilton Priest wi' his coat o' skin, Staney Stewart and Candy Jean' [HI]. John (17th C.) tenant in Barnes in 1684, when his servant Thomas Yellowlees was declared a fugitive for being a Covenanter. Robert (17th C.) mason who worked at Branhholme, his surname being written 'Mean'. He was listed in the inventory of the deceased Earl of Buccleuch in 1633 being owed £87 3s 4d for his work at Branhholme. Robert (17th/18th C.) mason originally from Melrose Parish. In 1723 he witnessed a baptism in hawick Parish for workman Adam Tudhope. In 1716 in Hawick he married Agnes, daughter of the deceased James Chisholme. Their children (baptised in Hawick) included: Agnes (b.1724); and Richard (b.1731). Thomas (b.1821/2) farmer at Broomhills in Southdean in the 1860s. He was living with his mother Elizabeth at Southdean Glebe in 1841 and was at Broom farm by 1851. In 1861 he was farmer of 220 acres at Broomhills, employing 7 people. He married Elizabeth or Betsy Smith in Hobkirk Parish in 1855. He must have been related to the Meins of Hunthill and Ormiston (formerly written 'Mean' and variants; see also Main).

[BR1692], 'The said day, Robert Roucastil and Robert Brown, the two present bailies, with the town council, did ride the meiths and marches of the Common' [BR1707], '...did, according to antient custome, pass upon horse and foot round the haille marches and meiths of the Common ...' [BR1734], v., arch. to define by marks.

meithin (mī-thin, mee-thin) n., arch. process of marking boundaries – 'The said day, Allan Deans, traveller, being accused for not being at the riding and meithing of the common ...' [BR1645].

melancholious (me-lin-kō-lee-is) adj., arch. relating to the 'humour' melancholy, soberly thoughtful, pensive – 'And likewise in her service her deportment among her fellow servants att home being melancholious as the Laird of Whithaugh did signifie ...' [PR1715].

Melchert (mel-shurt) n. Heinz (1925–2020) born on New Year's Day in Pomerania, he was called up to serve the German army in 1943 and a year later was captured by the Americans in France. He spent time as a P.O.W. in the U.S.A. and Canada, before being shipped to Leith. After the War he decided to remain in Scotland, coming to Hawick in 1948 where he worked for Lipton's and then the Store grocery department. He married Adelheid (d.1977) in 1960 and after she died he secondly married Ella Russell (d.2004) in 1986, whom he had met in his early days in Hawick. He was one of the people who founded Hawick Table Tennis Club in the Congregational Church Hall in the 1980s. Although he kept a strong German accent, he was described as being more of a Scotsman than a German.

melder (mel-dur) n., arch. a quantity of corn that is ground at one time, one customer's load of corn – '...that he would send him a boll of meal out of a melder he had just got from the mill' [WNK], also used figuratively – 'Wi' face (od! gin ye saw't) as grave As e'er wore hypocritic elder, After a godly, gospel melder O' young first-time communicants' [JoHa].

meldrop (mel-drop) n., arch. a drop of mucus on the end of someone's nose, the drop at the end of an icicle – 'Dight the meldrop frae my nose, and I'll wear the midges frae yours' = do me a favour, and I will repay it: a common phrase among the peasantry in Rxb.' [JoJ].

the Melgund (thu-mel-gind) n. the Melgund Bar at 11 Melgund Place, taking its name from the spring that once stood near there. Also sometimes called the 'Melgund Pump'. It closed in 2004, but reopened briefly in 2006, turning into a bar and Indian restaurant in 2008.

the Melgund Brig (thu-mel-gind-brig) n. popular name sometimes used for the road bridge over the railway at the corner of Melgund Place and Brougham Place.

Melgund Glen (mel-gind-glen) n. house near Denholm, belonging to the Earl of Minto. It lies between Hassendean Bank and Minto village, on the Grinding Burn. It was probably designed by W.H. Playfair in 1827 and was used as the Manse for Minto Parish. Some old field boundaries are visible to the north-west.

Melgund Place (mel-gind-plis) n. street running between the tops of Brougham Place and O'Connell Street, with original houses built in 1837 (the street name is already used in Pigot's 1837 directory). It was named after a title borne by the heir to the Earldom of Minto, being an area in Forfarshire. J.P. Alison designed the tenement at No. 1.

the Melgund Pump (thu-mel-gind-pump) n. popular name for the Melgund Bar at 11 Melgund Place. Originally it was the name of a spring at the corner of Melgund Place and O'Connell Street, demolished in 1881. It was also known as 'Stenton's Pump'.

mell (mel) n., arch. a mallet, particularly a wooden one, a heavy hammer – 'He fell! – and instant every arm With weapon rude was rear'd – And pick, and mell, and causeway stone, With Ringan's brains were smeared' [JTe], 'And O man but you'll find it's snell, To bear misfortune's iron mell' [JoHa], club used to kill fish once they have been caught – 'Scannin the sleek-back't Cauld; dichtin a mell ...' [DH], mallet as presented to the last in a race, booby-prize – 'Given James Cowan for ribbons to the race, mell, and calk ...' [BR1724], 'Dunion, wui its muckle mell heed, is buirdly billie ti Ruberslaw' [ECS], v., arch. to use a mallet, hammer, beat – 'For guidsake, stay, nae mair sic tales be telling, Else, faith, I dread ye'll bring on us a melling' [JoHa].

the Mell (thu-mel) n. nickname in use around the 19th century – 'Black Andra' and the Birsin' Badger, Tammy Robertson, Deevil Bell; The Blue Laird and the Gallopin' Cadger, Baillie Birsleton and the Mell' [HI].

melld (meld) adj., arch. mild – 'It's a melld day' [GW] (the same word occurs in Northumberland).

Mellerstain (me-lur-stān) n. Georgian manor house, near Gordon in Berwickshire. The estate was owned by the Heatleys and then the Bailies. The house was built in the 18th century by William and Robert Adam for the Bailie family, it was originally called Whitesyde, and is now open to the public. Its landscape was laid out in the 1720s and 30s, further developed by Reginald Blomfield around 1900 into an outstanding example of a planned estate. The Hundy Mundy folly to the south, with a wooded area, is now used for natural burials.

mell-heid (mel-heed) n., arch. the head of a hammer, and large, hard head – 'Dunion, wui its muckle mell heed, is buirdly billie ti Ruberslaw' [ECS], a dunderhead, numbskull – 'A muckle mell-heed!' [ECS].

mellin (me-lin) n., arch. dealing – '...that nather be day nor night we have melling or intercoming with noe Englishman ...' [CBP1597].

Mellon (me-lin) n. Fr. Edward (??-??) priest at S.S. Mary & David's 1924–30. He was heavily involved with purchasing the adjoining property and converting it to the Halls, but had to leave before the work was completed.

Mellorshope (me-lurz-hōp) n. house on the Hermitage Water, near Dinlees.

melly (me-lee) n., arch. cloth that is a mixture of colours – ‘...for art and part of theft and concealment ... six ells of melley, twenty-four ells of white cloth ...’ [RBA1537].

Melrose (mel-rōz) n. town built at the foot of the Eildons in the Tweed valley, birthplace of rugby sevens. St. Aidan founded a monastery here in the 7th century, being succeeded by St. Boswell and St. Cuthbert, with the present abbey founded around 1136. The town became a Burgh of Barony in 1609. The 15th century Commendator’s House, repaired 1645 Market Cross, and Priorwood Gardens are other attractions. At one time called Fordel, it was well known for producing linens until the late 18th century, and also known as the former home of ‘Coltart’s Candy’. Melrose Lammas Fair was for a long time the largest market for lambs in southern Scotland, and also a great meeting-place in the Borders. Melrose was a station on the Waverley Line, but is now primarily a residential and retirement community. Considered ‘posh’ by other Borderers, it is rarely the best-loved among the other towns – ‘The dastards of Melrose and Galashiels weavers! They pulled out our badge, and became our deceivers’ [JH]. Melrose Festival Week was inaugurated in 1938, led by the Melrosian and the Festival Queen, and has some events in the grounds of Melrose Abbey. The local song has some great words – ‘It’s oor ain toon, It’s the best toon That ever there be: Here’s tae Melrose, gem o’ Scotland, The toon o’ the free’. The town has also given rise to a surname. Population (1991) 2,270 (the origin is possibly the Old British ‘mael’ and Old Welsh ‘rhos’, meaning ‘bare or cropped moor’, although the Gaelic ‘ros’ for ‘promontory’ has also been suggested; the name was probably transferred from Old Melrose where the Abbey was first sited; certainly the name has nothing to do with the rose, despite its appearance on the town’s coat of arms; the name first appears as ‘Mailros’ about 700 and had varied spellings until the 17th century).

Melrose (mel-rōz) n. Adam (d.1222) referred to as ‘Adam of Melrose’, where he became Abbot in 1207. His origins are a mystery. In 1213 he became Bishop of Caithness, and was consecrated in May 1214. In the following month he dedicated the church of St. Mary in Hawick. This is presumably because he had previously been Abbot of Melrose, and would have been something he did before returning to Caithness. In 1218 he was one of the Bishops who visited the Pope to reverse the excommunication imposed upon the whole Kingdom of Scotland. He was burned to death in his kitchen at Halkirk by a mob of infuriated farmers after he had increased the tax. Adam (1817/8–74) another of the engineering family, of whom a portrait exists. He married Agnes, daughter of plumber and slater Walter Grieve, and she died in 1891, aged 75. Their children included: Janet, who married James Davidson, who worked for Patons, spinners in Alloa; Helen (b.1844); Agnes; another Agnes; Walter (b.1849); Maggie (b.1853); Lizzie; Isabella; and Jemima. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. George (18th C.) married Janet Renwick in Southdean Parish in 1738. Helen (19th C.) listed as milliner or dressmaker in Slater’s 1852 directory. J. (d.1814) resident of Mackside. His death is recorded in Hobkirk Parish. James (b.1767/8) born in Ratho, Midlothian, he was an engineer who came to Hawick from Berwick in the 1810s and founded the local firm James Melrose & Sons in 1815. Their premises started in Brougham Place (shown on Wood’s 1824 map) and moved to Slitrig Crescent. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He is listed as a millwright and machine maker at ‘Woodyard’ on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory, and was still there on the 1841 census. The firm produced much of the machinery for woollen mills in the South of Scotland. He is recorded as a joint proprietor with his son James in the 1837 electoral roll. In 1837 he was listed simply on the High Street. He is said to have invented the piecing machine (for joining the ‘rovings’ in preparation for spinning) in Hawick in 1844, which was adopted throughout Scotland, as well as in England, and as far afield as Russia. In 1851 he was at 1 High Street (although clearly the east end of the High Street was meant) and ‘Jas. Melrose & Son, millwrights, East end’ is listed in Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1808 he married Helen (or ‘Nelly’) Hardie in Eccles, Berwickshire. Their children included: Elizabeth (b.1810); and John (b.1815). He was still alive in 1851. James (d.1862) from Hawick, he became foreman of the Keysham Steam Factory in Devonport. He married Janet Easton in 1839 and she died in Hawick in 1886. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. John (15th C.) recorded in 1493 as tenant in ‘quhithalch’, when he was allowed to ‘componie’ for stealing cows from the Frissells near Peebles. It is unclear which of the Whithaugh or Whitehaugh he lived at, but his surety was Robert Scott of Whitcheater. John (c.1815–89) son of James, he ran the family engineering firm. He was born in Berwick. He was a Town Councillor for Slitrig Ward until 1867. He was Chairman of Hawick Gas Light Co., and member of the Parochial Board. He was also on the original Hawick Bowling Club committee in 1854. In 1851 he was at 5 Brougham Place and at 14 Slitrig Crescent in 1861. He donated a communion cup from the Green Kirk to the Museum. He married Catherine Easton. Their children were: Eliza (b.1841); James (b.1843); Helen Hardie (b.1845); William (b.1847); Margaret (b.1850); John (b.1853), who became Hawick Provost; and Catherine (b.c.1855). John, C.B.E. (b.1853) son of John and Catherine Easton. He grew up in Hawick, where he was taught for a while by James Murray. He ran the engineering company James Melrose & Sons. He was on Hawick Town Council for Teviot Ward from 1898 and was soon elected a Magistrate, then was Provost 1902–1919, being Hawick's longest serving Provost. He was said to be a man of few words, but an untiring public servant. A large number of improvements were carried out during his Provostship, including the Boer War Memorial, the Quater-Centenary, the Corporation Swimming Baths, Anderson Sanatorium, the Fire Station, acquisition of Moat Park and the move of the Museum to Wilton Lodge. In 1906 he was the first Provost to wear the robes, with chain and badge of office. He was Chairman of the Common Riding Committee and the Ceremonial Committee, Chairman of the Home-Coming and Pageant Committee, one of the original members of the Callants' Club and an early President. He was also Chairman of the local Military Tribunal during WWI, for which service he received the C.B.E. He was Unionist in politics, Chairman of the Hawick Gas Company and Teviotdale Dairy Co., Governor of Hawick Savings Bank, member of the District Board of Control and a J.P. He married Grace Franch Taylor, who came from Lauder. On his retirement he was presented with a portrait by George Fiddes Watt, R.S.A., which is now in the Town Hall. He lived at Hopehill, is buried at Wilton Cemetery, and Melrose Court is named after him. He can be seen in a film clip of Baden-Powell's visit to Hawick in 1910. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He married Elizabeth (or 'Betty') Rieve in Roberton in 1794. Their children included: Robert (b.1795), baptised in Roberton; and Janet (b.1805), baptised in Galashiels. The 1795 baptism was 1by law in Kelso Parish'. Robert (18th/19th C.) servant at Deanfoot in Minto Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. William (15th C.) witness in 1454 to a charter in Wilton Parish. He is recorded as 'Willelmo Melross'. Most of the other witnesses were local men. William (d.1908) brother of Provost John, he was a partner in Melrose's engineering firm, having served as apprentice under his father and uncle. He was on the School Board, associated with the Archæological Society, a Director of the Hawick Gas-Light Company and a member of the East-Bank Church. He had been taught by J.A.H. Murray and was one of the first people in Hawick to take up cycling. He installed the first electric generator in Hawick, which ran at Tower Mill, and provided electric lighting to William Elliot's house at Teviot Lodge.

Melrose Abbey (mel-rōz-aw-bee) n. abbey in the town of Melrose, founded by David I around 1136, with Cistercian (also known as 'white') monks. This followed an earlier monastery built at Old Melrose, in a loop of the Tweed, about 2½ miles downriver. It was founded around 650 by St. Aidan, with St. Boisil and St. Cuthbert also Priors there. This building was burned in 839, slowly fell into decay and was abandoned by the 11th century. The new abbey was dedicated to St. Mary and was headed by an Abbot. The town of Melrose grew up around the Abbey. The 'Chronicle of Melrose' is a historical record compiled by the monks, covering the period 731–1264, and including the consecration of St. Mary's in Hawick in 1214. The Abbey held the right of patronage of Hassendean Parish from the late 12th century until the Reformation. They also held extensive pieces of land throughout the Borders, including a large chunk of Ettrick (according to a charter of around 1235) and Ringwood, an area in southern Cavers Parish, as first recorded in 1360. Their lands were erected into a free regality in 1358. Around the same time there was confirmation of the Abbey's right to the annual rents from the sheriff courts and justice courts of Roxburghshire. Walter Scott of Branxholme was appointed Bailie of their lands in 1519, confirmed in 1524/5; this included 'Melrosland, Ettrikheid, Rodonaland, Eskdalmuir, Ringwoodfield, Est Tevidall and Vggynis'. The Abbey was frequently damaged during Border skirmishes, being burned in 1322, when Abbot Peebles was slain by Edward II's men. Robert the Bruce gave a huge sum for its rebuilding. Lands gifted to the Abbey about that time included some in the Borthwick valley. Burned again in 1385, it was rebuilt in the 15th century, and burned again in 1545. Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme apparently dismantled much of it in 1569 (according to a court case of 1573), claiming he had carried off the materials to save them from the English. The abbey was finally destroyed in the Reformation, and the lands were administered by a Commendator. After many changes of hands the lands (including the Kirks of Hassendean and Cavers) were formally resigned in 1609, becoming part of the Lordship of Melrose. The parish kirk was constructed over the nave in 1618. Thomas Hamilton became Earl of Melrose and gained the lands of the Abbey in 1619, and later they passed to the Scotts of Buccleuch. Records of the Regality of Melrose, pertaining to the former Abbey's lands preserve some important local information. The Abbey was built in red sandstone, including fine tracery, with much intricate carving surviving. It was extensively restored in 1822, at the expense of the Duke of Buccleuch, under the supervision of Sir Walter Scott. Alexander II is buried here, as well as allegedly the heart of Robert the Bruce, after being carried back from the Crusades. More local connections include that St. Cuthbert is said to have started his career at Melrose Abbey, George Fairneylaw, a messenger from the Abbey is meant to have been killed by Roger Langlands at Stirches in 1493 (possibly true, although Fairneylaw was a cleric of the Diocese of Glasgow), and the monks are supposed to have first built the shelter at Moss paul (although there is no evidence to support this, but they did own land in the neighbourhood). The abbey is now open to the public, as well as the adjacent Commendator's House – 'Deserted Melrose! oft with holy dread I trace thy ruins mouldering o'er the dead; While, as the fragments fall, wild fancy hears The solemn steps of old departed years' [JL].

Melrose Court (mel-rōz-kōr') n. part of Stirches, built in 1968 and named after Provost John Melrose. It was built on the site of a former Manse of Wilton Parish and a small amount of stonework from that building was incorporated into the construction.

Melroslands (mel-rōzlawndz) n. lands held by Melrose Abbey in the 15th and 16th centuries. It is unclear exactly the extent of these lands, and whether they always meant the same thing. Along with Ettrick, Rodono, Eskdalemuir, Ringwoodfield and East Teviotdale, they formed a set of lands to which Sir David Scott of Branxholme and his son Robert were appointed as bailies in 1484. Gilbert Leighton and Robert Cairncross were recorded as tenants in 1493. The appointment was hereditary, with Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch was appointed to the same office in 1519, Sir Walter succeeding his grandfather in 1564 and the next Sir Walter succeeding his father in 1574 (it is 'Mellroslendis' in 1519, 'Melrosland' in 1524 and 'Melrosland' in 1553/4).

Melrose's (mel-rō-zeez) n. local engineering firm, founded in 1815 as James Melrose & Sons, starting in Brougham Place and moving to Slitrig Crescent. They supplied many of the local textile mills, e.g. the new pit wheel for Wilton Mills in 1829, the first steam engine built in Hawick, for Langlands Mill in 1831, and the first 'piecing machine' in Hawick in 1844. They furnished the mills at the Glebe, Riversdale and Teviotdale. They also occupied the Teviotside Foundry on the east side of Commercial Road from the late 19th century. At their height the company was supplying factories from the England Midlands to far north of Scotland. The National Archives of Scotland have papers dating from 1867, while the Scottish Borders Archive has some engineering plans from about 1863–1910.

Melrose's (mel-rō-zeez) n. butcher's shop also run as a hostelry by Mrs. Melrose in the early 19th century. It was located at the eastern side of the Tower.

Melrosian (me-rōz-ee-in) n. someone from Melrose, also the name of the principal of the Melrose festival.

melt (mel-tith) n., arch. the spawn of a male fish, milt.

meltith (mel') n., arch. the milt, male reproductive gland of a fish, arch., poet. a meal, food, sustenance – 'Thaye sall fa' bie the sword; thaye sall be ane melteth for the tod's' [HSR], '...an' that was ay when ye gaed him a gude meltith – a nicht's ludgin' an' a pickle meal away wi' him in the mornin'' [BCM1880].

Melville (mel-vil) n. David (1660–1728) 3rd son of George, Earl of Melville. He became 3rd Earl of Leven in 1681. He came over to Scotland with the army of William of Orange in 1688. Along with his father, he helped deal with the affairs in Scotland for Anna, Duchess of Buccleuch, who was half-sister of his mother. There are several letters in existence from her to him in the period 1696–1702. Holding several high offices, he was appointed a Commissioner for the Union in 1706, was a Representative Peer 1707–10, but dismissed from all offices in 1712. George (1636–1707) 4th Lord and 1st Earl of Melville. He was an advisor of the young Duchess of Buccleuch, taking care of her affairs in Scotland. Accused in the 'Rye House Plot' of 1683, he fled to Holland. He returned to Scotland after the Revolution and became Secretary of State for Scotland. He and his son continued to deal with the estates of the Duchess, but after her return to Scotland in 1701 she started to suspect that they had worked in their own interest, and the legal disputes took until 1711 to resolve. He is portrayed as Henry Morton in Sir Walter Scott's 'Old Mortality'. He married Catherine, only daughter of Lady Margaret Leslie and her 1st husband, Lord Balgonie; she was a step-sister of the Duchess of Buccleuch. He was succeeded by his son David, who was also Earl of Leven. James of Halhill (d.bef. 1714) son of Sir James of Halhill and Burntisland. His great-grandfather, also Sir James, was author of the 'Memoirs of His Own Life'. In 1694 he served as a Commissioner for assessing the rentals for the Duchess of Buccleuch. In 1696 John Scott of Synton and Sir Francis Scott of Thirlestane had a bond with him. Rev. John (17th C.) from the Mearns, he graduated from Aberdeen in 1667. He became minister at Ewes Kirk in about 1682. However, he was deprived in 1689 for refusing to give up Episcopalianism.

mem (mem) n., arch. ma'am, madam – 'I dinna ken how much whisky they took, mem, but they've drucken sax gang o' watter!' [V&M], 'Deed, then, mem', said she, 'I won't hire with that condition; for I wadna gie the crack i' the kirkyaird after, for a' the rest o' the service' [WiS].

Members o Pairliment (mem-burz-ō-pār-li-min') n. Members of Parliament, elected by voters in a constituency to represent them in the House of Commons. This system grew out of conventions of the minor barons, which started about the 15th century, but without specifically representing a region. From the 16th century counties had representatives to the Scottish Parliament, called Commissioners; there were 2 of these at a time throughout the 17th century, with an additional 2 appointed in 1690, and the last term being 1702–07. The families of Douglas of Cavers, Pringle of Stichell, Elliott of Stobs, Elliot of Minto, McDougall of Makerstoun, Scott of Langshaw, Ker of Greenhead, Scott of Ancrum, Riddell of that Ilk, Bennet of Grubet, Scott of Woll, Scott of Gala and Elliot of Headshaw all represented the county. A surviving document of 1628 describes how the Sheriff was unable to get anyone to agree to be a Commissioner, even after 4 meetings! For the Parliament of 1621 the Commissioners were the Sheriff himself (Sir William Douglas of Cavers) and (Andrew) Riddell of that Ilk, while for the 1633 Parliament it was again the Sheriff and (perhaps Walter) Riddell of that Ilk. The appointment of Commissioners to the Parliaments of Charles and William during the chaotic 17th centuries is hard to track, and it may be that men were appointed in place of others (hence the list below may not be accurate in this period). The first Westminster Member of Parliament for Roxburghshire was in 1708. Before 1832 there were very few local electors, for example the number in Hawick was only 2 or 3 out of the 143 voters in the county of Roxburghshire in 1812. Hawick people were extremely active in pushing for electoral reform and the extension of political franchise. After the 1868 Representation of the People (Scotland) Act, a new constituency, the Hawick (or Border) Burghs was set up, including the boundaries of Hawick, Galashiels and Selkirk. Hawick's M.P. was thus separate from that of Roxburghshire until this seat was dissolved in 1918. The constituency was called 'Roxburgh & Selkirk' 1918–55, then merged into 'Roxburgh, Selkirk & Peebles' 1955–83, became 'Roxburgh and Berwickshire' 1983–2005 and is now Berwickshire, Roxburgh & Selkirk. A list of Hawick's M.Ps. is: Thomas McDougall of Makerstoun 1597; Sir John Ker of Hirsell 1605, 1607; Sir William Cranston 1608; Sir William Douglas of Cavers 1612, 1617, 1621, 1628–33, 1639–40, 1644, 1645–46, 1650; Andrew Riddell of that Ilk 1617, 1621; John Haliburton of Muirhouselaw 1625; Sir William McDougall of Makerstoun 1625; Sir Walter Riddell of that Ilk 1628–33, 1646–47, 1650; Sir James Kerr of Hundalee and Crailing 1630; John Rutherford of Hunthill 1630; Sir Walter Riddell of that Ilk 1633; Robert Pringle of Stichill 1639–41; William Elliott of Stobs 1640–41, 1643, 1645–47, 1650–51; Sir Thomas Ker of Cavers 1643–44, 1648–49; Sir John Ker of Lochtour 1644; Sir Andrew Ker of Greenhead 1645, 1648–49; William Kerr of Newton 1646–47, 1656–58; Gideon Scott of Highchester 1650; Sir Andrew Ker of Greenhead 1658–59, 1669–74; Sir Archibald Douglas of Cavers 1661–63; Sir Gilbert Elliott of Stobs 1661–63, 1667, 1669–74; John Scott of Langshaw 1665; Henry McDougall 1665, 1678, 1681; Robert Pringle of Stichill 1678, 1681–82; Sir William Ker of Greenhead 1685–86, 1702–07, 1707–08; Sir Patrick Scott of Longnewton and Ancrum 1685–93; Sir William Elliott of Stobs 1689–93; Sir William Douglas of Cavers 1690–98; Sir John Riddell of that Ilk 1690–1700; John Scott of memoral (me-mō-rul) n., poet. a memorial – ‘...an’ thy memorall, O Lord, throweowt a’ ganæratians’ [HSR].

The Memory Bank (thu-me-mu-ree-bawngk) n. the Scottish Borders’ Memory Bank was set up as a Millennium project to collect and record memories of life in the Borders, started in 1998 and co-ordinated by Wendy Ball. Several Hawick citizens have been taped and transcribed.

menage (mu-naj) n., arch. a benefit club of neighbours or workers, particularly a scheme, generally among women in the 19th and early 20th centuries, where those joining paid a fixed amount every week (plus perhaps a small commission going to the treasurer for managing the fund) for 20 weeks and a draw was made to distribute the total each week. In the late 1800s the contribution might be 1 shilling, with the £1 total given out randomly each week. The practice may still be carried out in mills today, with larger sums involved, and sometimes individuals arranging to be near the beginning or end of the draw – ‘...joining a ‘menage’ was as stupid a thing as going to the pawnbroker ...’ [JTU] (from French; noted by E.C. Smith, but already a thing of the past by then; cf. teedly).

mend (mend) v., arch. to fully recover from an illness or injury (different meaning from standard English; noted by E.C. Smith; see also mends).

mender (men-dur) n. a person who makes minor repairs to the stitching of garments in the knitwear industry after being found by a ‘looker’. Good practioners of this art are ‘invisible menders’.

mendit (men-dee’, -di’) pp. mended – ‘The hurlie at ei mendeet the trams o’ [ECS].

mends (mendz) n., pl., arch. recovery, healing – ‘On the way o mends = to be convalescent; progressing towards recovery of health’ [ECS] (cf. mend).

meng (meng) v. to smell, stink, pong, arch. to mix among filth, n. a smell, stink, n., arch. human excrement (also ming).

meng (meng) v., arch. to mix things among filth.

Menie (me-nee) n. diminutive of the name ‘Williamina’ – ‘O where is tinye Hewe? O where is little Lenne? And where is bonny Lu? And Menie o’ the glenne?’ [JTe].

menna see menni

mennent (men-en’) n., arch. a minnow – ‘‘Christopher North’ uses baggie-mennon, an approximate combination of two Hawick terms. Ramsay has mennin’ [ECS] (also written ‘mennant’ and ‘mennet’).

menni (me-ni, -na, -nu) contr. mustn’t, must not, may not – ‘ee menni dae’d’, ‘Yow yins that’s keinda perjink menna be uggeet at iz for aa this’ [ECS], ‘An’ wei menna forget that in the vast majority o’ the tenements in the toon the kitchen had tae ser’ as the bedroom as weel’ [BW1938] (also written ‘menna’; cf. mauni).

men’s baa (menz-baw) n., arch. handball game formerly played in Hawick on the Monday preceeding the game in Jedburgh (held on ‘Fastern’s-E’en’, i.e. Shrove Tuesday, or the day before Lent). It was distinguished from the ‘callants’ baa’, which was played on the preceeding Saturday.

mense (mens) n., arch., poet. manners, decorum, respectability, honour, dignity, hospitality – ‘You now will see an altered chield, Wi’ sense, and mense, and wisdom filled’ [JoHa], ‘That wumman hes naether sense nor mense’ [ECS], ‘Never heed! oo'll heh baith oor meat an oor mense (said when a cordial invitation has been declined)' [ECS], 'For she had baked a crumpie cake And butter scones, for mense's sake, To entertain her lodger' [HSR], 'Then, licking my chops, I thought that the Auld Testament had muckle mense ...' [DH], 'God gie us mense this Christmas To fluff intil a lowe ...' [WL], '...A handle o' mense to oor dull heids send' [WL], credit, sense of pride – 'For Bosells hes muckle mense o'er Green!' [ECS], 'Her faimily hae muckle mense o' her' [GW], someone who is a credit, respect – 'She's the mense o' the faimily' [GW], 'Hei's a gleg callant; ee heh muckle mense o um' [ECS], reward, recompense – '... And a' the prayers the poor fool pray'd, I wish I had a mense for my ain three ky. Fala, &c.' [CPM].

mensefi (mens-fi) adj., arch. mannerly, hospitable, generous, sensible – 'We mourn the loss o' mensefu' John; Yet greet in vain since he is gone: A blyther lad ne'er buir a drone ...' [CPM], 'When we went to tea, we got something before to make us 'menseful' – i.e., moderate in what we partook of' [RJR], 'But mind ye, she maun be mensefu o' the meal when she makes the parritch' [JEDM], 'A was verrih mensefi at tei-time: A duist tuik yeh cup' [ECS]. 'A'd lippent on o that wanchancy motor as the maist mensefeh way o wunnin threh Jethart ti Haaick' [ECS] (also spelled 'mensefu', etc.).

menseless (mens-lis) adj., arch. unmanly, ill-bred, boorish – 'A duist hyit jairgin things, an that menseless road-injin fair garrd mei girrl!' [ECS], indecent, improper.

Menslaws (mens-lawz, -les) n. farm just north of Spittal-on-Rule, near where the Rule Water joins the Teviot. There was once a quarry there, which supplied stone to Hawick, among other place. It may be the 'menskles' where Gilbert Law had grain stolen by Adam Grahamslaw, according to a case of 1502. It is probably the 'Mensles' listed among the lands of the Stobs estate purchased by Gilbert Elliott from his half sisters in about 1608. In 1623 the lands were granted to the Kers of Cavers-Carre and later the farm at 'Menseless Pathhead' was part of the Cavers estate. It was among lands owned by Sir Thomas Ker in 1643, valued at £357. It was among lands inherited by John, son of John Kerr of West Nisbet in 1684. William Brown was there in 1687. Also in 1687 5 acres of land there were listed among lands inherited by Sir William Douglas of Cavers and by his brother Archibald in 1698.

James Riddell was recorded there in 1745. Before 1786 the farm was owned by William Black, his lands being stated in 1788 to have been valued at £263 16s 3d, including the 2 husband-lands at the 'waulk-mill'. The farm then passed to the Bells; William Bell had a new house built there about this time and was recorded as owner of 5 horses there in 1797. William Bell and his son George were there in 1799, and William's son James in 1801; additionally in 1801 mason Thomas Renwick was living at 'House at Guide post', which much have been nearby. In the 1811 Land Tax Rolls it was recorded being owned by Robert Bell, and valued at £264. Land steward Mark Turnbull was there in 1851. In 1860, a year after the death of George Bell, it was sold to Thomas Cockburn, then owned briefly by a Mr. Turnbull, before being bought by Robert Cunningham, Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch. Thomas Riddell was there in the 1860s. The tenants of the house in the early 20th century were 2 sisters called Peter. There was once a quarry there, supplying stone for buildings in Hawick and Jedburgh. A burial cist was found there, north of the farm, at the edge of the Teviot flood plain; 2 Hawick boys discovered it in 1960, James Wallace and Michael Turnbull, and it was excavated by the Archaeological Society the following year, revealing an adult and juvenile skeleton and triangular flint point. The remains are in the Museum (sometimes 'Mainslaws', the name is probably from the Old English 'gemænes leah', meaning 'common property', or possibly 'menseless', meaning untidy or uncleared land; it first appears transcribed as 'menskles' in 1502, then is 'Mensles' in 1516 and 1571, with 'Menslawis' soon after, although it is still 'Mensles' in 1623, 'Menslis' in 1643, 'Menslie' and 'Menseless' in 1678, 'Menslie' in 1687 and 1698, 'Mensless' in 1761 and 1797 and 'Mainslaws or Mensless' in 1811; Sir James Murray refers to it as 'Menzies Laws' in 1888; it is 'Menssles' on Blaeu's 1654 map and incorrectly appears as 'Manslees' on Stobie's 1770 map).

mentionat (men-shin-a') pp., arch. mentioned, referred to – '...as if ther wer ane particular paper granted by us and ilk ane of us to the effect above mentionat' [BR1692], '...to prove that the said Andrew came down the Beddell's stair att the above mentionat silent houres of ye night' [PR1718], '... the said William Whaton, rideing in ye manner above mentionat' [PR1718].

mer (mer) v., arch. to mar, injure, to stay the course of (a ball, hoop etc. that has gotten out of control), to stop or block the way (of sheep or cattle) – 'Beide yow there an merr thir paips soomin doon the guttiter' [ECS], 'Eee sood heh merred the bool; it's rowld owre fer' [ECS], to steer a 'yoke-a-tulie' with the feet – 'A gaird maun be gey skeely at merrin' [GW], 'Sic a byordnar grand bit for a sledge-skly or a yoke-a-tullie! By!! The gaird wad need ti bei richt an skeely at the merreen' [ECS] (also written 'merr'; from Mediæval English).

mer-browed (mer-browd) adj., arch. having eye-brows that meet in the middle – '...he had only got as far as the old toll-house when he observed a mer-browed man coming in his direction' [RM].

mercat (mer-ki', mer-ka') n. market, historically Hawick's main markets were held on Thursdays – 'the mercat's now on Seturdis', 'Item, that all flescheris present the hale flesh slaine by them at the mercat place ...' [BR1640], '...and having caused proclaim her several tymes ... at the mercat crose of Hawicke in time of mercat day' [BR1641], '...rin the merket gairden and dairy at Cavers' [IWL], '...Better, daur-say, Brocht, factory-fresh (sei telly) til eer hame, twae hunder miles, than frae some mercat-krame ...' [DH]. In the 18th century Hawick had a flesh-market, butter-market, meal-market, salt-market and horse-market. The Thursday market took place in the lower part of the Town House, with all sorts of farm produce sold. In general the market area was around the Cross until the late 18th century, with 80–120 stalls extending along the High Street, selling everything from housewares and food to meat and coal. The sheep market was recorded being at the Sandbed in 1700. The general market moved to the Sandbed for a few decades, and shifted to the Tower Knowe in 1815 with the construction of the New Road. It was stated in 1839 that the number of carts coming to the town for a market day was about 170. The cattle market (and hiring fair), a right of the Duke of Buccleuch, took place in early November until the end of the 19th century. The Auction Mart, at what is now Mart Street, dominated the sale of livestock through the late 19th and much of the 20th centuries. In the 20th century the Saturday market was held near the Auction Mart and is now in the Big Haugh – 'To fair or merket she walked alane, At best, the lasie was unco

the Mercat Cross (thu-mer-ki'-kros) n. Market Cross, denoting the place at which markets were held, formerly the site of Hawick's cross. It was also sometimes referred to as the 'flesh-market cross'. In Hawick this was near the Town Hall, at the junction of the roads to Edinburgh, Jedburgh, Newcastle and Carlisle. It is referred to in 1514 as 'crucem foralem' when part of the ceremony for giving Sir James Douglas of Drumlanrig the Barony of Hawick was carried out there. It was extant in 1542, when a proclamation was read from it, and presumably there earlier. In 1545 it is among the market crosses to which a proclamation about Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme was to be attached. There is a record in 1715 (when it is referred to as the 'common mercat crose') that it was to be repaired and several other records of it being mended from about 1724 on. During the 18th century it is recorded that a proclamation was made there on the day of the Common Riding, describing what parts of the Common were to be used for cutting peats and for making 'bakes', etc. It was demolished in 1762 during road improvements, the shaft and capital apparently being sold off for 11/6. The removal took 2 labourers 2 full days. The base of the Cross was inverted, sunk into the pavement nearby, had an iron ring attached, and until about 1781 was used for bull-baiting and for displaying criminals as a public spectacle. It was then removed to near the Teviot, where it was used for tying skins to be washed in the river. The stone was rescued when Teviot Road was built in about 1860 and moved to the Museum at Orrock Place and later to the Buccleuch Memorial. William N. Kennedy wrote an article on the Cross in 1863, stating that the base was made of Whitrope Burn sandstone. In 1927 the Cross was reconstructed beside the Museum, using a modern shaft and a capital (perhaps 17th century, probably the one discovered at Abbey Sike in Castleton). However, the capital was moved inside after the Cross was vandalised in 1985. A plaque (placed around 1946) marks its original position near the bottom of the Cross Wynd, which was named for it. Here also the proclamation to the Burgesses is made by the Burgh Officer, warning them all to attend the Riding of the Marches or pay a hefty fine. For centuries this advertisement for the Common Riding has been called out on the Thursday here. In former times the Burgess Roll was also called here on the Friday before the Riding of the Marches.

Other notices would be fixed to the Cross in former times, e.g. lists of those accused of being Covenanters in the late 17th century, and the ‘Chevalier’ was proclaimed here in 1715. Thieves were sometimes made to stand at the cross on market day, with their crime written on a piece of paper stuck to their forehead. This punishment continued into the early 19th century. In addition the town stocks were once located next to the Cross. Some Border towns still have market crosses, e.g. Bowden, Cockburnspath, Coldingham, Crailing, Duns, Galashiels, Greenlaw, Jedburgh, Langholm, Melrose, Paxton, Peebles, Selkirk, Swinton and West Linton, although many are relatively modern replacements of the original – ‘...ordainit her to lie 48 hours in the stockes, and thrafter to come to the mercat crosse of Hawick upon the mercat-day, and to stand there-upon with the peittis upon her shoulder, with an paper upon her breaste or forehead declaring the fault’ [BR1638], ‘...the said Adam Gowanlock brought the said meir to the mercat-crosse of Hawick the said day to be apprised ...’ [BR1641], ‘...in respect it was publickly done at the mercatt cross, in presence and in the hearing of divers famous witnesses’ [BR1685] (note that Market Crosses were rarely ‘cross-shaped’, usually consisting of a shaft crowned with a carved emblem as capital; it is unclear what was carved on the capital of Hawick’s original Cross).

the Mercat Gait (thu-mer-ki-gā) n. former name for a road in Ashkirk. It is recorded in 1580 that it was on the west and north sides of Wollhaugh.

mercatis (mer-ki-plis) n. marketplace – ‘...an’ saw ithers stannin’ idill in the merkit-plece’ [HSR] (see merc and plis).

Mercat Place (mer-ki-plis) n. Market Place, name used for a while in the 19th century for an area including Tower Knowe and Drumlanrig Bridge over the Slitrig, which was used as a market place. It is so labelled on Wood’s 1824 map and also used in Slater’s 1852 directory.

Mercer (mer-sur) n. Janet nee Reid (b.1799/1800) from Hawick, she was a wool sorter living at about 7 Allars Bank in 1841. She listed as a coffee-house keeper on the Cross Wynd in 1851, living with her grandchild Mary E., as well as 5 lodgers and a female servant. She may be the Jane who had worked as a servant with the Halliburton family in the West End, contracting cholera in 1832, but recovering. Robert, W.S. (1797–1875) lawyer in Edinburgh. He was son of James of Scotsbank. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825 and so presumably had a local connection. He was a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries. He married Elizabeth, daughter of William Scott-Moncrieff.

merch (merch) v., arch. to set a boundary, particularly by laying down markers – ‘The said day, Allane Deanes, travellour, being accusit for not being at the ryding and merching of the Commounne ...’ [BR1645].

merch (merch) n., v. march – ‘Oh the grand auld Duke o York, hei hed ten thoosand men, hei merched thum up ti the top o the hill, an ‘ei merched them doon agin’ [T], ‘It depends on what direction they hev ti turn when they come oot the toon hall ti merch ti the new Cornet-Elect’s hoose’ [We], ‘Hogg was sid ti hev been pairt o the Hawick contingent thit merched ti Selkirk that fatefi day in 1815 ...’ [IHS] (cf. mairch).

Merchamston see Merchiston

merchand (mer-chind) n., arch. a merchant, shopkeeper, trader, itinerant salesman – ‘Item, that ilk merchand that buys cuntrie gier with trone wecht, sall sell it agin in small with the lyik wecht ...’ [BR1640], ‘The haill council having taken into their consideration the wrong and abuse committed by the merchands and others of the burgh of Hawick ...’ [BR1662], ‘...for cutting of William Elliot, merchand, with ane sword in ye head’ [BR1669], ‘...and voted Thomas Hardie, merchand, to be ensigne and to carrie the colour’ [BR1706], ‘...John Young, merchand in the toun for his disorderlie and irregular marriage ...’ [BR1706].

merchant (mer-chin) n. formerly a shopkeeper and member of the merchants’ incorporation in the Town, now used as a suffix to denote someone who is overly fond of a particular activity – ‘hei’s a right patter-merchant that yin’.

merchants (mer-chints) n. the shopkeepers and traders of Hawick colletively. They were not one of the 7 ‘incorporated trades’ in the Burgh, but must have had some kind of status as a body. In 1687 the ‘Incorporation of Merchants’ bought ‘ane Holland brasen trone’ (i.e. brass weight) to be used as a new standard in Hawick, and also arranged for ‘ane elwand’ (i.e. measuring rod) made of iron to be made the same length as the standard one in Jedburgh.

Merchelyton Burn (merch-li-tin-burn) n. stream that rises on Harden Moss and flows roughly soutwards past the farm of Mabonlaw to join the Harden Burn south of Harden Glen.

Part of it is labelled White Cleugh on the Ordnance Survey maps (the name suggests it marked a boundary at one time; it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

the Merchinburn (thu-mer-chin-burn) n. Merchingburn, former name for a stream in Liddesdale, where it is recorded that Walter de Bolbeck established a hermitage dedicated to St. Mary to pray for the souls of him and his wife Sybilla. This was probably the original Hermitage Chapel, which led to the stream being later known as the Hermitage Water. The hermit was called William ‘de Mercheleye’, and the date is unknown, but must have been before 1206. The second monk from Kelso was called Roger, and he was granted land beside ‘Heleychesters’ (probably in Temple Healey) some time before 1229 (the name suggests a boundary between properties, but it is unknown what these may have been; the name does not appear on any map, and was completely superseded by ‘Hermitage’).

Merchinlee (mer-chin-lee) n. former name for lands on the Hermitage Water. William ‘de Mercheleye’ was granted a hermitage there by Walter de Bolbeck some time before 1206, this probably being the original Hermitage Chapel. It was set up for 2 monks from Kelso Abbey, the other being ‘Roger monk of Merchingley’ who was later granted 26 acres of land beside Heleychesters (probably in Temple Healey) by Hugh de Baliol, some time before 1229. The lands are described as ‘from the Merchingburn on the one side, by a circuit from the Tile Ford on to the Ford where the Stanesden Burn (possibly the Roughley Burn) descends to the Merchingburn’ (also written ‘Merchelea’).

Merchiston (mer-chi-, -chum-stin) n. James (d.c.1527) recorded as Rector of Hawick in 1504. 2 years earlier he is recorded receiving payment from the court of James IV for a young horse brought by him from Flanders. He was listed as a Chaplain of Glasgow Diocese in 1505, although the parish is not named. He also appears to have received more senior appointments in the Diocese in 1511. In 1512 he was designated Provost of the Collegiate Church of Corstorphine and lived on Edinburgh High Street, so probably ceased to be associated with Hawick before then. Also in 1512 he was one of the Auditors of the Treasurer’s Accounts. His name appears in various Edinburgh deeds in the period 1512–18 (also written ‘Merchamston’, ‘Merchainston’, etc.).

mercifi (mer-see-fi) adj., arch. merciful, temperate (of weather) – ‘The weather on the Friday hed

mercy (mer-see) interj. goodness, dear – ‘mercy mei’, ‘... Cried, ‘Mercy ends, the deevils i’ the folk’ [JoHa], ‘O mercy! come doon, and ye’ll see it yersel’ – O but its an awesome-like bodie’ [JoHa], ‘The lasses, eh mercy, A’ cannae stert now ...’ [??], ‘Mercy, here’s a caperin’ Irishman. This is no’ the man for mei ony-way’ [JEDM].

mere (meer) n., arch. a mare, female horse – ‘...either in his nichbour’s corn, meadow, or haynit gers, sal pay for ilk hors or meir 40 shillings ...’ [BR1640], ‘Weel, sin’ that time the sheep has been to sheer, And he’s been east to buy the laird a meer’ [CPM], ‘The outlaws come frae Liddesdale, They herry Redesdale far and near; The rich man’s gelding it maun gang, They canna pass the puir man’s mear’ [T], ‘Or how Ratlin’ Rab the Ranter And Deans mere ...’ [RH], ‘...Aw heard a puir auld grey meer Gi’e mony a heavy groan’ [JSB], ‘John Paiterson’s meir, She canna be here’ [JP] (also spelled ‘meir’, ‘meer’ and ‘meir’).

Merianton (me-ree-in-tin) n. Lairdship held by the Armstrongs in the 16th century. It appears to be another name for Mangerton (it is ‘Meriantoun’ and ‘Merjantoun’ in 1541).

meridian (me-ri-dee-in) n., arch. former name for a social mid-day drink, especially among merchants.

meritable (me-ri-ta-bul) adj., arch. worthy of merit – ‘For that yt ys neidfull and merytabelle to ber wytnes to the suthfastnes ...’ [SB1431].

merk (merk) v. to mark – ‘did ee merk ma car?’, ‘Merk the perfite man, an’ behald the upricht ...’ [HSR], ‘Merk ye weel hir bullwarks: tak’ tent til hir palaces ...’ [HSR], ‘He kens my failin’s, merks my ilka turn, And whiles, when frae the track I gang astray ...’ [WL], ‘Hither and yont throu the hoden mist Rise the merks o’ her classic story ...’ [WL], ‘... a his interests merk um oot as a Gutterbluid Wastender’ [IWL], n. a mark – ‘they’re jist a couple o pail merks, thaim’, ‘Let this beide as a merk o the respeck o the wreiter ...’ [ECS], ‘An a merk on the shooder o’ Cauld-cleuch To show where the cloudberrys growe ...’ [DH], ‘...ee’ll be followin in the hoofmerks and the fitprints o the burgesses of old’ [IWL],

merk (merk) n., arch. an old Scottish silver coin worth thirteen shillings and four pence (two-thirds of a pound) Scots, or about 13 shillings and $\frac{1}{3}$ pence sterling – ‘...the sovme of fourty lib. and fourtene merkis, gude an vsuale money of Scotland ...’ [SB1510/1], ‘...the two hundred merks allowit by the Earl of Queensberry and debursed be the town of Hawick ...’ [BR1644], ‘...9000 merks to the schoolmaster, and the rent of the 1600 merks to the poor of the parish’ [PR1714], ‘Whip her in, whip her oot, Sax merks in a clout’ [JP] (see also merkit).

merkit (mer-kee’, -ki’) adj., pp. marked – ‘A cood wale oot Rule Waeter’s coorse feine, – merkeet wui raws on raws o treis’ [ECS], ‘Says I tae um was this man ony way merkeet so as tae be recognised’ [JEDM] (also written ‘merkeet’).

merkland (merk-lawnd) n., arch. a piece of land originally assessed at one mark value (common in pre-18th century land documents).

merle (me-rul) n., poet. the blackbird, Turdus merula – ‘Where the merle from his liquid throat Can melodize the dean’ [JTe], ‘And the merl is i’ the wud, And the lav’rock’s i’ the clud’ [JTe], ‘...And over future prospects talk, And hear the merle cry’ [JoHa], ‘...And laverocks speck the welkin blue, And the merle is in the glen’ [Wi], ‘I have seen the merle, when we robbed her nest, Haunting the hazel in hopeless quest ...’ [WHO], ‘The soun’ o’ her mirth is the merle’s clear singin’, Bewitchin’, the saft smiles that dimple her mou’ [WL] (also written ‘merl’).

Merlin (mer-lin) n. semi-mythical poet-warrior of the 6th century, referred to as ‘Merlinus Caledonensis’ (‘Merlin of Caledonia’) and ‘Myrddin Wyllt’ (‘Merlin the Wild’) in several Old Welsh and later sources. He is the most important prototype for Merlin of the Arthurian legends. He is said to have been born at Cærwerthevin (perhaps Carnwarth) and was present at the Battle of Arderydd (probably Arthuret or possibly Ettrick) in 573, where he killed his own nephew, driving him mad and into seclusion in the forests of southern Scotland. He was said to have been buried at Drumelzier in Tweeddale. Geoffrey of Monmouth around 1150 wrote about his supposed life and prophecies. John Leyden included notes on him in ‘Scenes of Infancy’ – ‘Such strains the harp of haunted Merlin threw, When from his dreams the mountain-sprites withdrew’ [JL].

Merlin Dean (mer-lin-deen) n. wooded stream that rises on the eastern slopes of Black Law in Bedrule Parish, joining the Greypeel Burn and eventually flowing into the Jed Water.

Merlin’s Cleuch (mer-linz-klooch) n. probable name of a small stream on Penchrise farm (mentioned in Robert Grieve’s diary in 1861).

merlt (me-rul’, -rult) adj., arch. mottled, mixed up in colour (also merled and merly).

merly (mer-lee) adj., arch. mottled, parti-coloured – ‘The plantins and pleughed rigs dinkin’ its merlie-merkit braes’ [ECS], ‘A merly sheep, hen, cat, etc.’ [GW] (also spelled ‘merlie’; cf. merlt).

merly-merkit (mer-lee-mer-kee’, -ki’) adj., arch. having mottled markings, parti-coloured, describing land with alternating patches of grassland and ploughed land – ‘Ruberslaw’s michty noal, wui plewed rigs an planteens – reed-land an greenery – dinkin its merly-merkeet braes’ [ECS].

merr see mer

merrer (me-rur) n., arch. someone who steers the course of farm animals, the ‘gaird’ in a ‘yoke-a-tullie’ – ‘A guid (or skeely) merrer’ [GW] (cf. mer).

merry dancers (me-ree-dan-surz) n., pl., arch. heat haze, the effects of turbulence in the air on a hot day, described by J. Jamieson as ‘The exhalations from the earth in a warm day, as seen flickering in the atmosphere, Roxb.’.

Merry Knowes (me-ree-nowz) n. hilly area just to the north-east of Whitslade farm, to the south of Whitslade Hill. A local version of the ballad ‘Ewe-buchts’ (or ‘The Broom o’ Cowden-knowes’) states that they are part of Whitslade – ‘Come round about the Merry-Knowes, my Marion, For Whitslade is lying lee’ [T] (also written ‘Merry-Knowes’).

Merrylaw (me-ree-law) n. farm along the road leading south-west from Teviothead, lying close to the source of the Teviot, on the south side. It was home of a branch of the Scotts and also Turnbells, who were tenants at Falnash. It was included in a description of Cavers Barony in an English document c.1380. The earliest known owners were Elliots, holding the lands of their feudal superiors the Douglasses. It appears to have been joined with Carlenrig in the valuation of 1678, but was separated in 1788 when valued at £133 6s 8d. It was ‘Mirrilaw’ owned by the Eliotts of Stobs at the end of the 17th century. However, it appears to have been in the Barony of Cavers when Sir William Douglas succeeded as Baron in 1687. It was among lands inherited by Sir William Eliott from his father in 1692. About 1694 'William Scott in Merrylaw' was tenant of Eliott of Stobs. Walter Scott of Merrylaw was renting part of Whithope in 1698 and he was an elder of Robertson Kirk in the early 1700s. David Scott was there in at least 1708–24, James Murray in 1724, John Laidlaw in 1749 and John Telfer in 1755. William Goodfellow was tenant there in at least 1784–90. Robert Watt was a servant there in 1799 and William Goodfellow junior was recorded there in 1801. William Scott of Merrylaw was minister at Kirkpatrick-Juxta. Walter Scott of Merrylaw was a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire in 1809. He was probably the Scott of Merrylaw who was listed as owner in 1788 (and still listed in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls). William Goodfellow was tenant there for about 50 years in the late 1700s and early 1800s. David Scott was shepherd there in 1797. James Dryden (d.1820) was shepherd there. There were Hopes there in 1841. It was owned by Turnbells in the mid-to-late 19th century and bought by the Strang-Steel family about 1920. The Martins farmed there in the early 1900s and the Tullies were there from 1935 until the mid-1960s. The farm lay within Cavers Parish until the formation of Teviothead Parish in 1850. The lands are now mainly planted with trees – 'Maps ...skurled wi' odd scales o' troot Frae Merrylaw to Meggat ...' [DH] (first occurring in c.1380 as 'le Morylawe', , it is transcribed 'Murlaw' in 1687, 'Merrilaw' in 1692 and 1694, 'Mirrielaw' in 1698, 'Merriela' in 1708, 1709 and 1713, 'Mirrilaw' in 1724, 'Mirrielaw' in 1730 and 'Mirrilaw' in 1749; the origin of the first part of the name is obscure, but probably connected with Merry Naze and Merrypath Rig).

Merry Naze (me-ree-nāz) n. hill lying to the south of Lairhope farm, west of Falnash, and not far from Tanlaw Naze. It is probably the lands called 'Murynese' in the Barony of Hawick, which were explicitly listed among the lands held 'in property' by the Baron in 1511, and among the lands inherited along with the Barony in 1572. There was once a farm near here, home to the son of Elliot of Falnash in 1562. Archibald Elliot 'of Mirrieneis' was recorded in 1598. In 1627 the farm was estimated to 'pay 40 lb. in stok, and 8 merk in teynd. The 'maynes lands' there are listed among the lands for which Anna, Duchess of Buccleuch was superior in 1686. The lands were sold by Thomas Scott of Falnash to Henry, Duke of Buccleuch around 1760 (marked 'Mirrienyse' on Blaeu's 1654 map; it is probably 'Murynese' and 'Murinese' in 1511, 'Murynes' in 1514, 'Merynes' in 1562, 'Muryneis' in 1572, 'Mirryneis' in 1615, 'Mirrinies' in 1627, 'Mirrienies' in 1686 and 'Merrynees' about 1760; the first element of the name could be Middle English 'mirrie' for merry, but may have another origin in common with Merrylaw and Merrypath Rig, while the second element is Middle English 'nese', being a projecting nose of land).

Merrypath Rig (me-ree-pawth-rig) n. ridge between Merrylaw and Ewes Doors, the summit reaching a height of 382 m. There is a linear earthwork, about 150 m long, which is crossed by the course of the old road from Eweslees to Caerlenrig (it is marked 'Meddop petth' in Blaeu's 1654 atlas).

the Merse (thu-mers) n. Eastern Border country, generally corresponding to Berwickshire, or a slightly larger area including the entire plain of the Tweed. It is usually synonymous with the Scottish East March – 'A Merse mist along the Tweed, In a harvest monrnin's guid indeed' [T], 'Roxburgh huddles her shattered shell In the folds of her mossy plaid; Gazing at ease o'er the meadowed Merse, Hume towers, in her green arrayed' [WL].

marshal (mer-shul) n., v. marshal. At the Common Riding the Marshals are experienced riders appointed to check that the road is clear for the Chase, ensure the safety of the riders on Ride-outs, etc.

Marshall (mer-shul) n. (Marshall) Alfred (19th C.) married Margaret, daughter of Thomas Murray and Mary Scott. His wife was younger sister of Sir James 'Dictionary' Murray. Their children included Mary Isa (d.1961), who died in Melrose. Alistair (??–) Common Riding Committee Secretary in the mid-1960s, who left town afterwards. Andrew (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was mentioned in the Wilton Session records in 1705. He was recorded as tenant in Mervinslaw in Wilton in 1709 when he witnessed a baptism for John Scott, tailor there. In 1725 he was living at 'boathouse', suggesting that he ran the coble ferry. He married Agnes Scott in 1703 and their children included: Janet (b.1718); Agnes (b.1720); Thomas (b.1722); and Anne (b.1725). The witnesses in 1725 were John Murray and John Scott. Andrew (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was recorded as tenant in Silverbuthall in 1711 when his son

William was baptised, their surname being written 'Mersil'. He was also 'Mercel' at Silverbuthall in 1710 when his daughter Helen was baptised. He could be the same Andrew who was at Mervinslaw in 1709. Isobel (b.1704) and Bessy (b.1708) were probably also his children. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His son Alexander died in Hawick in 1778. He could be the James who married Margaret Murray in 1774 and whose children included: Katherine (b.1775); John (b.1782), probably the tobacconist in Hawick; and Alexander (b.1785). Jason (1970–) Hawick man who started working for the Hawick News in 1986, later working for the Tweeddale Press. He became Editor of the Hawick News in 2007. John (d.1815) recorded as father of Mary and Jean when his death is recorded in Hawick in 1815. John (b.1782) son of James and Margaret Murray. He was a tobacconist in Hawick according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. He was a tobacco manufacturer in Hawick, recorded in Pigot's 1837 directory and Slater's 1852 directory. He lived at about 20 High Street in 1841 and 1851. He was unmarried and lived with his sister Catherine. John (1801–74) head of the local builders firm John Marshall & Sons, which was responsible for several prominent buildings. They built the new Teviot Bridge in 1865 and the factory for Lyle & Scott in 1874/5. John (19th/20th C.) assistant Burgh Surveyor in Hawick, working under John Manuel. In 1894 he was appointed District Surveyor for Norfolk District Council and presented with a gold watch-chain and cuff-links by the Town Council on his departure. Katie (19th C.) proprietor of a tobacconist's shop at 20 High Street in the mid-19th century, which gave its name to the adjacent close. She lived in the property along with her brother James. Mary Isabella G. 'Isa' (1880/1–1961) daughter of Alfred and Margaret Murray. Her mother was a sister of James 'Dictionary' Murray. She was a teacher at Drumlanrig School for about 25 years. She was also a keen member of the Hawick Liberal Association. She was the oldest member of the Archæological Society at the time of her death. She lived at 6 Elm Grove. She died in hospital at Melrose. Robert (18th/19th C.) servant at Pinnacle recorded in the Lieutenantcy Book for 1799. Robert (b.1826/7) from Scone in Perthshire, he was a builder in Hawick, with the firm Marshall & Ballantyne. They were responsible for the renovations to St. Mary's Kirk in 1863. He donated an old coin he found there to the Museum. In 1861 he was living at Ladylaw Place with his wife Ann and children John, Robert, Frances Elizabeth Ann, James Young and Jessie Young. Stuart (1963/4–) born and bred in Hawick he became a local Councillor and was Honorary Provost 2013–17. He has also been involved with Escape Youth Cafe, the Hawick Flood Group and many other local organisations. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. William (16th/17th C.) resident of Riddell. In 1621 James Scott, indweller in Selkirk, was summonsed to appear before the Lords of Council and Session for stealing his horse. William (18th C.) from Wilton Parish, he was living at Boonraw in 1742 and 1744. In 1738 he married Jean Wright, who was also from Wilton. Their children included: Christian (b.1740); Andrew (b.1742); Agnes (b.1744); Christian (again, b.1746); George (b.1752); and Jean (b.1755). The witnesses in 1742 were Walter Scott and James Allan and in 1744 were James and Walter Scott. William (19th C.) partner with John in the local builders firm. He was probably John's son. He made donations to the Museum in the 1860s (also formerly 'Marsel', 'Mercel', 'Merchel', 'Merchall', 'Mersall', 'Mersel', 'Mersell' and 'Mershel').

Marshall's (mer-shulz) n. John Marshall & Sons, a large local building firm, significant in the latter part of the 19th and early part of the 20th centuries. They were responsible for the Teviot Bridge (1865), Henry Scott Riddell Memorial (1874), Lyle & Scott's factory (1874/5), Town Hall (1884–86), and the Brown Fountain (1910). Their yards were on the west side of Commercial Road and before that on Slitrig Crescent. They also had an interest in the Blaxter Quarry in Northumberland.

Marshall's Close (mer-shulz-klōs) n. Marshall's Close, a passageway at 20 High Street in the mid-19th century. It was located to the west of the Crown Hotel, between 2 small shops, and named after the tobacconist's run by Katie Marshall.

Merten see Mertin

Mertimes (mer-tee-mes) n. former version of Martinmas – '...for the Witsounday and Mertymes male of the landis of Lempetlaw ...' [SB1574] (also formerly Mertinmes).

Mertin (mer'-in, mar-tin) n. (Marten or Martin) A. (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. Adam (17th C.) one of 3 men fined in 1642 for their animals eating the oats of Gilbert

Watt, the Town Clerk. He is probably the same 'Adam Mairtene' who was one of the men who appraised horses in Hawick for the Covenanter army in 1644. He could be the Adam, married to Margaret Gordon, whose children baptised in Hawick included James (b.1634), Agnes (b.1642), Janet (b.1644) and Helen (b.1647), or the Adam, married to Margaret Weens, whose daughter Bessie was baptised in 1648. Perhaps he is the Adam who (along with Alexander) witnessed a baptism for James. He could be the Adam who witnessed a baptism in 1671 for Margaret (perhaps his daughter) and William Renwick. Adam (17th C.) carrier in Hawick recorded in 1673 on the list of men named in the trial for the so-called riot at St. Jude's Fair. Perhaps the same Adam married Anna Henderson in Robertson (actually Hassendean) in 1687 and had a daughter Margaret baptised in 1688; the baptismal witnesses were John Martin and Thomas Henderson (who were probably related to him and his wife). Andrew (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1716 he married Margaret Martin, both being described as 'servants in Goldielands'. Andrew (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was recorded at Clarilaw in 1724 and 1727. In 1737 he witnessed baptism for James Dryden and for Robert Easton, who both lived at Clarilaw. He married Margaret Crozier and their children included: John (b.1717); Janet (b.1720); Marion (b.1722); James (b.1724); and James (again, b.1727). The witnesses in 1724 were Thomas Irvine and William Easton and in 1727 were James Blyth and W. Graham. Andrew (d.1982) 'Drew' Cornet in 1971. For his Acting Father he selected Bruce Mactaggart, who had been Cornet in 1954, with his own father John as Acting Father. His year is remembered as one of the wettest in memory; the Principals' clothes were dried out in the oven's of his father on the Friday night so they would be ready for the Saturday. Elliot H. (19th C.) artist living in Hawick in the latter part of the 19th century, running the Hawick School of Art on Wilton Hill. Elizabeth 'Bessie' (17th C.) listed 'eist the water' among those paying the Hearth Tax in Hawick in 1694. Bailie George (17th/18th C.) merchant of Hawick. He is probably the George who witnessed a baptism for Walter Graham in 1695. He witnessed a baptism in 1700 for gardener Gideon Gardner (and was there 'merchant', but not recorded as Bailie). He was listed as Bailie (although this probably meant ex-Bailie) when he witnessed baptisms in 1702 for tailor John Scott, for Bailie Walter Graham and for merchant Patrick Angus. He also witnessed baptisms in 1703 for herd James Glendinning, in 1704 for merchant Michael Scott, for merchant William Dickson and for John Turnbull ('oye' to Rev. James Ker), in 1705 for merchant William Oliver and for Bailie Walter Graham, in 1706 for workman John Shiel, for shoemaker Robert Oliver, for Walter Paterson in Burnflat, for workman John Renwick and for Robert Rutherford, in 1707 for smith George Scott, Thomas Gledstains, merchant 'Black Walter' Scott, gardener James Dunn and William Gledstains, workman in Whitlaw, in 1708 for David Young and for John Rae, in 1709 for merchant William Dickson, for baker Adam Richardson and for weaver William Hill, in 1712 for John Chisholme 'Laird', in 1714 for weaver George Wight and for cooper John Turnbull, in 1716 for shoemaker John Scott (and 2 others on the same day), in 1720 for carrier Gideon Amos, and in 1722 for candlemaker John Scott. Based on all of this, it seems likely he served as an Elder in the Kirk. The witnesses to his daughter's baptism in 1704 were glover John Hart and merchant Thomas Waugh. He was the person who purchased the new Flag in 1707 (now the oldest one in existence) in Edinburgh, at a cost of £10 14s. He was still on the Town Council in 1707 (when a fine was imposed on the 2 acting Bailies). He was an ex-Bailie on the Council when the bond was granted (dated 1710, but recorded in the Town Book in 1711) to provide money for the Master of the new Grammar School. He witnessed further baptisms for John Ekron in 1716 and 1723, for workman William Inglis and for shoemaker Walter Lethem in 1721, for James Grieve in Hawick Shiel in 1722, for shepherd Walter Dalgleish, for weaver William Scott and for gardener Robert Ker in 1723, for 'Eggman' John Wilson in 1725, for carrier John Tait and for John Fairgrieve in 1726, for merchant Robert Howison in 1730, and for Robert Aitken in 1731. His first wife was Grizel Oliver and their children included: Christian (b.1701); George (b.1702); Bessie (b.1704); Anna (b.1706); Helen (b.1708); Janet (b.1709); Thomas (b.1712); and Jean (b.1714). The witnesses in 1701 were glover John Hart and Bailie Walter Graham, in 1702 were Bailie Patrick Richardson and glover Hohn Hart, in 1704 were glover John Hart and merchant Thomas Waugh, in 1706 were Bailies Walter Graham and Patrick Richardson, in 1708 were Gideon Scott of Falnash and Bailie Walter Graham, in 1712 were miller Walter Paisley and weaver David Miller, and in 1714 were Bailies

Walter Elliot and Robert Ruecastle. He married Elizabeth Ker (widow of James Wastoun) in 'Haddock hole' Edinburgh in 1719; he was then described as 'late bailie of Hawick'. He was probably the Bailie Martin who was an elder charged with collecting money from 'ye Cross upon both sides of ye toun even unto the bridge' in 1717 (suggesting he lived in this area perhaps) and being one of the elders charged with resolving the dispute between Bailies Ruecastle and Graham in 1718. His son Thomas became a skinner's apprentice in Edinburgh in 1738 and his daughter Jane (possibly born in 1714) married David Greg of Edinburgh in 1743. George (18th C.) teacher at the 'English school' in Selkirk in 1744. Helen (17th C.) resident of Midlem. In about 1684 she was on a list of Covenanter fugitives. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He witnessed a baptism for Robert (probably related to him) and Malie Cowan (probably related to his wife) in 1639. He married Janet Cowan and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1648. The witnesses were Alexander and Adam. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Bessie White. Their son James was baptised in 1648. James (17th C.) farmer at Branxholme Town in 1671, when there were 7 tenants recorded there. His name does not appear in 1675. There were Jameses born in Hawick Parish in 1634, 1639 and 1647, any of which could be him. He may be the James, married to Rosie Richardson (a family who also farmed at Branxholme Town), whose daughter Helen was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1677, and who may also have been father of Malie, baptised in 1673 (with no mother's name given, but witnesses John Richardson and Patrick Scoon). James (17th C.) recorded at Appletreehall in 1682 when one of his children was baptised in Robertson Parish. He married Marion Liddersdale and their children included James (b.1682). The witnesses were Walter Scott and Walter Armstrong. He is probably the James who (along with John) witnessed a baptism for William Macomie in the Hassendean part of Robertson Parish in 1688. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Janet Lamb in 1752. He is probably the James who witnessed a baptism for Thomas Douglas at Clarilaw in 1772. James (18th/19th C.) smith at Bonchester Bridgend according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. Janet (18th C.) resident of a house on the farm of Muckle Whitlaw. It was described in 1767 in the description of the perambulation of the Common, this being a house where the boundary passed over. Johan (19th/20th C.) granddaughter of tailor Robert. She was known as a poet and painter. John (15th/16th C.) recorded as 'John Martyn in Branxholme' in the Register of the Privy Seal of 1504 when he received remission for his crimes. This seems to have been connected with the crimes of William Scott 'in Hawick' and John Scott 'in Wilton', who received pardons a few years earlier. He is probably an ancestor of the same local family after whom 'Mertin's Brig' is named. John (16th C.) tenant at Branxholme Town in 1574, as described in the last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme. He is listed as 'Johne Martene in Banxholme toun'. He is surely related to the John who was tenant in the same place half a century later. John (16th/17th C.) described as 'Jon Mairtene in Branxholme toun' in 1623 when he (and 3 other local men, from Chapelhill, Priestthaug and Craik) were surety for 'Hob Cowane in Ailmure'. John (17th C.) resident of Robertson Parish, when it contained Hassendean. His name appears to be written 'Mortine' (and hence could also be 'Morton'). He married Agnes Porteous and their children included: Marie (b.1679); and Bessie (b.1681). The witnesses in 1681 were Adam Sanderson and John Martin (who may have been his father). He is probably the John who (along with James) witnessed a baptism for William Macomie in the Hassendean part of Robertson Parish in 1688 and who witnessed a baptism for Adam in 1688. John (17th C.) listed at Crumhaugh among 'The poor in Hauick Parioch' on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He could be the John who was married to Margaret Elliot, and whose children baptised in Hawick Parish included Charles (b.1675), Helen (b.1682), Walter (b.1685) and Andrew (b.1688). He could be the John who witnessed a baptism for tailor John Wilson in 1680. John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Clarilaw in 1748. He married Margaret Hope (although his name is transcribed 'How') in Wilton Parish in 1745. Their children included: Andrew (b.1746); Isabel (b.1748); David (b.1750); John (b.1754); and Janet (b.1756). The witnesses in 1748 were Walter Scott and George Lamb. John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Isabel 'Robison' and their children included Agnes (b.1791) and Jenny (b.1797). John (18th/19th C.) resident of 'Burnhills' recorded in 1797 among Hawick men on the ballot to serve in the Militia. In 1799 he was in 'Broomhill' among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in Hawick parish'. He was probably son of Walter, who was in Broomhill in 1797. John (19th C.) owner of the farm of Firth in about 1874, according to the Land Tax Rolls. John P. baker who was Cornet in 1938. He served as Acting Father to Bruce Mactaggart in 1954. Mactaggart was in turn Acting Father to his son Drew. Margaret (17th C.) resident of 'Barnknow'. In 1680 she was found guilty of attempting to steal a pair of shoes from a Selkirk stall-owner at Hawick Market. She was sentenced to be 'punished in her person and goods'. Mrs. ?? (18th/19th C.) recorded at Minto House on the subscription list for Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. She was presumably a house-keeper or governess. Robert (16th/17th C.) surety for 'Hob Cowane in Ailmure' in the Circuit Court records of 1623, along with John Martin (presumably a relative), Simon Wilson (in Priestthaugh) and William Cowan (in Craik). Probably the same Robert married Malie Cowan and had children that included Bessie (b.1636) and James (b.1639). The witnesses in 1639 were James (probably a relative) and Archibald Crow. Robert (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Bessie Turnbull and their children included Margaret (b.1644) and Janet (b.1646). Robert (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His daughter Janet was baptised in 1692. Robert (b.1821/2) from Jedburgh, he was a tailor who lived at Howdenburn. He was there in 1851, when he employed 1 man, and was also there in Slater's 1852 directory. He married Mary Hunter, daughter of 'Kittlin Soup' and their children included Margaret, James, Mary and Thomas. They were grand-parents of local poet and painter Johan Miller. Simon (16th C.) holder of 2 particates of land on the north side of the public street according to Hawick's 1537 Charter. Thomas (15th/16th C.) tenant in part of the lands of Fulton in Bedrule Parish in 1615. He is recorded as 'Thomas Martene in Fultoun'. There was a complaint by Stewart of Traquair in 1619 that the Turnbolls of Bedrule and their supporters (including him) were still at large. Thomas (16th C.) witness to a 1622 sasine of Allan Deans in Hawick. His name is recorded as 'Thomas Mairteine in Hawick'. Rev. Thomas (1754/4-1812) licensed by Peebles Presbytery in 1789, he was presented to Castleton Parish in 1790 and ordained as minister there the following year. However, after less than 4 months he was translated to Langholm; there is no record of the reason for this. He died in Edinburgh where he was attending the General Assembly. He wrote a description of Langholm Parish for Sinclair's Statistical Account. Thomas (b.c.1813/4) born in Canonbie, he was a cooper in Newcastleton. He was listed among heads of households for the first time in 1838. He was listed in Pigot's 1837 directory and Slater's 1852 directory. He continued as a cooper until the 1850s. He lived at about 2 South Hermitage Street. He married Janet Udale and their children included: Anne (b.1836); Isabella (b.1837); William (b.1839); and Robert (b.1841). Rev. Walter (c.1631-76) graduating from Edinburgh University in 1651, he is recorded as schoolmaster in Hawick in 1657, his surname then spelled 'Martaine'. In that year Robert Howitson was ordered to pay him '19 merkis Scots for byegane quarter wages due to him for teaching of his sons in the schole several quarters bygane'; this suggests that he had been a teacher in Hawick for at least a couple of years previously. He was again recorded in 1665, as 'Mairteen'. Later that year he was recommended to be licensed to preach, and he became minister of Abbotrule in mid-1666. Since he was an Episcoplain replacement for the exiled former Covenanting minister, it is unclear if he was popular in his parish. He was responsible for reporting a Covenanter from his congregation to the authorities, resulting in the man being sentenced to conscription as a soldier, and instead paying a £100 alternative fine. A 'gift of his bastardy' was given by the King to his widow Barbara Skinner (or Kinnear) in 1676. Walter (17th C.) resident of Coliforthill on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Walter (17th C.) tenant in the Flex. He witnessed a baptism for Robert Stoddart (in Flex), along with William Henderson (also in Flex) in 1674. He is probably the Walter whose wife Margaret Scott's will is recorded in 1687. Their children included Thomas (b.1673) and an unnamed son (b.1675). He may have been father of the later Walter in the Flex (or else he had a second marriage late in life). Walter (17th/18th C.) tenant in the Flex. He is so recorded in 1700, although his name is listed as 'Walleam', which is likely an error. He is probably the Walter who witnessed a baptism for wright John Dalgleish in 1700. He married Agnes Nixon and their children included: William (b.1700); Walter (b.1702); and Margaret (b.1705). The witnesses in 1700 were Francis Gledstains of Whitlaw and William Nixon and in 1705 were William and Francis Henderson, smiths at the Flex and Francis Paterson, also at the Flex. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Alton Croft in 1700. He was recorded there as tenant in 1702. His wife was Margaret Glendinning and their children included: Margaret (b.1700); John (b.1702); Esther (b.1704); Helen (b.1707); James (b.1710); and Janet (b.1714). The witnesses in 1700 were gardener James Falsyde and Walter Scott in Goldielands and in 1702 were Andrew Riddell in Goldielands and Walter Riddell in Allanhaugh Mill. It is unclear how he might have been related to the Walter who was at the Flex at the same time (but they were clearly distinct, with their children being baptised on the same day in 1700). Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Jane Leyden and their children included: Euphan (b.1777); Samuel (b.1784); and Betty (b.1786). The witnesses were the Associate Congregation. Perhaps the same Walter was recorded at Broomhill in Hawick Parish on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. William (15th C.) tenant in Whitcheater who is mentioned in 1493. Jock Elliot (from Caverton) had remission for several crimes, including stealing 3 sheep from him. It seems likely that he was related to the later Martins of the area. William 'Willie' (16th/17th C.) tenant in Branhholme in 1628 when he was on a list of men accused by the Earl of Buccleuch of chopping down his trees at Todshawhaugh or Trinitylands. William (17th C.) resident of Robertson Parish, or probably the Hassendean part. He married Bessie Turnbull and their children included: Andrew (b.1680); James (b.1682); and Margaret (b.1687). The witnesses in 1687 were William Young and Thomas Caldwell. In 1683 he witnessed a baptism for Adam Craig. William (17th/18th C.) recorded being 'servant in Winningtoun ridge' in 1719 when he married Margaret Douglas, daughter of a carrier in Hawick. He was in 'Rige', i.e. Winningtonrig when his son William was baptised in Kirkton Parish in 1720. He is probably not the same man as William, resident of Over Southfield. William (17th/18th C.) farm servant at Over Southfield. He was 'servitor in over Southfield' in 1713 and recorded still living at Over Southfield in 1720. He was also recorded as servant to John Goodfellow in Over Southfield in 1712 when he married Helen Nichol from Hawick Parish. His wife may have been the daughter of William Nichol and Janet Gray baptised in Hawick in 1688. Their children (also baptised in Hawick) included: Walter (b.1713); John (b.1718); Walter (b.1720); Janet (b.1722); and Robert (b.1723). Janet (b.1714) and William (b.1716) were probably also his children. The witnesses in 1713 were John and William Goodfellow in Over Southfield and in 1720 were Walter Scott and William Goodfellow. William (17th/18th C.) recorded at Parkhill in 1722 when his daughter Janet was baptised in Robertson Parish. It is possible this was somehow a second baptism for the daughter of William and Helen Nichol. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Jean 'Clemison'. Their unnamed child died in Hawick in 1816 and their daughter Isabella was baptised in 1824. Rev. William Stewart (1793/4–1857) from Crawford in Lanarkshire, he was educated at Edinburgh University and licensed by Jedburgh Presbytery in 1823. He became minister of Kirkton in 1834, where he remained until his death. He wrote a description of the Parish for the New Statistical Account in 1838; it is the shortest of the local entries. He could regularly ride over the hill to take services at Cogsmill Schoolhouse. He lived at the Parish Manse with a servant and never married (early spellings include 'Mairteen', 'Mairten', 'Mairtene', 'Marteine', 'Marten', 'Martene', 'Martine', 'Martyn', 'Mertein', 'Merten', 'Mertene', 'Merton', 'Mertyn', etc.).

Mertinmas (mer'-in-mis) n. another name for Martinmas – 'Dedicat til a man (syne deid) wha speired: 'Hev ee been writin ony hairy poetry, lately?' Mertinmas. 1969' [DH] (also formerly Mertimes).

Mertin's Brig (mer'-inz-brig) n. Martin's Bridge, over the Teviot just south of town, marking the beginning of the B711 road to the Borthwick, and named for its proximity to Martin's House. It was built in 1826, providing a more direct route to the Borthwick valley from Hawick. It is a popular end-point for walks. In the field to the west of here, linear field markings have been seen in aerial photographs, probably old field boundaries or ditches – 'Doon by mony a knowe and knoll, Branksholme, Martin's Brig, the Toll, ...' [TK].

Mertin's Hoose (mer'-inz-hoos) n. Martin's House, a farmhouse near Martin's Bridge, marking the end of the Goldielands-Langbaulk section of the road south, before the New Road was built in 1815. The farmers recorded there in 1797 were William Scott and John Scott. Charles Scott, William Scott junior and Francis Blyth were there in 1801. John Scott was farmer there in 1841 and William Fulton in 1851. The front elevation of the house is towards the hill, since the main road used to pass there – 'Martin-House's hint side is now its fore side, and the real auld front is roond aboot at the back' [V&M] (also written as one word, its origin is uncertain, since no 'Martin' is recorded there, so a connection with house-martins has been suggested).

Mertin's Sym (mer'-inz-sim) n. nickname of Simon Elliot of Philhope, son of Martin of Braidlie.

Merton (mer-ton) n. John (13th/14th C.) Archdeacon of Teviotdale from 1395. He exchanged this position with Gilbert Mousewald before 1404. He is referred to as 'de Merton'.

Mertoun (mer-toon) n. parish in the south-west part of Berwickshire, divided by the Tweed from Melrose, St. Boswells and Maxton. It contains Mertoun House, Bemersyde and Dryburgh Abbey. The Scotts of Harden formerly possessed the Barony of Mertoun.

Mertoun Hoose (mer'-in-, mer-toon-hoos) n. mansion house on the Tweed near St. Boswells, built in the early 18th century by Sir William Bruce for the Scotts of Harden. Sir William Scott of Harden acquired Old Mertoun House (still existing) around 1649, and the second Sir William made it the main family seat (with his brother Sir Gideon of Highchester taking up residence at Harden itself). The family moved back to Harden in 1912. A former house was burned by Hertford's men in 1545. Mertoun Kirk, dating from 1658 stands on the estate, with the churchyard containing the burial vault of the Scotts of Harden. The gardens are open to the public, and contain a dovecote dating from 1576 (it was formerly 'Merton' and variants).

mervellous (mer-ve-lis) n., poet. marvellous – 'Shaw thy mervellous loein-kindniss ...' [HSR], 'Ca' til mind his mervellous warks that he hæd dune ...' [HSR].

mervil (mer-vil) adj., arch. inactive in both body and mind (noted by J. Jamieson).

Mervinslaw (mer-vinz-law) n. farm in the north-east part of Southdean Parish, off the western side of the A68. The modern farm is to the west of Camptown, off the side road that leads to Roughlee and Falside. The older farm was probably further south, nearer to the ruined peel tower. Jedforest Deer and Farm Park is on Mervinslaw Estate. It may be the 'Scherwinglen' (with various spelling transcriptions) given in the founding charter of Jedburgh Abbey in the mid-12th century, when one third of the lands were gifted to the Abbey by Christina, wife of Gervase Ridell. The estate was once held as part of the fee by the office of Bailie of the Regality of Jedforest. Robert Waugh was tenant there around 1500. The ruins of the pele there have dimensions about 8m × 4m, within walls almost 2m thick, and probably date to the late 16th century. It was described as the 8 steadings, valued at £10 in the Exchequer Rolls in 1538 and 1539. James Oliver, William Oliver, Margaret Oliver (his mother), Marion Craighill, James Craighill (her son), David Stobs, Elizabeth Hunter, John Wedderburn, William Oliver (alias 'Merchant') and James Waugh were listed as tenants there in 1541; it was split into 7 separate steadings, with total yearly payments of £1 6s 3d. It is possible that 'William Ollyver of Myrleslawe' and 'Ranyon Ollyver of the same', included in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII, may have been from here. The tenants in 1669 were John 'Wach', Thomas 'Olipher', Mrs. 'McFeisoon', James 'fforsett', John 'Waderburn', 'Ritchart' and John Curle and James 'Olipher'. The will of John Aitken in Mervinslaw is recorded in 1683. Robert Oliver was there in 1685. In 1694 the residents were Thomas Miller, John Hill, Thomas Walker, Thomas Curle, Margaret Waugh and Margaret Young, as well as Jean Frissell listed among the poor of the Parish. Robert Scott was living there in at least 1743–44. Robert Davidson was there in 1790–92. In 1797 William Turnbull, Charles Scott and John Scott were there, with Thomas Thomson at 'Marvenslaw Mains'. Adam Buckham was shepherd there in at least 1797–1801 and Robert Scott was a servant in at least 1799–1801. Thomas Scott was farmer there in the mid-19th century. The land was purchased by John Lang in 1923. Jack Waterstones was the occupier in the mid-20th century. The hill 'Mervins Law' reaches 255m (836ft) to the south of the farm. Near where the Peel Burn meets the Jed Water the 1863 Ordnance Survey map shows a building and some enclosures. A mediæval sword pommel found there is in the National Museum of Antiquities (it is probably the place transcribed as 'Xernwingeslawe' or 'Hernwingeslawe' in the 1165 charter of Jedburgh Abbey as being opposite the chapel at Old Jeddart; the suggested origin is from the Old Welsh personal name 'Merefin' plus 'law'; it is 'mervynnis law' in 1502, 'Mervynslaw' in 1538, 'Merwynslaw' in 1539, 'Mervennislaw' and 'Mervenslaw' in 1541, 'Mervinslaw' in 1571/2, 'Mervingslaw' in 1582, 'Mervingslaw' in 1669, 'mervinsla' in 1704, 'marvenslaw' in 1743 and 'Marvenslaw' and 'Marvenslaw' in 1797; Blaeu's c.1654 map shows the tower at 'Mervinslaw', as well as farms at ‘Nuik’, ‘Banck’ and ‘Hauch’ to the south; note that there was once a farmstead of the same name in Wilton Parish).

Mervinslaw (mer-vinz-law) n. former farmstead in Wilton Parish, lying near the hill Mervins Law, once part of the estates of the Scotts of Whitehaugh. There is a record of it being sold by Roger Langlands of Wilton to William Inglis of Langlandshill in 1512. It was to be held for one penny ‘blench-ferm’, payable yearly at Pentecost in Wilton Church. There were 7 ‘communicants’ recorded there in 1650, namely William Miller, Marion Langlands, Helen Miller, Robert Hogg, William Gotterson, Christian Morton and Margaret Gotterson. John Riddell was cottar there in 1694. Walter Cavers was there in 1697, Francis Scott in 1704, William Graham in 1705 and Helen Hislop in 1707. In 1709 Andrew Marshall was tenant, John Scott was tailor there and John Rule was shepherd. Francis Elliot was living there in 1721 and James Noble in 1751 (it may sometimes be confused with the farm of the same name in Southdean Parish, as well as Mabonlaw in Wilton Parish; the origin is presumably the same Old Welsh personal name ‘Merefin’; it is ‘Mervynnislaw’ in 1512, ‘Mavinslau’ in 1707 and ‘Marvinslaw’ in 1709; it is marked ‘Marvin’s Law’ on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Mervins Law (mer-vinz-law) n. hill a couple of miles west of Hawick, between Whitehaugh and Calaburn farms. The farm of ‘Mervinslaw’ was once near there (it is marked ‘Marvin’s Law’ on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Mervinslaw Toor (mer-vinz-law-toor) n. ruined, but well-preserved, 16th century peel tower, about 5 miles south of Jedburgh on the Peel Burn. It is quite far south of the modern Mervinslaw farm, on the southern slopes of Mervin’s Law. It still has 2 stories and a garret, and measures about 8 m by 6.5 m. Each storey is one unvaulted room, and the top level must have been reached by an internal ladder. Below is a D-shaped excavation of some sort and on the surrounding slopes are the remains of 3 separate buildings.

Mervinswud (mer-vinz-wud) n. former lands in Jedforest, listed in a rental roll of 1541, next to Mervinslaw. William Hunter was tenant and the lands paid 12s 6d yearly (‘Mervenniswod’ in 1541).

mese (mees) v., arch. to mellow, mature fruit by forcing (noted by J. Jamieson; also written ‘meise’).

mess (mes) n., arch. a quantity of food set on the table, a portion of food given to a guest, food or

messages (me-su-jeez) n., pl. errands, shopping – ‘A’m away ti get the messages then’, ‘Wull ee gaun a message for iz hen, an I’ll gie a buttered scone’ [BB], ‘When ee came back wi’ the messages It’s washed the dirtiest cloot ...’ [AY], ‘At first things went juist fine, In fact they were quite jolly, Hawick folk got yaised throwe time Ti pittin’ their messages in a trolley’ [IWL], ‘Hawick women don’t go shopping, for the messages they gaun ...’ [IWL] (almost always plural).

Messer (me-sur) n. George (18th C.) house servant and groom at Woll in 1791, when he was working for Charles Scott. James (b.1820/1) from Crailing, he was a cooper in Hawick. In 1851 he was living at about 16 Buccleuch Street, and he was listed at Teviot Square in Slater’s 1852 directory. He married Jane Moodie and their children included Elizabeth (b.1847), William (b.1850) and Mary (b.1854). William (19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Alison Graden and their children included William (b.1842), Alison (b.1847) and Thomas (b.1850). William (b.1794/5) from Nenthorn, he was a cooper and wheelwright in Denholm. He is recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory and was still working there in 1861. His premises were probably on Eastgate. His wife was Mary.

messin (me-sin) n., poet. a small pet dog, a lap dog – ‘Ye messins a’ o’er muirs an’ dales, Ye pointin’ dogs that snuff the vales’ [JR], ‘... Inviting a’ he kinde That had messan, cur, or colleye ...’ [WiSp] (also written ‘messan’).

Mess John (mes-jōn) n., poet. jocular name for a minister – ‘Mess John’s invited o’er to say the grace, And mirth and glee appears in ev’ry face’ [CPM].

met (met) n., arch. measurement, standard unit – ‘... and twa firlots malt gud and sufficient stuf ... viz. of the met of the burcht of Jedburgh’ [SPB1579], v. to measure, ‘to met the belt’ referred to a supposed divining practice of witches – ‘... and that scho mett the belt for seeke persones affirming if the belt crape [crept] in thair is danger of death if it crap not in thair is no danger’ [SPB1628].

metapheesics (me-ta-fee-ziks) n., poet. metaphysics – ‘When the yin that’s listenin’ doesna ken what the yin that's talkin' means; and when the yin that's talkin' doesna ken what he means himsel' ... that's metapheesics!' [DH].

Metcalf (met-kawf) n. John, M.B.E., from Hawick, he was Chairman of the Borders branch of the Multiple Sclerosis Society. He held the Borders position for 13 years, retiring in 2003, and was Scottish Chairman 1994–97. He received the M.B.E. for services to the Multiple Sclerosis Society in 2003.

metheglin (me-the-glin) n., poet. a spicy mead – 'Then drink the pure metheglin of the bee, The heath's brown juice, and live or perish free!' [JL].

metter (me-tur) n., arch. a measurer, particularly applied to the act of preparing to cast spells – 'Compeired Issobell Howetsone in Riddell ane being ... as a common chairmer and a metter of the belt' [SPB1628].

mettled (met-uld) adj., arch. high-spirited, ardent, mettlesome – 'The Cornet and his merry men On mettled steeds are prancin'' [JT], 'The heroes are marshalled, the mettled steeds are bounding' [JT], '... That glorious chase on mettled steeds By lads wha aye were free' [WLu], 'His mettled wife, inured to strife ...' [MG].

Mettlin Well (met-lin-wel) n. spring between the farms of Netherraw, Greenhouse and Raperlaw. There was an agreement for its use between the neighbouring farms in 1909.

Maye see Maye

Meyrle (mā-rul) n. lost place name near Branxholme, mentioned in the 1420 description when half the lands of Branxholme were granted to Robert Scott of Rankilburn. The description includes 'the half of the lands of the Meyrle, and the two cottage lands on the west side of the said river of Branchsemell in the barony of Hawick'. The precise location is uncertain, since even the 'river' mentioned is ambiguous, although perhaps the stream running through Branxholme Glen is meant (note that the pronunciation is unclear).

mibbe (mi-bee) adv. maybe, perhaps – 'there's mibbe twae or threi better yins', 'A'll mibbe gaun', 'A said 'mibbe', and that's final!' (cf. the less common mebbe and older mebbies).

mibbies (mi-bee) adv. maybe, perhaps – 'Mibees oo should look closer at Mother Nature' [We] (also spelled 'mibees'; cf. the older mebbies).

Michael (mī-kul) n. (11th/12th C.) probably of Cumbrian origin, he was nominated as Bishop of Glasgow by David, brother of King Alexander of Scotland. His consecration by Archbishop Thomas of York was sometime between 1109 and 1114. He filled a position that had been vacant for a long time. However, it is unclear if he ever played a significant role in the Diocese, or ever visited Teviotdale.

Michael Graham's (mī-kul-grā-umz) n. cobbler's shop on Silver Street through much of the 20th century – '... Pies and peas at Bruciana's and tackets at Michael Graham's ...' [AY].

Michaelmas (mī-kal-mis) n. important date in the calendar of former centuries, being a feast day of the Archangel Michael, held on the 29th of September. Around the 16th century, this was one of the 3 times a year that the head courts would meet annually, specifically the 1st Tuesday after Michaelmas. It was once the date on which Hawick's Bailies were annually selected – '... payable at Michellmess nixt, for the use and behoove of the said towne' [BR1707], 'In the Michaelmas moonlight, weird and tall The watchman stood on the peel tower wall' [WHO].

Michie (mi-chee) n. Alastair (1921–2008) eldest son of Ann Redpath, he was born in France, but moved to Hawick with his family in 1934. He attended the High School and received a scholarship to study architecture at the Edinburgh College of Art. However, war intervened, and he became an R.A.F. pilot, later working as an illustrator and graphic designer. He became a self-taught painter and sculptor at the age of 40, after seeing an exhibition of American abstract expressionists. He lived in Dorset and married Hazel Greenham and secondly Sally Greasley. The Hawick Museum has at least one of his paintings.

Alexander (b.1764) probably son of John, who was the first Michie of Old Northhouse. His eldest son was John. Alexander (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Betty Potts in 1797. He was probably father of Alexander and Robert of the Archæological Society. Alexander (18th/19th C.) slubber with William Wilson. In 1797 he was sent to Galashiels for 10 months to learn the trade and he returned to be the first slubber in Hawick. He could be the spinner of that name who went to America, and when he returned in the 1840s there was a big celebration in the Fleece Inn, hosted by the Hawick Instrumental Band in which he had formerly played. Alexander (b.c.1780) resident at Branxholme Loch according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Hawick Parish. His entry is in the middle of many entries within the Burgh of Hawick, and so it is possible he is the same as the slubber.

Alexander (b.1788/9) originally from Aberdeen, he was a gardener in Hawick. He is recorded at about 59 High Street in 1841 and 1851 (when he was a widower). Margaret, who was an unmarried seamstress in an adjacent house, was probably related. Alexander (b.c.1795) mason who lived at Branxholme Bridgend in 1841. He may have been brother of William and Robert. His wife was Jean and he probably had a daughter Jean, who married Robert Archibald. Alexander (1813–1886) brother of Robert, he was also a skinner in Hawick. He was living on the Cross Wynd in 1841, with the family of millwright Gideon Scott. In 1851 he was listed on Orrock Place as a master skinner, employing 3 men. He must have been partner with another skinner, since ‘Scott & Michie’ is listed at Teviot Square in Slater’s 1852 directory. In 1861 he was at 4 Orrock Place as a master skinner employing 5 men. He may later have moved to Galashiels. He was a founder member of the Hawick Archæological Society, being the fourth official member. He acted as Museum Curator for the Archæological Society in the early 1860s. He also wrote some anonymous poetry, such as ‘Auld Moat’s Address’, before he left Hawick in 1864 to live in Galashiels. As a youth he was a great athlete, regularly appearing at the Innerleithen and Mangerton games, excelling at running, leaping, hammer-throwing and ‘hitch-and-kick’. He may have been the same Alexander who served as first Treasurer for the Congregational Kirk. Later in life he wrote regularly in the local press about reminiscences of the Common Riding and related themes. He also wrote the introduction for the 1886 edition of Common Riding songs. He is supposed to have only missed a single Common Riding in his life. Much of the credit for the revival of the Common Riding in the 1880s is due to his letter-writing and powers of persuasion. As a result, he was invited as a special guest to all the events of 1886. Some of his articles on Hawick characters, printed in the Transactions, later appeared in Robert Murray’s book. He is probably the Alex recorded owning part of the former lands of Patrick Cunningham in about 1874. In 1845 he married Isabella Scott, who was a dressmaker. Their children included: James Cockburn (b.1846), who died young; Jessie Sibbald (b.1847); Elizabeth Pott (b.1851); Walter Francis Scott (b.1855); Susan Mary (b.1859); and Gideon Scott (b.1862), presumably named after the former millwright. A photograph of him exists. He also appears in a portrait (painted by John Guthrie) along with his brother Robert and William N. Kennedy. Bailie Alexander (b.1832) son of currier Robert. He was a Magistrate in Hawick, and should not be confused with the other contemporary Alexander, who was his uncle. He also served as Vice-President of the Archæological Society. He left for South Africa in 1879, with Frank Hogg first publicly singing ‘I Like Auld Hawick’ at his farewell dinner. He lived at Maraisburg, Transvaal. Andrew Rodgie (1806/7–54) builder in Hawick. He was one of the ‘Brigend Michies’, this family being raised in the Green Kirk, hence his middle name (and the fact that birth records are scarce for these Michies). It is said by James Haining that he had brothers Robert (a mason), John (building foreman in Edinburgh) and Hugh (of Laing, Michie & Graham), but Hugh seems more likely to have been his nephew; it is also unclear who their father might have been. He was listed on the Loan in Pigot’s 1837 directory and Slater’s 1852 directory. He lived 19 Loan, according to the 1841 and 1851 censuses. In 1851 he is recorded as a master mason, employing 20 men, 4 apprentices and 8 labourers. His firm constructed the Old Parish Church and several other important buildings of the mid-19th century. His wife was Mary, and they had a daughter, Betsey. His nephew Adam Laidlaw carried on the business after his death. Andrew Smith (1844–1936) son of skinner Robert, he was born in Hawick. He worked for the National Bank of Scotland in Hawick and was transferred to Edinburgh in 1862, then London in 1866. In 1874 he moved to the Royal Bank of Scotland, being recruited as Deputy Manager in London. In 1889 he became sub-cashier in the bank’s Glasgow office and a year later was Cashier there. He retired in 1910, returning to London. He is buried at Rowledge in Surrey. He married Jessie Fraser in 1872 and they had children Arthur, Charles and Agnes. He published many articles on banking and revised James William Gilbert’s work ‘The history, principles and practice of banking’. Bruce raised in Hawick, he played in the baritone horn section of the Saxhorn Band. He trained in medicine, but continued to perform as a multi-instrumentalist woodwind player, based in Perthshire. He has played with The Walktalls, Martin Stephenson and Delta Mainline. Christopher Young (b.1829) born in Cavers Parish, son of John and Betty Young. It is said that as a child he was chased by the Devil in the form of a pig. He worked as a forester to the Countess of Seafeld and contributed to the Transactions of the Highland and Agricultural Society. He was apparently offered the position of Factor at Balmoral, but declined. He wrote ‘The Larch:

A Practical Treatise on Its Culture and General Management' (1882 and 1885), as well as 'Practice of Forestry' (1888). David (19th/20th C.) apprentice with chemist John Craig, he became manager of the lemonade works, then partner, and sole owner from 1919. David A.R. (b.1928) youngest son of James and Anne Redpath. He became an artist, like his brother Alastair. He was born in France, but moved to Hawick with his family in 1934, attending St. Mary's and the High School. He was an instructor in the Royal Artillery Signals Training Regiment, then studied at the Edinburgh College of Art. After travelling to Italy, he started on an art career that has included one-man exhibitions and prizes, being known for both oils and watercolours. He worked as a teacher at the Edinburgh College of Art, later becoming Head of the School of Drawing and later Vice-President. He was Common Riding Chief Guest in 1989 and had an exhibition at the Scott Gallery in 2009. He was awarded the O.B.E. in 1997 and is a member of the Royal Scottish Academy. George (18th/19th C.) agricultural worker, probably son of Alexander, from Slatehills. He married Margaret Turnbull and their daughter Jane married Thomas Rutherford, from Haysike. Hugh (b.c.1745) farmer at Slatehills. He may have had a brother called John, who was the first of the Michies of Old Northhouse. Hugh (18th/19th C.) farmer recorded at 'Goldielands Bridge End' in 1797. He was part of the family that farmed in that area for many generations. He may be the Hugh who married Margaret Telfer in Hawick Parish in 1787. Hugh (1830-91) said to be brother of Andrew Rodgie, Robert and John. However, he seems more likely to be son of mason Robert. He was partner in tweed merchants' Laing, Michie & Graham. Later he opened a newsagent's shop at 2 High Street, with the help of his daughter Margaret. He married Christina Dobson, from the wood merchants of Leith; she died at the age of 85. Their children include: Robert (b.1863), emigrated to Australia; Margaret Allan (1865-1932); George Dobson (b.1866); John Stewart (b.1869), tweed designer in Huddersfield, who retired to Folkestone; and Agnes Dobson (b.1873). John (18th C.) probably the first of the Michie's of Northhouse. He may have been father of Alexander and brother of Hugh of Slatehills. John (18th C.) married Margaret Shiel in Robertson Parish in 1739. John (18th/19th C.) weaver of Old Northhouse. He may have been son of the earlier John and father of the later John. He could be the John who married Mary Douglas in Hawick Parish in 1790. He was one of the Volunteers who responded to the 'False Alairm' in 1804; when he went off with his gun his daughter is meant to have said 'Shoot iz 'eersel', faither; ye'll dae it cannier than the Frainch'. He had at least 2 daughters: Janet, who married Adam Easton, farmer at Overhall; and Margaret (1805/6-87), who married warehouseman Thomas Anderson. John (b.c.1770s) resident of Robertson Parish. In 1801 he was selected as substitute in the Militia for Robert Smith at Home in Stichill Parish. However, the paperwork did not appear to be in order and hence a different man served as substitute instead. John (1788/9-1861) weaver at Old Northhouse in 1841. In 1851 he is recorded there as an ex-weaver, along with his wife, both as paupers at that time. He married Elizabeth (or 'Betty') Young, recorded in Cavers and Kirkton Parishes in 1821; she died in Denholm in 1864, aged 78. Their children included: Jessey (1821-46); Isabel (b.1824); William (b.1826); Christopher Young (b.1829); Robert (b.1832); and Mary Ann (b.1835). He could be the John Michie of Hawick who subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. John (b.c.1800) spinner in Wilton. He is listed among heads of households in 1835 at Dovemount and in 1840 and 1841 at Kirkstyle. He was also an Elder of Wilton Kirk. His wife was Jane and their children included Robert, Eliza and John. John (19th C.) probably brother of masons Andrew Rodgie and Robert. He became a foreman with builders Messres. Colville of Edinburgh. John (1813-70) clerk in the Relief Kirk Session. John (19th C.) of the Victoria Tavern, Hobart, listed as a subscriber to the Common Riding in 1888 and 1889. Robert (b.c.1805) mason journeyman, living at Branxholme Bridgend in 1841. He was brother of William, who farmed there. He may also have been brother of Andrew Rodgie. He probably married Agnes Ann Smith and had children including Hugh (b.c.1831), Walter (b.c.1833), Elizabeth (b.c.1834) and John (b.c.1837). Robert (1807-1875) brother of Alexander (later of Galashiels), and probably son of Alexander and Betty Pott. He was a founder member of the Hawick Archæological Society, being its second official member. A great sportsman in his youth, he won the wrestling contest at the St. Ronan's games at Innerleithen in 1831, as well as winning the 'light ball' event (probably throwing). At the Common Riding Games of 1834 he won the 'ball throw' event. He was a currier by trade, and was recorded as such on the High Street in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was also listed as a currier on O'Connell Street in the 1841 and 1851 censuses, and appears in Slater's 1852 directory, where he was a currier and leather cutter, as well as a tanner and skinner. In 1851 he was listed at 11 O'Connell Street (originally No. 6), as an employer of 1 journeyman and 2 apprentices. In 1861 he was at 6 O'Connell Street, master currier and tanner, employing 3 men and 1 boy. In 1846 he wrote to an American temperance leader, the letter being printed in a Boston newspaper, but then reprinted in Britain, getting him into trouble with the Hawick Free Church; a locally-published pamphlet attacked his abolitionist views. He gave a lecture on 'Local Antiquities' in 1856 (immediately after a lecture on Archæology by George Webster), this being only the second lecture given at the Society's meetings. He also gave a lecture on local hill forts in December of 1856 and one on Trimontium in February 1857. He was also on the Town Council. In the 1850s he was on the Railway Committee for Hawick District. He was one of the first Deacons of the Evangelical Union (later Congregational) Kirk, as well as one of the first Trustees. He was also one of the earliest members of the Hawick Total Abstinence Society, and well known for giving speeches on this subject, always in local dialect. He married Agnes Elizabeth (or Ann) Smith in Wilton Parish in 1830. Their children included: Grace (b.1830); Alexander (b.1832); Elizabeth (b.1834); Joanna (b.1836) and Joana (b.1838), who both died young; Thomas (b.1842); Andrew Smith (b.1841); Andrew Smith (again, b.1844); and Robert (b.1848). He appeared in a portrait (painted by John Guthrie) along with his brother Alexander and William N. Kennedy. A portrait of him alone was presented to the Archæological Society by his son A.S. Michie on the occasion of the 1906 jubilee – 'Guid Robbie Michie, noble man, First o' the speechifyin' clan' [RDW]. Robert (b.1810/1) born in Cavers Parish, he was a shepherd in the Hawick area. He may be the Robert who was an agricultural labourer at Whitchesters in 1841. He is listed at Minto Kaimes in 1851 and Hayside (in Wilton Parish) in 1861. His wife was Helen (from Minto) and their children included John, James, Janet, Mary, Rachel, Robert, Helen and Thomas. Robert (b.1832/3) born in Wilton Parish, probably son of spinner John. He was miller at Newstead near Melrose. His wife was Agnes and their children included John, William and Isabella. Robert (19th C.) first Captain of Hawick R.F.C., from 1873 for 4 years. Walter (1753/4–1816) undertaker in Edinburgh. He died in Hawick. William (1792–1885) from Old Northhouse. He emigrated to Canada, settling in Esquesing, Ontario, where he farmed and had a saw-mill. His wife was Margaret, and their children included: Thomas (1824–1901); Mary (1834–1902); Robert (b.1837); Alexander (1843–93); Ellen (1850–1901); George (1851–1918); Elizabeth (1853–1901); and William (b.1854). He died in Esquesing, aged 92½. William (1797/8–1862) farmer at Branxholme Bridgend. In 1841 the family were living at 'Branxholm braes', which may have been the same as Scatterpenny. In 1851 and 1861 he was at Branxholme Bridgend, farming 16 acres and employing one man. He contributed local information for the Ordnance Survey in about 1859. He married Isabella. They had 9 daughters, including: Margaret who became Mrs. Welsh; Wilhelmina (or 'Mina'), who married baker John Campbell; Isabella; Mary; Beatrix, who married James Dewar; Elizabeth (or 'Betty'); and Alexandrina. He is buried in old Wilton Cemetery (sometimes formerly spelled 'Michi' and 'Miki').

Michie's (mich-eez) n. Robert Michie & Son, tanner's business in Hawick in the mid-to-late 19th century. They were situated on Buccleuch Street, by the River Teviot. In 1871 the firm estimated that it tanned 1,270 hides, producing over 21,000 pounds of leather.

Michie's Brig (mich-eez-brig) n. another name for the Branxholme Bridge, across the Teviot at Branxholme Bridgend, named after the family which lived there for generations and who became builders in the early 19th century.

Michie's Well (mich-eez-wel) n. a former public water supply about half-way up Drumlanrig Square, above the Mid Row, also known as 'Porteous' Well'.

micht (micht) v., arch. might, may – 'That thaye micht sete their houpe in God ...' [HSR], 'Oo've a pairk in Wulton Ludge That e'en Fairyland micht grudge' [TK], 'It micht hev been less – bit no' muckle' [RM], 'Aa whiles think that life in this grey auld toon o' Hawick Micht weel be compared to a river ...' michty me (mich-tee-mee) interj., arch. expression of mild surprise or exasperation, also used as a mild oath – ‘michty me, A’ve never seen sic a thing’.

mickle (mi-kul) adj., adv., arch., poet. large, big, great, much, large amount – ‘For as mickle as wee have been with your lordschip ...’ [CBP1597], ‘...as mickle as in a’ thesauries’ [HSR], ‘Afflicket I am verra mickle ...’ [HSR], ‘He was a man of sterling worth, And neither proud nor vain; I mickle doubt we’ll never see The like o’ John again’ [JLu], ‘Weel bairnies, what is’t tae be the day. How mickle hev ee?’ [JEDM], ‘We ‘laid her doon’ wi mickle care,’ And cairrit on tae Eskdalemuir’ [DH] (not often used in Hawick; cf. muckle).

Mickle (mi-kul) n. William Julius (1734–88) born in Langholm, 3rd son of the Parish minister, changing his name from ‘Meikle’. He was educated in Langholm and then at Edinburgh High School and went into the brewing trade followed by some of his family. In 1762 he published ‘Providence and other poems’, then went to London to try for a literary career, eventually becoming a corrector for the Clarendon Press in Oxford. This he gave up to translate Camoens’ ‘Lusiad’ (from the Portuguese), taking 4 years and being published in 1775. His balled ‘Cumnor Hall’ is supposed to have inspired Sir Walter Scott’s ‘Kenilworth’. He also travelled to Portugal with the Navy, returning fairly wealthy and married Mary Tomkins. As a poet he was very versatile, writing both short and long pieces, including the Scottish patriotic song ‘There’s Nae Luck About the Hoose’.

Mid Broadlee (mid-brōd-lee) n. formerly part of the farm of Broadlee. In 1650 the ‘communicants’ recorded there were John Clerk, Malie Shiel, Alexander Scott and Agnes Scott.

Midburn (mid-burn) n. farm in Hobkirk Parish, between Hawthornside and Highend. It was also known as ‘Africa’. The L-shaped barns probably date from the mid-18th century. James Renwick was there in 1790 and John Common was tenant in 1797. It was farmed by the Turnbells through the 19th century, from about 1823. Thomas Turnbull was there in 1868. There was also once a small threshing mill there, powered by water from a pond (it is ‘Middleburn’ in 1790 and marked ‘Middleburn’ on Stobie’s 1770 map).

midden (mi-din, -den, -deen) n. literally the house waste heap or dunghill, but applied to mean any dirty or untidy place – ‘yon hoose was a right midden’. Middens in Hawick were common at the front of every house, often under the forestairs. They were forbidden by Council rules in 1749, but mostly not removed until around 1800. The last to remain were those in the Sandbed, Kirk Wynd and Green Wynd (the owners paying a small rent to the Burgh to keep their middens), which were removed following a petition in 1810 – ‘...but a man may look at the moon till he land in the midding, for all that’ [JTe], ‘He raeises up in the puir owt o’ the dust, an’ lyfts up the needie owt o’ the midden’ [HSR], ‘A stinkin’ midden, a scartin’ hen – There’s sma’ choice there ’tween craws and men’ [DH], ‘...Like a struttin’ cock on the midden heap’ [WL] (also ‘midding’ and variants).

midden-stank (mi-din-stawngk) n., arch. a foul ditch that drains from a dung heap – ‘...But the hypocrite weed Grew rank in its stead, Frae a heart vile as yon midden-stank’ [JoHa] (see mid-den and stank).

middest (mi-dist) n., arch. middle, midst, centre – ‘...in offering to beat up and break of the door of the dwelling houss ...in the midst of the night’ [BR].

middle (mi-dul) v., arch. to meddle, bother – ‘Dunion ...is buirdly billie ti Ruberslaw, an there the perr stand ...leike as they war glunshin an shuirrin doon at aabodie that wad middle thum’ [ECS].

Middle (mi-dul) n. former name for lands that were incorporated into the Wells estate near Bedrule. Along with ‘Holm’ they may have been part of the lands called Dykes. They are listed (along with Fowlerslands and Holm) in the 1511 charter of the Douglasses of Cavers, along with the ‘corn mill and walk mill’ (that was later called Doveshaughmill). The lands were at one time partly in the Parish of Kirkton, but in the Barony of Cavers (on the west side of the Rule Water). In earlier times it may have been in the Barony of Feu-Rule. In 1634 James Stewart of Nether Horsburgh was served heir to his father Robert Stewart in his lands of ‘Helme et Middill’, with grain mill and fuller’s mill called ‘Dowishauch’, comprising a 3 merk land in the Barony of Cavers. It was still in the Barony of Cavers when inherited by Sir William Douglas in 1687 and his brother Archibald in 1698, and still listed along with ‘Helme’ as having a corn mill and waulk mill attached. James Dryden was there in 1736. It is unclear whether these lands were associated with East Middle (it is ‘Middill’ and ‘Myddill’ in 1511 and ‘Midle’ in 1698; the origin of the name is probably from being the centre of the in-by land of an estate).

Middle (mi-dul) n. lands in Cavers Parish, later divided into East Middle and West Middle. William Douglas was there in 1720 when he had a daughter baptised in Kirkton Parish (the origin probably comes from being farmlands central to the estate, as opposed to the out-by land).

Middleburn (mi-dul-burn) n. former name for Midburn.

the Middle Loft (thu-mi-dul-loft) n. former balcony in St. Mary’s Kirk, built in 1684 by James Thorbrand. In 1685 William Laing and Walter Scott (presumably Bailies at the time) were paid back the 100 marks Scots that it had cost to construct. This balcony was lost when the church was rebuilt around 1763. It was also known as ‘the Steeple Loft’. The 2 front seats were formally assigned to the Bailies in 1707 (although this is a little confusing, since the ‘Bailies’ Loft’ was a separate balcony). The Council paid 200 merks Scots for the timber work to fix it in 1708, the money being raised by assessing the Burgesses. It was one of two balconies that were entered from the steeple side, the higher one being the ‘High Loft’ – ‘John Turnbull, mason, to collect ye Midle and Wester Lofts’ [PR1718].

Middle Mains (mi-dul-mānz) n. former name for part of the demesne lands of Hassendean (see Hassendean Mains).

Middle Mairches (mi-dul-mār-cheez) n. the Middle Marches, generally referring to an area running from the Cheviots to the Kershope Burn. The Scottish Middle March consisted essentially of Roxburghshire (including Liddesdale), Selkirkshire and Peeblesshire, with judicial centre in Jedburgh, and the Wardens being the Kers or Kerrs for much of the time. The English Middle March consisted of Coquetdale, Redesdale and Tynedale. Together they saw the worst of the lawlessness of rieving times.

Middlemas (mi-dul-mis) n. Adam (d.bef. 1581) recorded being deceased when his son John witnessed a sasine for William (son to the deceased John) in Lilliesleaf in 1580/1. Andrew (15th/16th C.) convicted in 1510 in Jedburgh Justice-aire, with secretly destroying the wood of Gateshaw. George (16th C.) servant to James Kerr, son of the Laird of Greenhead. In 1586 his master was instructed to enter him and another servant into court. James (16th C.) recorded in 1561, when Thomas Scott of Haining was obliged to enter him before the Warden of the East Marches. Either he or ‘quhyte Will Young’, or his servant or some other person was to be warded to answer the charge of stealing from David Thomson in Berwick. He was presumably local. James (16th/17th C.) son of William of Lilliesleaf Chapel. In 1604 he and his father were declared rebels for failing to appear to answer to the charges of killing Thomas Kerr of Crailing and his servant. This appears to have been part of an on-going feud between the Kers and the Turnbells, with the power of the courts on the Ker side. He is probably the brother of William of Lilliesleaf who (along with 2 other men) was part of a complaint in 1617 by George Douglas of Friarshaw and George Douglas in Lilliesleaf, specifically that the 3 men had tried to break into both the houses at Lilliesleaf and Friarshaw. He is also recorded as brother of William ‘of Lillieslie’ listed in 1618 among men accused of assaulting and threatening George Turnbull of Belses and his workers; he was ordered to be imprisoned in Edinburgh Tolbooth. James (d.bef. 1671) proprietor of Raperlaw. He was listed as owner of Raperlaw in Lilliesleaf on the 1643 county valuation, his lands being valued at £416. His is recorded as owner of 'Reaperhall' (i.e. Raperlaw) in 1670 when he brought a court action. In 1671 (by which time he was deceased) he is transcribed as 'portioner of Kaperhall'. In the 1663 Land Tax Rolls he paid tax on £110 10s, as one of the heritors of Raperlaw in Lilliesleaf Parish. His daughter Emma (or Anna) married Walter Scott of Alton. He could be the same as the James of Raperlaw who married Anna Scott, and whose son William was involved with claims with her new husband Thomas Riddell in 1661. He is probably the James of 'Reperlaw' who signed the 'Confessions of Faith' in Hawick in 1638. James (17th C.) paid the land tax on part of Raperlaw in 1678. These were the lands formerly held by Walter Turnbull and corresponded to Childknow (valued at £101 19s 4d) and 'Part of the muir of Childknow' (valued at £33 9s 2d). He is recorded at Raperlaw in Lilliesleaf Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He is probably related to the earlier James, as well as to Walter, who is also recorded at Raperlaw in 1694. The same lands were owned by Hunter of Hunthill in the 18th century. James (b.1819/20) woollen manufacturer, son of John. In 1861 he was living at 10 Slitrig Crescent and employing 18 workmen. He was at that time living with his widowed mother Isabella and his brother William. He may be the Mr. Middlemas of Slitrig Bank who gave a talk on 'Botany' to the Archaeological Society in 1857. John (15th/16th C.) tenant in Lilliesleaf who was listed among the Borderers pardoned in 1526 for their earlier attack on the Earl of Arran. John (d.bef. 1581) tenant in Lilliesleaf, perhaps son of the earlier John. In 1563 his eldest daughter Janet was one of 2 choices of wife offered to William Davidson by Walter Riddell of that Ilk. Probably the same John was listed as owner of half of Raperlaw when it was leased to Andrew Gray, George Gray and Thomas Allan. He is probably the John in Lilliesleaf recorded being deceased in 1580/1 when his son William received sasine to his 4 husbandlands in Lilliesleaf. John (d.1601) brother of William of Lilliesleaf Chapel. He was killed in Jedburgh on Rood Fair Day in 1601 as part of an ongoing feud between Turnbells and Kers. About 30 Turnbells from the Minto area entered Jedburgh to find Thomas Kerr of Crailing (brother of the Provost), killing him and his servant and wounding several other Jedburgh men. On the Turnbull side he was killed, along with Robert Turnbull of Bewlie. Several men were later convicted and hanged for their part in this skirmish. Margaret Turnbull a relative (possibly sister) was one of the 'persewaris' of the case against the Kers for his murder. John of Alton (17th C.) mentioned in a 1666 list of landowners in Hassendean Parish. He may have been related to Walter Scott of Alton, who married Anna Middlemas at about that time. John (18th/19th C.) herd at Jedhead in Southdean Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. John (b.1791) son of Alexander, he was born in Ednam. He was a small-scale manufacturer in Hawick in the early-to-mid 1800s. He was listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835 as foreman at Pathead and was at Stellhouse in 1840. In 1841 he was recorded as a woollen factory foreman, living at Stellhouse. He married Isabella Broomfield, sister of Alexander, who was foreman at Cumledge Mills. Their children included: Alexander; James (b.1820), who carried on his father's business; Elizabeth (Betsy), who married William Laidlaw (grocer and manufacturer); Isabella; Jane; William; and Margaret. Robert (18th C.) servant to Douglas of Cavers, recorded in 1785 and 1791. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included: William (b.1785); and Janet (b.1791). Robert (18th/19th C.) servant at Spital in Cavers Parish. In 1797 he was listed among men on the ballot to serve in the Militia. In 1799 he was listed among those whose names had not been drawn, but were no longer living in the area. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Christian Scott and their children included Robert (b.1809). Thomas (15th C.) recorded on the 'retour of inquest' for Ker of Altonburn in 1438. Thomas (15th C.) early member of this family, based at Ploro. He was master ranger of Yarrow from at least 1468, and presumably related to William, who was Ranger before him. He is surely the Thomas, cousin of Robert Scott of Haining, to whom Scott granted the lands of 'Greviston and Gillishauch' in Peeblesshire in 1476. He is recorded 'in Ploro', in 1494/5 (probably related to the area of Plora near Innerleithen). That year there was remission to Alexander, son of Andrew Turnbull of Dryden, for resetting the thefts of Adam Howiston and Robert Jackson. This included the slaughter of his wife and 2 sons, as well as 11 horses, 44 cows and a long list of items. This list is unique in its detailed specification of valuable goods belonging to a minor (but relatively wealthy laird) at the end of the 1400s. Also in 1494/5 John Scott of Erncleuch was allowed to 'componer' for his part in several crimes, including bringing in thieves and 'traitors of Leven' to slaughter his wife and two 'offspring', Ninian and John. He was probably the same as Thomas, chief of the Middlemas clan, who acquired Ploro in 1497. Thomas (16th C.) listed in 1541 among Scotsmen accused of being responsible for the deaths of Englishmen. He was said to have slain Quentin Watson. Thomas 'Tammy Mid' (20th C.) metal merchant of the mid-20th century, running the business at 55 High Street, which was very successful during the War years. He was also known for his large feet, which meant he wore excessively patched hand-made boots. Walter (16th/17th C.) son of William of Middlemas. Along with his brother William, he was accused of harassing and attacking George Turnbull of Belses and his farm workers; appearing personally before the Privy Council, he was sent to Edinburgh Tolbooth afterwards. William Elliot, his servitor, was also involved. George Ker, apparent of Cavers Carre became cautioner for him and his brother William for the sum of 300 merks, not to harm George Turnbull or his family or servants. Walter (17th C.) recorded at Raperlaw in Lilliesleaf Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He paid tax on 2 hearths and was probably related to James, who was also listed there. William (14th/15th C.) Vicar of Selkirk. In 1425 he was granted the office of Master of the Ward of Yarrow by Archibald, Earl of Douglas, confirmed by James I in the following year; his nephew George was also named in the charter as his successor in the office. In 1436 he was recorded in a charter related to St. Andrews Kirk in Peebles. William (15th C.) Master Ranger of Yarrow Ward from at least 1456 until 1460. He was succeeded in this office by Thomas, who was therefore probably his son. William (15th/16th C.) along with David Hoppringle, Walter Scott of Howpasley and George Hepburn, he held the lands of Boonraw, which passed to Robert Scott of Stirches in 1504/5. Perhaps the same William is recorded in 1502 when Robert Scott in Synton and William Scott in Fenwick were fined for failing to enter him in the itinerant court at Jedburgh. William (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1527 as a witness in Selkirk for a transaction involving land in Lilliesleaf. William of Lilliesleaf (16th C.) recorded as 'Middilmest in Lilliseleif' in 1563 when he 'wadset' his lands at the 'Hungrie Hills' and other lands near Lilliesleaf Kirk to Walter Riddell of that ilk. In the same year he was 'William Myddilmest in Lislie Freirschaw'

when he rented some land to John Redford, this being 'Coit acre' and a rig of land lying in 'Myddillis' (perhaps suggesting a connection with his name). Probably the same William is recorded in 1562 when he let an acre of land in fields of the town of Lilliesleaf to Hohn Hislop. He is probably the William 'Middelmest of Lillisle' recorded in 1580 when he admitted John Donaldson as tenant to 6 acres of land in the town of Lilliesleaf, for yearly payments of 24 pounds; these lands were at 'Portus Croft Heid'. He may be the William, son of the deceased John of Lilliesleaf recorded in 1580/1 when he received sasine for 4 husbandlands in Lilliesleaf. In 1581 he witnessed a transaction between William Scott in Burnfoot and Scott's future wife Janet, daughter of William Scott in Huntly. Also in 1581 he witnessed an agreement involving the liferent of Blindhaugh and Castleside with the Scotts in Blindhaugh. Probably the same William is recorded in 1581/2 when 'one quarter of the half husbandland' of his steading held by John Smail was given to Smail's mother as part of a marriage contract. He is also recorded as 'Middilmest of Leisle' in 1583/4 when he received half of the meadow of Belses. And in 1589 he was involved in an action with Walter Riddell over the 'Treincersgait'. He may be the same William described in 1595/6 as 'officiario baronie de Lillisleif' (probably meaning the Baron Bailie) when he was granted the 5-pound land of Bewlie and 7 husbandlands and 2 cottage-lands within Lilliesleaf. William of Chapel (16th/17th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish, probably son of the earlier William. He was 'William Middilmest of Lilleslie Chapel' when he was ordered captured along with Hector Turnbull of Bewlie, for the slaughter of Thomas Kerr of Crailing in 1601. This was a result of a skirmish in Jedburgh, when about 30 Turnbells from the Minto area entered Jedburgh seeking Ker, this being part of an ongoing feud between the families. He had a brother John, who was killed in Jedburgh on that day in 1601. He was declared a rebel in 1604, along with his son James, for the murder of Thomas Kerr of Crailing in that skirmish in Jedburgh in 1601. Thomas Turnbull of Minto acted as cautioner. He could be the Laird of 'Chapel-Middelmiss' whose wife was a daughter of Walter Scott of Synton and Whitslade (according to Scott of Satchells). He is probably the William 'Middlemest of the Chapel' whose servant Willie Scot was apprehended as a fugitive in Dysart in 1610. He is probably the William 'of Lillisle' who in 1618 was accused of harassing and attacking George Turnbull of Belses and his farm workers. His brother James, sons William and Walter, and other supporters were also involved. He was ordered by the Privy Council to be entered into Edinburgh Tolbooth ‘and to remain there till further order be taken with them’. He is probably the William ‘of Lillisleis Chappell’ who in 1617 the Rutherfords complained was still at the horn, but not yet apprehended. Additionally, in 1619 Archibald Ker in Bowden complained that he owed him money and was ‘unrelaxed from a horning’. William of Chapel (17th C.) son of William of Chapel. He is probably the ‘William Midlemest, younger’ of Lilliesleaf named in 1618 among Middlemases and their supporters who had harassed and attacked George Turnbull of Belses and his farm workers; appearing personally before the Privy Council, he was sent to Edinburgh Tolbooth afterwards. George Ker, apparent of Cavers Carre became cautioner for him and his brother Walter for the sum of 300 merks, not to harm George Turnbull or his family or servants. He was served heir to his father in 1622 in the lands of Raperlaw. He is probably the ‘William Midlemaist of Lillisleif Chappell’ recorded as a juror in the 1622 and 1623 Commissioners’ Courts and ‘William Middlemest of Chappell’ on an assize in 1624. He is probably the ‘goodmane of the chapell’ recorded in 1628 when his son James was said to have been cured by Isabel ‘Howetstone’, who was accused of witchcraft. William (17th C.) son of James of Raperlaw and Anna Scott. In 1661 his guardian John Middlemas was involved in a discharge of claims with his mother and her new husband Thomas Riddell William (b.1833/4) from Earlston, he was son of John, a woollen carder in Wilton. He was a shopkeeper on Wilton Place according to Slater’s 1852 directory and in the 1851 census (when only 17 years old). By 1861 he was working as a woollen spinner and living with his mother and other family members at 10 Slitrig Crescent (formerly spelled ‘Medelmeste’, ‘Middelmass’, ‘Middelmest’, ‘Middilmaste’, ‘Middilmest’, ‘Middlemast’, ‘Middlemess’, ‘Middlemist’, ‘Middlemost’, ‘Midlemaist’, ‘Myddilmaist’, ‘Myddilmast’, ‘Myddilmaste’, ‘Myddilmest’, ‘Mydylmest’, etc.).

Middlerig (thu-mi-dul-rig) n. former name for a steading in Hobkirk Parish. The location is uncertain. William Robson was there in 1801 (it is ‘Middlerig’ in 1801).

the Middle Shires (thu-mi-dul-shīrz) n. name sometimes used for the Borders area (on both sides) after the Union of the Crowns in 1603.

Middles Roundel (mi-dulz-rown-dul) n. small hill to the south of West Middles farm. It reaches a height of 187m and contains a triangulation pillar.

Middlestead (mi-dul-steeds) n. Middlestead, farm in Selkirk Parish, east of Oakwood Mill. Lands of the farm bordered on the Parish of Ashkirk. It is probably the ‘Middlestead of Falside’ granted to James Scott of Kirkurd in 1490. John Scott of Middlestead was listed by Scott of Satchells among the men who were on the raid to rescue Kinmont Willie in 1596. Archibald, son of Gilbert Elliott of Stobs (‘Gibbie wi the Gowden Gartins’), inherited the lands in 1637. There were Plummers there from about the mid-17th century and Scott-Plummers in the 19th century. Robert Preacher was tenant in 1719.

Midgap see Midgehope

Midgard (mid-gawrd) n. farm situated between Cavers and Cavers Mains. Mason Archibald Minto was there in 1767. The mother of the Laird of Cavers was recorded there in 1868.

Midgehope (mi-jup??) n. farm in the Ettrick valley, just south of Ettick village. It was owned by Melrose Abbey in 1415 when neighbouring lands were swapped with Scott of Rankilburn for the lands of Bellendean. Simon Scott was recorded there in 1494/5 and Walter Scott in 1502. It was part of the lands owned by Melrose Abbey until about the Reformation. Along with Thirlestane, it was raided by a large group of Armstrongs in 1543, taking 200 cows, 20 horses and 4 or 5 prisoners. There were Littles there in 1573. In the late 16th century William Scott of Midgehope was 2nd son of William of Tushielaw, and ancestor of the Scotts of Horsleyhill. It may be the ‘Medop’ belonging to Walter Scott of Tushielaw in 1586 when 24 cattle and 400 sheep were stolen by a gang of Armstrongs and later another 36 cattle 400 sheep, 3 horses and ‘the insight of the whole town’. Gilbert Elliott of Stobs held the reversion of half the lands, resigning this to Walter Scott of Tushielaw in 1620. The lands were still part of the Lordship of Melrose in 1670. Charles Scott of Woll owned the lands in 1785. In the late 18th century John Scott of Midgehope was a son of William of Woll and father of William of Teviot Bank. Andrew Henderson was owner in 1803 – ‘Gae warn the lads of Thirlstone, Gemscleugh, and Newburgh fair, With Tushielaw, and Midgehope, in armour to appear’ [WSB] (called ‘Midgap’ by Scott of Satchells; it is ‘Mighope’ and ‘Migehope’ in 1415, ‘mygchop’ in 1494/5, ‘mygehop’ in 1502, ‘Migehoip’ in 1564 and ‘Megehoip’ in 1573; ‘Midgehoop’ is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

midgie (mi-jee) n. a midge – ‘A caa stop scratchin this midgie bite’.

Mid Grain (mid-grān) n. small stream that rises on Whitegrain Fell and flows north-east to join Singdean Burn (it is marked on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

Mid Hill (mid-hil) n. hill in the Slitrig Water, to the east of Stobs Woodfoot. On a shelf near the summit is a hill-fort, approximately 75 m by 40 m, but largely destroyed by later occupation by a settlement and quarrying. It consists of inner and outer ramparts, and contains several hut circles associated with the settlement. Just south-east of the fort are the remains of a linear earthwork, traceable about 140 m, but probably once longer.

Mid Hill (mid-hil) n. hill on the southern side of the Borthwick valley, just to the south-east of Eilrig farm, and reaching a height of 317 m.

Mid Hill (mid-hil) n. hill on the northern side of the Borthwick valley, near the head of Borthwickbrae Burn. It lies between Byrelee Hill and Easter Hill and reaches a height of 368 m.

Mid Hill (mid-hil) n. hill in upper Liddesdale, lying on the west side of Cliffhope Burn near Singdean. It reaches a height of 434 m (it appears to be marked on the 1718 Buccleuch survey as ‘Middle’).

Mid Hill (mid-hil) n. hill in the very upper part of the Hermitage valley, south-west of Twislehope Hope. It reaches a height of 436 m.

Midholm (mi-dum) n. former name for Midlem, particularly used to refer to its Secessionist congregation in the 18th century.

Midlem (mid-lum) n. hamlet north of Hawick and about 4½ miles east of Selkirk. It has an old rectangular lay-out, with the smithy in the middle of the village green. It was once a linen manufacturing centre, and a village of some importance. It lies on the Midlem Burn, which joins the Ale Water. The village is mentioned in 1119 in connection with Selkirk Abbey and remained in monastic hands for 450 years, with the Knights Templar apparently also having some land there. The village also had possibly the first Secession church in Scotland, built in 1746, and closed in 1938, with some Hawick area families travelling all the way there for services; there are baptismal records covering the period 1743–1919 (with some gaps). The top end of the village offers a magnificent view of Ruberslaw. In 1535 Robert Scott of Allanhaugh was tried (and found not guilty) of leading men from Liddesdale to there, stealing 100 cows and 20 horses. J. Walter Elliot wrote ‘The Story of Midlem and the Midlem Pail’ (the origin is Old English ‘middel ham’, meaning simply ‘middle homestead’; it first occurs as ‘Middelham’ about 1120, is ‘Mydlem’ in 1535 and only gains its modern spelling by the 17th century; it occurs on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Midlumm’).

Midlem Mill (mid-lum-mil) n. farm with a mill, situated near the village of Midlem. John Lillie and James Lawson are recorded there in 1493. It was later a seat of a branch of the Elliots. The first Laird, in the mid-17th century, was Gavin Elliott, also of Grange (son of ‘Gibbie wi the Gowden Gairters’ and ancestor of the Earls of Minto), whose initials were carved on the stone that supported the mill wheel. He was followed by Robert, another Robert and finally Gavin. Robert Elliot paid tax on his lands there valued at about £400 in 1678. Lady Elliot paid tax on 19 windows in 1753. The estate was sold off to clear debts in about 1756. It was purchased by Prof. George Stewart in 1773 and shortly afterwards by Dr. William Hunter. Robert Scott was farmer there in 1797 and Thomas Weir in the 1860s. The Hunters of Union Hall purchased the lands and combined them into the new estate of Linthill. When the house was rebuilt it was named Linthill (also spelled ‘Middlemilne’, ‘Midlemilne’, ‘Midlem-miln’, ‘Midlemmiln’, ‘Midlemmylne’, ‘Midlamylne’; it is ‘Midlaymilne’ in Hawick Burgh records of 1734).

Mid Liddle Street (mid-li-dul-stee) n. street in Newcastleton, lying along the west side of the Liddel (or Liddle) Water, between North Liddle Street and South Liddle Street.

Midlothian (mid-lō-thee-in) n. county sharing a small common border with the north of Roxburghshire.

midnicht (mid-nicht) n. midnight – ‘... At dark midnicht, on passers-by, ’Twill through the hedgerows keek’ [TCh], ‘There’s a silence in the cobbled wynds, and snell the midnicht air’ [JYH], ‘For aa A pat a warm pig i the bed, it was midnicht or A cam a-heat’ [ECS].

Midquarter (mid-kwar’-ur) n. former farm in Abbotrule Parish. It was advertised for lease in 1785, along with others on the Abbotrule estate. ‘Doorpool, Midquarter, (including the Easter Park) and a small possession, part of the Farm occupied by George Minto' was listed on the Land Tax Rolls of 1811, owned by Charles Kerr of Abbotrule and valued at about £210 (it is marked on Stobie's 1770 map).

the Midraw see the Mid Raw

the Mid Raw (thu-mid-raw) n. row of pended, thatched tenements which stood in the centre of what is now Drumlanrig Square, between the Fore and Back Raws. The original construction may date back to around the 16th century. It exists in several photographs, including one during its demolition, showing the arched lower floor. A public well, originating at the Sclider Springs, stood at the bottom. The gable end at the top held a large notice board. It was the location for some of the densest and poorest housing conditions in Hawick, with no sanitation and some rooms still having clay floors. It is estimated that there were 110 people living in 10 separate houses. By the latter part of the 19th century they had become very dilapidated and the building was demolished in 1884, after being purchased by public subscription and gifted to the Town (since the Council had no powers to declare houses unfit for habitation). A Commemorative plaque was placed on a nearby house. In 1910 the site was turned into an ornamental garden with fountain and the Brown Clock in the centre of the Square, designed by J.P. Alison. Some of the stone was used to build the wall along the roadside at Pipleheugh (since rebuilt), and a wooden cup in the Museum was made by James Thomson from a salvaged beam. A few fragments of the former Pipleheugh wall were incorporated into the James Thomson statue base. A photograph was taken shortly before the demolition – 'Though the Moat itsel' may fa', Like the famous auld Mid Raw ...' [JEDM], '... And we maun bid a last farewell To the Auld Mid Raw' [JT].

Midroughlee (mid-rowch-lee) n. former name for a steading in Jedforest. It was recorded along with Wester Roughlee and Roughleeneuk in 1538 and 1539, valued at 30 shillings (it is 'Mydrouchleis' in 1538 and 1539; see Roughlee).

mids (midz) n., arch. the middle, middle of, midst – '...he sall set the thornis within his awin bounds, and his nichbour's within the mids ...' [BR1640], 'In the myds o'' [JAHM], 'Threh the mids o thir verra busses ...' [ECS], 'I' the mids o' Lammas fair' [GW], a middle course, medium example, compromise – 'There's a guid mids! Bit A daarsay there's a selly bit aboot uz aa ...' [ECS].

Midshaw see Meadshaw

Midshiels (mid-sheelz) n. farm near the Teviot about 2 miles north-east of Hawick, just north of Briery Yards, nestled between the Teviot and the old railway line. A mound nearby is said to be the site of a cottage that was covered over when the residents had the plague; this may be the same as the round cairn, planted with trees, which is about 300 m north-west of the house (on the opposite side of the road, near the railway, marked 'Tumulus' on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map) and about 25 m in diameter. There is also an ancient standing stone, just to the north-east of the cairn; this is about 2.3 m high, 4-sided and more than 2 m around at the base. Aerial photography has revealed signs of an enclosure in the field to the north of the house. Redemption money was paid for the lands (along with Appletreehall) by Alexander Scott of Howpasley and Abington in 1470. Superiority of the lands (along with Appletreehall and parts of Hassendean) were forfeited after the execution of Alexander, Lord Home in 1516, passing to James Lundie, but returning to George, Lord Home, probably in 1522. Robert Scott of Howpasley and his wife Isobel Murray had a charter of the lands in 1536, when they were part of the barony of Hassendean, with superior being Alexander, Lord Home. It was probably owned (along with Appletreehall) by Walter Scott of Howpasley before that. It passed to Sir Walter Scott of Birkenside in 1578/9 and then his son Walter Scott of Howpasley in 1588. In 1611 it was confirmed to Philip Scott of Dryhope by the superior Alexander Cranston of Mordiston. Walter Scott of Midshiels was recorded in 1628. It was a tenanted farm of the Scotts of Buccleuch from at least the late 17th century. Some women from here were supposedly involved in the dispute over the removal of Hassendean Kirk's roof to Robertson in the late 17th century. It was part of the lands of Walter Scott of Chamberlain Newton in 1678. The Laird of Newton (probably Francis Scott) was living there in 1694, when he paid tax for having 7 hearths. Walter Scott of Crumhaugh was living there in 1722 and 1724, Robert Turnbull and Richard Turnbull in 1729 and William Turnbull and Robert Turnbull in 1733–36 and Andrew Stewart and Walter Grieve in 1737. Walter Scott of Crumhaugh was living there in 1742 and Gideon Scott was there in 1747. Rebecca Scott paid the window tax on 16 windows there in 1748. Capt. John Douglas of Cavers purchased the estate from the Scotts of Crumhaugh in the mid-1700s. After his death in 1786 it was inherited by the son of his cousin, who was Archibald Douglas of Adderstone. Archibald Douglas owned the farm by 1788 (and still recorded that way in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls), when it was valued at £235. John Skinner was a servant there in 1799. It was later the home of miller John White. The Douglasses sold the land to William Turnbull of Fenwick in 1852, who sold it in 1896 to Rutherford Shiells. The level area in front of the house was used on several occasions for reviewing the Border Mounted Rifles. The road to Hawick passing near here was improved in 1775. The house is a grade B listed building – ‘And there were three wives in Midshiells, And three in Bridieyairds; And they’re awa to the Kirk o’ Hassendean, And left baith wheel and cairds’ [T] (it is marked on Gordon’s c. 1650 map and Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Midsheels’, on the 1718 Buccleuch survey as ‘Meadsheills’ and on Stobie’s 1770 map as ‘Meidshiells’; it was recorded as ‘Mydschelis’ in 1535 and 1536, ‘meidschellis’ in 1561/2, ‘Midsheills’ in 1628, ‘Midlesheels’ in 1681, ‘Meidsheills’ in 1678, ‘Meitchels’ in 1694, ‘Meatsheels’ in 1711, ‘mitschels’ in 1724, ‘medshiells’ in 1729, ‘Mitsheals’ in 1737, ‘Meetshiells’ in 1821 and ‘Midshields’ in 1841).

Midsideshaw (mid-sīd-shaw) n. former lands in the Rule valley, described as a ‘pendicle’ of ‘Woollie’ (i.e. Wolfelee) in 1659 (it is possible this is an error for ‘Macksideshaw’).

Mid Sike (mid-sīk) n. small stream on the north side of the Borthwick valley. It joins the Hosscote Burn just below Black Sike.

Midsummer (mid-su-mur) n. formerly in Scotland this was June 24th, sometimes used as a term day – ‘... geifand a penny of the wsuale mone of Scotland at the Fest of Nativete of Sant Jhone the Baptist, callit Mydsomer ...’ [SB1500].

Midsummer Fair (mid-su-mur-fār) n. former fair taking place at various dates in the Summer in Hawick. In 1670 it happened on 24th June, actually close to the middle of Summer. However, it was on 5th July in the 18th century. It was moved to 17th July (the day before the St. Boswells Fair) in 1799. It was set up as a fair and market for cattle, wool and linen goods, and ceased around the middle of the 19th century.

Milbank (mil-angk) n. Sir Frederick Acclom (1820–98) of Well (near Ripon), M.P. and famous sportsman of his times. He holds one of the records for the most grouse shot in a single day (2,070 in a party with 6 guns in 1872). He took part in a celebrated early cricket match at Borthwickbrae in the 1840s, and at the return game on the Upper Haugh drove the ball from the Upper Haugh into the Under Haugh. He was recorded in a directory of 1852 living at Borthwickbrae. Along with his wife he presented a silver chalice, paten and wine flagon to St. Cuthbert’s Kirk.

Milburn see Millburn

mile (mīl) n. mile, note that the singular form is often used for the plural – ‘Selkirk is eleeven mile away’, ‘how mony meile? (= how many miles?)’ [ECS].

mile (mīl) n., arch. wild celery, Apium graveolens (noted by J. Jamieson).

mile (mīl) n., arch. a fluke, parasite found on the intestines and livers of sheep (noted by J. Jamieson).

Miles (mīlz) n. Francis (b.1705) son of Richard. In 1725 he witnessed a baptism for ‘periewig-maker’ Robert (surely a relative, perhaps his brother). In 1723 in Hawick he married Isabel Phaup or ‘Phape’. Their children included: Margaret (b.1723); Jean (b.1724); Thomas (b.1726); Robert (b.1728); Gideon (b.1730); William (b.1737); and Francis (b.1740). The witnesses in 1730 were Richard and Robert (probably his father and other relative). Francis (18th C.) Hawick resident who married Mary Hair. Their children included Isobel (b.1743). He could be the same man as the barber, if he married twice. Francis (18th C.) married Margaret Riddell in Hawick in 1758. He could be the barber of that name who witnessed a baptism for Andrew Scott and Ann ‘Doeg’ in 1758. He could be the Francis who witnessed a baptism for wig-maker Robert in 1766. James (19th C.) married Isabella Hessel in Hawick in 1869. Their son Adam may have drowned in a pool near the Flex. Mr. (16th C.) recorded in Hawick in 1579. James Burn, indweller in Selkirk, owed him 5 half firlots of meal. His forename is not recorded. Richard (17th/18th C.) wig-maker in Hawick. In 1697 someone was convicted of stealing ‘ane laced pinner’ from his wife. In 1709 he witnessed a baptism for Adam Brown, ‘Headhouse younger’. In 1714 he witnessed a baptism for Robert (who was surely closely related). He may be the same Richard who married Agnes Lindsay in Hawick in 1705 and whose children included: Francis (b.1705), also a wigmaker; and Richard (b.1707). The witnesses in 1707 were gardener James Falsyde and merchant Thomas Hardie. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Martha Bell and their son Richard was baptised in 1714. The witnesses in 1714 were Richard (who was surely either his father or brother) and John Norville. Robert (17th/18th C.) wig-maker in Hawick. He witnessed a baptism for Archibald Little in 1717. He was recorded as ‘periewiggmaker’ in Hawick in 1725. Also in 1725 he was ‘wigmaker’ when he witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Walter Scott. He married Jean Cook in Hawick in 1715. Their children included: Mary (b.1716); Isobella (b.1718); Agnes (b.1719); Margaret (b.1721); Janet (b.1723); and Robert (b.1725). The witnesses in 1725 were Francis (who was surely related) and John Scott ‘White-gates’. Robert (18th C.) wig-maker in Hawick. He married Rachel Nichol (perhaps this was the 2nd marriage of the wigmaker Robert who had married Jean Cook). Their children included Mary (b.1737). The witnesses to her baptism were merchant William Oliver junior and Kirk Officer John Telfer. Robert (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included: Elizabeth (b.1758); Margaret (b.1760); and an unnamed child (b.1762). Robert (18th C.) wig-maker in Hawick, who married Ann Elliot. Their children included: William (b.1764); Catherine (b.1766); William (again, b.1768); and Robert (b.1775). The witnesses in 1764 were Francis and John (with the surnames hard to read) and in 1766 were Francis Miles (surely a close relative) and Archibald Elliot. He could be the Robert whose daughter Agnes died in Hawick in 1777. He could be son of the earlier wig-maker of the same name (or he married twice with a big gap). Robert (18th/19th C.) married Agnes Aitkin in Hawick in 1796. He could be the stockingmaker recorded in the Militia ballot in 1799 among those ‘In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in Hawick parish’; he was still on the list in 1801. He could be the barber who died in 1805. Robert (d.1805) local barber, son of Francis. His children included: James, who married Isabella Hessel; and unnamed children who died in 1805 and 1808 – ‘Robert Miles the barber, and Michael up the stair, Willie Tully makes the wigs, and Jenny buys the hair’ [T]. Robert (b.1812/3) stocking-maker living on O’Connell Street in 1841 and in Wilton Kirkstyle in 1851. He married Janet Bramwell. Their children included: Robert (b.1836); John; Euphemia; James; David; and Agnes. His older sister Elizabeth also lived with him. He could be the Robert who died in 1877. Robert (b.1836) son of Robert, he worked as a fuller in Wilton. In 1851 he was living on Langlands Bank. He married Ann Stewart and their children included mile stanes (mīl-stānz) n., pl. formerly, numbered markers by the side of a road, set out at intervals of 1 mile. Wood’s 1824 map show a mile stone near the present position of the Horse.

Agnes and Robert. William (18th C.) resident of Hawick. He subscribed to Caw’s ‘Poetical Museum’ (1784). He could be the William born to Robert and Ann Elliot in Hawick in 1768 (also formerly written ‘Myles’).

Milestane Peth (mīl-stān-peth) n. former name for a path between Ashybank and Honeyburn. The path went to the south from the main Hawick-Denholm road (A698), crossing a small hill that was removed to straighten the road. It is now by-passed by the modern course of the main road. There was once a ford across the Teviot at the foot of the path. It is now marked on the Ordnance Survey map through the name of the wood alongside the A698 near there. The name derived from a milestone that was once on the road near there, marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, showing 4 miles to Hawick and 16 miles to Kelso.

the Military Hospital (thū-mi-li’-u-ree-hos-pi’-ul) n. hospital in Hawick for treating wounded soldiers during WWI. It was also known as ‘Hawick War Hospital’, where?? Patients were banned from visiting licensed premises.

the Militia (thū-mi-li-sha) n. an army distinct from the professional army, being the forerunner of today’s Territorial Army. The history of the militia goes back for hundreds of years, although locally it is relevant only in the 17th to 19th centuries. In Hawick the term was applied to one of a number of partly voluntary forces, although technically distinct from the Volunteers and the Yeomanry. There are records of court cases involving ‘his Majesty’s Militia’ from the 1660s, when money was raised and men were selected to serve by ballot; in 1688 2 men were fined for fleeing the Town when they were recruiting and in 1694 2 men were admitted as Honorary Burgesses for serving ‘as militia hired men for the said town’. In 1796 a law was passed proscribing that each community should provide men or pay £25 each, which Hawick did for its quota of 3. In each parish, schoolmasters, assisted by constables, were meant to provide lists of all men between the ages of 19 and 30 (later extended to 18 and 35), those serving to be chosen by ballot from such lists (although there were reasons for exceptions). Lists for each parish were drawn up in the period 1797–1802; there was some resistance, with officials being harassed and some copies of lists destroyed, as recorded in the surviving Lieutenantancy Book for the Count of Roxburgh. The lists, from 1797, 1799 and 1801, provide a useful slice of the population of Roxburghshire, containing all able-bodied men born roughly in the 1770s. The selected men joined the '4th Regiment of the North British Militia'. From the county there were 68 men balloted in 1799. Initially such forces were under the command of the Lord Lieutenants of each county. Men had to commit to a certain number of days of service (21 days annually) over 5 years, during which they could be called up in times of need. Militia units were very active in the years around 1800, with the threat of French invasion. On the volunteer side, Hawick was the rallying place for the upper troop of Roxburghshire Yeomanry, while the early 19th century saw more men join the local Militia, initially the 'Dumfries' regiment, but later one based more locally. The 1st Regiment Roxburghshire Militia was established in 1810 and based at Jedburgh, with the 2nd Regiment based at Kelso. The men in these units were drawn by ballot (between the ages of 18 and 30), served for 4 years, and were not allowed to find substitutes. They would only train within the county, unless invasion or rebellion broke out. There is a record of messages being posted at schoolhouses in Selkirkshire in 1813, describing the balloting process. The Dumfries Militia, continued to recruit in Hawick through much of the 19th century – 'Hawick and Jedburgh loyalty show, In defence of our king and our nation; They have given their hand, to join the chosen band, In the Roxburgh local Militia' [BY].

the Milk Drum (thu-milk-drum) n. former popular name for the hospitality offered to the Drums and Fifes on the Friday morning around 7 a.m. The tradition is said to have started when Mrs. Hardie, proprietor of the dairy, offered one of the ailing members of the band some fresh milk in 1871. It was continued by Hardie's and then the Brown family (at what point rum may have been added is not known!).

milkit (mil-kee', -ki') pp. milked – 'When bonnye Jeanye Roole she milket the yowes I' the buchte aboon the lynne ...' [JTe].

Milksweet Willie's Thorn (milk-swee'-willeez-thörn) n. ancient thorn bush at Newmill, associated with the ballad 'Rattlin Roarin Willie' (see also Sweet Milk).

milk-the-kye (milk-thu-ki) n., arch. the dock weed in its seed-bearing stage.

milk thrissle (milk-thri-sul) n., arch. the milk thistle, Silybum marianum (also 'milky thrissle'; see thrissle).

mill (mil) n. a factory, building containing manufacturing machines, particularly referring to a knitwear factory. 'The mill' is a familiar name for one of the main town factories. The first factories in Hawick appeared in the late 18th century, for the manufacture of linen tapes and carpets. Spinning and weaving then moved from being domestic operations, to being organised in large factories. Through the 19th century these dominated employment in the Town. Working conditions were poor to start with; it is recorded in the 1830s that the standard working week was 6 a.m. to 7 p.m., Monday to Saturday, with night shifts coming in at about that time. Women were employed as well as men, but traditionally in different jobs, and with children working as 'piecers' from about the age of 9. In earlier times the word referred exclusively to a corn mill, which in older records would be 'miln' – '...Mind, aw'm gettin' the hang o' it And next year, for the mill aw'll maybe no yearn' [AY], 'There's a little town that's nestling 'mid the glory of the hills, Where the smoke goes rising slowly from the busy, scattered mills' [WFC].

Mill (mil) n. John (18th C.) butler at Cavers in 1785, when he was working for Capt. John Douglas. William (18th C.) married Bessie Tudhope in Bedrule in 1725. William (19th C.) married Isabella Rathie in Wilton in 1846. Their children included Helen (b.1846).

the Mill Acre (thu-mil-ā-kur) n. former name for a triangle of land north of Wellington Street, bounded by Wilton Path and Langlands Road (presumably once connected with Roughheugh Mill).

Mill Acre (mil-ā-kur) n. former name for lands associated with Belses Mill. They were included among lands served to Sir Thomas Ker of Cavers Carre in 1678, after the death of his son Andrew (it is 'Mylne aiker' in 1678 and 'Milnaiker' in 1684).

Millbank (mil-bawngk) n. another name for the Mill Path. It may also have been the name of the hosiery factory built there for Robert Ewen and later part of Hogg's Mill. Houses in this area were removed to make way for the railway to Carlisle in about 1860 ('Mill Bank Street' is recorded in the 1851 census).

Millbank Hoose (mil-bawngk) n. house on the Mill Path, once the residence of Provost and manufacturer Robert Ewen.

Millburn (mil-burn) n. former lands located roughly where Hermitage village is. In 1718 it was included along with Over Closs and several other farmsteads in the survey of properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch. ‘Overcloss alias Milburnholme’ was listed among the farms of the Duke of Buccleuch being let by public roup in Hawick in 1755. In 1839 in the New Statistical Survey it was reported that the Nine Stane Rig within the bounds of this farm. A flint found near here is in Hawick Museum – ‘Now, wae be to thee, Armstrong o’ Millburn! And O an ill death may’st thou dee! Through thee we have lost brave Lairistan, But his equal thou wilt never be’ [ES] (also written ‘Milburn’; it is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Milburne’, on the Buccleuch survey as ‘Millburne’ and is probably the ‘Milholme’ of Sandison’s c.1590 map).

Millburnholm (mil-burn-hōm) n. former farm where the Whitrope Burn meets the Hermitage Water, at the modern location of Hermitage village. This was probably the farm of ‘Jame of Milbourne home’ (most likely an Elliot) recorded in 1587/8. William Henderson was tenant there in 1694. It was included along with Over Closs, Millburn and several adjacent farmsteads when surveyed for the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1718. The former farmhouse was visited by Sir Walter Scott and Robert Shortreed in 1792, and was at that time the last of the old style cottages in the district. It was a single storey at one end, with an extra storey at the other end, and with tiny windows looking through the thatched roof. Willie Elliot was farmer there at that time, and still recorded in 1797. Adam Heatley was a servant there in 1799, Gideon Scott was shepherd in 1801 and Francis Oliver was servant in 1801. Robert Elliot was farmer there in 1821 and 1841. There is a linear earthwork there, running east from the B6399 at least to the next stream, possibly all the way to the Roughley Burn (it is ‘Mylnburnholme’ in 1694, ‘Milnburnholm’ in 1797 and ‘Millburn Holm’ in 1821; it is ‘Milneburneholme’ and ‘Millburneholme’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey and is on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Millburn Schuil see Hermitage Schuil

Mill Cornet (mil-kōr-ni) n. a mock Cornet selected in one of the local knitwear factories. Usually it was the youngest apprentice, and in the larger mills there were also Cornet’s Lasses, as well as Right- and Left-Hand Men and their Lasses, with those selected being the youngest 3 male and female employees. They would wear the same jackets and hats each year, and the party would go round the various ‘flats’, entertaining the workforce. The practice took place from at least the 1920s, including Braemar, Hawick Cashmere, John Laing’s, Johnstone’s, Lyle & Scott’s, Pesco’s, Pringle’s, Turner & Rutherford’s and Woodcock’s. The tradition largely died out in the 1970s, but is still continued by a few companies.

Millcote (mil-ko) n. lands in Liddesdale recorded on a rental roll from about 1376, and associated with the Mangerton estate. They are listed as ‘Mylncotis’ and with a value of 10 shillings.

mill-door (mil-dōr) n., arch. entrance to a mill – ‘Saying ‘She has a mooth like (or as big as) a mill-door (= one very large and gaping)’ [GW].

the Millennium Nature Trail (thū-mi-len-ee-um-nā-chur-trāl) n. nature trail laid out in Wilton Lodge Park around 2000. There is an accompanying leaflet that describes the trail, which starts from the Museum.

the Millennium Stane (thū-mi-len-ee-um-stān) n. commemorative standing stone placed on the Miller’s Knowes in 2000, inscribed – ‘Look back on Bonnie Teviotside, and Hawick Among the Hills’. It was brought from a quarry near Jedburgh.

miller (mi-lur) n. person who runs a corn mill, having a special status within a barony – ‘Ee’ve the cheek o’ (or as muckle impetence as) the miller’s horse’ [GW], ‘ti droon the miller’ meant to add too much water to dough, liquor, etc. (see also millers).

Miller (mi-lur) n. Adam (17th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Bessie Barrie and their son Walter was baptised in Hawick in 1683; this was on the same day as a child of John Barrie, who may have been his wife’s brother. The witnesses in 1683 were students James Aitkin and James Scott. Adam (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He witnessed a baptism for Walter in 1690 and for Francis in 1691 (possibly his sons). Adam (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Cauldmill in 1723. His children included: James (b.1721); and Adam (b.1723). Adam (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was at Appletreehall in 1724. He married Elspeth ‘moor’ and their children included Bessie (b.1724), with witnesses John and Walter Scott. Adam (b.c.1753) originally from Robertson Parish, he was living in Denholm in 1788, 1793, 1798 and 1800. He is recorded as ‘independent’ on the 1841 Hawick census, living somewhere on Buccleuch Street. He may be the ‘Mr. Miller’ marked on Buccleuch Street on Wood’s 1824 map. He married Rachel Scott in Crailing Parish in 1784. Their children included (the first 2 baptised in Crailing and the rest in Robertson Parish): William (b.1786), baptised in Crailing; Adam (b.1788), Thomas (b.1790) and John (b.1793), baptised in Cavers; and an unnamed child (b.1792), Alexander (b.1796), Charles (b.1798), twins Janet and Elizabeth (b.1800), and Robert (b.1803), baptised in Robertson. John (b.c.1801) may have been another child. Adam (b.c.1780s) tailor at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot, according to the 1812 ballot for the Militia in Robertson Parish. He was surely related to Thomas, who was a tailor at ‘Mains Park’. Alexander (18th C.) owner of lands in Ruecastle in Bedrule Parish. In 1643 his lands were valued at £27. His son was probably William, who owned the same lands in 1678. Alexander (18th C.) shepherd at ‘...head’ in Wilton Parish, according to his headstone. He married Marion Smith, who died in 1769, aged 59, and is buried in Wilton Old Cemetery. Alexander (18th/19th C.) farmer at Gripknowe in 1786. His children baptised in Kirkton Parish included: Andrew (b.1780); Mary (b.1783); William (b.1786); and John (b.1787). Alexander (18th/19th C.) farmer at Teindside Bridge, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Alexander (1867–1947) from Ayton in Berwickshire, he served as Stationmaster at several locations, including Hawick in about 1915. Andrew (b.c.1780) weaver at Winnington Rig according to the ballot for the Militia in Kirkton Parish in 1801. He is probably the son of Alexander baptised in Kirkton in 1780. Andrew (18th/19th C.) resident of North Shields. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He must have had a local connection. Andrew (19th C.) married Eliza Thomson in Wilton in 1852. Andrew ‘The Marquis’ (19th/20th C.) son of a coal agent in Hawick. There is a story told of him pulling Peter Laidlaw’s leg by recounting a dream in which he was in Hell and the Devil tells him to get off his seat, saying ‘Ee’ve nae richt there; it’s reserved for Peter Laidlaw’. Charles (18th C.) weaver in Hawick Parish. In 1757 he witnessed baptisms for carrier Thomas Black and for weaver David (who was surely related, perhaps his brother). In 1760 he witnessed baptisms for weaver David (who was surely related to him) and John Scott. He married Ann Blaikie and their daughter Ann was baptised in Hawick in 1758. He may be the Charles whose unnamed child died in Hawick in 1787 and whose son David died in 1808. He is probably the Charles, father-in-law to stocking-maker Thomas Scott, whose death is recorded in Hawick in 1816 (in which case Isabel was his daughter). He could be the son of John and Helen Paterson born in Hawick in 1723. Charles (18th C.) resident at Chapelhill in 1775 when his daughter Margaret was baptised in Robertson Parish. Charles (18th/19th C.) married Janet Easton in Hawick in 1798. Christian (18th/19th C.) proprietor of a public house on Silver Street, recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. She is probably the Christian at ‘Slitridge Bridge’ and described as ‘independent’ on the 1841 census. She could be the Christian, daughter of James and Christian Winthrope, who was born in Hawick in 1785. David (17th/18th C.) tailor in Hawick. In 1705 he witnessed a baptism for workman John Douglas. Probably the same David witnessed a baptism for James Thomson in Weensland in 1704. David (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1705 he was perhaps in Burngrove (the entry is hard to read) when his daughter Jean was baptised. William Miller and Adam Scott were witnesses. He may be the David who married Bessie Scott and whose son Walter was baptised in Wilton in 1695. David (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He is recorded as witness to several baptisms in 1702, 1704, 1705, 1706, 1708, 1709 and 1712. He thus seems likely to have either been an elder of the Kirk or held an office within the Incorporation of Weavers. He is probably the David who witnessed baptisms for Walter White in 1712 and 1731. In 1719 he witnessed a baptism for James Dickson, the other witness being weaver William (who was surely related). His son John was baptised in Hawick in 1700, with witnesses Walter Turnbull and Patrick Richardson. He is probably the David who was fined in 1716 for calling Isobel Anderson a liar in court. He is probably the David who witnessed baptisms in 1718 for shoemaker John Gardner and for John Scott ‘Whitegates’. David (18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He may have been son of the earlier David. Either he or his father and John (perhaps his brother) were witnesses to a baptism for William Gledstains in 1721. In 1725 he witnessed a baptism for weaver John (perhaps his brother). In 1723 he married Margaret, daughter of the deceased Walter Armstrong in Weensland. Their children included: Margaret (b.1724); and David (b.1728). The witnesses in 1728 were William

Tudhope and weaver John (probably his brother). David (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. His children included: William (b.1733); and Helen (b.1736). David (18th C.) weaver in Hawick, perhaps related to the earlier David. He may be the David, son of David and Margaret Armstrong, baptised in Hawick in 1728. He married Helen Wright in 1756 and their children included: Jean (b.1757); John (b.1760); Helen (b.1761); and Robert (b.1763). Weaver Charles Miller witnessed the 1760 baptism and was surely related. The witnesses in 1757 were weavers John Gray and Charles (who was surely related). He could be the David who hired the Hawick mortcloth in 1760. He could be the weaver David whose death is recorded in 1810 when he 'Drowned himself in Slitrigg'. He could be the David whose son Francis died in 1781. David (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their children included: Isabel (b.1772); John (b.1773); John (again, b.1773); David (b.1778); and William (b.1782). The witnesses in 1772 were the whole congregation. He is probably the David who (along with weaver Robert Douglas) in 1774 witnessed a baptism for weaver Archibald Douglas; the next baptismal entry was for his own child in 1773, with the witnesses being weavers Robert and Archibald Douglas. David (18th/19th C.) labourer in Hawick. In 1798 he acted as substitute for John Kennedy, mason of Minto, in the ballot for men serving in the Militia. David (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1798 he married Agnes Scott, who was also from Hawick. David (18th/19th C.) tailor in Newcastle. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825, and hence must have had a local connection. David (b.1795) son of Thomas. He emigrated to America in 1817, settling in Bovina, New York. In 1817 he married Nancy, daughter of Scotsman John Thomson. His 2nd wife was Isabella, daughter of Bailie 'Tammy' Turnbull. Their daughter Isabella Wilson married John Robertson Hoy. Many letters survive, sent to him from his family members in the Borthwick valley. Elizabeth (17th C.) recorded in 1695 when she was convicted of theft in Hawick. She was banished 'out of the Ports of the town', with the Burgh Officers announcing that no one should harbour or reset her. Elizabeth 'Bessie' (d.1720) recorded being in Wiltonburn when her funeral took place in Wilton Parish. She may have been related to Robert, who was blacksmith at Borthaugh. Francis (17th/18th

C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Helen Turnbull and their children included: Adam (b.1685); Helen (b.1700); Thomas (b.1703); Walter (b.1706); and Sarah (b.1708). In 1691 he was married to 'Bessie' Turnbull (probably an error) when his daughter Isobel was baptised, with witnesses Adam Miller and James Neil. George (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His son James was baptised in 1742. George (18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. His son Thomas was baptised in 1763. George (1777/8–1849) sawyer in Hawick, son of Janet Kedie, who died in 1832, aged 75. He could be the wright recorded in Denholm on the ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish in 1799 and the joiner recorded on the 1801 Militia ballot. In 1841 he was resident at about 71 High Street and recorded as 'independent'. He was living with his sister Isabel (who died in 1841, aged 50), as well as a servant, Janet Hume. He could be the Miller who gave his name to the adjacent close. He is buried in St. Mary's. George (19th C.) resident of Teviothead Parish. He married Jane Armstrong and their children included: Christian (b.1835); Margaret (b.1837); Mary (b.1839); Helen (b.1841); Jessie (b.1843); Alexander (b.1846); and Isabella (b.1848). George (b.1829/30) born in Ancrum Parish. He was a flour miller living on the Cross Wynd in 1851. In 1850 he married Jane, daughter of Archibald Hobkirk from Jedburgh and their children included Robert. George (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Anne Baillie and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1852. James (16th C.) notary, probably in Jedburgh. In 1574 he was notary for Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule and other Turnbells in their bond of service with Archibald Douglas, 8th Earl of Angus. James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1661 he witnessed a baptism for Patrick Redford. He married Margaret Redford in 1656 and their children included Isobel (b.1657), Robert (b.1659) and Thomas (b.1661). The witnesses in 1661 were Thomas Maben and James Wallace. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Bessie Thomson and their children included: Margaret (b.1670); and Janet (b.1673). James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Agnes Allan and their children included Isobel (b.1675). James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Laidlaw and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1689. The witnesses were William Bell in Whitchesters and weaver John Turnbull. He could also be the James whose son Robert was baptised in Wilton in 1702. James (17th C.) from Lochburnfoot, he lived at Harwoodsyekefoot. He was said to be a Covenanter and once carried a child to the top of Ruberslaw to be baptised. He may be the same as one of the others Jameses. James (17th/18th C.) weaver living at Slaidhills. In 1717 he married Bessie Wilson in Hawick. Their son Thomas was baptised in Wilton Parish in 1730, when he was recorded living at Branhholme. James (17th/18th C.) proprietor of the main inn in Denholm in 1745, when the Highlander army passed through. The officers apparently stayed at the inn. It is said that a servant stole the paybag of the army, but it was returned after there was a threat to burn down the village. James (b.c.1725) gardener, one of the 6 representative Burgesses appointed to perambulate and define the boundaries of the Burgh's land in 1767, during court proceedings for the division of the Common. He could be the James who married Jean Gledstains in Wilton in 1741 and had children including: Margaret (b.1743) and Betty (b.1761), baptised in Hawick; John (b.1748), William (b.1749), Thomas (b.1751), Thomas (again, b.1752), Isaac (b.1754) and Halbert (b.1756), baptised in Melrose; and James (b.1742) and Albert (b.1758), baptised in Wilton. In 1742 this James was in Appletreehall and the baptismal witnesses were Anthony Turnbull of Knowe and Robert Wilson. James (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Northhousehaugh in 1772 when his daughter Mary was baptised. James (18th C.) writer (i.e. lawyer) in Hawick who subscribed to 2 copies of Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784). He is probably the James paid by the Council in 1771 for 'making poor's list'. He may be the James who married Christian Wintrope (probably sister of the writer James) in 1772, with children: Walter (b.1772); Thomas (1774–1819), also a writer in Hawick; Jane (b.1775), who married Joseph Peacock; James (b.1777); Andrew (b.1779); Margaret (b.1781); and Christian (b.1785). James (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Howcleuch in 1774 and Parkhill in 1785. His children included John (b.1774) and James (b.1785). James (18th C.) weaver in Robertson Parish. He married Mary Stavert in 1790 and was recorded at 'Eskdalesyke'. He was living at Harden in 1793 and Mabonlaw in 1800. His children included: Thomas (b.1790); Mary (b.1791); Margaret (b.1793); William (b.1795); Jane (b.1797); and John (b.1800). James (18th/19th C.) labourer at Northhouse. He witnessed a declaration made in 1816 about the birth of William Ker in 1779. He was probably related to Ker's mother Janet Miller, perhaps her brother. He could be the same man as the drainer at Broadhaugh. James (1763/4–1835) resident of Deanburnhaugh. In 1795 he was recorded at Mabonlaw. He married Mary Stavert, who died in 1839, aged 77. Their children included: Thomas (b.1790); Mary (b.1791); William (b.1795); and Jane (b.1797). He and his wife are buried in Old Wilton Cemetery. James (b.c.1770s) recorded as a drainer at Broadhaugh on the ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish in 1799. He was listed again on the 1801 Militia ballot. James (18th/19th C.) tailor recorded in 1797 among Hawick men balloted to serve in the Militia. In 1799 he was listed among those whose names had not been drawn, but were no longer living in the area; however, his name is crossed out with the annotation 'in 4 Regt Militia', suggesting that he was in fact serving in the army. James (b.c.1780) recorded as 'Clerk to Mr William Turnbull' on the ballot for the Militia in Hawick in 1801. He could be the James, son of lawyer James, baptised in Hawick in 1777. James (18th/19th C.) grocer, spirit dealer, wine merchant and seedsman in Hawick. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He is recorded at Bridge End in Pigot's 1825/6 directory and on the Sandbed in 1837, but does not appear on the 1841 census. He is probably the James who married Margaret Turnbull, and whose children included: Alexander (b.1801), possibly the Alexander of Dundee who also subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick'; Elizabeth (b.1803); Thomas (b.1805); Isobel (b.1807); Andrew (b.1808); James (b.1814); and Walter William (b.1818); and William (b.1821). He may be the 'servant' of William Oliver ('Auld Cash') who witnessed his will in 1808. James (b.1795/6) from Wilton Parish, he was a joiner in Denholm. He was listed as a wright in directories of 1837 and 1852. In 1851 and 1861 he was on Main Street. He married Margaret Beattie and their children included William (b.1819), Thomas (b.1821), James (b.1824), Agnes (b.1827), Robert (b.1829), John (b.1833) and George (b.1835). James (b.1809/10) born in Hawick, son of Walter and Agnes Laing. He was a mason in Denholm, living on Canongate in 1851. In 1833 he married Percy Georgina, daughter of John Leyden. Their children included: Walter (b.1833/4); Isabella (b.1835/6); Agnes (b.1837/8); John (b.1842/3); Margaret (b.1845/5); and Hannah (1849–1919), who married Richard Osborne Charlton. The family emigrated to Australia (on the 'Boomer') in 1853. James (19th C.) Chief Magistrate in the early 1830s. James (b.1810/1) hosiery worker in Hawick. He was 'Finisher of Woollen Hosiery' in 1851, living on the Back Row and was at Myreslawgreen in 1861. He married Elizabeth Picket and their children included: James (b.1843); William Buckham (b.1845); Mina I. (b.1847); Helen Buckham (b.1852); and John (b.c.1859). John (16th C.) recorded in Whithope in 1580, with his surname appearing as 'Myllar'. He witnessed a transaction in Selkirk between John Scott in Whithope and Robert Scott of Haining. Johan G.D. (20th C.) grand-daughter of Robert Martin and Mary Hunter. She published the local poetry collection 'Fallen Leaves' about 1950. John (17th C.) married Elspeth Scott in Roberton in 1682. Their daughter Anna was baptised in 1684. John (17th C.) resident of Easter Cavers who was listed in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. His name was written 'Millner'. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. His children included James (b.1691) and Margaret (b.1698). John (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included Barbara (b.1708), Janet (b.1710), John (b.1712), Margaret (b.1715), Robert (b.1717) and Alexander (b.1721). John (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Woodburn in 1716, 1718 and 1721. His children included: Walter (b.1714); John (b.1716); William (b.1718); Alexander (b.1721); and Bessie (b.1724). It is possible he is the John who married Helen Hume in Roberton in 1709. John (18th C.) weaver in Hawick. He was probably son of weaver David. He is probably the John who witnessed a baptism for weaver William in 1715. In 1721 he and David (both weavers) witnessed a baptism for William Gledstains. In 1728 he witnessed a baptism for weaver David, who may have been his brother. He married Helen Scott and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1725, with witnesses weaver David (who was surely related) and flesher Walter Anderson. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Paterson and had children Charles (b.1723), John (b.1727), Jean (b.1730) and David (b.1732). He may be the John who witnessed a baptism for carrier John Ruecastle and Bessie Paterson (perhaps related to his wife) in 1729. John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was recorded at Roughheugh in 1724, Burnhead in 1726 and Appletreehall in 1729. In 1724 he witnessed a baptism for John Scott at Brieryhill and in 1726 another for Archibald Scott, fellow resident at Burnhead. In 1723 he married Christian Taylor and their children, baptised in Wilton Parish, included: William (b.1724); Margaret (b.1726); and Margaret (again, b.1729). The witnesses in 1724 were John Scott and David Taylor, in 1726 were John Scott and John Dryden and in 1729 were James and John Dryden. John (18th C.) married Margaret Scott in Minto in 1735. Their daughter Janet was baptised in 1740. John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His daughter Helen was baptised in 1732. Perhaps the same John had a son John baptised in Kirkton in 1737. John (d.1790) cooper in Hawick. He may have been son of carrier Thomas. In 1767 he witnessed a baptism for Robert Rutherford. He married Isobel Simpson in Wilton in 1743 and they had children: Thomas (b.1744); Mary (b.1746); Jane (b.1757); and Caleb (b.1760). The witnesses in 1757 probably included Hector Blaikie. His death is recorded in 1790, where he is 'cooper father to Thomas'. He may be the John whose wife's death is recorded in Hawick in 1771. John (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Parkhill in 1741 and Howcleuch in 1743. His children included: Margaret (b.1741), John (b.1743), James (b.1746), William (b.1747) and Walter (b.1749). John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Janet Smith and their unnamed child was baptised in 1744. John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was recorded at Groundstone in 1751 and Leaheads in 1759. He married Helen Scott in 1741 and their children included: Jean (b.1743); Isabel (b.1745); William (b.1749); Anne (b.1751); Helen (b.1754); and John (b.1759). The witnesses in 1751 were John and Robert Scott and in 1759 were Rev. James Simpson and Mr. John Chisholme (probably of Stirches). John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Helen Scott and their children included Janet (b.1751) and Jane (b.1754). John (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. His children included Ann (b.1757), Helen (b.1759) and William (b.1760). John (18th C.) married Isabel Davidson in Kirkton in 1761. John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included Christian (b.1764). John (18th C.) married Isabel Porteous in Hawick in 1768. Their children, included: William (b.1769), baptised in Hawick; and Thomas (b.1771), Margaret (b.1775) and Janet (b.1778), baptised in Wilton. John (18th C.) married Helen Davidson in Roberton in 1768. John (18th C.) married Jean (or Jane) Thorburn in 1771, the marriage being recorded in both Hawick and Wilton Parishes. Their son

William was baptised in Hawick in 1774. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Davidson and their children included: Janet (b.1772); Mary and Thomas (b.1775); and Betty (b.1778). John (18th C.) married Margaret Irvine in Hawick in 1784. John (18th/19th C.) servant in Easter Essenside. In 1797 he was listed among men on the ballot to serve in the Militia in Ashkirk Parish. In 1799 he was among those whose names had not been drawn, but were no longer living in the area. John (18th/19th C.) married Margaret Davidson in Hawick in 1797. John (b.c.1770) joiner in Roberton. He was probably the wright in Roberton Parish whose name was removed from the Militia ballot list in 1806, perhaps because he had reached the cut-off age. He was listed at 'Roberton Woodfoot' in 1841, living with his daughters Helen and Ann. He was probably brother of Thomas and uncle of the later carpenter John, who moved to Traquair. He is probably the John, son of James, born in Roberton in 1768. John (b.c.1770) resident of New Mill in Hawick Parish. He is recorded on the list for the Militia ballot in 1799. John (18th/19th C.) married Helen Scott in 1793, the marriage being recorded in both Wilton and Roberton Parishes. John (18th/19th C.) married Nelly Barrie in Cavers in 1814. John (18th/19th C.) married Helen Cowan in Wilton in 1815. Their son Robert was baptised in East Bank Kirk in 1815 and in Roberton in 1816. John (18th/19th C.) Hawick resident who married Grace Archibald. Their daughter Janet was baptised in East Bank Kirk in 1816. John (1797–1874) born at Deanburnhaugh, son of Thomas. He was a wright or carpenter, and later served as factor at Traquair. In his younger days he he worked for David Murray and then for architect Archibald Elliot, who made designs for the Haining and other local houses. By 1841 he was living at Avenuehead, near Traquair House. He may have worked on the construction of the building at St. Ronan's Well. In 1822 he married Jean (or Jane, d.1879), daughter of Robert Aimers from Galashiels. His children included Jane, Robert, Agnes, John and Mary. He died at Traquair. Miller Street in Innerleithen was named after him. John (b.c.1805) weaver in Hawick. In 1841 he was living at 'Weensland Slated House' and in 1851 his widow was an agricultural labourer on Orrock Place. His wife was Mary (from Ireland) and their children included Thomas, Jane, William, Elizabeth, Margaret and John. He could be the John who married Mary Fleming and whose daughter Jane was baptised in Wilton in 1830. John (18th/19th C.) tailor on the High Street, listed in Pigot's 1837 directory. He appears to be absent from the 1841 census, but the apprentice tailors William and Walter, living on the Howegate, may be his sons. John (b.c.1815) agricultural labourer. In 1841 he was living at Todshawhaugh Cottages. His wife was Mary and their children included Robert, Margaret, Jessie and Elizabeth. He may have been brother of Robert, who was also at Todshawhaugh. John (b.1817/8) from England, he was an auctioneer and hardware merchant in Hawick. In 1851 he was living at about 62 High Street. His wife was Mary and their children included John and James. John (19th C.) married Elizabeth Bogue or Oliver in Hawick in 1848. Their children included James (b.1850) and Hugh (b.1853). John (1822/3–1854) Hawick shoemaker. In 1851 he was living on the High Street, near Punch Bowl Close. He married Mary Scott in Hawick in 1843, and she died in 1892, aged 74. Their children were Susanah (who died in infancy), Elizabeth (b.1845/6), Agnes Scott (b.1850), May and Mary (b.1847/8, who married William Hills). He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. John (b.1818/9) from Selkirkshire, he was groom at Midshiels in 1851. He married Margaret Bishop and their children, baptised in Hawick Free Kirk, included: William (b.1848); and Robert Bishop (b.1850). John (19th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. He married Margaret Elliot and their daughter Elizabeth Taylor was baptised in 1849. John 'Blind Johnnie Miller' (1832/3–1904) spent a while in Hawick Blind Asylum, but ran away back to Teviothead, where he spent the rest of his life. He was said to have known the countryside of Teviothead Parish extremely well, was gifted with a great memory, and also played the fiddle. Bailie John (19th/20th C.) councillor and Bailie in the latter part of the 19th century. He spoke at the 1899 Colour Bussing and was one of the first guests at the Callants' Club dinner. Rev. John S. (20th C.) minister at St. Andrew's Kirk 1954–59. He was the last minister. Kate (18th/19th C.) proprietor of a lodging house in Hawick. The death of an 'Irish Pedlar' is recorded there in 1815. Robert (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet 'Runsamon' (or Runciman) and their daughter Beatrix was baptised in 1636. Robert (17th C.) recorded on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls as blacksmith at Borthaugh. He is probably the Robert who in 1698 was cautioner to Robert Scott, farmer at Wiltonburn. In 1700 he witnessed a baptism for William Riddell (from Wilton). He may be the shepherd in Wiltonburn recorded in 1708. Children who are probably his include: Bessie (b.1707), from Wiltonburn; Margaret (b.1708); and Bessie (again, 1712–20). Perhaps his wife was Margaret (or Isobel) Waugh, with other children baptised in Wilton Parish being John (b.1694) and Bessie (b.1699). Robert (17th/18th C.) married Marion Scott in Hawick Parish in 1718. Their son William was baptised in 1720. Robert (1722/3–82) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Margaret Riddell, who died in 1775, aged 55. They are buried in Ashkirk. Robert (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Northhouse in 1747. He married Helen Scott and their children included Jane (b.1747), William (b.1749) and Isabel (b.1751). Robert (18th C.) married Isabel Dryden in 1744, the marriage being recorded in both Wilton and Robertson Parishes. He could be the Robert whose children, baptised in Robertson Parish, included William and Isabel (b.1745), Betty (b.1748), Janet (b.1749), James (b.1752), William (again, b.1754), Thomas (b.1756), Margaret (b.1758) and Robert (b.1760). Robert (18th C.) carrier in Hawick. He married Jean Conquerer in 1753 and their children included Mary (b.1756), Margaret (b.1760) and Thomas (b.1763). Tailor Robert Paterson was witness to the 1760 baptism. He is probably the deceased Robert, ‘Dangerfield’, whose widow ‘Janet Conquer’ died in Hawick in 1800. Robert (d.bef. 1798) wright in Hawick. He married Beatrix Easton in 1752 and their children included: Mary (b.1757); and Margaret (b.1763). His son Robert was a carter and died in 1798. He could be the deceased Robert whose wife Betty ‘Ekron’ died in Hawick in 1790. Robert (d.1798) son of wright Robert. He may be the Robert baptised in Hawick in 1760. He paid the cart tax in Hawick in the period 1785–91. He was a carrier in Hawick, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. His descendant could be the ‘Mr. Miller’ whose property is shown on Buccleuch Street on Wood’s 1824 map. Robert (18th C.) married Janet ‘Kier’ in Hawick in 1764. Their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1768. Robert (18th C.) married Beatrix Elliot. Their daughter Margaret was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1777. The witnesses to the baptism were Thomas Scott, Senior and Thomas Scott, Junior. Robert (18th C.) married Margaret Scott in Hawick in 1786. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Henderson and their son Robert was baptised in 1787. His widow appears to have been living with their son

Robert on the Loan in 1841. Robert (18th/19th C.) Schoolmaster in Robertson in at least the period 1798–1807. Letters from him to a Selkirk lawyer, regarding the Militia ballot, from 1806 and 1807, are in the Walter Mason papers. He married Beatrix Scott. Their children included: Agnes (b.1790); Agnes (again, b.1792); Robert (b.1794); Beatrix (b.1796); Henrietta (b.1798); Walter (b.1800); and James Scott (b.1803). The witnesses in 1798 were James Scott, Elder (who may have been related to his wife), and William Hodge, gardener at Borthwickshiels. He is probably the same Robertson schoolmaster who is said to have died very suddenly in 1822. Robert (b.c.1770s) servant at Ashybank according to the 1799 ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish. It is possible that the same Robert was a servant at Woll Rig in Ashkirk Parish according to the 1801 Militia ballot. Robert (b.c.1780) servant at Hassendeanburn according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Minto Parish. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Elizabeth Armstrong and their son John Armstrong was baptised in 1808. Robert (b.c.1785) tenant at Belses Mill. He was recorded in Pigot’s 1837 directory and on the 1841 and 1851 censuses. His wife was Susan and their children included James, Robert, Thomas, George and Watson. Robert (b.c.1790) agricultural labourer, living at Valesburn in 1841. His wife was Catherine (from England) and their children included Agnes, Margaret, Alexander, Elizabeth, Dorothy and Isabella. Robert (b.1787) son of Robert and Margaret Henderson. He was a hand-loom weaver in Hawick. He was recorded as a spinner in Hawick when he subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He was living on the Loan in 1841 and 1851 and at No. 12 in 1861. In 1851 he was recorded as a hand-loom weaver and occupier of 2½ acres of land. His wife was Catherine and their children included Margaret, Robert (b.c.1820), Elizabeth (b.c.1825) and Harriet (who married John Richardson). He was still alive in 1857 when he certified the death of a grandchild, Andrew Richardson. Robert (19th C.) wool spinner in Wilton. He was living on Wilton Place in 1851. He married Ann Scott in Wilton in 1826. Their children included: Helen (b.1829); Janet (b.1829); John (b.1831) Thomas (b.1833); George (b.1835); Robert (b.1838); Margaret (b.1839); Anne (b.1842); Isabella (b.1843); Christian (b.1846); Mary (b.1849); and Thomas Walter and Elizabeth Grieve (b.1851). Robert (19th C.) married Janet Robson in Wilton in 1832. Robert (b.1818/9) woollen weaver in Hawick. In 1861 he was living at 51 Loan, with his wife Janet (from Ettrick) and children Robert, Catherine and Elizabeth. Robert (19th C.) married Mary Kyle in Hawick Parish in 1851. Robert (19th C.) born in Cavers Parish, he was a ploughman in the Hawick area. In 1861 he was living at Branhholme Braes Cottage. He married Elizabeth Scott in Wilton in 1839. Their children included Janet, Elizabeth, Robert, Helen, Adam and Willemina. Robert (b.1824/5) woollen spinner in Hawick, originally from Jedburgh. In 1861 he was living at 1 Backdamgate. He married Mary Kyle (from England) in Hawick in 1851. Their children included Anne Jane Kyle (b.1852), David (b.1856/7) and Alexander K. (b.1858/9). Robert (b.1822/3) coal agent in Hawick. His wife was Isabella and their children included Mary, Robert, Susan, Ann, Betsy, Janet, Andrew and William. He was living at 50 High Street in 1861 and later at 7 Albion Place. In 1876 his daughter Janet had a paternity case against John Scott of Ladylaw Place. Sir Ronald Andrew Baird (1937–) born and educated in Edinburgh, he trained as a chartered accountant and worked in London and the Midlands before returning to Scotland in 1968 to join Dawson International. He became a Director in 1976 and from 1982–95 he was Chairman and Chief Executive, helping Dawson to become one of Scotland's leading companies, with Pringle's being one of its main assets. However, this period also saw the decline of Pringle's and knitwear in Hawick generally. In 1995 he was effectively forced to resign after poor performance by Dawson, and his hefty compensation package caused some protest at the time. He was Chairman of the Scottish Textile Association 1992–5. He was Chief Guest at the 1993 Common Riding. He received the C.B.E. in 1975 and a knighthood in 1993. Mr. ?? station-master of Hawick Station in the early 20th century. Simon (17th/18th C.) resident at Hawick Shiel in 1694, according to the Hearth Tax rolls. He was also there in 1704 when he witnessed a baptism for Robert Scott, resident there. He and Walter Scott were described as tenants in Hawick Shiel in 1706 when they witnessed a baptism for James Davidson, also tenant in Hawick Shiel. He was joint tenant of Hawick Shiel (along with Walter Scott) in about 1710, as attested in evidence given regarding the state of Hawick's Common in 1767. In 1716 he (and Walter Nixon, also at Hawick Shiel) witnessed a baptism for James Borthwick, shepherd at Hawick Shiel. He and Walter also witnessed a baptism in 1725 for workman Thomas Stoddart. He may be the Simon, married to a Murray, who had an unnamed child baptised in Hawick Parish in 1683. In 1722 he presented his grandson Robert for baptism in Hawick, the child's father having died a few months before the baptism; the witnesses were Bailie Walter Purdom and Town Clerk Walter Gledstains. Thomas (17th C.) listed as tenant at Mervinslaw in Wilton Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He may be the Thomas married to an Easton whose son John was baptised in Wilton in 1697; the witnesses were Robert and William Scott. Alternatively he could be the Thomas, married to Jean Culbertson, whose daughter Jean was baptised in 1694. He may be the Thomas who in 1683 witnessed a baptism in Hawick for John Barrie, resident of Wilton Parish. Thomas (17th C.) joint tenant along with John 'Bue' in Timbersidemill according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. They were recorded as having 'an kiln betuixt thm'. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. His son Alexander was baptised in 1703. Thomas (17th/18th C.) married Marion Hobkirk in Cavers Parish in 1708. He may be the Thomas who was at Ormiston in 1709 when his son William was baptised and at Hummelknowes in 1717 when his son John was baptised in Cavers. William (b.1709), Margaret (b.1712), Marion (b.1714), John (b.1717), Robert (b.1719) and Janet (b.1721) are probably also his children. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Grizel Graham and their daughter Agnes was baptised in 1745. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Murray and their children included: Janet (b.1745); Janet (again, b.1747); William (b.1749); John (b.1751); Thomas (b.1753); Robert (b.1755); Jane (b.1760); James (b.1762); and Francis (b.1765). He could be the gardener Thomas who witnessed a baptism in 1761 for shoemaker John Oliver. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Agnes Elliot and their children included Elizabeth (b.1771), William (b.1774) and Robert (b.1777). Thomas (18th/19th C.) carrier operating between Hawick and Kelso. He paid the cart tax in Hawick in 1785–88. He was a carrier recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick. He subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784). He was surely related to Robert, who was also a carrier. He may be the Thomas, married to Agnes Smith, whose children (baptised in Hawick) included: John (b.1775); Agnes (b.1777); James (b.1781);

and James (again, b.1784). The witnesses in 1781 were shoemaker Charles Wilson and tailor Walter Pringle. He may be the Thomas who witnessed a baptism for Robert Grieve in 1763 and another for Robert Lamb in 1781 (when listed as 'Church officer'). An unnamed child of his died in Hawick in 1787. He is probably the Thomas whose father John died in Hawick in 1790; if so he was probably born in 1744. Thomas (d.1794) Kirk Officer whose death is recorded in Hawick. He was Kirk Officer when he witnessed baptisms in 1784 for shoemaker James Cheap, in 1786 for John Stewart and (along with shoemaker George Gardner) for shoemaker John Wiens, in 1788 for watchmaker John Stewart, and in about 1789 for John Lamb. He may be the same as one of the other Thomases. Thomas (18th/19th C.) servant at Chesterhill in Hobkirk Parish. He is recorded in the Lieutenancy Book for Roxburghshire in 1797. Thomas (b.c.1770s) spinner at the Sandbed, according to the ballot for the Militia in Wilton Parish in 1799. He may have been related to William, who was a spinner at Roughheugh at the same time. In 1801 he was listed as a spinner at Damside on the Militia ballot. Perhaps the same Thomas married Jean Coltart and had children baptised in Wilton, including: John (b.1801); Margaret (b.1802); William (b.1806); Isabel (b.1810); and Thomas (b.1814). It seems likely he was the Thomas, son of John and Isabel Porteous, who was baptised in Wilton in 1771. Thomas (18th/19th C.) gardener in Hawick. His unnamed child died in 1808. Thomas (1774–1819) son of writer James. He was recorded as a writer on the 1799 and 1801 lists for the Militia ballot in Hawick. He was a 'writer' when he witnessed baptisms for Joseph Peacock and Jean (his sister) in 1799, 1801, 1805, 1806 and 1808. He is probably the Thomas of Hawick recorded in document in Selkirk in 1807 and 1810 and the Hawick writer recorded in letters of 1814, preserved in the Walter Mason Collection. He is still listed as a writer when he died in Hawick. Thomas (d.bef. 1835) resident of Deanburnhaugh, probably a tenant farmer. His father was probably James and his brother John, joiner at Robertson. He was recorded living at Highchesters in 1801. He was Beadle at Robertson Kirk. In 1791 he married Agnes Laidlaw in Hawick, the pair both recorded being from Hawick Parish. In 1812 he secondly married Isabella Scott in Robertson. His children, baptised in Robertson Parish, included: William (b.1791), who emigrated to Bovina, New York; David (b.1795), who also emigrated to Bovina; John (b.1797), who was factor at Traquair; Christina ('Cirsty', b.1799), who moved to Bovina and married James Fletcher from Ettrick; and Berry Shaw (b.1801), named after the local minister, who joined his brothers. He lost an eye to a cow's horn in about 1822. Thomas (b.c.1780) resident of Slaidhills according to the ballot for the Militia in Hawick Parish in 1801. Thomas (b.c.1780) tailor at 'Broadelees' according to the ballot for the Militia in Wilton Parish in 1801. His home was probably Broadlee in the Borthwick valley. Probably the same Thomas was tailor at 'Mains Park' on the 1812 Militia ballot in Robertson Parish. He was probably related to Adam, who was tailor at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot at the same time. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Janet Hume in 1805 and their children, baptised in the East Bank Kirk, included: William (b.1806); James (b.1809); and Janet (b.1811). Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Mary Nichol in 1805 and their children, baptised in the East Bank Kirk, included: Betty (b.1806); Beaty (b.1808); and William (b.1811). Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of London. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825, and hence must have had a local connection. Thomas (b.c.1795) born in Hawick Parish. In 1861 he was miller at Allanbank Mill in Edrom, Berwickshire. He married Elizabeth Best and their children included Thomas, Robert, Eliza and Isabella. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Margaret Nichol and their son Walter was baptised in the East Bank Kirk in 1822. Thomas (18th/19th C.) tailor at 'Parkhouses' (i.e. Packhooses) in Wilton Parish in 1841. His wife was Mary. Thomas (19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. He married Margaret Murray and their son William was baptised in 1829. Thomas (19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Betsy Beattie and their children included: Betsy (b.1841); James Hay (b.1843); and John (b.1845). Thomas (19th C.) agricultural labourer in Hawick Parish. He was living at New Mill in 1851 and 1861. He married Isabella Scott, from Canonbie. Their children, baptised in Hawick Free Kirk, included: Mary (b.1847); Robert (b.1849); Catherine or Christian (b.1850); Isabella (b.1852); Jane (b.1854); Agnes (b.1855/6); William (b.1857/8); and Alexander (b.1861). Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their children included James (b.1635) and Adam (b.1650). Walter (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Isobel Wood in 1689 and their daughter Jean was baptised in 1690. The witnesses were Adam Miller and Andrew Riddell. Walter (17th C.) weaver at Lochburnfoot according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. He could be the Walter, married to Margaret Glendinning, whose children baptised in Hawick Parish included: Isobel (b.1678); Janet (b.1682); and Helen (b.1684). In 1684 the witnesses were John Turnbull and William Paterson. Walter (17th C.) resident at Wester Heap according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. He may be the Walter who witnessed a baptism for Walter Cavers in Mervinslaw in 1697. Walter (17th C.) listed as tenant at Outerside among the 'deficient' on the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. Walter (18th C.) resident at Parkhill in 1743 when his daughter Bessie was baptised in Roberton Parish in 1743. It seems likely he is the Walter who married Margaret Halliday in Roberton in 1735. He is probably the Walter who was at 'Haugh' in 1757 when his daughter Beatrix was baptised in Roberton. Other children born in Roberton who may have been his include William (b.1738), Isabel (b.1741), Margaret (b.1747), James (b.1749) and Mary (b.1754). Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Agnes Laing and their children included James (b.c.1810), who was a mason in Denholm. Walter (b.c.1770s) saddler in Hawick on the ballot list for the Militia in 1799. He was still a saddler on the 1801 ballot for the Militia. Probably the same Walter was recorded as a saddler in Denholm in 1837. He may be the Walter, married to Agnes Laing, whose daughter Agnes was baptised in 1808. Walter (b.c.1770s) hedger at Hummelknowes according to the ballot list for the Militia in Cavers Parish in 1799. Walter (b.1821/2) born in Wilton Parish, he was a wool carder in Galashiels in 1851. His wife was Agnes and their children included Thomas. William (17th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. In 1663 and 1678 he is recorded paying the land tax on £27. He is probably son of Alexander, who owned the same lands in 1643. William (17th/18th C.) married Isobel Allan in Roberton in 1702. Probably the same William was resident of Todshaw when his son William was baptised in Roberton Parish in 1703. William (17th/18th C.) married Isobel Nichol in Cavers in 1703. Some children, baptised in Cavers, who may be his, include John (b.1700), Robert (b.1701), Elizabeth (b.1704), John (b.1706), Alexander (b.1708). William (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. His wife was Agnes and they had an unnamed daughter baptised in 1708. William (17th/18th C.) married Marion Huntly in Hawick in 1711. They are probably the couple 9 with the mother's surname given as Miller) whose daughter Mary was baptised in Hawick in 1715. William (17th/18th C.) married Helen Hart in Hawick in 1711. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1711 he was at Easter Groundstone when his daughter Helen was baptised. He could be the William who married Bessie (or Jean) Murray and had children Agnes (b.1716) and Jean (b.1719) baptised in Wilton. He could be the William who in 1737 witnessed a baptism for Helen (perhaps his daughter) and George Hood. William (17th/18th C.) Hawick resident, who, along with Adam Kerr, was rebuked in 1713 for riding on stilts on the Sabbath 'thereby causing crowds of bairns to follow them'. William (17th/18th C.) resident in Hard Turnbullfoot in 1717, 1720, 1722, 1724 and 1727. His children included: Robert (b.1717); Thomas (b.1720); James (b.1722); Helen (b.1724); and Janet (b.1727). He is probably the William who married Margaret Neil in 1715 or the William who married Janet Wilson in 1716. Other children, baptised in Roberton Parish, may include Marion (b.1719) and Isobel (b.1729). William (17th/18th C.) weaver in Hawick. In 1705 he witnessed a baptism for gardener Thomas Boyd and in 1725 another for tailor Robert Chisholme. He was recorded as 'weaver att ye east end of Hawick' in 1715. In 1719 he witnessed a baptism for James Dickson, the other witness being weaver David (who was surely related). Also in 1719 he servant William Scott got married in Hawick. He married Marion Huntly and their children included: Bessie (b.1712); Mary (b.1715); Janet (b.1718); and David (b.1721). The witnesses in 1712 were Bailie James Scott and merchant Thomas Hardie and in 1715 were weaver John (surely a relative, perhaps a brother) and Bailie James Scott. William (17th/18th C.) Hawick resident who married Anna Hope. Their children included: Robert (b.1711); Margaret (b.1714); Margaret (again, b.1717); and Janet (b.1720). William (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Rachel Nichol and their son Robert was baptised in 1724. William (18th C.) married Jean Frier in Minto Parish in 1731. He was probably father of Helen (b.1740) and William (b.1742), baptised in Minto Parish. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was in Denholm in 1738. His children included: Janet (b.1723);

Margaret (b.1733); Thomas (b.1735); and Charles (b.1738). William (18th C.) married Janet Hobkirk in Cavers in 1732. Their children, baptised in Hawick, included: Helen (b.1743); and James (b.1747). William (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. His children included Robert (b.1740) and Katherine (b.1744). William (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. He married Christian Turnbull and their children included: Isabel (b.1769); Janet (b.1772); and probably Thomas (b.1766), with no mother's name given. William (18th C.) resident at Woodburn in 1772 when his son Walter was baptised in Robertson Parish. He could be the same as the William recorded at Whithope in 1774 when his son George was baptised and at Highchesters in 1781 when his son James was baptised. He could be the William who married Janet Kedie in 1769, the marriage being recorded in both Hawick and Robertson Parishes. Other children were probably Agnes (b.1770), John (b.1776), Thomas (b.1777) and William (b.1779). William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Beatrix Elliot and their daughter Elizabeth was baptised in 1774. William (18th C.) married Peggie Dickson in Hawick in 1784. William (18th C.) married Helen Douglas in Hawick in 1785. William (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Sarah Shiel and their son William was baptised in 1783. William (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was living at Wiltonburn in 1786 and 1789. Perhaps the same William married Betty Watson in 1785 and was living at Threephead in 1795 and 1798; their children probably included Robert (b.1786), Andrew (b.1789), Jane (b.1792), James Hay (b.1795) and Thomas (b.1798). William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Mary Haswell and their daughter 'Catrene' was baptised in 1790. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1794 he married Ann Routledge, who was also from Hawick. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Elizabeth Chisholme and their children included: Isabel (b.1792); Isabel (again, b.1794); and John (b.1796). William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Shielswood, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Bowanhill Roadside, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. William (18th/19th C.) servant at Haggiehaugh in Castleton Parish. In 1797 he was listed among men balloted to serve in the Militia. He was already 'Serving' according to the annotation, with his name appearing again in 1798.

Also in 1798 he was recorded (confusingly) offering himself as substitute for George Wilson of Acreknowe in Kirkton Parish, who had been selected in the second ballot. Later in 1798 he was explicitly reported to 'have joined the Regiment'. In 1799 he was listed among those men whose names had been drawn and was at '(Larieston house) Haggiehaugh'. William (b.c.1770) overseer at a woollen factory, living on Wilton Damside in 1841. He is probably the William living at Roughheugh in 1835, when listed among heads of households on Wilton Parish. He is likely to be the William, spinner at Roughheugh, listed on the ballot for the Militia in 1799; he may have been related to Thomas, who was a spinner at the Sandbed at the same time. He could be the William 'Slubber' whose son died in Hawick in 1824. He could also be the William, spinner, who subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He may be the William who married Margaret Armstrong in Wilton in 1796 or the William who married Margaret Robson in Wilton in 1816. William (b.1780s) carpet-maker in Hawick according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. William (18th/19th C.) married Betty Easton in Wilton in 1804. Their children included: Elizabeth (b.1804); Walter (b.1807); and Jean (b.1809). William (18th/19th C.) member of Hawick Curling Club in 1812. This could be the same man as William the painter. William (b.1782/3) from Holmfirth in Yorkshire, he was a painter in Hawick. He was on the shortlist for Cornet in 1817. He could be the 'Mr. Miller' whose property is marked on Wood's 1824 map at about 69 High Street, giving its name to Miller's Close. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He was listed as a painter and glazier on the High Street in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. In Pigot's 1837 directory he was a painter on the Howegate. In 1841 he was living at the Sandbed with wife Margaret and children James and William. He appears in the Jedburgh Prison register in 1859. He married Margaret, daughter of slater Robert Elliot in 1835, and their children included: William (b.1836); Janet (b.1839); Jane (b.1841); Robert (b.1845); Margaret (b.1850); He may have been the William born to David and Margaret Scott in Hawick in 1782. William (1770s-bef. 1840) wright in Hawick. He was recorded on the 1799 list for the Militia ballot. He married Helen ('Nelly') Buckham, and she died in 1840. Their children, most baptised in the East Bank Kirk, included: John (1805/6-23); James (b.1807), whose death is recorded in 1808; William (b.1808); James (again, b.1810); Robert (b.1813); and Alexander (b.1819). William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Nelly 'Bridston' and their daughter Agnes was baptised in the East Bank Kirk in 1816. It is possible his wife was actually Nelly Buckham. William (1791–1870) eldest son of Thomas, he was probably born at Deanburnhaugh. He was a farm labourer at Milsington and lived at Easter Parkhill and Muselee (where he was tenant farmer for a while). He was ploughman at Milsington according to the 1812 ballot for the Militia in Robertson Parish. In 1819 he married Elizabeth Scott, from Milsington. In 1825 he secondly married Isabel (1802–82), daughter of Michael Dickson and Jane Jardine. The family emigrated to America in 1831, settling in Bovina, New York. Their first 3 children were born in Robertson Parish and the rest in America. Their children were: Thomas (1826–1911); Michael (1828–1915); William (1830–1912); David (b.1832), who died young; Walter (1835–1908); Berry Shaw (1837–1906); Janet (1839–70); and Gilbert Dickson (1843–1931). Photographs of him and his wife exist. William (b.c.1795) agricultural labourer. In 1841 he was living on the Fore Row at Wilton Dean. He married Helen Scott in Robertson in 1819. Their children included: Elizabeth (b.1819), baptised in Cavers; James (b.1822), baptised in Cavers; Andrew (b.1824), baptised in Robertson; Mary (b.1829/30); and Eliza (b.1833/4). William (19th C.) married Isabella Roxburgh in Hawick in 1823. Their children included: James (b.1824); John (b.1825); Walter (b.1831); and William (b.1833). William (19th C.) married Elizabeth Brodie in Robertson in 1825. William (b.c.1800) framework knitter in Hawick. In 1841 he was living on the Back Row, in 1851 on the Kilnpath and in 1861 at 13 Allars Crescent. He married Margaret Elliot and their children included: William (b.1836); Janet (b.1839); Jane (b.1842), who probably died young; Robert (b.1845); and Margaret (b.1850). William (b.c.1810) blacksmith on the Sandbed according to the 1841 census. His wife was Helen and their children included Mary, Thomas, Janet, Margaret and Walter. William (b.c.1795) stockingmaker in Hawick. In 1841 he was living on the Fore Row and in 1851 on the Mid Row. He married Robina Scott in Wilton in 1832; she was originally from Peebles. Their children included Henry, William, Margaret (who married Robert Fraser), James and Thomas. He also had a step-daughter Elizabeth (an illegitimate daughter of his wife with Robert Grierison). His widow and some children were living at 21 Loan in 1861. William (19th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. His wife's name was Helen and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1835. William (b.1809/10) from Barony in Larnark, he was a woollen framework knitter living at 3 Tannage Close in 1861. His wife was Ellen and their children included Andrew, John, James, Mary, George, Agnes and William. William (b.1811/2) tailor on Orrock Place in 1851 and at 21 Howegate in 1861. He was listed as a tailor on 'Teviot square' in Slater's 1852 directory. His wife was Margaret and their children included Margaret, Mary, Sarah, Elizabeth, John and Walter Alexander. William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Inglis and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1837. William (19th C.) married Margaret Espeline in Hawick in 1843. William (b.1831/2) stockingmaker, originally from Dumfries. In 1861 he was living at 15 Loan with his wife Mary, son William and a family of boarders. He may be the William who married Mary Oldham in Hawick in 1852. Probably the same William from Dumfries was a boarder on Ladylaw Place in 1851. William (19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Catherine Jamieson and their children included: Ann (b.1842); James (b.1845); Margaret (b.1848); John (b.1850); and Janet (b.1854). William (19th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He married Margaret Whillans and their son Thomas was baptised in 1848. William (b.1831/1) from Teviothead. In 1861 he was living at Borthwickhead Schoolhouse and working as a 'Teacher of English, reading etc.' William (b.1836/7) 'Millwright Fitter' in Selkirk in 1861. He was born in Hawick, married Christina and their children included John E. and Christina S. William 'Willie' (19th C.) one of 3 men who instigated the Hawick Home Mission in 1872. He was the first President when the Mission was formally founded in the next year. Either he or a later William was leader of the Hawick Home Mission choir for 25 years in the early part of the 20th century. Rev. William Carrick (1858–1915) born in Glasgow, son of Andrew and Margaret Carrick. He was educated at the Church of Scotland Normal School and Glasgow University, and licensed to preach in 1881. He became assistant at St. George's, Paisley and was ordained at Howood Chapel in 1883. He was first Minister of the new Wellington Church in 1886 and first minister of the newly created St. Margaret's Parish in 1896.

He was a guest at the 1890 Colour Bussing. He was translated to Yetholm in 1898. He married Margaret Walker, daughter of Thomas McQueen in 1887, and she died in 1894. He secondly married Johanna, daughter of John Bonthron in 1901. His children included William Bonthron Carrick and John Bonthron (formerly spelled ‘Millar’ and ‘Milner’).

millers (mi-lurz) n. people in charge of corn mills. In Hawick the mill was at the Mill Port, moving to the Mill Path in the late 18th century, and the miller had grazing rights and grew corn at the Miller’s Knowes. Hawick’s millers have included: John Dempster in 1622; William Paterson 1680s; Walter Elliot, at least 1709–1714 Robert Elliot 1720s; James Scott 1750s; Adam Scott in 1784; John Ainslie late 1700s; John Oliver 1820s to 1840s; and John Young Scott mid-1800s.

the Miller’s (thu-mi-lurz) n. the Miller’s Knowes, a hilly area between Weensland Road and the Orchard Road, reached via the iron gate and path off Weensland Road, or from the Braid Road. It is named after the miller of the old Hawick corn mill, who for centuries grew corn and had grazing rights there. The area was made notorious after a man called John Webster committed suicide in the old quarry there in 1748. It has been a public park since 1892, part being purchased from the Duke of Buccleuch in 1920, and the rest gifted in 1930. It is now officially known as Miller’s Knowes Park, and offers spectacular views of the town, and is also used by children for sledding and sliding, as well as dog walkers and others. The Independent Broadcasting Authority leased part of the summit for 60 years for a microwave transmitter in 1962 (used as a relay for the Selkirk transmitter), and a BMX track was constructed in 1985 (but closed in the late 1990s due to continual bad weather). It is also home to a playground, the Millennium Stone and nearby memorial seat (to Frank T. Scott). It was once properly known as ‘Galalaw Knowes’ – ‘Sae lassies braw an’ callants a’ Where better mak’ your vows, Than where the hill o’erlooks the toon – The bonnie Miller’s Knowes’ [WFC].

Miller’s Close (mi-lurz-klōs) n. popular 19th century name for a passageway located at 69 High Street. It was named after someone by the name of Miller, whose property is marked on Wood’s 1824 map. Local historian Robert Murray’s family lived there (also written ‘Millar’s Close’).

the miller’s horse (thu-mi-liurz-hors) n., arch. proverbially cheeky animal – ‘Ee’ve the cheek o’ (or as muckle impetance as) the miller’s horse’ [GW].

the Miller’s Knowes (thu-mi-lurz-nowz) n. full name of the Miller’s – ‘And so it was in Hawick town, Nearby the Miller’s Knowes, We pledged our troth together there, With all a lover’s vows’ [WFC], ‘Some summer day again we’ll gang To wander through the verdant howes, And greet dear Memories amang The gentle, winding Millers Knowes’ [WP].

the Miller’s Knowes Steps (thu-mil-urz-nowz-steps) n. informal name for public staircase connecting Orchard Terrace with the Braid Road, much used by people walking in the Miller’s Knowes or Target Hills areas.

Millfield Plain (mil-feeld-plān) n. land-locked valley near Wooler in Northumberland, between the Tweed and Till rivers, close to the final battle site of Flodden Field. It was once the base of a prehistoric lake, and traditionally associated with King Arthur. It was also the scene of a minor battle in August 1513. Lord Home’s raiding party was ambushed by Sir William Bulmer’s men, resulting in heavy losses for the Scots. This event is also referred to as ‘the Ill Raid’ and was a forerunner for Flodden about a month later. It is also associated with the battle of Homildon Hill and a much earlier Saxon battlefield – ‘...Not all the snow on Millfield Plain Could make those white blades white again!’ [WHO] (the name is probably p-Celtic in origin).

Millholm (mil-hōm) n. place marked as ‘Milholme’ on Sandison’s c.1590 map of the Debateable Land. It appears to be near the modern Hermitage village, and is probably the same place as Millburn. It may be the ‘mylnholme’ where Walter Turnbull is recorded as tenant in 1694 (but is hard to distinguish from Millholm, which is further to the south).

Millholm (mil-hōm-kros) n. former lands in Liddesdale, located near the Millholm Cross, south of Newcastleton. In 1541 it was recorded as ‘Mylneholme’ and in the hands of the Laird of Mangerton. In 1622 there is a record that 20 sheep were stolen from Walter Scott there. In 1632 the farm here, along with Ettleton, was possessed by David Goldie and James Mitchelson. Andrew Wilson was there in 1685. It is described in a survey carried out for the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1718, when it consisted of 1553 acres, and was bounded by Gillfoot, the Liddel Water, Side, Tarras, Copshaw Park and Blackburn. The farmhouse is in approximately the modern place, with cornland between it and the river, and adjacent small fields belonging to Greens and Mangerton farms. A symbol near the farmhouse could be meant to indicate the Millholm Cross, but there is no sign of Ettleton Cemetery on the 1718 map. The farmer there in the mid-18th century was Walter Scott. Thomas Aitchison was a shoemaker there in 1797. James Ingles was tenant in the early 19th century. The name may simply be the 'home mill' for the local laird (also called 'Milnholm'; it is 'Mylneholme' in 1622, 'Mylneholmes' in 1632, 'Mylne-holm' in 1685 and 'Milneholme' in 1718; it is marked on Stobie's 1770 map).

the Millholm Cross (thu-mil-hōm-kros) n. ancient carved cross just south of Newcastleton, on the west side of the Canonbie road. It probably commemorates Alexander Armstrong, Laird of Mangerton, who was killed in 1320 and his body laid here while his clansmen rested on their way to Ettleton churchyard. The original part of the cross is about 10 feet high, including the base, and it has a modern top. The shaft has the letters 'MA' and 'AA', together with a carved sword. The Armstrong Clan Trust erected a nearby plaque. It is said to have been used as a local meeting place, where transactions were carried out, servants hitred and feuds settled. Probably the farm here is the 'Mylneholme', with a value of 15 shillings, recorded on a rental roll of c.1376 – 'The Cross at Millholm, which perpetuates the name Of gallant Lord Mangerton, peerless in fame' [DA] (also called 'Milnholm Cross').

Millhoose (mil-hoos) n. former lands in Liddesdale, recorded in a rental roll c.1376. They are listed there as 'Milnehouse', with a value of 5 shillings and 9 pence. In a rental roll of 1541 they are worth 15 shillings and leased to Thomas Armstrong, probably of Mangerton (it is 'Mylhous' in 1541).

Mill Hoose (mil-hoos) n. 2-storey house attached to the former Corn Mill on the Mill Path, also known as 'Hawick Mill Hoose' or 'the Mill Hoose'. It was rebuilt 1862–3. It has a central pilastered door-piece and a simple elegance of construction. It is a grade C listed building.

Milligan (mi-lee-gin) n. Charles (19th/20th C.) son of William, and nephew of Provost Robert. He married Jane Beattie, whose mother was a Nichol of Craik and also related to Provost Renwick's grandmother. He learned the upholstery trade from his uncle and started his own business. This was carried on as Milligan Brothers by his sons Robert and John. Christopher 'Kit' (??–??) wrote 'Riccarton Junction: memories of my life in this railway village' (1994). He was born in the village and lived there until the railway closed, when he moved to Hawick. At the site of the Riccarton Junction North signal box an information panel has been erected in his memory. George (1775–1855) from Watten in Caithness, he was a joiner, cabinet-maker and undertaker in Hawick. He was father of Provost Robert, William (farmer in Denholm) and Sophia (who married Andrew Park and emigrated to America in 1857). He was an elder in the Relief Kirk. He was listed as a joiner and cabinet-maker on Moncrieff's Close (an old name for Tannage Close) in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was living on Tannage Close in 1841 and in 1851 he was a lodger with clockmaker John Graham. He married Jane Paterson, sister of 'Pawkie Paiterson', who died in 1839, aged 54 (she had previously had a child with Frenchman M. Cabourne). He died suddenly stepping into a train carriage at Hawick station the morning after the Winter Fair. Together with his son Robert, the pair ran the family cabinet-maker's for about 75 years. George Halberdier 1985–96. He worked for the Council and was officially a 'District Officer'. He was thus the main Halberdier, who would organise the venues, etc., as well as reading the Proclamation and devolving the letter to the Cornet Elect. John (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1612 as 'Johnne Amulliekyn, in Cruikis'. Along with Ninian Armstrong (son of Thomas) he was found guilty of helping John, Lord Maxwell, who was on the run for murder and treason. His farm was near Langholm, possibly the Crooks next to Westerkirk. He was sentenced to be hanged in Edinburgh. Rev. Robert (1836–88) son of Dumfries hosiery manufacturer William, he studied at Edinburgh University and New College. He was ordained as 2nd minister of Wolfelee Free Kirk in 1863. He was quite evangelical in style, had a large bible class and introduced hymn singing to Wolfelee. He and his family contributed significantly to the fund for the new church building. It is said that he also laboured at the Free Church mission in Hawick and made designs for the new free Church in Newcastleton. He left Wolfelee in 1871 for the Chalmers Territorial Church in Dundee. He married Mary Spiers from Glasgow in 1863, and she died in 1906. Their children were: Jane (b.1865), born in Hobkirk, married Robert White in Lancashire; Amelia Baxter (b.1867), born in Hockirk, married Carl Ludwig Arter from Zurich and settled in Tehran; Phebe (b.1869), born in Hobkirk, married Rev. Frederick Arthur Taylor; and William (b.1874), born in Dundee, who was either a businessman in Tehran or moved to Alberta, Canada. He drowned while bathing at Montrose while on holiday with his family, on the eve of celebrating 25 years in the ministry. Robert (1821–1892) born on Common Riding morning, his mother was a sister of 'Pawkie' Paterson. He became a cabinet-maker and undertaker and was well-known for his repartee as an auctioneer. In 1851 he was listed as a joiner on Moncrieff's Close. His later business premises were at 80 High Street, where the Liberal Club was later built. The house was set back and the yard in front was used for furniture sales. He was a Councillor for over 30 years, mainly for South High Street Ward, becoming a Magistrate (possibly for longer than anyone else), then acting-Provost in 1875, beating Edward Wilson by a single vote in the 1884 Council election and being Provost 1887–90. He was sometimes referred to as 'the Bailie'. As a Councillor he was known to be blunt and outspoken. He had virtually no formal education and it is said that he rather gloried in this fact. Wilton Lodge Park was acquired during his Provostship. He was a keen Common Riding supporter, being Chairman of the Race Committee and he was the Provost referred to in J.E.D. Murray's 'Nicht Afore the Morn'. He was a School Board member, Parochial Board member, keen bowler (being on the founding committee of Hawick Bowling Club), Vice-President of the Curling Club, and a Conservative, although little involved in party politics. He was presented with a gold watch on his retirement as Provost. He married Margaret Hunter, daughter of the landlord of the Black Bull, and she died in 1856, aged 34. Their children were George and Robert, who died in infancy, Barbara Scott, Margaret, Mary (who married John Henderson) and Jane (who married John Little). He secondly married Margaret, daughter of John Smith, and she died in 1897, aged 70. Their children were Robert (also an auctioneer) and Janet. He is buried in the Wellogate, and his portrait hangs in the Town Hall (painted by Frank Wood in 1890, and said to have perhaps been damaged by a halberd!). Robert (1851/2–1931) son of William and nephew of Provost Robert. He became a cycle and motor mechanic and was known as a cheerful individual, who had great technical and creative skill, but less business acumen. He built a 1½ horse power motor quadrocycle, which was essentially an early motor car. He also built many other mechanical devices, and was a keen early promoter of pneumatic tyres. He went into partnership with William Laidlaw and later with Alexander Bell, the firm Milligan & Bell being successful through most of the 20th century. Robert (1865–1906) son of Provost Robert and Margaret Smith. He carried on the auctioneering business after his father's death, but it gradually petered out. He married Grace Bilby and their son Robert fought in WWI in the Canadian forces. Sandy born and raised in Denholm, he worked in textile engineering design, but in 1993 became a full-time artist. He specialises in Border landscapes using pastels. William (16th C.) Vicar of Kirkton Parish. He is recorded in 1545 as 'Amuligane'. Nothing else appears to be known about him. William (19th C.) brother of Provost Robert, he was a farmer near Denholm. He married a Scott of Milsington and his children included: Charles, who became an upholsterer; and Robert, a bicycle and motor engineer (also written 'Millican').

Milligan's Peth (mi-lee-ginz-peth) n. name sometimes used in the late 19th century for Brougham Place, after the cabinet-making business of Robert Milligan, which was at the foot of the street.

Millingwud Fell (mi-lin-wud-fel) n. Millingwood Fell, also formerly known as Millenwood Fell, a high hill in the west of Castleton Parish, near the source of the Hermitage Water. It reaches a height of 517m, with the somewhat higher Scawd Bank just to the south (it appears to be 'Millin Wod Fell' on the 1718 Buccleuch survey, is 'Mellenwood Fell' on Stobie's 1770 map and is 'Millenwood-fell' in the New Statistical Account).

millman (mil-mun) n. occupation in the knitwear industry, someone who mills (or washes) garments after they have been knitted and joined together. This was generally carried out by a highly experienced worker, who could tell by the feel whether a garment had been fully milled.

Millmoor (mil-moor) n. lands in Liddesdale once attached to the estate of Mangerton. In a c.1376 rental roll they are listed as 'Milnmore' with a value of 2 shillings.

Millpeth see the Mill Peth

the Mill Peth (thū-mil-peth) n. Mill Path, a short street running from Slitrig Crescent to Wellogate Brae, named after Hawick Corn Mill and formerly known as Kiln Path. The original houses were constructed in 1849 and the county police station was once on this street. The lower part, including the old Salvation Army Hall, was demolished in 1968 to make way for new housing for elderly people. The Song Singing ceremony takes place here on the Friday of the Common Riding. The Cornet and mounted supporters are led up the Cross Wynd by the Drums and Fifes and at the top of the Mill Path the Cornet dismounts, thanking the riders as they pass. Then the Principles, Provost and Bailies walk down to the foot of the street for the Proclamation and the Song Singing. This takes place on a specially constructed platform on the north side (corner with Allars Crescent), which replaced the former site, the roof of Tibbie the Fiddler's Cottage on the opposite side of the street. No 3 and the Corn Mill are listed buildings – ‘Owre the Mill Path swells the chorus, Flag and ribbons waving o'er us’ [RK].

Millport see Mill Port

Mill Pool (mil-pool) n. pool in the Teviot near Lanton Mill. The weir there was called ‘Lanton Cauld’.

Mill Port (mil-pōr') n. short piece of road along the side of the Slitrig, entered by steps opposite the Tower. It was originally the site of a gateway near the old Corn Mill, which was partly washed away in the flood of 1767 and the remains demolished. The ‘undermost house of the Miln Port’ was also carried away in the flood. The steps down from the High Street date at least from the early 19th century. It once contained a number of poor lodging-houses, being the site of a murder (resulting in Hawick's last hanging) in 1814. A thatched row of tenements, one with an outside staircase, was demolished in the 1860s (it is ‘milneport’ in 1708).

Millport Toor (mil-pōr'-toor) n. former building on Mill Port. It may be the tower in Hawick ‘between the bridges’ owned by the Scotts of Whitchesters in the early 16th century. This may be the same place once called the Lieutenant's Tower and referred to as ‘the Peill’ in 1656. In a description of the great flood of 1767 it was said that the ‘old Milnport Tower is undermined and the walls rent’. It was probably demolished after that. There is a legend that it was connected by an underground passage to Drumlanrig's Tower.

Millrig-quarter (mill-rig-kwar-tur) n. former name for lands in Belses. They were included among lands served to Sir Thomas Ker of Cavers Carre in 1678, after the death of his son Andrew, and in 1684 when inherited by Sir Thomas' nephew John. In 1684 it was described as 7 husbandlands of land (it is listed as ‘Mylnrigquarter’ in 1678 and ‘Milnerig quarter’ in 1684).

Millrig Sike (mil-rig-sik) n. former name for lands in Belses, described in 1684 as 3 husbandlands in Belses ‘cum rivola vocata the Milnerig Sike’. The lands were presumably by a small stream or perhaps the mill lade.

mill-rynd (mil-rīnd) n., arch. the iron structure supporting the upper stone in a corn mill, a coin with an impression like the image of such – ‘...being £11 money of this realme thereintil, being three 4 merk peices coneyst (i.e. coined) with the milne rynd ...’ [BR1642].

mills (milz) n., pl. corn mills, i.e. buildings used for grinding grains into flour or meal, formerly crucial parts of the feudal structure, with each barony having its own mill where the tenant farmers had to have their produce ground for a fee. These reached their peak probably in the 17th century, and then began to disappear, although 10 local ones are still listed in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. Eventually some of them were converted into textile mills. They were almost always water powered, although in earlier times they would have been hand-mills, and animal-driven mills also existed. The following were probably all local mills: Hawick Mill; Allanhaugh Mill; Ancrum Mill; Appotside Mill; Ashkirk Mill; Bedrule Mill; Belses Mill; Boosmill (on Ale); Borthaugh Mill; Buccleuch Mill; Burnfit Mill; Cauld Mill; Chisholme Mill; Cogsmill; Craik Mill; Crawhill Mill; Dean Mill; Denum Mill; Dodburn Mill; Doveshaugh Mill; Falnash Mill; Hallrule Mill; Hartshaugh Mill; Harwood Mill; Hassendean Mill; Heidshaw Mill; Highchesters Mill; Hobsburn Mill; Howcleuch Mill; Hummelknowe Mill; Larriston Mill; Lilliesleaf Mill; Midlem Mill; Minto Mill; Newmill on Teviot; Newmill on Slitrig; Newton Mill (Bedrule); Phillhope Mill; Raesknowe Mill; Riccarton Mill; Riddell Mill; Roughheugh/Langlands/Wulton Mill; Ruletownhead Mill; Scaw Mill/Timberside Mill; Soothdean Mill; Spittal Mill; Synton Mill; Trow Mill; Weensland Mill; Wester Mill (Wilton); Whitehaugh Mill (Liddesdale); Whithope Mill (Borthwick); Winnington Mill; and Woollee Mill (Rule). There were also small mills on some farms, powered by water from ponds. In Rulewater, for example, these were at Abbotrule, Bedrule, Billerwell, Cleuchhead, Doorpool, Easter Fodderlee, Gatehousecote, Greenriver, Hallrule, Hawthornside, Mackside, Midburn, Ruletownhead, Towno-Rule, Tythehouse, Wester Fodderlee and West-erhouses.

Mills (milz) n. George (b.1812/3) from Edinburgh, he was a coach painter living on the Back Row in 1851. His wife was Ann and their children included Jane, Margaret, James and David.

Henry (18th C.) listed as postillion at Cavers in 1791, when he was working for George Douglas. He could be related to the butler John 'Mill', who was working at Cavers a few years earlier.

James (19th C.) hind at Midshiels. He is listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835 and 1840. Robert (18th/19th C.) stocking-maker recorded in Hawick in 1797 on the list of men on the ballot to serve in the Militia.

Mill Shot (mil-sho') n. former name for lands near Newton in Bedrule Parish, recorded in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. It is listed as 'Colver Field, or Mill Shot'.

Millside (mil-sīd) n. former name for a place near Hawick. John Cook was living there in 1767. It is unclear where this might have been, but perhaps an alternative name for the Mill Path.

mill-stane (mil-stān) n., arch. a mill-stone – '...it wer better for him that ane milstane wer lunk about his neck' [HSR].

Millstane Edge (mil-stān-ej) n. Millstone Edge, hill roughly between Linhope farm and Cauldcleuch Head, to the north of Tudhope Hill. It reaches a height of 567 m.

Millstane Edge (mil-stān-ej) n. Millstone Edge, hill in southern Roxburghshire, lying on the border with Dumfriesshire, north-west of Newcastleton, just south of Roan Fell. It reaches a height of 561 m and has a triangulation pillar on another slight summit to the south. There are many cairns in the area. The hill got its name from the quarry on the eastern side, where blanks for millstones were cut, one good discarded example being visible there today (there is a well-known place of the same name in the Derbyshire Peak District).

Millstane Sike (mil-stān-sīk) n. small stream in Southdean Parish on the right side of the A6088 just before Lethem. It flows into the Carter Burn. The reason for the name is unknown. But there are several quarry holes on both sides of the stream, which have been used to excavate the outcrops of sandstone found here.

mill-steep (mil-steep) n., arch. a lever fixed to the machinery of a corn-mill, by which the millstones may be moved relative to each other (noted by J. Jamieson).

mill-yins (mil-yinz) n., pl. factory workers – 'The mills war skailin an the mill-yins war toavin hyimm' [ECS].

Milma (mil-ma) n. alternative name of the lands held by William Scott in Lees in the 16th century, and later by the Scotts of Lees and Burnhead. The 1788 county valuation and the Land Tax Rolls of 1811 lists 'Mowmaw, or Millmae, commonly called Lees', valued at £52 (the name is probably related to 'Wester and East Moormaw', an old name for West and East Lees; see also Moormaw).

Milmoe (mil-mō) n. Hugh Joseph (1819/20–85) coming from Ireland, he was a pawn-broker at 2 Orrock Place. He was immortalized in the verse of the song 'Kinly Stick'. He was in Hawick at least as early as 1871, when he had an advertisement in the Hawick Advertiser. He died at 5 Baker Street, where his brother Patrick died and 1886 and his sister Bridget in 1899. There is a family with similar Christian names in County Sligo.

Milmoe's (mil-mōz) n. former pawnshop in the Sandbed, in around the 1860s to 80s remembered in the song 'Kinly Stick' – '...Streicht to the pawnshop that's kept by Milmoe' [WE].

miln (miln) n., arch. a mill, usually for grinding corn, and typically water-powered. As part of the feudal system every barony or estate would have at least one mill, with the tenants kept in a system of multure, i.e. they were obliged to have their corn and other grains ground there, and would pay part of the grains as a tax. Burghs and abbeys would have their own separate mills. Hawick is known to have had one since at least 1412 – 'Heir lyis ane honest man, Johnne Deanis, qvha vas tenant kyndlie of Havik Miln' (from Old English, surviving longer in place names than in speech).

Milne (miln) n. Alexander 'Wat' (16th C.) tenant of Sir Walter Scott of Howpasley in the lands of Outersideig in 1569. Sir Walter acted as cautioner for his tenants at a meeting in Hawick, assuring that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. His surname is recorded as 'Mylne'.

Henry 'Henry the Hadda Man' (19th C.) fishmonger at 5 High Street.

Milne-Home (miln-hewm) n. John Hepburn (1876–1963) factor for the Buccleuch estates from about 1920. He married Mary Elliot.

miln-steed (miln-steed) n., arch. a mill stead, piece of land suitable for a mill – ‘It is two reasonable myle Between the miln-steed and the kirk-style’ [BR1688].

mil-sie (mil-see) n., arch. a milk-sieve – ‘Seilin the milk throwe a milsie’ [ECS] (also written ‘milsie’; noted by E.C. Smith).

Milsington (mil-sing-tin, mul-sin-toon) n. farm along the Borthwick valley, on the right before Deanburnhaugh. It was formerly part of Has-sendean Parish before becoming part of the new Parish of Roberton in 1689/90. At that time, along with Girnwood, it was valued at about £1300. The lands belonged to John de Langlands in the 14th century. His widow Marion Comyn had a charter for these lands, along with the mill and the lands of Outerside in about 1363. The Langlands exchanged the lands for Hepe with Sir Walter Scott in 1451 (in a charter dated at Wilton Kirk). In this charter they are described as lying between the lands of Borthwick on the east, Chisholme on the south, ‘Dualyrig’ and Hoscote on the west and Bellendean on the north. Walter was to pay annually a red rose or six pennies Scots at the feast of St. John the Baptist. In 1453 there was a confirming charter of ‘excambion’ of James of Langlands ‘frank-tenement of the town of Milsaintoun’ for Sir Walter Scott’s frank-tenement of Wester Hepe. The sasine was signed at the ‘chief messuage’ of Milsington on the last day of December in 1453. In 1492 the lands were described as being then waste, but normally valued at 10 merks (and still worth £10 Scots in 1553/4). John Cockburn was recorded there in 1502. From the late 16th century the Milsington Scotts resided there, descended from Thomas, second son of Walter ‘the Hawke’ who accompanied the ‘Brave Buccleuch’ on the rescue of Kinmont Willie. The Milsington line is continued in the Scotts of Girnwood and of Newton. There were 15 ‘communicants’ recorded there in 1650, namely James Purdom, Margaret Nichol, Robert Purdom, Helen Nichol, Thomas Brown, Bessie Inglis, Walter Scott, Adam Robson, Margaret Greenshields, Helen Rae, John Rae, Patrick Thomson, Thomas Robson, William Robson and Margaret Turnbull. It was listed among properties of the Duke of Buccleuch in 1678. The farm was in Wilton Parish until Roberton was formed in 1689/90. William Scott paid the Hearth Tax for 3 hearths in 1694, with John Goodfellow as shepherd at that time. It was surveyed in 1718 along with other Buccleuch properties, when it covered 1259 acres and was bounded by Borthwickbrae, the Borthwick Water, Hoscote, Henwoodie common and Bellendean. James Leithead was recorded there in 1717–25, John Dickson in 1720, John Wight in 1725, James Elliot in 1756, Andrew Goodfellow in 1764 and William Scott in 1797. In the 1788 county valuation the lands here, along with Girnwood, were valued at £1305 13s 4d. William Miller was a ploughman there in 1812. From 1831 Milsington was tenanted by Charles Scott, cousin of Sir Walter the writer. In 1841 there were about 20 people living around the farm estate, as well as those in the principal farmhouse. The main road through the Borthwick used to pass directly in front of the farmhouse. A side road leaves from near here to join the Teviot valley at Branxholme Bridgend. A massive Roman bronze leg of a man on horseback was found there in 1820, possibly part of the loot from some southern town, and now in the Scottish National Museum; collected with it was a brass base (with an inscribed ‘L’) of what may have been a statue of Victory, perhaps also found at Milsington. There is a local tradition of buried treasure at Pot Syke, which may be where these items were found (first recorded as ‘Milsallistoun’ in 1363, it was ‘Mylsintoun’ in 1451, ‘Milsaintoun’ in 1453, ‘Mylsintoune’ in 1492, ‘melsintoun’ in 1502, ‘Milsyntoun’ in 1553/4, ‘Mylnesingtoun’ in 1574 and 1640, ‘Milsingtoune’ in 1652, ‘Melsington’ in 1684, ‘Milsingtoun’ in 1718, ‘Milsingtoun’ in 1764 and 1771 and ‘Milsintoun’ in 1717; there are many other spelling variants, including ‘Melsingtoun’, etc.; it is ‘Melsingtowne’ on a 1650 parish map and Blaeu’s 1654 map shows it as ‘N. Milsintoun’ and ‘O. Milsintoun’, while Jenner & Hollar’s c. 1644 map and Visscher’s 1689 map of Scotland have it as ‘Milsintoun’ and Adair’s c. 1688 manuscript appears to show ‘Wilsingtoun’; the name probably derives from ‘Mael-suithan’s farm’, where ‘Mæaelsuithan’ or ‘Myslan’ is a personal name introduced by the Norwegians from Ireland).

Milsingtonhaugh (mil-sin-toon-hawch) n. former farmstead near Milsington. It is recorded in 1790 as ‘Milsington Haug’, when John Anderson paid the cart tax there and in 1797, when Robert Oliver was farmer there. Walter Scott was living there in at least 1793–95. John Goodfellow was there in 1812.

Milsington Hill (mil-sing-tin-hil, mul-sin-toon-hil) n. hill just to the west of Milsington farm in the Borthwick valley. It has two peaks, both reaching to 263 m. The western one contains the remains of an earthwork, about 85 m across;

it consists of a bank and ditch, best preserved at the south corner.

Milsingtonshankfit (mil-sin-tin-shawngk-fi) n. former cottage in the Borthwick valley, situated at the beginning of the road to Milsington farmhouse (it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Milsingtonshiel (mil-sin-toon-sheel) n. former farmstead near Milsington. It may be the same place sometimes called 'Whaupshaw'. James Hinton was there in at least 1716–22, James Scott in 1717–23, Walter Henderson in 1726, Walter Scott in 1741 and Thomas Rae in 1762–71. Farm worker John Pringle and family were there in 1841 (it is 'Milsingtonnsheils' in 1716, 'Milsintounsheils' in 1721, 'Milsingtoun Shiel' in 1741 and 'Milsingtounshiel' in 1771).

Milestane Path (mīl-, mil-stān-pawth) n. hill between Ashybank and Honeyburn on the A698, and also the name for a field and wood there. This was presumably once part of the original route between Hawick and Denholm, before the lower route was built for coaches. The oak wood was partly removed when the course of the main road was changed in the late 20th century, but was replanted.

Milton (mil-tin) n. village in Dumfries & Galloway (actually one of several with this name) off the A74 south of Moffat, built on the site of a large Roman fort established around the year 80. There is a possible military road from there to the fort near Aikwood Tower.

Minti (min’-i, min-ti) n. Minto, a village, former estate and parish about 6 miles north-east of Hawick and 1½ miles north of Denholm. Robert Barbour held lands there in the early 14th century. William Gledstains of Minto was recorded in the 1340s. In 1383 it was included in a lists of lands from which rentals were paid to the Ward of Roxburgh Castle; and English document of about that time includes ‘two parts of the barony of Myntehowe and advowson of the church, which were John Turnebole’s’. The village was burned in a raid about 1490. It was burned again by the Earl of Hertford’s men in 1545, including ‘Mynto Crag, Mynto town, Mynto place, Weast Mynto, the Crag End’. Some of the old village can still be made out, but the present one was laid out by William Playfair for the 2nd Earl of Minto in the early 19th century. The move was arranged so that the village could not be directly seen from Minto House. It contains the William Playfair 1830/1 gothic-style church, renovated in 1934, as well as the Thomas Clapperton War Memorial. Nearby is the demolished Minto House, with grounds containing the remains of an old Norman Church with an ancient burial ground, as well as an 18-hole golf course. The estate was owned by the Turnbells from at least 1329, although at least part of the barony was granted to the Stewarts of Jedworth in 1390, and then disputed in the next century. James Langlands appears to have held half the rights to the markets there in 1476. In 1501 William Turnbull had a sasine for 2/3 of the lands, with Alexander Stewart having a sasine for the other 1/3. The half baronies were held by the Turnbells and Stewarts until the early 17th century. John Turnbull of Minto was a significant leader of the Turnbells in the late 16th century. In 1643 the lands owned by Turnbull of Minto were valued at £2006 13s 4d and consisted of ‘Minto, town, mains, mill, kaims, with teinds and pertinents’; there was also £102 of land owned by Turnbull of Tofts and the lands of Craigend and Deanfoot, owned by Gilbert Elliott and valued at £660. In 1678 the estate of the Laird of Minto was valued at £2008 13s 4d. Craigend and Deanfoot were sold to Gilbert Elliot of Craigend in about 1640 and later combined with part of Minto, which continued to pass to Eliotts until sold by Gilbert Elliott in 1687. The rest of the lands passed to the Scotts of Harwood in 1673, then Walter Riddell from Edinburgh in 1676, briefly Thomas Rutherford and eventually the Scotts of Harden in 1691, with Gideon Scott of Highchester having a confirming charter for the Barony in 1695. At this time the village became a Burgh of Barony, and the existing Common is also mentioned. Markets were to be held on Wednesdays and fairs on 14th June and 14th November. The lands were sold to the Elliots in 1703. In 1707 the whole Barony was valued at £2768 13s 4d. In the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls the residents listed were Robert Brown, John Dickson, William Turnbull (smith), James Oliver and (another) William Turnbull. In 1811 the ‘Barony (being the whole of the old Parish) of Minto’ was valued at about £2800; the full Parish at that time was valued at £5163. An ancient bronze axe was found nearby about 1888 and is now in the National Museum of Scotland. A spindle whorl from here is in Hawick Museum. Note that there are now several Mintos elsewhere in the world, all ultimately deriving from this small area (but many via the Earls of Minto). The village also gave rise to a surname – ‘In lines of crystal shine the wandering rills Down the green slopes of Minto’s sun-bright hills’ [JL] (the name probably derives from the Old Welsh for a hill, plus ‘how’ for a hollow, or Old English ‘hoh’, also meaning hill; it is recorded from very early times, with the ‘d’ changing to a ‘t’ by 1150, when it is ‘Munetov’ and 1166, when it is ‘Munethov’; it is thereafter ‘Minthov’, etc., with the middle ‘h’ disappearing by the end of the 14th century; it was formerly often written ‘Mynto’; it is ‘Mynetowe’ in 1296, ‘Myntowe’ in 1335/6, ‘Mintowe’ in 1347, ‘Myn-tow’ in 1359, ‘Myntehowe’ in 1380, ‘Mentov’ in 1383, ‘Myntou’ and ‘Myntow’ in 1390, ‘Mintow’ in c.1400, ‘Myntow’ in 1461, ‘Myntto’ in 1491/2, ‘mynto’ in 1493, ‘Myneto’ in 1501 and ‘Mynto’ in 1508, 1511, 1516, 1528, 1535, 1548, 1553/4 and 1576; ‘Mintotour’, ‘Mintocraig’ and ‘Minto K.’ are marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Minti (min’-i, min-ti) n. (Minto) Andrew ‘Dand’ (16th C.) listed as one of the tenants of Gavin Elliot in Skelfhill and neighbouring farms in a bond of security signed in Hawick in 1569. His name is recorded as ‘Dande Mynto’. He may have been an ancestor of later local Mintos. Andrew (17th/18th C.) merchant in Selkirk. In 1720 he was charged with assault and also with throwing stones at a dog. In 1723 he was recorded in 2 legal cases involving debt and another for an assault. He may be the son of Walter who was charged with assault, threatening to kill someone and breach of the peace (along with his father) in Selkirk in 1719. Andrew (b.1734) 2nd son of George and Agnes Forrest. He was a resident of Southdean Parish, perhaps a mason like his father and brother Archibald. He firstly married Janet Oliver in 1758 and secondly married (in an irregular marriage of some sort) Betty ‘Boal’ (probably Bowie) in 1776. His children included: George (b.1759); John (b.1779); Nelly (b.1781); Nanny (b.1783); Andrew (b.1785); William (b.1788); Betty (b.1790); and Archibald (b.1794), who was baptised in Hobkirk. All except the last were baptised in Southdean Parish. Andrew (b.1785) born in Southdean Parish, son of Andrew and Betty ‘Boal’. He was a farmer at Greenhouse in Lilliesleaf Parish. In 1861 he was ‘Fundholder & Retired Farmer’, living in Lilliesleaf village. In 1817 he married Janet Dalgleish, and she died in 1852. Their children included: Alexander (b.1818); Andrew (b.1820), born in Hawick, who was a cattle dealer; Elizabeth (b.c.1823); and John (b.c.1826). Andrew (1817–1903) son of William, he was born in Hobkirk Parish. He worked for a while as a servant at Weens. In 1861 he was a ploughman, living at Cleughhead Cottages. He was part of the original congregation of Wolfelee Free Kirk in 1849. His wife was Catherine and their children included Janet, Jean, Ann and Margaret. One of his daughters married Mr. Kennedy of the Tower Hotel in Hawick. Archibald (b.1732) son of George and Agnes Forrest, he was baptised in Minto Parish and was a mason in Abbotrule. In 1766 he married Margaret (or Mary) Turnbull. Their children included: Margaret (b.1767); Agnes (b.1769); Nelly (b.1774); George (1776–1860); and Robert (b.1781). In 1767 he was living at Midguard and in 1774 was at Abbotrule. David (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1527 as owner of a tenement in Selkirk. This was near the tenement of Thomas, who was surely related. In 1535 he purchased a tenement from William Ker; Thomas was one of the witnesses and probably a relative. He may be the David who resigned a tenement in 1541 to his younger son John and another tenement in favour of his 2nd son James in 1545. He may be the David ‘elder’ who was involved in a transaction with David, smith, in 1541. He is probably the deceased David whose son John inherited his property in Selkirk in 1542/3. David (15th/16th C.) smith recorded in Selkirk in 1541. He was son and heir of the deceased James. David (17th C.) resident at Doecluch according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. David (17th/18th C.) carrier in Hawick. He is probably the ‘Dauied Mintoe’ recorded in the Hawick Town Book of 1731; he was paid ‘for 3 lod of claye for the well, 5s. 6d. Scots’. He was recorded as a carrier when he witnessed baptisms for Walter Scott in Crumhaugh in 1708, for wright John Pringle in 1709, for wright John Pringle in 1716, and for ‘Tenent in Hawick’ David Wilson in 1721. He married Janet Glendinning and their children included: Margaret (b.1691), who probably married William Riddell in 1714; John (b.1700); Walter (b.1701); Beatrix (b.1703); David (b.1706); Robert (b.1708); and David (again, b.1713). The witnesses in 1700 were Bailie Walter Graham and weaver James Wight, in 1703 were gardener James Falsyde and merchant Thomas Waugh, in 1706 were ‘vintner’ Francis Elliot and weaver Robert Wight, and in 1713 were Bailie (of the Regality) Walter Elliot and ex-Bailie Robert Ruescastle. David (17th/18th C.) recorded in a bond in Selkirk in 1721 with Walter. He is also recorded in Selkirk in 1726, when he was paid for building bridges, renovating the mill dam and other construction work. In 1727 he was paid for working on the school in Selkirk, in 1730 for further wright work, in 1745 for mason work, in 1749 for work on bridges, in 1752 for work on the school and well, in 1753 for work on the Town House and for further work in 1761. David (18th C.) responsible for dealing with (i.e. moving on) crippled beggars for the Hawick Kirk Session in the early-to-mid 1700s. He could be the David, married to Janet Glendinning, whose son Walter was born in 1701. David (18th C.) tenant in Fairnilee Bridgend. In 1763 he represented some residents of Midlem in a case in Selkirk. Perhaps the same David is recorded in a receipt in Selkirk in 1758. David (18th/19th C.) dyker recorded in a document in Selkirk in 1814. William is also mentioned and so presumably related. Francis (17th/18th C.) thatcher in Selkirk, recorded in 1708. Perhaps the same Francis was a wright recorded in Selkirk (along with John) in 1727 and recorded in a receipt in 1732. Francis (18th C.) wright in Selkirk. He was paid in 1762 for supplying timber for the Corn Mill in Selkirk and had a complaint against him in 1774. Gavin (b.1841) born in Wilton Parish, son of William and Rebecca Pow. He was a blacksmith in Ashkirk, later moving to the Carlisle area. In 1861 he was at Blacklee, Hobkirk, working with blacksmith William Pow. In 1866 he married Elizabeth Telfer in Ashkirk Parish. Their children included Margaret (b.1867), William (b.1869), James Simpson (b.1872), Andrew (b.1874), Rebecca (b.c.1880), Elizabeth (b.c.1885) and Charlotte (b.c.1885). George (17th C.) listed on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls for Hassendean Parish. He paid tax for a kiln, as well as a hearth, suggesting he was a tradesman of some sort. Although unclear, he may have been at Burnfoot in Wilton. He could be the George who married Isobel Lorraine in Ashkirk in 1688, and who had a son Thomas (b.1689) baptised in Ashkirk; the witnesses to the baptism were William Minto and Andrew Fletcher. It seems likely he was an ancestor of the George recorded in 1731. George (18th C.) mason in Hassendean, probably a descendant of the earlier George who lived in Hassendean. He was a direct ancestor of the later minister at Lilliesleaf of the same name and also of more than half of the Mintos living in Roxburghshire in the 19th century. In Minto Parish in 1731

he married Agnes (b.1712), daughter of Archibald Forrest of Huntlaw. Their children included: Archibald (b.1732), who was baptised in Minto Parish and was also a mason; Andrew (b.1734), baptised in Ancrum Parish; John (b.1737), who married Margaret Scott in 1764 and may have moved away from the Borders; and twins George and William (b.1740), who may have died in infancy. Their 4 younger children were baptised in Ancrum Parish. George (18th C.) tenant farmer at Langside. In 1752 he married Barbara, daughter of Mark Chisholme and Barbara Bennet. He later lived at Ruletownhead, which had been owned by his in-laws. His children, baptised in Southdean Parish, included: Markie (b.1755), named after her grandfather, who married William Bell of Menslaws; and William (b.1756), who was an officer in the Royal Marines. George (18th C.) married Isabel Sharp in Bedrule Parish in 1782. He is probably different from the George who had children in Southdean Parish (although this is unclear). William (b.1794) and Margaret (b.1796), baptised in Bedrule Parish, were probably his children. George (b.1759) son of Andrew and Janet Oliver. He is probably the George who got married in Southdean Parish in 1787 (perhaps to Mary Moscrop). Probably the same George had the following children baptised in Southdean Parish: Betty (b.1788); Janet (b.1790); and Isabella (b.1792). He may also be the George whose children William (b.1794) and Margaret (b.1796) were baptised in Bedrule Parish. George (1776–1860) son of mason Archibald. He is said to have farmed Abbotrule Glebe. He may be the George, part of whose farm in Southdean Parish was owned by Charles Kerr of Abbotrule, according to the Land Tax Rolls of 1811. He was great-grandfather of Rev. George of Lilliesleaf. In 1803 he married Helen Murray and their children included: Margaret (b.1803); Archibald (b.1806); Agnes (b.1807); James (b.1811); Ellison (b.c.1811); Robert (b.c.1818); Thomas (b.c.1820); and George (b.c.1827). Archibald (b.1806), baptised in Southdean Parish, was probably his son. George (b.c.1780) resident of Limekilnedge according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Hobkirk Parish. He could be the George whose children, baptised in Hobkirk, included Margaret (b.1803), Archibald (b.1805), Agnes (b.1807) and James (b.1811). George (19th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. He married Margaret Armstrong and their children included William (b.1853). Rev. George (1864–1947) from Greenock, he was ordained as minister of Lilliesleaf United Free Kirk in 1897 and remained until 1908. He came from a long line of local Mintos, going back at least to his great-great-great grandfather George, who was a mason in Hassendean. 2 months after arriving in Lilliesleaf he married Eliza, daughter of Ewen Sutherland. Their children were: Marjorie (b.1898); George Walker (b.1899); Ewen Sutherland (b.1902); Archibald Herbert (b.1905); Robert Macfee (b.1908); and Kenneth Ross (b.1910). Helen (b.1793) dealer in small wares on Orrock Place. She was recorded there in 1841 and 1851, when she was a 'Calanderer' (i.e. presser of fabrics). Her daughter Betsy Grieve assisted her. By 1861 she was 'Keeper of a Mangle' on Factory Close. Henry (15th C.) had a sasine for a half merk land in Selkirk in 1454. James (16th C.) recorded as witness to transactions in Selkirk in 1535 and 1539. Probably the same James was son to the deceased Thomas when he purchased 14 of Ladylands in Selkirk in 1536. James (16th C.) 2nd son of David In 1543 he designed 1829 annual John of b. c. 1816 in Selkirk. Thomas, David

C.) baker in Selkirk, recorded in 1620. James (17th C.) resident of Minto Parish who appears in the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Perhaps the same James witnessed a baptism in Ashkirk Parish in 1691 for Andrew Lockie. James (18th/19th C.) servant in Chesterhill in Hobkirk Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. John (15th C.) resident of Minto. In 1493 Walter and Adam Turnbull in Hornshole were able to 'com-pone' for several crimes, including the theft of 16 sheep from him. He was probably related to William who was also 'in mynto' at the same time. John (d.bef. 1502) recorded at the 1502 Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Richard Davidson in Primside was convicted of communing with his son John, who was 'at the horn' for his murder. His name is recorded as 'Johannis Mynto'; it is not stated where he was from, but he could be the same as the resident of Minto. John (16th C.) recorded as 'John Mynto, younger' when he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk in 1543. He may be the same as John 'elder' who is recorded in Selkirk in 1579, 1579/80 and 1581. He is probably the Burgess John who made a financial bond in Selkirk in 1580. John 'younger' is also recorded in 1579, 1580 and 1581, and probably his son, while Janet may have been his daughter. John (17th C.) recorded in 1672 when his 'arable lands and crofts' in Selkirk are mentioned. John (17th C.) resident at Easter Essenside on the Hearth Tax roll in 1694. He witnessed a baptism in 1690 for William Scott and others in 1694 for James Scott and Janet Scott, for William Scott and Margaret Scott and for Andrew Raither. He is probably the John, married to Isobel Sword, whose daughter Margaret was baptised in Ashkirk in 1687. John (17th/18th C.) wright recorded in Selkirk in 1727, along with Francis. They were probably both related to Thomas. Probably the same John was recorded in a receipt in 1731 and was paid for repair work in Selkirk in about 1745 and for making up tables of weights in 1762 and 1767. He signed an admission to the Hammermen's Incorporation in 1758. John (18th C.) recorded as master of the English School in Selkirk in at least 1752-72. Perhaps his widow may have been the 'Bell Minto' who wrote to the Burgh of Selkirk in 1784. John (b.c.1780) mason at Kilnknowe in Hobkirk Parish according to the ballot for the Militia in 1801. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1822 he married Helen Richardson, who was from Hawick. John (18th/19th C.) mason in Hawick. The death of his infant son is recorded in 1829. John (b.c.1816) farm worker in Castleton. In 1841 he was an agricultural labourer at about 29 South Hermitage Street, but by 1851 was shepherd at Broadlie Burnfoot. He married Elizabeth (or 'Betty') Little and their children included Jean (b.c.1835), Elspeth ('Eppy', b.c.1837), William (b.c.1839), Margaret (b.c.1843) and Helen (b.c.1851). John Dagleish (1826-1908) son of Andrew and Jane (or Janet) Dagleish. In the 1850s he was one of 2 executors (along with Dr. Adam Elliot of Goldielands) for arranging the 'Coutard Fund', bequeathed by John and William Dagleish to help the poor of Hobkirk Parish. He may be the John who married Mary Armstrong and had a son Robert Armstrong baptised in Hobkirk in 1852. Mrs. ?? (19th C.) of the East End Toll Bar, an early member of Allars Kirk. Robert (17th C.) resident of Minto Craigend who appears in the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Robert (18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. In 1738 he witnessed a baptism for fellow shoemaker William Riddell. Robert 'My Lord Minto' (d.1776) Hawick resident whose death is recorded with an unusual nickname. He could be the Robert who married Betty (or Agnes) Paterson and had children Janet (b.1736) and Margaret (b.1739). Alternatively he could be the Robert who married Margaret Scott in 1742 and whose children included Agnes (b.1743). Robert (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Baldy and their daughter Martha was baptised in 1743. Robert (b.1781) baptised in Southdean Parish, younger son of Archibald and Margaret Turnbull. He married Isabella Bicket and they had 3 children baptised in Bowden Parish: Janet (b.1805); Archibald (b.1806); and William Bicket (b.1812). He is probably the labourer at 'Ruleburn' on the 1801 Militia ballot in Southdean Parish. Robert (19th C.) son of the farmer of Abbotrule Glebe. He became a ship's steward, voyaging across the Atlantic, but he returned to help on the farm. He married Mary Telfer (daughter of the tenant of Roundabouts), and they lived at Kelso, Whitlee Toll, Dykeraw and Wolfelee Glen. He was a handyman on Wolfelee estate before being appointed gamekeeper and moving into the new lodge there (where he was living in 1861). After retiring he moved to Mackside old Toll Bar. He lived to the age of about 80, as did his wife. Their children were George (b.1852/3), Euphemia (b.1855/6), Ellen or Helen (b.1858/9), Mary and Jessie (who married Robert Tinlin). Roger (12th C.) witness to a charter of Ranulph de Soulis about 1150. He is recorded as 'of Munetov', along with Simon his brother. In 1166 he was 'Roger de Munethov' when he was witness to a grant by King William to Robert de Brus. Thomas (15th C.) tenant of Minto Common. In 1494/5 James Davidson in Raperlaw was charged with several crimes, including stealing a black ox from him. Thomas (15th/16th C.) Burgess of Selkirk. In 1527 he is recorded resigning his tenement of land to his wife Elizabeth Notman, as well as reginging an annual rent of the tenement of David (who was surely a relative). The nearby tenement of David was also mentioned in 1527. In the same year he witnessed a document in Selkirk. He was owner of a rig of land in Selkirk in 1530/1. He is still recorded as owner of a tenement in 1531 and 1534. In 1532 he was 'elder' when he witnessed a sasine in Selkirk and also resigned a tenement to Thomas 'younger' (presumably his son). In 1535 he was one of the 'landmairies' chosen to 'rid the boundis' of Selkirk Common. In 1536 he resigned his tenement in Selkirk to his heir John; David was a witness, and hence probably related. His son and heir John is recorded in about 1541 assigning a yard in Selkirk. Thomas (d.bef. 1539) resident of Selkirk, perhaps son of the earlier Thomas. He is recorded in 1539 when a transaction involving tenants in Ashkirk and Falside was done in his house. Later in 1539 he was deceased when his wife Marion Minto and son James rented part of Ladyland to John Brydon. In 1543 his wife was recorded as Marion Burnet, with his son and heir being John and James another son. Thomas (16th C.) recorded representing someone in a court case in Selkirk in 1561. He is probably the Thomas 'elder' who was a Burgess of Selkirk in 1581 when he had an agreement involving his wife 'Bigie' Murray and son Thomas. He is probably also the Thomas who rig in Selkirk is mentioned in 1581. Thomas (16th C.) probably son of Thomas. He was recorded as 'younger' when he was a witness in Selkirk in 1580 and 1580/1. In 1581 he was warned to appear to receive redemption money at Selkirk Kirk. Also in 1581 he was involved in an agreement with his father Thomas, involving a loan and the transfer of land in Selkirk and another agreement over the purchase of a horse. He is probably the Burgess of Selkirk who witnessed another transaction in 1581. Thomas (17th/18th C.) wright in Selkirk. He is recorded in 1727 when he was paid for mending the Selkirk Tollbooth. Also in 1727, along with William Scott, he received money for 'work at the milns, bridges, mealmarket and house' in Selkirk. Wrights Francis and John are also mentioned in 1727 and surely related. In 1729 he provided a bell for the top of Selkirk Schoolhouse. He was involved in a case for recovering a debt in 1737. In 1741 and 1742 he carried out other 'builder work' and 'smithy work' for the Burgh of Selkirk. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Minto Parish. His children included Janet (b.1726), William (b.1730), Agnes (b.1732), John (b.1734) and Thomas (b.1738). Thomas (19th C.) coach driver who was an early member of Allars Kirk. He is described as a 'chaise driver' in 1829, when one of his children died. Walter (17th C.) resident of Minto Parish who appears in the Hearth Tax records of 1694. He may be related to James, who is also listed. Walter (17th C.) listed at Highchesters on the Hearth Tax records of 1694. He paid tax for 3 hearths, suggesting he was either a significant tenant or a tradesman of some sort. Walter (17th/18th C.) recorded in Selkirk in 1719 when he and his son Andrew were charged with assault. Perhaps the same Walter was recorded in a bond in Selkirk in 1721 with David. William of Minto (15th C.) notary in 1431 for the 'instrument' transferring the lands of Heap between the Langlands' and the Scotts. He is recorded as 'Willelmus de Myntow presbyter Glasguensis diocesis'. William (15th C.) resident of Minto. In 1493 Walter and Adam Turnbull in Hornshole were able to 'compone' for several crimes, including the theft of a cow from him. He was probably related to John who was also 'in mynto' at the same time. William (18th C.) resident of Minto Parish. He married

Minti Bank

Agnes Scott in 1726 and his son William was baptised in 1727. Lt.-Col. William (1756–1827) born at Ruletownhead, son of George and Barbara Chisholme, he was christened in Southdean Parish. He served in the Royal Marine Artillery. Joining as a Lieutenant in 1779, he became Captain in 1796 and Major in 1801. He was wounded 3 separate times, once in 1783 while fighting the French frigate Sybille on board the British Magicienne, and another time in 1801 when in a battalion attached to the Army at Aboukir in Egypt. He later served in the Royal Marines Artillery and retired in 1826. In 1812 he married Grace Little, but they had no children. William (b.1788) born in Southdean Parish, son of Andrew and Betty ‘Boal’. He was a mason living at Forkins in the 1841 to 1861 censuses. In 1815 he married Janet Oliver (from Castleton) and their children included: George (b.1819); Betty (b.1822); Jessy (b.1824); John (b.1827); Helen (b.1829); Archibald (b.1831); Robert (b.1833); Margaret (b.1835); Peter (b.1837); Agnes (b.1840); and James (b.1840). Andrew (b.1817), who worked at Weens and was ploughman at Cleughhead Cottages, was probably also his son. William (b.c.1801) born in Southdean Parish, he was a labourer living at Doorpool in 1841, Birneyknowe in 1851 and Cleughhead Cottages in 1861. He was surely related to the mason of the same name, who was his near neighbour, as well as Andrew, who also lived at Cleughhead. His wife was Mary and their children included Margaret, Agnes, Archibald, James, Robert Robina and Janet. He was already widowed by 1861. He may be the William, son of Agnes (or Nanny), baptised in Southdean Parish in 1802. Another labourer of the same name, son of mason George, died in Lanton in 1865. William (b.1812) born in Castleton, son of William and Margaret Elliot. In 1841 and 1851 he was a labourer living at Borthaugh Cottages. In 1861 he was ‘General Servant Ploughman’, living at Highchester Cottage in Robertson Parish. He married Rebecca Pow and their children included: William (b.1835); Andrew (b.1838); Gavin (b.1841); Mary (b.1843); William Bruce (b.c.1845); George (b.1847); Margaret (b.1850); and James O. (b.1853). William (b.c.1815) born in Southdean Parish, he was a farm labourer. In 1851 he was visiting William Scott, farm servant at Silverbuthall. William (b.1834/5) from Langholm, he was blacksmith at Hewsbridge in Castleton Parish in 1861. He was recorded as resident at Steele Road in 1868. His wife was Jessie. William (19th C.) elder of Newcastleton U.P. Kirk in the latter part of the 19th century. William (19th/20th C.) proprietor of a cab business on Oliver Crescent around 1900. He married Ellen, daughter of James Grieve, tailor at Bonchester Bridge (formerly written ‘Mintoe’ and other variants).

Minti Bank (min’-i-bangk) n. former name for lands in Minto Parish that were part of Deanfoot. It probably corresponds to the place labelled ‘Deanfoot Bank’ on modern maps (it is ‘Minto-bank’ in 1780).

Minti Brae (min’-i-brā) n. name sometimes used for the road north of Denholm leading to Minto, particularly the part across the river. There was a saw mill here in the 19th century.

Minti Cleuchheid (min’-i-klooch-heed) n. Minto Cleuchhead, farmstead recorded in the late 17th and early 18th centuries when it was farmed by the Turnbells. Stepeh Turnbull was there in 1692. The house there was a home of the Earl of Minto’s family in the 20th century and is still a family residence. The ‘Minto Stone’ was moved there in 2013/4 (also written ‘Cleughhead’ etc.).

Minti Cragfit (min’-i-krawg-fi) n. Minto Cragfoot, former name for an area at the foot of the Craggs. A story is told (in the 1820 Edinburgh Magazine and repeated in 1914 in ‘Highways and Byways in the Border’) of a mother from here having her infant swapped for a changeling by the fairies. The minister of Bedrule (Rev. Borland) was called and administered a brew of boiled foxgloves (i.e. digitalis!) to the infant, and locked it in a barn for the night, after which it apparently returned to be ‘as healthy and cheerful as it formerly was’.

Minti Craggs (min’-i-krawgz) n. Minto Craggs, a prominent rocky outcrop overlooking the Teviot valley, just north-east of Minto village. The crags can be seen in a sketch of 1790, before the plantations of the 1st Earl of Minto covered them. They reach 224 m (729 ft) and have Fatlips Castle perched on the steep side, and Barnhills Bed below. Additionally there is some evidence for a fort in the region to the north and north-west of Fatlips; the ramparts were probably built to take advantage of the natural rock outcroppings, and have been partly obliterated by quarrying and planting – ‘On Minto-craggs the moonbeams glint, Where Barnhill hew’d his bed of flint’ [SWS], ‘... athort the fer seide o Teiot’s flooery vale, Mintih Craigs (haappeet an rowed in their leafy maud) brent raise ther skerrs’ [ECS] (also sometimes ‘Craigs’).

Minti Craig see min'-i-krāg n. former fortified house at Minto. 'Mynto Crag' was burned by the Earl of Hertford's men in 1545. In 1550 it is listed as the limit of the half of the Middle Marches to which Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme was appointed Warden. The farm there was known by the same name and owned by the Turnbells in the 17th century. It may be the same as the place called 'Minti Craigend' and was formerly part of the farm of Minto Mill (it is labelled to the east of Minto Kirk, on Gordon's c. 1650 map and Blaeu's 1654 map; it is 'Mynto Crage' in 1550 and 'the Cragie of Mynto' in 1656)

Minti Craigend see min'-i-krāg-end n. former name for a farmstead near Minto Crag, and also called simply Craigend. Note that the lands called 'Minti Craig' were probably adjacent, but distinct. Gilbert and William Johnstone, Simon Leitch, Margaret Ord and Thomas Young were there in 1502. Thomas Porteous leased the lands in 1686. Patrick Bowie, Thomas Brown, William Cunningham, John Haliburton, Robert Minto, Walter Renwick, John Stavert, Thomas Wilkie and Robert Young were there in 1694

Minti Craigs see Minti Crag

Minti East Ludge (min'-i-eest-luj) n. former lodge house for Minto estate, situated to the south of Minto Crag.

Minti Gairdens (min'-i-gār-dinz) n. road in Denholm off the Canongate, with private housing built in the 1970s.

Minti Glen (min'-i-glen) n. narrow valley around a stream passing from Minto to the Teviot, and also the name of a farm there. The glen was once laid out with walks, as part of the Minto estate and contained many planted trees, including some of the first larches to be imported into Scotland. The small lake near its head was artificially created in 1735 as part of the landscaping for Minto House.

Minti Golf Club (min'-i-gōlf-klub) n. golf club that runs a course near Minto village, established in 1928. It is the closest course other than the Vertish and is 5,393 yards, par 69.

Minti Hills (min'-i-hilz) n. Minto Hills, better known as the the Mintis, which are easily seen from points around Hawick. The southern peak reaches a height of 276 m (905 ft), with a triangulation pillar on top, while the northern hill is 253 m (837 ft) and topped by a cairn. This was also the name of a farm, which is recorded in 1779 being valued at £365 2d. In the Land Tax Rolls of about 1811 it was owned by Lord Minto and liferented by the late Lord Westhall –

'While the Minto Hills in their verdure seen Seem reflecting the light frae their mantle green' [TC], 'Now, the 'ern-horse' rins roond ahint the Mintih Hills ...' [ECS] (the word 'Minto' probably derives from the Old Welsh for hill, 'mynydd' together with the Old English for hill, 'hoh', and hence 'Minto Hills' means the same thing thrice!).

Minti Hoose (min'-i-hoos) n. Minto House, former seat of the Elliots of Minto for 2 centuries. Existing from the 16th century, the house was charged for having 8 hearths in 1694, and 46 windows in 1748. It was substantially remodelled 1738–43 to a V-plan by William Adam, and essentially completed in 1809–14 by Archibald Elliot (from Ancrum). The 'Lands round Minto House' were valued at £72 17s 6d in 1788 and in 1811 (with the garden and nursery, and several other pieces of land listed separately). The house was altered again in 1837 by William Playfair and terraced gardens were landscaped by Sir Robert Lorimer in the period 1894–1906. In the early 19th century the village was moved so that it could not be seen from the windows of the mansion; the exact choice of location for the house has been considered puzzling, and may have been related to this. It was 4 storeys in height and the top floor contained a sort of museum, showing artefacts related to the family. A watercolour sketch of the house exists from 1792. After being abandoned by the Elliot family, the house was used in the War effort, then rented to serve as the location of a private girl's school, Craigmount School from 1952 until 1962. The school then purchased the house, but went into liquidation in 1966 and the house became derelict. In 1972 Viscount Melgund (later Earl of Minto) outbid another purchaser and immediately applied for permission to demolish this listed building, which was finally given by the County Council. It was partially demolished in 1973, becoming a roofless shell, and there followed lengthy debate about its fate. There was a plan in 1991 to dismantle the remaining walls and ship them to Japan, stone by stone, although costs proved prohibitive. Demolition re-started in 1992, including burning of internal timbers, despite being relisted category 'A', and there is now little left. This episode is sometimes referred to as the 'Minto Debacle', and influenced subsequent policies on preserving historical buildings in Scotland. The grounds contain the remains of a Norman church and burial enclosure, as well as the golf course. There were other buildings associated with the mansion and school,

Minti Kames (min'-i-kāmz) n. Minto Kames, farm just north of the Minto Hills, adjacent to the old railway line. It is probably the 'Place of Camys' referred to in 1502, when Peter Turnbull and other Turnbull outlaws were accused of stealing oxen, cows, horses and mares from John Grahamslaw there. It may also be the 'camys' where in the same year 2 Croziers were convicted of stealing sheep from James Dalgleish. John Young 'in the Cames' in Minto Parish was hanged for murder in 1580. 'Dand' Davidson in 'Kames' is recorded in 1580/1 and 1595. David (perhaps an error for 'Dand') Davidson 'of the Kaimes' was recorded in 1601 when he was maimed in Jedburgh in a fight than was part of the feud between the Turnbells of the Minto area and the Kers. 'Kaimes and Minto hills' were owned by Scott of Harden and farmed by William Mather in the late 17th century. William Douglas was 'late tenant' in 1743. In 1779 the lands were part of the Minto estate, valued at £219 2d and liferented by Sir John Dalrymple. The farm was owned by Lord Minto according to the 1811 Land Tax Roll. John Thorburn was farmer there in 1797 when he had 12 horses. Residents there in 1799 included William Jeffrey, Thomas Turnbull, William Oliver and Walter Stot. David Lindsay was a labourer there in 1801. John Turnbull was farmer in 1841 and David Brockie in 1861. Crop marks visible from the air in a field to the north-west may be old boundaries and rig lines. There is a bridge to the farm, over the former railway line, another over the line near Kames North Loch, and one more for a track to the south. To the north-west of Kames South Loch is a field with signs of an ancient enclosure (it is 'Kamys' in 1576, 'the Cames' in 1595, 'the Kamis' in 1601 and 'Kaimes' in 1811; probably the same place is marked 'Keems' and 'Kenmer' on Blaeu's 1654 maps, and although not exactly in the right location this appears to be a transcription error from Blaeu's 1590s manuscript that shows 'M. Keams.'; it is written 'Kaines' on the 1718 Buccleuch survey; see also Kames Moss).

Minti Kirk (min'-i-kirk) n. Minto Parish Church, the present one replacing a much earlier building, dating back to at least 1275. This is when the Rectory is listed on Bagimont's Roll, with a value of 4s. 4d. The remains of this Norman Church, on the grounds of the Minto estate, contain a burial enclosure with some ancient stones and a set of iron neck-rings set in the doorway. There are many gravestones from the 17th and 18th centuries, and part of a child's stone coffin, probably from the 13th or 14th century. 'Serlo' was parson there when he witnessed a grant by daughter of the Baron of Minto in about the period 1230–60. William Woodburn may have been a Parson there who signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. The church was mentioned in ratifications of other churches being connected to Melrose Abbey in 1315. There is a curious charter of Edward III in 1374, which states that the church was then in the diocese of Lincoln. The old church was demolished in 1831, and it is said that at that time a collection of about 400 small silver coins (from the 13th and 14th century) were discovered. The current Gothic-style church was constructed 1830–31 by William Playfair, and built on the road through the village. When built, there was a private gallery for the family of the Earl of Minto. It has a square tower, contains an organ presented by the Countess of Minto in 1880 and was renovated in 1934. The standard of the Blues and Royals Household Cavalry Regiment was laid there in 2004 in memory of Alexander Tweedie, the first Borderer to be killed in the Iraq conflict. Nearby is the Thomas Clapperton War Memorial. The Manse was built at the same time in a Tuscan villa style, and later called Melgund Glen (an earlier Manse was taxed for 18 windows in 1748). When the new church was built the old churchyard was converted into a garden on the Minto estate, much admired in the 19th century. The church was linked with Ancrum 1968–76 and then with Denholm and Bedrule in 1976. In 2003 it was linked, along with Denholm and Bedrule, into a wider area called Ruberslaw, which was then extended to include Hobkirk and Southdean. The oldest surviving communion token is a large lead oblong shape, bearing the letters 'M.K.' and probably from the 17th century. In 1838 the minister describes 2 artefacts founds nearby, which may date to the period of monastic connection: a large silver hoop, inscribed 'IHESUS NA' (possibly Jesus of Nazareth) and cross shapes; and an ancient copper seal inscribed 'S ADEN PASTOREL', along with a primitive lamb. A roll of the ministry is: Serlo, mid-13th C.; William Woodburn, 1296; John Blackadder, Rector in 1463; Patrick Mason, Rector in 1483; George Panter, Rector from 1512; Walter Stewart, Rector at least 1542–44; John Turnbull, Clerk 1559; David Turnbull, 1569; William McGowen, Parson 1574–76 (and perhaps to 1585); Edward Dickson, Reader

Minti Manse

1576–78; Robert Hamilton, Reader 1579; Patrick Bishop 1589–c.90; John Mather 1601–02; James Johnstone 1607–08; Adam Scott 1608–12; Samuel Cockburn 1609–c.24; William Wishart, assistant 1613–18; William Maxwell 1625–51; James Ainslie 1652–62; Francis Scott 1664–78; James Kirkwood 1679–81; William Wishart 1682–90; James Ainslie 1690–1702; Walter Ainslie 1698–1700; John Ritchie 1703–44; George Kay, assistant 1741–43; George Bruce 1745–66; Thomas Somerville 1767–73; William Burn 1774–1826; David Aitken 1827–64; J.P. Macmorland 1865–93; Alexander Galloway 1878–1926; George O. Mackenzie 1927–35; John Pollock 1936–56; Ian B. MacCalman 1956–67; Peter B. Gunn 1968–76; James F. Falconer 1976–77; John T. Stuart 1978–84; Moira Herkes 1985–88; Thomas Preston 1989–92.

Minti Manse (min'-i-mawns) n. former manse for the Parish of Minto. The Manse was taxed for having 5 hearths in 1694 and 18 windows in 1748. A new site for the Manse was selected in 1772 and the building erected in 1773 for the incoming minister, Rev. William Burn. Lady Minto referred to it as a 'long, low, ugly building, which it was necessary to conceal as much as possible', and hence it was surrounded by trees. A new Manse was built 1827–9 in a Tuscan villa style, at the same time as other improvements were made to the estate; this was later known as Melgund Glen. The older building was pulled down 1830/1.

Minti Mill (min'-i-mil) n. former farm near Minto, site of the local corn mill. William Brown was tenant there in 1684. This was an earlier name for lands that were included in 1779 along with Craigend in the part of Minto liferented to Sir John Stewart of Allanshaws. It is possible that this was essentially the same location as the earlier farm of Minto Mill. The 1811 Land Tax Rolls lists 'Mill Banks', 'Mill Haugh' and related lands lying near to Craigend.

Minti Muir Parks (min'-i-mewr-pawrks) n. former name for a set of lands in Minto Parish. In 1779 they were liferented to Sir John Dalrymple when valued at £127 15s 1d. They were listed separately from Minto Muir and described as 'four inclosures' bounded by the farm of Minto Hills, the road from Hassendean to Troneyhill, the road from Lilliesleaf to Jedburgh, the lands of Crowsmoss and Walrigpark, the road from Hawick to St. Boswell's, the farm of Newlands and the lands of Hassendean. In 1811 the lands were owned by Lord Minto.

Minti North Lodge (min'-i-north-luj) n. former lodge house for Minto estate, situated at a turn in the road, between Hillend and Standhill. The adjacent plantation is called the North Lodge Strip. One roofed building, an unroofed building and an enclosure are marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map.

Minti Pairish (min'-i-pā-reesh) n. small parish of Minto, consisting of the villages of Minto and Hassendean and adjacent areas, being bordered by Lilliesleaf, Ancrum, Bedrule, Cavers and Wilton Parishes and part of Selkirkshire. It once coincided with the boundaries of the Barony of Minto, but later included a large part of the suppressed parish of Hassendean. The topography is dominated by the Minto Hills and Minto Craggs. It was a Rectory within the Diocese of Glasgow, taxed at 50s 4d in 1275 and £15 11s 1d (along with Kirkmahoe) in 1376. In 1643 the lands were valued at £2768 13s 4d and there were only 5 owners: John Turnbull, William Turnbull and Elizabeth Elliot for Minto; Turnbull of Tofts; and Gilbert Elliot for Craigend and Deanfoot. In 1649 the land and crops of the Parish were valued at about £2400. In 1663 the land tax on more than £2100 was paid by the Laird of Minto (probably still John Turnbull) and £660 by Gilbert Elliot. The value was the same in 1688, when the entire Parish was owned by 2 Gilbert Elliots, one being the Laird of Minto and the other the Laird of Craigend. There were 35 men listed there between the ages of 19 and 30 in 1799. In the mid-19th century the parish had a reputation for having no paupers, no toll-bars and no public houses. In 1838 the minister wrote that education was eroding the local language and that 'it is not improbable, that, ere long, the ancient dialect of the district, which has several interesting peculiarities, may become, in a great measure, extinct.' The existing parish registers begin in 1703, and are fairly complete for births. However, no register of deaths was kept until more recent times, and marriages were only recorded through the reading of the banns, with some significant gaps.

Minti Place (min'-i-plis) n. Minto Place, a street in the Wellogate on the opposite side of the street from Glebe View. It was built in 1875 by Hawick Working Men's Building and Investment Company and named after Gilbert John Elliot-Murray-Kynynmound, 4th Earl of Minto. The upper houses were originally named Glebe Terrace until 1882.

Minti pump (min'-i-pump) n. water pump at the main road junction in Minto village. It dates from about 1860 and was restored in 2020.

the Minto Road (th-min'-rōd) n. street in Denholm leading out of the village towards Minto, being part of the B6405.

the Mintis (th-u-min'-iz, min-tiz) n. the Minto Hills, twin hills near Minto, a distinctive feature of the landscape north-east of Hawick. The hills are formed of igneous rocks, like many of the higher peaks in the area; it is believed that they are the eroded remains of a paired volcanic vent. The southern hill has a triangulation marker and reaches 276 m, the other reaches 253 m and is topped by a cairn. The summit of the southern hill has the faint remains of a former fort, about 120 m by 75 m in size, with an entrance on the west side. The cairn on the summit of the north hill is about 10 m in diameter, flat-topped, and has some large kerb-stones around it. Around the lower slopes of the hills are extensive remains of rig, terraces and other signs of earlier cultivation – ‘The scenes round Denholm, they are rich indeed; With Minto hills and crags what can compare? And Ruberslaw, whose high majestic head Towers upward, like the lark, till lost in air’ [TCh] (see also Minti Hills).

Minti Schuil (min'-i-skil) n. schoolhouse in Minto, serving the surrounding area. It was probably established in the early 17th century. John Davidson was recorded as schoolmaster there in 1616 and James Learmonth in 1624 and 1625. Walter Elliot was schoolmaster there in the 1720s and early 1730s. A Mr. Watson was master until about 1784 and George Scott from around then until the 1820s. They were followed by William Grant, who gave the school a strong reputation, with several students boarding there from outside the Parish. Mr. Wylie took over as schoolmaster about 1840 and John R. Hamilton was teacher in the 1850s and 60s. The teacher normally served as Clerk to the Heritors and Session Clerk for the Parish. In the early 19th century there was also a small school teaching younger children and instructing girls in sewing. The Borders Archive has School Board documents for 1873–1916, registers for 1915–63 and log books for 1874–1963.

the Minto Stakes (th-min'-i-stāks) n. former Friday Common Riding race, started at least as early as the 1880s.

the Minto Stane (th-min'-i-stān) n. inscribed stone on the Minto estate, coming from near the town of Malang in East Java, also called the Sangguran Stone. The stone is about 2 metres tall and weighs more than 3 tons. It was carved in the year 982, and carries a long inscription to the Javanese King Sri Maharaja Rakai Pangkaja Dyah Wawa

Minti West Lodge

Sri Wijayalokanamottungga. The text (not all of which was legible) describes a granting of rights for establishing the village of Sangguran, including taxation rules, with the obverse containing a long curse against anyone who broke these rules. It was collected in 1812 by Colin Mackenzie and his team for Sir Stamford Raffles and transported ‘with the consent, and by the assistance of the Native Regent from Malang’; Mackenzie had previously worked with Dr. John Leyden and it was he who discovered the buried site of Borobudur (the largest Buddhist temple in the world). In 1813 the stone was given as a gift to the parting Governor-General of India, Gilbert Elliot, Lord Minto, who had it sent to his home in Scotland. Although Lord Minto died in England on his return, the stone continued the planned journey and was displayed in a glass case in Minto House. However, when the house was requisitioned as a military hospital in WWII, the stone was moved to garden, where it was exposed to the elements. In 2013/4 the present Earl of Minto had the stone moved to Cleughhead.

Minti Toon (min'-i-toon) n. former name for an area in Minto Parish, presumably around the old home farm of the Baron. It is listed among the lands of ‘Minto Townhead’ that were liferented by Rev. Robert Elliot from 1779.

Minti Toonheid (min'-i-toon-heed) n. farm at the northern end of Minto village. In the early 19th century it was farmed by the Turnbells, with William Turnbull there in the 1860s. Robert Watson was farmer in the early 20th century. In 1779 Rev. William Elliot (brother of the Laird of Minto) was granted liferent of these lands. They are described as consisting of South Croft, North Croft, Quicksands Park, Notman’s Shot, Langlands, Templecrofts, Howden, Whitfield, West South Croft, Minto Town and the green of Minto, ‘which pieces of ground were some time ago known by the name of Minto Townhead’. The lands were valued at £461 1s 10d. The boundaries of the lands were the Minto-to-Hawick road, Minto Glebe, the march ‘which runs through Howden syke’, the foot of Minto Hill, Hillends Park, Towledge Park, Cow Park and the lawn around Minto House.

Minti Toor (min'-i-toor, -tow-ur) n. another name for Fatlips Castle.

Minti West Lodge (min'-i-west-luj) n. former lodge house for the Minto estate, situated south of the village, by the modern entrance to the golf club.

Minti Wuds (min'-i-wudz) n. wooded area near Minto – ‘Sine off we’d hie tae Minto Woods For blaeberreries and slaes’ [WLu].

Mintlaw (min'-law) n. terraced house in Denholm, on the middle of Main Street. It is part of the Class C listed building area.

Minto see Minti

Minto Craig (min-tō-krāg) n. peak in south Queensland, Australia. It is located near Teviot Brook, about 14 miles from Dugandan (now Boonah). The name was given by botanist Charles Fraser in 1828.

miresnipe (mIr-snīp) n., poet. the common snipe, Capella gallinago – ‘... Or heard the bleater’s quavering song, Or miresnipe’s scream, the reeds among’ [JTe].

mirk (mirk) adj., arch. dark, gloomy, murky – ‘A duil mirk nicht an’ nae muin’ [??], ‘... his pavilione roun’ about him wer mirk waters’ [HSR], ‘... for the mirk plices o’ the yirth ar fu’ o’ the habitationes o’ cruilte’ [HSR], n., arch. darkness, murk – ‘... Mother of mirk and moonlight sheen, Gathering dews and deepened green’ [JoHa], ‘Though the mirk gathers round and the breezes blaw snell’ [JJ], ‘Untill the upricht ther ræises up licht in the mirk ...’ [HSR], ‘Gif I say, Shurelie the mirk sall kiver me; een the nicht sall be licht aboot me’ [HSR], ‘This yin nicht, o a’ the nichts i’ the year, Be it mirk or munelicht or mirry wi’ jiggig stars ...’ [DH], ‘... I’ll think na o’ takin my gate To my hame in the mirk reek again’ [WL], ‘... Roarin up throwe the Mansfield mirk, for hame’ [DH].

mirker (mir-kur) adj., poet. darker, more gloomy – ‘... As gleids o’ licht faur seen by nicht Mak’ the near mirk but mirker still’ [TDa].

mirkest (mir-kist) adj., arch. darkest, gloomiest – ‘Though midnight glooms of dark despair, Shed mirkest madness on my soul ...’ [JoHa], ‘It hath been nursed fiends amang, In hell’s most deepest, mirkest night’ [JoHa], ‘I’ve wandered in the mirkest night O’er moor and mountain grey ...’ [JT], ‘Rosy cheeks, and snaw-brent brow Wi’ mirkest tresses cluster’d o’er’ [HAD1868].

Mirk Hob (mirk-hōb) n. nickname of Robert Elliot, one of 10 rieviers captured in Hawick in October 1567 (the name presumably referring to a dark quality of his).

mirkness (mirk-nis) n., arch. darkness, blackness, gloom, murk – ‘He bowet the heævens al-sua, an’ cam’ doun: an’ mirkniss was anunder his feet’ [HSR], ‘He sendet mirkniss, an’ mæde it mirk ...’ [HSR], ‘And as mirkness glides meekly ower

mirky (mir-kee) adj., arch. dark, black, gloomy, obscure, murky – ‘... And ilka maid in the mirky dark can greet her quiet lane’ [JYH].

the Miss Frances Sprot Homes (thu-mis-frawn-sis-sprō’-hōmz) n. name given to 6 small houses built on the Riddell estate in 1883 and provided for by Frances Sprot. They were intended for ‘friendless and deserving widows or daughters of clergymen, and other ladies who had formerly been in better circumstances’. They were later known simply as ‘the Sprot Hooses’. They continued to be used for their intended purpose until 1950 and were converted into a family home in the 1970s, called Alewater House.

the Missionary Station (thu-mi-shi-nu-ree-stā-shin) n. in Hawick in the early 1800s?, where?.

missive letter (mi-siv-le’-ur) n., arch. a letter, particularly a formal one – ‘...ffrom Francis Gladstaines of Whitlaw ...made by him to the said towne by several of his missive letters and ane act made and granted by them in his favours’ [BR1692], ‘...upon ane missive letter from the laird of Gladstains, the bailies and council gave liberty to him to cast, win, and lead some divots off the common’ [BR1707], (the word ‘missive’ only used in this redundant phrase).

Miss Reid’s (mis-reedz) n. former school on Eskdaill Terrace?.

Miss Riddle’s (mis-reedz) n. popular name for a room on the High Street used by several local societies (e.g. the Eclectic Club and the Juvenile Total Abstinence Society) in the latter part of the

miss yersel (mis-yur-sel) v. to miss partaking in some pleasure by not being present – ‘ee really missed yersel last night, oo hed the grandest sing-song efter ee left’.

mist (mist) contr., arch. miss it, missed it, failed – ‘... We’s fiddle their faggin’ spirits fir’d, Or e’er they wist; Gi’ every taste what they desir’d, He never mist’ [CPM].

mistaen (mis-tān) pp., arch. mistaken (see taen).

mistaken (mis-tā-kin) pp., arch. overcome, under the influence – ‘The said John at first refused that he was in Drink but afterwards confessed (as he expressed it) he was mistaken with Drink’ [PR1724] (also mistaen).

mister (mist-tur) n., arch. need, necessity – ‘Robert Scott of Reahousknow has received from Walter Scott of Todrik the sum of £100 scots in his necessitie and mister’ [SPB1579].

mistlie (mist-lee) adj., arch. alone, missing a companion, bewildered on a road, dreary (noted by J. Jamieson).

mistress (mis-tris) n., arch. Mrs., respectful term for an older woman – ‘is the mistress o the hoose hyim?’ (note the full pronunciation was once common, unlike in the English mi-sus).

mistryst (mis-trist) v., arch. to fail to keep an appointment.

Mitchel (mi-chul) n. Hugh (18th/19th C.) wood merchant of Fisherrow (Musselburgh), who was made an Honorary Burgess in 1813. He was probably the ‘Hugh Mitchell, Burntisland’ who subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. James (17th/18th C.) tailor in Hawick. His unnamed child died in 1811. He is probably the same James who married Ann Murray in Wilton in 1805, and whose children included: Jean (b.1808); and Thomas (b.1809). James (17th C.) resident of Ewes Parish. He married Jean Beattie and their children included: Janet (b.1756); Thomas (b.1758); Jean (b.1760); and James (b.1763). The witnesses in 1758 were Andrew Lamb and John Elliot. John (18th/19th C.) gardener at Liddel Bank in 1797, when he was working for William Oliver. John (18th/19th C.) ‘hynd’ at Ruecastle in Bedrule Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. Robert ‘Bob’ (b.1780/1) Hawick’s first milkman, operating from Southfield, formerly ostler of the Tower Hotel. On one famous occasion, in a snowstorm in 1831, he brought back the Carlisle mail on foot after abandoning his horse at Teviothead. Thomas (16th C.) one of the men who in 1530 swore that William Scott of Harden did not owe more than a merk to the deceased Stephen Lauder. William (17th/18th C.) baxter in Hawick. In 1721 he witnessed a baptism for merchant Andrew Turnbull. He could be the William who married Marion Laidlaw in Hawick in 1718. William (18th C.) resident of Denholm in 1780. Probably the same William was recorded as miller at Denholm Mill in 1785. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included William (b.1780) and James (b.1785) (also Mitchell).

Mitchell (mi-chul) n. Alexander (b.1828/9) born in Selkirk, he was a butcher on Silver Street. He is listed on Slater's 1852 directory. In 1851 he was at about 4 Silver Street and in 1861 he was on the Round Close. Probably the same Alexander was President of the Common Riding (Race) Committee in 1856, when the Cornet elected by the Council refused to accept the offer. He married Margaret Laidlaw. Their children included: Isabella (b.c.1851); Violet (b.c.1853); William (b.1856); Agnes (b.1859); Margaret Anderson (b.1860); Alexander (b.1862); and Janet Laidlaw (b.1864). Andrew (19th C.) tailor on the Howegate, listed in Slater's 1852 directory. Charles (19th C.) listed as miller at New Mill on Slitrig in Slater's 1852 directory. George (d.1957) Director of Pringle's of Scotland from 1937. Henry (b.1825/6) son of tailor James, he himself was a tailor at 8 Howegate. He was at 8 Howegate in 1861 until at least 1881. He married Anne Millington and their children included Anne, Margaret, James, Thomas, Henry (b.1856), Robert (b.1858), Mary (b.1860), David (b.1864), Agnes (b.1863), George (b.1867), Agnes (again, b.1870) and George (again, b.1872). Henry (d.1960) joined Craig's Aerated Waters in the 1920, becoming manager. In 1948 he put in an offer for the firm, but was outbid by the Scottish Co-operative Wholesale Society. However, he remained as manager until his death. His son, also Henry, then carried on as manager. Henry (20th C.) son of Henry. Like his father he worked for what had been Craig's Aerated Waters at 22 Buccleuch Street. He took over as manager in 1960, but production of sodas ceased soon after. James (c.1785–1850) tailor on the High Street, listed in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories. He was listed as a member of Allars Kirk in 1829. He married Ann Murray (b.1788) in Wilton in 1805. In 1841 he was living on the High Street (about No. 12) with his wife and 3 children. He must have been deceased by 1851, when his wife was living with his son. His children were: Ann (b.c.1820); Henry (b.1825/6), a tailor on the Howegate; and James (b.1830), who emigrated to Canada. He could be the James, son of William, born in Cavers Parish in 1785. James (18th/19th C.) listed in Pigot's 1825/6 directory as running an eating house on the Howegate. James (b.1814/5) from Hutton in Dumfriesshire, he was a farmer at Crosscleuch in Yarrow Parish. He married Mary (1818–96), daughter of Tibbie Shiel. His wife was the last surviving child of Tibbie, and died in Hawick. Their children included Isobella, Margaret and Christina. He was dead by 1861, when Mary was a widow, recorded as farmer at Crosscleuch. James (1830–1914) born in Hawick, son of High Street tailor James. He was employed as a weaver, and still living with his brother and mother on the Howegate in 1851. He emigrated to Canada in 1854, arriving in Galt, then moving to Guelph before moving to Manitoba, settling in Arrow River in 1882. He homesteaded, also serving as ferryman across the Assiniboine River. He invented a new kind of lifeboat, patented in 1898 and exhibited in Europe in 1909 (when he also returned for a visit to Hawick). He married Janet Bell Waugh (1836–1920), who came from Moffat and they had several children. John (c.1815–81) real name of the man who inspired 'Heather Jock' in the song 'Kinly Stick'. He was a native of Hexham, who came to Hawick at age 16; it is said that he walked all the way in order to find work. He was well known in Town for the next 50 years. He was a wrestler and runner in his youth. He worked in the hosiery industry, but mainly made a living at poaching, as well as by gathering cresses, labouring, etc. He was also in the Grenadier Guards for a while, but deserted. In 1841 he was a stockingmaker, living at 4 Silver Street, then around Punch Bowl Close in 1851. He is listed as a railway labourer on Dickson Street in 1861 and was living at 9 Kirk Wynd in 1871. It seems that he became a wanderer, collecting moss and sleeping rough (hence his nickname). Adie Ingles suggests that he may have spent some time in Australia, and returned whistling the tune of 'Click Go the Shears', but there is no evidence to support this. He is probably the Hawick stockingmaker, born in Corbridge, who is recorded in Jedburgh Jail in (at least) 1843, 1851, 1852, 1855, 1856, 1864, and 1865 (twice), and the Hexham man in Hawick Jail in 1851. In 1874 he was rescued from the Teviot 'having been inbibing of his favourite beverage rather freely'. In 1841 he married Elizabeth Lamb in Hawick. Their children included Benjamin (b.1853/4), John (b.1846/7) and James (b.1849/50); she also had children Adam (b.1833/4) and Janet (b.1839/40) from a previous marriage. He died of tetanus in Jethart Jail – ‘Crane-like he watched the purling streams, And for a crust would gather bones; Of statute laws he’s broken more Than ere he broke of hard whin stones’ [TCh]. Peter (17th/18th C.) mason in Hawick. He witnessed baptisms in 1710 for carrier David Wilson and for younger carrier William Aitken, and in 1716 for mason John Napier. In 1705 in Edinburgh he married Agnes Guild, servant to merchant and Burgess of Edinburgh, David Weems; his name is recorded there as ‘Patrick’. Their children included: Anna (b.1706); James (b.1708); John (b.1708); and Jean (b.1712). The witnesses in 1706 were masons John Napier and John Turnbull, in 1708 were merchant Walter Weems and mason John Napier and in 1712 were masons John Turnbull and Nichol Turnbull. Rev. Robert (1826–93) from Auchterarder, he probably attended Edinburgh University. He came to Hawick as a guest preacher at the Evangelical Union (later Congregational) Church towards the end of 1849, a few weeks later accepted the ‘call’ to the church, and was inducted early in 1850. He preached 3 sermons every Sunday, as well as in the open air on street corners and around the countryside. He also carried out a vigorous correspondence about evangelism in the Hawick Advertiser. He turned down one call to another church, but left suddenly in 1864 to become assistant to Dr. Morrison at Dundas Street Church, Glasgow. He was later minister at Queen’s Park, Manchester, St. John’s Wood Terrace, Middlesex, Chorton-cum-Hardy, Lancashire, Elgin Brook, Hertfordshire and Nelson Street, Greenock. Robert (1848–1928) born in Kinross, Perthshire, he spent his early years in Gala, ran away from home at age 14 and was a glazier’s apprentice in Edinburgh. He began a glaziers business in Hawick in about 1873, and certainly by 1875; this would become the longest established glazing business in Scotland. He was a Councillor for North High Street Ward from 1884, was a Magistrate for 9 years, Provost 1896–1902, and returned to the Council 1919–23. He was also appointed Honorary Sheriff-Substitute of Roxburghshire. His Provostship saw the erection of the Public Library, re-laying of the pavements and the letting of the Haugh as a show-ground at the Common Riding. He was an early advocate for electric lighting, Chairman of the Hawick School Board and a Common Riding supporter.

Liberal in politics, he was a Mason and an Orrock Church elder. His business on Oliver Crescent can be seen in a photograph from the early 1900s. The glazing business was continued by his son Alexander. He is buried in Wilton Cemetery. Thomas (18th/19th C.) servant at Riddell in Lilliesleaf Parish. He is recorded in 1798 on the list of men balloted to serve in the Militia and later that year he was sworn in (formerly ‘Mitchil’ etc.; see also Mitchel).

Mitchellhill (mi-chul-hil) n. Adam (18th C.) married Bessy Rae in Minto in 1743. Alexander (18th C.) resident of Hawick who married Nancy Harkness. Their son Thomas was baptised in 1747. He may be the Alexander recorded as owner of 2 work horses, along with George, in Hawick on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He is probably the deceased Alexander whose son George died in 1822, aged 76. Alexander ‘Sandy’ (b.1771) son of George and Margaret Noble. He was a local character of the early 1800s, described as ‘the smuggler’, possibly the local labourer who died in 1850. He is probably the man of this name recorded as a carrier on the 1799 ballot for the Militia in Hawick and still on the ballot in 1801. A story is told about him and his father (or possibly an Alexander Mitchell, rather than Mitchellhill), resting in a hay-loft near the Carter Bar Toll. They hid their smuggled gin when they saw the excisemen coming, but then in the dark fought with each other, his father biting his leg, saying ‘A’ve left the marks o’ ma teeth on yin o’ their legs at ony rate!’ and him replying ‘It was me ye bate, faither! Was aw no guigame no te squeel?’ He is recorded on the Fore Raw in 1841, along with wife Agnes. He married Agnes Scott and their children included George (b.1807) and Mary (d.1808). Andrew (1818–78) son of Thomas and Janet Thompson, he was born in Castleton Parish. He was an innkeeper in Newcastleton. In 1851 he was innkeeper at about 45 North Hermitage Street. In 1861 he is recorded as ‘Proprietor of Houses’ at about 8 North Hermitage Street. He was on the Town Committee of Management. In 1857 he married Agnes, daughter of farmer William Kyle. Their children included: William (1859–1938), a mason; Thomas (b.1857); and Janet (1865–77). George (18th/19th C.) paid the cart tax roll in Hawick in 1791. He was listed in Hawick along with Alexander as owners of 2 work horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He may be the George who married Margaret Noble (who died in 1808) and whose children included: Alexander (b.1771); James

(b.1773); and Mary (b.1777). He is probably the George, son of the deceased Alexander, who died in 1822, aged 76. Henry (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1690 he witnessed a baptism for Andrew Scott. He married Isobel Robson and their children included John (b.1689). He may have witnessed a baptism in 1691 for Robert. Henry (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Craikshiel in 1726 when his daughter Janet was baptised. Henry (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Woodburn in 1757. His children included: Margaret (b.1748); John (b.1750); Janet (b.1752); Janet (b.1754); Helen (b.1757); and William (b.1760). Henry (18th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He was at West Burnfoot in 1744. He married Margaret Thomson and their children included: Isabel (b.1744); William (b.1746); Thomas (b.1749); Henry (b.1750); Catherine (b.1753); and Helen (b.1755). J. (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton who subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. He was probably closely related to Robert, who also subscribed. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1776 he married Margaret Scott, who was from Jedburgh Parish. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick. 2 unnamed children of his died in 1810. James (b.1809) son of Thomas and Janet Thomson. He was innkeeper of the Black Bull on North Hermitage Street in Newcastleton in 1851, living with his sister Jane and Brother Andrew. He was also listed there in 1852. Jane (b.1815) daughter of Thomas and Janet Thomson and brother of James. She married William Nichol, but was already a widow by 1851. She had children Mary Anne, Thomas and Betty. She was living with her innkeeper brother on North Hermitage Street in Newcastleton in 1951, but by 1861 was innkeeper herself. Her inn was at about 45 North Hermitage Street, and called the Black Bull. Jenny (18th/19th C.) recorded in the story of the disputed Common Riding of 1809. A bucketful of material from her byre was used to pelt Captain Campbell and others of the 'royalist' party as they rode up the Loan. She was presumably the wife of a man with fields up the Loan. John (16th C.) notary in 1528 to an agreement between James Murray of Falahill and Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch, signed at Selkirk. Other witnesses included the Vicars of Selkirk and Hawick. Probably the same 'sir John' witnessed a document in 1530 for Robert Turnbull of Philiphaugh and was recorded as a chaplain when he witnessed a document related to an action against Patrick Murray of Falahill. He was recorded as 'sir' in 1532 when he held a tenement in Selkirk and in 1535 when he witnessed a document for Walter Scott of Robertson. He also witnessed an agreement in 1536 between Richard Bothwell, Parson of Ashkirk, and Simon Shortreed, Vicar of Ashkirk. In 1539 he was notary for an instrument among Scotts, relating to the illegitimacy of Thomas, son to Adam Scott. In 1540 he witnessed an agreement between Katherine Scott of Colifort and John Cranston of that ilk. John (18th C.) resident at Penchrise. He probably married Janet Blaikie in Cavers Parish in 1734. His son John was baptised in 1734. Robert (17th C.) resident in Ashkirk Parish listed on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. He married Margaret Allan and their children included Thomas (b.1691) and Robert (b.1696). The witnesses in 1691 were hard to read (perhaps Thomas and Henry Mitchellhill). Robert (d.bef. 1766) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Girnwood in 1757 and Eilrig in 1764. His widow was recorded at Chisholme in 1766 when his last child was born posthumously. His children included Isobel (b.1755), William (b.1757), Robert (b.1759), Thomas (b.1761), James (b.1764) and John (b.1766). Robert (1782/3–1858) from Selkirk, he was a farmer and carter in Newcastleton. He was probably the Mitchellhill listed as 'R., Castleton' who subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. He was listed as a carter in Newcastleton among heads of households in 1835–41. In 1841 and 1851 he was on Douglas Square. He emigrated to Galt, Ontario, where he died. He married Margaret Murray, who died in 1882, aged 94. Their children included: Thomas (1810/1–24); Robert (1818/9–42); Jane (b.1823/4); July; and Margaret (1830/1–43). Robert (b.1787/8) from Jedburgh, he was an agricultural labourer in Denholm in 1841. By 1851 he was listed as a pensioner at 'Guide Post' cottages at Spittal-on-Rule. His wife was Margaret and their children included: Mary (b.1831/2); Isabel (b.1834/5); Robert (b.c.1836); William (b.1837/8); and Agnes (b.1840/1). Thomas (d.bef. 1841) proprietor of the Black Bull in Newcastleton in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories. He was also listed as an innkeeper in Newcastleton among heads of households in 1835. He married Janet Thomson and their children included: James (b.1809); Mary (b.1811); William (b.c.1812), a farm labourer; Jane (b.1815), who married William Nichol and later ran the inn; and Andrew

(b.c.1820), who was running the inn in 1841. William (17th/18th C.) recorded as servitor to William Ogilvie in Branhholme. In 1719 he was recorded as 'workman in Branhholmtoun' and was 'in Branhholmtoun' in 1725. He married 'Marion' Laidlaw in Hawick in 1718; she was recorded as 'servitrix to James Grieve in Todshawhaugh. Their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1720, with witnesses Robert Scott (tenant in Branhholme Town) and William Thomson (in Newmill). His wife is recorded as 'Helen' in the baptismal records for their children: Robert (b.1719); Thomas (b.1725); Jean (b.1727); Agnes (b.1729); and William (b.1739). The witnesses in 1719 were William Cunningham and 'servant' Walter Scott and in 1725 were James and Walter Crow. William (18th/19th C.) working man from the Newmill area, who set up a Sunday School there along with James Ruickbie. He could be related to the earlier William from Branhholme Town. He is probably the William who witnessed a baptism in 1774 for James Easton from Branhholme and in 1773 and 1776 for Thomas Rutherford from Branhholme. He may be the William who married Helen Murray and whose children included Agnes (b.1775), Helen (b.1777) and Margaret Helen (b.1781). The witnesses in 1777 were the whole congregation. William (1859-1938) son of Andrew and Agnes Kyle, he was born in Castleton. He worked as a mason. He married Isabella Bell and their son William (1898-1918) died of wounds in France (also written 'Mitchaellhill' and 'Mitchellhill'; sometimes formerly recorded as just 'Mitchill').

Mitchell's Ford (mi-chulz-förd) n. former ford across the Teviot, situated a little south of a line joining Midshiels with Eastcote (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Mitchell's Gless (mi-chulz-gles) n. Mitchell Glass, glazier's based in Hawick. It was founded by Robert Mitchell in about 1873 and became the oldest established glaziers in Scotland. The firm was continued by Robert's son Alexander, and then by the Fisher family.

Mitchell's Hole see Mitchell's Slack

Mitchell's Slack (mi-chulz-slawk) n. former name of a hollow near Southfield, said to have been a place where Covenanters held secret sermons in the 17th century. It is also known as 'Mitchell's Hole'. The name is said to have been given to commemorate Covenanter James Mitchell (even although there was no direct connection to him), who tried to assassinate Archbishop Sharp in 1668, and was executed in 1678.

Mitchels (mi-chulz) n. former farm, possibly near Briery-yards. It is recorded (as 'Mitcheels') among the lands transferred from Hassendean Parish to Wilton in 1690.

Mitchel's (mi-chulz) n. former carrier's business. In the early 19th century they travelled twice a week, both ways, between Hawick and Carlisle.

Mitchelson (mi-chul-sin) n. Andrew (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 as 'Andrew Michelsone', when David Scott, called 'Lady', in Stirches had a remission for a raid on lands at Blackhall (or Blackhaugh) tenanted by him and John 'Spedane'. It is unclear whether this was in Rulewater or Ewesdale or elsewhere. George 'Geordie' (16th/17th C.) John (16th/17th C.) probably resident of Liddesdale. In 1603 he was 'Geordie Miitchelstoun' when there was a complaint that he and others had raided 'Sewingdene' in 1601, stealing livestock and goods and injuring several people; 'Cubbie's Archie', servant of Simon Elliot of Binks, was the leader of the group, which also contained Armstrongs. George (17th C.) tenant at Sorbietrees in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Rev. James (d.1625) brother of John of Middleton, he graduated from Edinburgh University in 1605 and became minister at Hassendean in 1611. He was translated to Bathans (Yester) in 1613 and was a member of the Assembly in 1618. He married Eupham Borthwick (who died in 1627) and their children were John, Margaret, William and James. James (17th C.) joint tenant with David Goldie of the farms of Ettleton and Millholm in Liddesdale in 1632. John (15th/16th C.) recorded as resident of Oakwood in 1502 when Alexander Scott had remission for stealing a horse from him. Thomas (17th C.) listed on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls as resident of the lands of Castleton. Thomas (d.bef. 1696) probably farmer in the lower Borthwick valley. In 1696 his widow, a Riddell whose first name is not given, was renting half of the farm of Wiltonburn from the Duchess of Buccleuch. Her cautioner was Robert Scott (also farmer at Wiltonburn), suggesting a close relationship. Note that in 1694 1/3 of Wiltonburn was being rented by Bessie Scott, widow of James Riddell, who seems likely to have been related to his wife. William (17th C.) resident at Roan in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694 (also spelled 'Michelsone', 'Mitchelsone' and 'Mitchelsoune').

Mithag (mi-thag) n. Alan of Hartwoodburn (16th C.) recorded in 1539/40 when he had a commission from the Dean of Jedburgh regarding a slander brought against him about stealing and eating some sheep. The list of friends who would support him included Thomas Elliot, Mark Ker in Kippielaw, William Scott in Hartwoodmyres, Walter Scott in Headshaw, Thomas Lauder, John Chisholme, David Todrig, Ninian Brydon and David Mithag. There were several other men with this same surname in Selkirk at that time (the pronunciation is unclear).

mizzur (mi-, mā-zur) n., arch. a measure, especially one used for capacity rather than weight – ‘Item, that nae person keipis any false weightis, meisoires, or committis any falshuid in their callings ...’ [BR1640], ‘Lord, mak’ me til ken mine en’, an’ the measur o’ my dayes what it is, that I may ken howe bauch I am’ [HSR], ‘...oot ov a tanker lippin-fowe – nane o’ eer eend-mizzer!’ [ECS], v. to measure – ‘I wull devyde Shechem, an’ meæser owt the vallie o’ Succoth’ [HSR], ‘...mizzerin taatih-dreels’ [ECS] (note the pronunciation; there are spelling variants).

the Moat see the Mote

Moat Crescent (mō'-kre-sin) n. street named after the nearby Mote (or Moat), with houses built in 1927.

Moat Croft (mō'-kroft) n. old name for fields extending from Westport to Haggishaa, today including land from Drumlanrig Home to the south side of Rosebank Road.

the Moat Stakes (thu-mō'-stāks) n. race run as part of the Cornet’s Races on Common Riding Friday from at least 1894.

Moat Park (mō'-pawrk) n. public park around the Mote (or Moat), also known as Moat Croft Public Park. Most of the land was gifted by the Duke of Buccleuch in 1911, with a ceremony on Coronation Day, and the rest purchased in 1913 by the Council. George Wood, nurseryman of Wilton Lodge Gardens, won the contract to lay out the gardens in 1914, to plans by Edinburgh City gardener John McHattie. Renovations to the Loan in the period 1957–77 made it easier to see the park.

mockit (mo-kee', -ki') pp., poet. mocked – ‘... an’ they bowet the knee afore him, an’ mocket him, sayin’, Hail, King o’ the Jews!’ [HSR].

mockrife (mok-rīf, -rif, reef) adj., arch. scoffing, scornful – ‘... nar sits in the settle o’ the mock-riffe’ [HSR], ‘Let cleverality, mockreef folk that are unco smert ...’ [ECS] (there are spelling variants).

new minister is 'called' – 'That a minister might be sent to Wiltoune to moderate a call for one to be minister there' [PR1693].

moderator (mo-du-rā'-ur) n. a minister presiding over a senior body in the Church of Scotland – 'The ordinary meeting of the Synod of Merse and Teviotdale was held on Tuesday in the Abbey Church, Jedburgh – the Rev. Mr Fergusson, moderator' [HAD1868].

Modrell (mod-rel) n. Mungo (17th C.) recorded among the poor of Hassendean Parish in 1694, when he was at Hassendeanbank. His surname could be a transcription error for some more familiar name.

Moffat (mo-fi) n. town about 40 miles to the west of Hawick, in the south-eastern part of Dumfries & Galloway. Receiving Burgh of Barony status only in 1648, it developed as a market town on the main west-coast routes to Glasgow and Edinburgh. Centrepiece of the town is the magnificent Moffat Ram statue. The nearby sulphurous spring was popular for its purported health benefits in the 18th and 19th centuries. Population 2,342 (1991) – 'Tween Moffat hills and lofty Cheviot' [JH].

Moffat (mo-fi) n. Adam (17th C.) piper who was rebuked by Ashkirk Session in 1638 for 'pyping at bridals'. He was ordered to appear at the Kirk door wrapped in sheets, with bare feet and legs, and 'efter the pepil wes in, to go to the place of repentance, and so to continue Sabbathlie induring their wills'. Arthur (b.1803/4) from Tundergarth, he was farmer at Leahaugh Cottage in Castleton Parish. In 1861 he is recorded there as farmer of 6 acres. His wife was Janet and their children included Jane, Walter, Janet, Margaret, James and Helen Agnes. David (16th C.) recorded in Synton in 1581 when he was witness to an agreement between Margaret, widow of William Scott of Burnfoot and her son William. George (18th C.) listed as footman at Synton in 1792, when he was working for Charles Riddell. George (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1789 he married Isabella Murray. Hugh (b.c.1780) listed on the 1801 Militia ballot as 'Valet to John C. Scott of Sinton In the Regt. of Edinbr. Roy. Lt. Vol.' This means that he was already a volunteer with the Royal Edinburgh Volunteer Light Dragoons and hence excepted from the Militia selection. James (15th/16th C.) recorded at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1502 when the Coroner, William Cranston, was fined for failing to arrest him. His name is given as 'Jacobus moffet' in Holydean or Nisbet. James

(17th C.) leased part of the farm of Todshawhill from the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1693. James (18th C.) married Agnes Hood in Wilton Parish in 1746. James (1720/1–1779) son of James, from whom he took over as tenant of Howpasley farm. In 1744 he moved to Garwald in Dumfriesshire, rented from the Duke of Buccleuch. He also farmed at Meikleholm for a while. He married Margaret Borthwick (1732/3–1806). His children included: John (1772–1823), who took over as farmer at Garwald; William (1773–1847), who farmed at Mosspeeble and Craik; and Margaret (1762/3–1855), who married Rev. Dr. William Brown of Eskdalemuir, and died in Hawick. James (18th/19th C.) cavalry trumpeter who rode up the Slitrig valley and into Liddesdale to rouse the volunteers there during the False Alarm of 1804. James (1811–76) elder son of William. He and his brother James helped their father farm at Craik, as well as Garwald over in Dumfriesshire. John (1677/8–1728) tenant at Howpasley. He was said to be descended from Thomas, who received a grant of lands in Meggat in the 14th century. He was recorded at Howpasley in the baptismal records of most of his children in Roberton Parish. He married Helen Borthwick (1677/8–1754). He was succeeded at Howpasley by his son James (1721–79, baptised in Roberton) and had 7 other children, including Janet, Mary and Euphemia (1708/9–97). Other children baptised in Roberton who were probably his include Margaret (b.1716), Elspeth (b.1718), Margaret (again, b.1721) and Bettie (b.1722). He was buried at Watcarrick Churchyard. John (18th C.) married Margaret Rutherford in Kirkton Parish in 1763. John (1813–82) son of William. He helped his father and brother James farm at Craik and Garwald. He was still tenant farmer at Craik in the 1870s. He married Anne Laidlaw (d.1915) and their children included: William (1864–1932); James (d.1941), who married Janet Robina Brydon; and Anne (d.1853). John (1859) born at Old Hopsgig, Westerkirk, in 1887 he married Elizabeth McInnes. Their children included: John (b.1883), born in Canonbie; Mary (b.1889), born in Hawick; Peter (1890–1968), born at Branhholme Park; Janet (b.1892), born at Branhholme Park; and Margaret (b.1894), born in Hawick. His wife may be the Elizabeth McInnes who wrote the poem 'A Legend of Hawick'. Nicholas (d.1270) Archdeacon of Teviotdale in the period 1245–70, referred to as being 'de Moffat'. He witnessed a charter for Soutra Hospital in 1255. He was bishop-elect of

Glasgow twice, the first time (1259) travelling to Rome, but failing to be consecrated (probably because of political infighting among his travelling companions) and the second time (1268–70) because he died before consecration. He was buried at Tynninghame, East Lothian. Robert (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Janet Tait, who was from Yarrow Parish. Their children included John (b.1654) and Janet (b.1656). The witnesses in 1656 were ‘John ...’ and ‘Robert ...’. Robert of Hermiston (18th C.) recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1761. It is unclear where he came from, or how long he owned these local lands. Thomas (b.c.1780) resident of Hawick according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. Perhaps the same Thomas was butler at Borthwickbrae in 1812, according to the Militia ballot in Robertson Parish. William (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Craikhope in 1723, 1726, 1728 and 1736. His children included: Helen (b.1723); Helen (again, b.1726); Margaret (b.1728); Mary (b.1730); John (b.1736); and William (b.1741). William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Deanfoot in 1777 when his son William was baptised. William (1773–1847) son of James, tenant farmer at Garwald in Dumfriesshire, and formerly at Howpasley. He became tenant at Mosspebble in 1800 and then Craik in 1817. He was joint tenant there with his sons John and James from 1833. In addition he ran the farm at Garwald after the death of his older brother John in 1823. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He married Jane Grieve. His sons James (1811–76) and John (1813–82) continued to farm after him. He also had 1 other son and 6 daughters. William (1864–1932) born at Craik farm, he took over Garwald when he reached the age of 21. He became known as a sheep judge, as well as a pursuer of country sports. In 1911 he bought the farm of Georgefield and Glendinning, and later purchased the farm of Garwald, which the family had long tenanted. He married Alison Gray and their children included: John (b.1892), who sold Georgefield and Glendinning in 1947; Mary; Anne; and Alexander Gray (b.1905), who sold Garwald in 1950 (also formerly ‘Moffet’).

Moffat Well (mo-fi'-wel) n. sulphurous spring near Moffat, once believed to have healing powers. There are notices in Hawick’s 18th century parish records of disbursements to help sick people travel there. It was discovered in 1633 and access improved in 1758. It was a draw for visitors until the 1920s.

moggans (mo-ginz) n., pl., arch. the legs (noted by J. Jamieson).

Moinnet (moi-net) n. James (15th C.) witness to the charter of 1494 in which James of Kirkurd granted the lands of Galalaw to his son David. It is unclear whether his surname has a modern equivalent.

moistify (moi-sti-fl) v., poet. to moisten – ‘Where ye will get a whisky soss To moistify your middle’ [JR].

mole-catcher (mōl-kaw-chur) n., arch. someone earning their living from catching moles. From mediæval times until the mid-20th century this was a common occupation in rural areas. There were at least a couple employed in Denholm alone around 1900.

mole-head (mōl-head) n., arch. a mole-head, dolt, stupid person – ‘Dogsrabbit it, what’s keepit ye, ye lazy molehead?’ [WNK], ‘Hae dune, ye molehead, Wilton Kirk’s comin’ over Teiot Brig’ [RM].

Moll (mol) n. horse owned by William Nixon, and rode by him when he was Cornet in 1813. It was also known as ‘Molly’. In later years it was often seen with Nixon’s groom, Wullie Bulloch, who doted over it. The pair were painted together by Adam Brown.

Molle (mol, mow) n. former parish, forming what is now the southernmost part of Morebattle, which was united with Morebattle in the 17th century. It was owned by Eschina de Londonis (or de Molle) in the mid-12th century, and part of it was gifted to Kelso Abbey around 1190. Some of the lands there were also held by the Lovel family. The lands were also briefly owned by Adam of Rule, through his wife Johanna. They later passed to the Kers. Liulf, son of Uchtred, Lord of Mow, was a witness to the charter of about 1120 founding Selkirk Abbey. The Molle family married into the families of Avenel, Maleverer, de Lincoln, de Vesci, Scott and others, and tracing their lineage is difficult. The names Mow Hope, Mow Kirk (granted before 1152 to Kelso Abbey by Uchtred son of Liulf) and Mow Stell are lost, but it survives in Mowhaugh on the Bowmont Water. Members of the eponymous family crop up in local documents, e.g. ‘William Mow in Mowmaynis’ was part of inquest for lands in Rulewater in 1610 (also spelled ‘Mow’ and variants; the name probably comes from the Old Welsh ‘mael’ for ‘bare hill’, and is first recorded in the mid-12th century).

Molle (mol) n. Anselm (12th C.) formerly of Whitton, he gained part of the lands at Molle, granted in a charter during the reign of William I (probably 1170–90), which was witnessed by Roger, son of ‘John de Hawic’, as well as Robert of Wilton and Adam of Ashkirk; this was one of the first mentions of anyone who came from Hawick. His son Richard was also a witness. In about 1193 he granted lands of Molle (or Mow) to Kelso Abbey and later had a dispute with Kelso Abbey over teinds at Molle. His relationship with Eschina is unclear (it may be that they held different parts of the lands of Molle and were unrelated). His name may also have been written ‘Ansold’. His wife was Agnes. His daughter Isolda married Alexander and had a part of Molle in the early 1200s, while his main heiress was Matilda, who married Richard de Lincoln. He was ancestor of the family of Mow of that ilk. Eschina also ‘Eschyne’ (12th/13th C.) daughter of Thomas de Londonis (who held the office of Doorward under William the Lion, and his ancestors took the name of Dorward) and Eschelyn (daughter of Uchtred de Molle), she was also known as ‘Eschina de Londonis’. In some accounts her father is given as Uchtred, son of Liulf. She was born in Roxburghshire and held lands at Huntlaw and Molle on the Bowmont Water. She may have first married Robert ‘de Croc’. She married Walter Fitz Alan, 1st High Steward of Scotland, who held ‘Mow’ about 1160, as well as lands at Hassendean and at Renfrew; he died in 1177. She had a charter of Molle in 1186. Around 1190 she gifted part of Molle to Kelso Abbey. She lastly married Henry ‘de Mow’, the 2 settling a dispute with Kelso Abbey about 1200 and still later is described as a widow. Alan, her son with Walter, succeeded to most of his father’s lands, as well as the office of Steward of Scotland. With Henry she had 4 daughters: Margaret (buried at Paisley Abbey, where she had given land); Eschina; Avicia (or Alicia), who probably married Richard Scott, ancestor of the Scotts of Buccleuch; and Ceclia, who married Simon Mauleverer and had a charter of Molle in about 1250. Isolda (13th C.) daughter of Anselm and younger sister of Matilda. She married Alexander (son of William, son of Edgar) and they had a daughter, Christina, who married Almer Scott of Mow, who may have been related to Richard Scott of Mow. Uchtred (12th C.) son of Liulf. He granted the Church of Molle (present day Morebattle) to Kelso Abbey in the mid-1100s. He perambulated the boundaries himself, along with Aldred, the Dean of Teviotdale. He may have been the father of Eschina (earlier written ‘de Molle’ and variants).

mollets (mo-lits) n., pl., arch. fantastic airs (noted by J. Jamieson; (cf. mollops).

molligrumphs (mo-lee-grumfs) n., arch. a fit of bad temper, snit fit – ‘She’s taen the molligrumphs’ [GW] (also mulligrumphs).

mollops (mo-lops) n., pl., arch. antics, capers – ‘Set ee up wui eer feiky mollups an eer friggeen an falderals! Some folk heh sic a tredd wui theresels, – primpin!’ [ECS] (cf. mollets).

Monaghan (mo-nu-hin) n. Fr. James (1814/5–52) born in County Monaghan, Ireland, he served as Hawick’s first Catholic clergyman since before the Reformation, being the priest at S.S. Mary & David’s 1846–47. He held morning services every other Sunday, as well as lectures in the evening. He also preached in alternate weeks at a temporary chapel in St. Boswells, as well as ministering to Catholics in in Jedburgh and Kelso. This being a strain on his health, he was transferred to Dumfries and then Edinburgh, where he died suddenly.

Monanday (mu-nin-dā, mō-nin-dā) n., arch. Monday – ‘As Aw was gaun up Hawick Loan Yeh Monanday at morn . . .’ [JSB] (cf. the more modern Mondi; derived from the Anglo-Saxon).

Moncrieff (mon-kreef) n. David (1771–1834) youngest son of Annan minister William and Ann Hardie. His brother William Hardie was minister at Annan after their father. He was proprietor of properties in Moncrieff’s Close from 1812, and made an Honorary Burgess in 1818 for benevolence to the poor. His property is marked on Wood’s 1824 map at about No. 63 High Street. It is unclear what the family’s original connection was to Hawick, but it could possibly be through his mother Ann Hardie (who died in 1821, aged 86). It is said that he was a great benefactor of the poor and unfortunate, and gave many contributions anonymously. He also befriended and helped Tom Jenkins, offering money so he could continue bidding on a Greek dictionary in an auction in Hawick, and later writing him a letter of reference. He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. His brother married Jean Laidlaw, who died at Falnash, and was probably daughter of Robert Laidlaw, farmer there; their daughter (his niece) Mary married Rev. Robert Shaw of Ewes (and earlier preacher at Teviotdale). He was described as having a round face, which was ruddy and cheerful, stout on person, always clad in black, with matching breeches and silk stockings, and carried a gold-headed cane. He appears to have married Helen Webster, and they had a daughter, Margaret. His curling stone (inscribed with his name) is in the Museum. John (d.1697), W.S. acted as agent to the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1696, for the rentals around Braxholme. Margaret (b.1800) daughter of David, grand-daughter of Rev. William of Annan, and niece of Marion. She presented a cloth for the communion table at Hawick Free Kirk. She lived with her aunt at 63 High Street. Marion (1768–1862) daughter of Rev. William of Annan, and brother of David. She lived at 63 High Street. She was known as a charitable contributor to many causes in Hawick. One story is told of how she was asked to donate to some particular scheme, the organisation of which had taken 4 years, during which time she saved a pound note in her bible, so that she would be sure to have it on hand when the minister called. She was listed as ‘Miss Moncrieff’ among the local gentry in Pigot’s 1837 directory. She presented a communion token mold to the new Hawick Free Kirk in the early 1840s. Her niece Margaret is also recorded presenting a cloth for the communion table. She is probably the ‘Miss Marion’ involved in a bond with Robert Kerr Elliot of Harwood in 1845. In later age she and her niece were referred to as the ‘Misses Moncrieff’ (e.g. in Slater’s 1852 directory, when they are listed among the local gentry). She also lived for a while with her grand-nieces Anne Janet and Marion Shaw. She died in Hawick at the age of 94 – ‘There’s Bailie Nixon, merchant, The Miss Moncrieffs and a’, And if ye gang some farther east, Ye’ll come to Willie Ha’ [DJG].

Moncrieff’s Close (mon-kreefs-klōs) n. name in use for Tannage Close in the early 19th century, from a family who used to live at the top on the east side, at No. 63 High Street (to confuse matters, the 1858 Ordnance Survey map marks only the top of the street as Moncrieff’s Close, with the bottom labelled as Tannage Close).

Mondi (mun-di) n. Monday (also spelled ‘Mondih’; cf. the older Monanday).

the Mond (thu-mun-di) n. sometimes used to refer to the Monday of Common Riding Week. This day has the first of the morning Chases, with the horses leaving the Backdamgate at 6.30 a.m.

monie (mo-, mō-nee) adj., pron. many – ‘there’s ower monie o ee’, ‘how monie times hev A got ti tell ee?’, ‘And because her fact’ries mony ...’ [??], ‘Say, am I doom’d to live my lane, Amang sae mony braw things? [JR], ‘And spent the night in rite and spell, And mony a nameless thing’ [JTe], ‘An’ mony a, mony a bottle’s taen The tippler’s drouth to sloken’ [JoHa], ‘...Wi mony a sort o’ corn’ [JSB], ‘Monie, O Lord my God, ar thy wunderfu’ warks whilk thou hest dune ...’ [HSR], ‘Ther be monie that say, Wha wull shaw us onie guid?’ [HSR], ‘...And mony oots and ins’ [JEDM], ‘And Times brought mony changes ...’ [JT], ‘When Callants wander far afield On mony a foreign plain’ [RH], ‘...But entertainment wasna fer to seek – We’d mony a pantomime at hame!’ [WL], ‘I’ve travelled in monie lands And monie places seen But there’s ae toon I ne’er forget Wherever I hae been’ [JSE], ‘But mony’s the time aa’ve heard sic-like cryin’ ...’ [DH], ‘Though mony years they’ve wandered forth, They love the toon that gi’en thum birth’ [IWL], ‘Bit in yin o his mony teesh articles Kennedy illustrates art ...’ [IHS] (also spelled ‘mony’; cf. munie; the pronunciation used to have an element of a diphthongal ō-oo).

moniefald (mo-nee-fawld) adj., arch. manyfold – ‘O Lord, howe moniefald ar thy warks! in wusdoom hest thou mæde thame a’ ...’ [HSR] (also spelled ‘monyfald’).

moniest (mo-nee-ist) adj., arch. most numerous – ‘...after manniest voittis all electit and choisit the said Robert Scott ...’ [BR1638], ‘The youth whose fowl does moniest pay Is victor ca’d for year and day’ [JoHo] (also written ‘maniest’, etc.).

moniment (mo-nee-min) n., arch. a monument – ‘Yeh gowsty nicht (wui a wund fit ti blaw doors oot at wundihs) a turbleent woare as the ordnar dang doon the firrst Peinelheuch Moniment’ [ECS], ‘...bye auld Hornshole, – a picter o gray an green – wui a glisk o the Moniment’ [ECS].

monimental (mo-nee-men'-al) adj., arch. monumental, drunk – ‘He was fair monimental’ [GW] (see monumental).

Monipennie (mu-nee-pe-nee) n. John (16th/17th C.) Scottish chronicler and compiler. His ‘Certeine matters concerning the realme of Scotland, composed together’ (c.1594, 1603) contained ‘The names of the principall clannes, and surnames of the borderers not landed’ (although both ‘landed’ and ‘not landed’ are included). This represents a valuable listing of the important men in each family at the end of the 16th century, and includes Olivers, Armstrongs, Elliots, Nixons, Croziers, Scotts, etc. He also lists ‘The names of the barons, lairds, and chiefe gentlemen in euerie sherifdome’. Although first published about 1594, the list appears to have been compiled somewhat earlier.

the Monkey (thu-mung-kee) n. nickname in use in the 19th century. It was used for the proprietor of the Ewe and Lamb, and perhaps for others before him.

the Monkeyman's (thu-mung-kee-munz) n. former popular name for the hill where Weensgate Drive and Marmion Road are now located, once used by Hawick's youth for sledding in the winter.

the Monkeys (thu-mung-keez) n. popular name for the Ewe and Lamb bar in Orrock Place. This apparently arose from a former proprietor, Mr. Carruthers, father of the 1933 Cornet's Lass, who was nicknamed ‘Monkey Carruthers’ (perhaps because of his gait), and hence regulars spoke about ‘gaun ti the Monkey's’.

Monkland (mungk-lind) n. former name for the Monk's Croft.

the Monk's Croft (thu-mungks-kroft) n. former farm adjacent to the farmhouse at Hassendeanbank. The rents belonged to Melrose Abbey, as part of the agreement going back to the 12th century. In the time of William the Lion it was restricted to the pasturage of 200 ewes, 16 oxen and 4 cows. It was listed in 1582 among lands for which Robert Elliot of Horsleyhill demanded the charters of his father from the widow of Sir Walter Ker of Cessford. It was referred to as ‘a half merk land in Clarelaw called Mounkland’ in about 1620 when Walter Scott had a charter from the Commendator of Melrose. The land became part of Minto Parish when Hassendean was suppressed in 1690. The lands were referred to as ‘Monks meadow’ in the 1692 rental lists of the Duchess of Buccleuch in Hassendean, when they were ‘evicted by the minister for his glebe’. William Elliot and John Elliot were there in 1694. It was farmed by the Dicksons of Hassendeanburn in the 18th century. The name presumably derives from an association with the monks of Melrose Abbey and the former tower nearby (also written ‘Monkscroft’; it was ‘Munkscroft’ in 1694; it is presumably the farm adjacent to Knowe-townhead, labelled ‘Mountcroft’ on Stobie's 1770 map).

Monk's Flats (mungks-flawts) n. former name for lands in Hassendean Parish, recorded as ‘Monkesflattes’ in a charter around the late 1220s. It is likely to be the same as the Monk's Croft.

Monk's Meadow (mungks-me-dō) n. another name for Monk's Croft, mentioned in 1692.

the Monk's Toor (thu-mungks-toor, -tow-ur) n. the Monk's Tower, former name for the tower at Hassendean, so called because of the local connection with Melrose Abbey. It was set up as a ‘hospital’ for pilgrims journeying to Melrose Abbey, perhaps as early as the reign of William I. The land was granted by Melrose Abbey to Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme and his wife Janet Beaton, as confirmed by royal charter in 1574. It is referred to at that time as ‘the tower called Hassindenetour or Monkstour’. A branch of Scotts lived there for at least the next several decades. In 1580 a transaction involving Robert Scott of Alton was witnessed there; it was then referred to as ‘the monk tour’. Scott of Satchells lists ‘John Scot of Monks-tower, brother to old William Scott of Altoun’ as one of the supporters of Buccleuch around the late 16th century. The 1634 service of heirs for Scott of Buccleuch lists the fortalice called ‘Hassenden-tour alias Monkis-tour’ among their possessions and it is so recorded in the service of heirs for Mary of Buccleuch in 1653 and for Anne in 1661. The ‘tower and fortalice called Hassendane tower, alias Monkstower’ is recorded in 1693 in the ratification of the charter to James Scott, Earl of Dalkeith, as heir to his mother. Its site is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, by the road to the south of Hassendean farm. Stones from the ruined tower were used in the construction of Hassendean farmhouse in the 19th century.

Monk's Pond (mungks-pond) n. name for area between Bedrule and Ruecastle. Presumably there was once a pond there, perhaps with a connection to Jedburgh Abbey.

Monmouth (mon-mmooth, -mowth) n. familiar name for the Duke of Monmouth and Buccleuch, James Scott nee Crofts.

Monograptus riccartonensis (mo-nō-grap-tus-ri-kar-tin-en-sis) n. species of graptolite fossil, identified by Charles Lapworth in 1876 in rocks from the 'Riccarton Beds' at Elliotsfield. It is named for the locality of Riccarton.

monster (mon-stur) n., arch. an abnormally large child – 'An overgrown or unnaturally large child is so called in Hawick. The word carries with it the impression of stupidity as well as hugeness' [ECS].

Montagu-Douglas-Scott (mon-ta-gew-dug-lis-sko) n. George William (1866–1947) 3rd son of William Henry, 6th Duke of Buccleuch and younger brother of John Charles, the 7th Duke. He was Captain in the 10th Hussars and fought in the Boer War. He was given the honour of running up the Union Jack on the roof of the Presidency at Bloemfontein. He was Deputy Lieutenant of Roxburghshire and J.P. in Roxburghshire. In WWI he was Lieut.-Col. in the Border Horse Yeomanry. He received the O.B.E. in 1919. In 1903 he married Elizabeth Emily Manners, daughter of the Duke of Rutland. Their children were: Phylis Anne, Jeanetta Ruth; Marjorie Katherine; Lt.-Col. John Henry; and Lt.-Col. Claud Everard Walter. Henry John (1832–1905) 2nd son of Walter Francis, 5th Duke of Buccleuch. He was usually referred to as 'Lord Henry', and was created 1st Baron Montagu of Beaulieu. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire 1861–68 and for South Hampshire 1868–84. He was also Captain of the Midlothian Yeomanry and served as a Justice of the Peace in Roxburghshire. He was also Patron of the Liddesdale Curling Club. In 1865 he married Cecily Susan, 2nd daughter of John Stuart-Wortley-Mackenzie, 2nd Lord Wharnclyffe. Their children were: John Walter Edward (b.1866), who married Cecil Victoria Constance Kerr, daughter of 9th Marquess of Lothian, and secondly Alice Pearl Crake; Robert Henry (b.1867), who married Alice Fisher; Rachel Cecily (b.1868), who married Henry William, Lord Forster; and James Francis (b.1873), who died young. John Douglas (1809–60) Lord Scott, son of Charles, 4th Duke and younger brother of Walter the 5th Duke of Buccleuch. He inherited the estate of Dunchurch near Rugby. He entered the Grenadier Guards in 1827, becoming Lieutenant and Captain in 1831 and retiring in 1833. He was also a member of the Jedforest Club. A Tory in politics, he was said to be dashing in appearance and having a great command of language. He stood as a candidate in the 1832 post-Reform Act election in Roxburghshire, but was defeated by Capt. George Elliot. After voting himself in Hawick in 1832, he claimed he was attacked by a mob, who tried to pull him from his horse and was struck on the cheek by a rock; those on the other side of the story claimed that the incident started when his servant struck at the people around him on leaving the Tower Inn. He was also in Hawick for the 1835 election, when there were near riots around the Tower Knowe; in this election he defeated Capt. Elliot of Minto by 76 votes (and there was much accusation of 'faggot' voters at the time). He remained M.P. until 1837, but thereafter was never induced to stand again. He was also known as a keen sportsman, yachtsman, angler and hunter. His prowess as a hunter and success in breeding racing horses are described in H.H. Dixon's 'Field and Fern or Scottish Flocks and Herds (South)' (1865). In 1836 he married Alicia Anne, elder daughter of John Spottiswood; she composed the tune for 'Annie Laurie' as well as other songs, and died in 1900. He had no children. He is buried at Dunchurch, Warwickshire, where his wife designed a sun-dial in his memory. Verses were written about him standing in the 1832 election – '... And shall we then give the dear freedom we've won To vapourising bullies like booby Lord John?' John Charles (1864–1935) 2nd son of William, the 6th Duke, He trained for the Navy, passing his entrance examination at the age of 12, and served for several years at sea, reaching the rank of Lieutenant at the age of 19. However, his naval career was cut short by the accidental death of his elder brother Walter Henry in 1886, when he became Earl of Dalkeith. After marriage he settled at Eildon Hall, while being heir to the Dukedom. He became the 7th Duke of Buccleuch on the death of his father in 1914. He was a keen country sportsman, particularly of fox hunting. He was Conservative M.P. for Roxburghshire 1895–1906 while Earl of Dalkeith, beating the Liberal candidate Mark Napier. He was Deputy Lieutenant of Roxburgh 1915–35 and also served as a J.P. for Selkirkshire and Roxburghshire. He was also Captain General of the Royal Company of Archers and Honorary Colonel in the Royal Artillery (Territorial Army). He was Lord Clerk Register for Scotland 1926–35. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1889. He was also Honorary President of the Hawick & Wilton Cricket Club and of Hawick R.F.C. He was made an Honorary Burgess in 1904 when the Library was opened, and was present at the unveiling of the Horse Monument in 1914. He also gave the Playing Fields to the

Town in 1933. In 1893 he married Margaret Alice Bridgeman, 2nd daughter of Viscount Newport. Their children were: Margaret Ida, who married Adm. Sir Geoffrey Alan Brooke Hawkins; Walter John, who succeeded; Lt.-Col. William Walter, who married Rachel Douglas-Home, daughter of the 13th Earl of Home; Sybil Anne, who married Charles Bathurst Hele Phipps; Alice Christabel, who married Henry William Frederick Albert Windsor, 1st Duke of Gloucester (and son of George V) and lived to be 102; Mary Theresa, who married David George Brownlow Cecil, Marquis of Exeter; Angela Christine Rose, who married Vice-Adm. Sir Peter Dawnay; and George Francis John, who married Mary Wina Mannin Bishop. He died at Bowhill and was buried at Dalkeith. Richard Walter John (1954–) 10th Duke of Buccleuch, succeeding on the death of his father in 2007. He long managed the Buccleuch estates as the Earl of Dalkeith. He was also Regimental Trustee of the K.O.S.B., and has been involved in several television and arts bodies. He married Lady Elizabeth Kerr (daughter of the Marquess of Lothian) and their children are: Walter; Lord Charles; and Lady Amabel. Lady Sybil Anne (1899–1990) 4th eldest child of John Charles, 7th Duke of Buccleuch. At the age of 14 she was given the honour of unveiling the Horse Memorial in Hawick. In 1919 she married Charles Bathurst Hele Phipps and they had 4 children. Walter Francis (1806–1884) 5th Duke of Buccleuch and 7th Duke of Queensberry, son of Charles Montagu-Scott. He was born at Dalkeith House and succeeded when he was 13. He was the Honorable Walter Francis Montagu until the death of his elder brother, then had the title of Lord Whitchester until his father became Duke after which he was the Earl of Dalkeith. He was a Commissioner of Selkirkshire (as the Earl of Dalkeith) in 1819. He succeeded to the Buccleuch titles on the death of his father in 1819. His guardian was his uncle, Lord Montagu, and he was sent to Eton to be educated, but had to leave due to ill-health. He later attended St. John's College, Cambridge. He was made an Honorary Burgess when passing through Hawick for the first time in 1821. In 1822 he was host to George IV at Dalkeith House for a fortnight (and repeated this for Queen Victoria in 1842). Celebrations for his coming of age (in 1827) were somewhat tempered by the recent death of his grandmother, Duchess Elizabeth. He subscribed to 3 copies of Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. In 1827 there was a great celebration in

Hawick, with an ox roasted at the Tower Knowe, distributed to all comers, along with 500 loaves and a hogshead of ale, with the Town illuminated along with fireworks and a beacon at Crumhaugh-hill. He was made Lord Lieutenant of Midlothian in 1828 and Roxburghshire in 1841. In 1829 he took his seat in the House of Lords as the Earl of Doncaster. and was a staunch Conservative in politics. However, in later years he changed his position and became a supporter of the repeal of the Corn Laws. He had Granton Harbour built in 1835. In 1838 he became Captain-General of the Royal Company of Archers. In 1839 there was a banquet held at Branhholme to celebrate his return from a long trip to Europe. A pavilion in the style of a baronial hall was erected on the Castle green (by Smith of Darnick), able to seat about 1,000 people; the chairman of the event was James Grieve of Branhholme Braes and above the chair was a buck's head with the word 'Bellen-den' in gold lettering. Sometimes referred to as 'the Good Duke Walter', among his gifts to the town were Hawick Old Parish Church, the repair of St. Mary's, St. Cuthbert's Episcopal Church, parsonage and school, Buccleuch School, school-house and grounds, St. Mary's School, the sites for the Corn Exchange, Cottage Hospital and the Industrial (Drumlanrig) School, and facilities for the Allan and Dod water works. He performed the turning on ceremonies for both the Allan and Dod supplies. He also remitted customs that were traditionally levied by the Baron, cancelled a debt owed to him by the Road Trust, feued land to the Hawick Working Men's Building Society, and gave fields to the Bowling and Cricket Clubs at minimal rent. He served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He became a Privy Councillor in 1842 and Lord Privy Seal in 1842–46 in Sir Robert Peel's administration, and was also President of the Council, as well as being 'Gold Stick' in 2 coronations. He regularly attended the House of Lords, but seldom spoke. He was Colonel of the Edinburgh Militia, the 'Duke's Canaries'. He was also President of the Highland Agricultural Society, the Society of Antiquaries, the Architectural Society of Scotland and the British Association as well as Chancellor of Glasgow University, Vice-President of the Royal Institution for the Encouragement of the Fine Arts and leading member of the Board of Trustees for Manufactures. He was heavily involved in agricultural improvements, and headed the subscription list for enlarging Edinburgh university. He received honorary degrees from Glasgow, Edinburgh and Cambridge Universities. As a member of the Bannatyne Club he funded the publication of the 'Chartulary of Melrose' in 1837. In the 1850s he wrote to the tenants of his farms, urging them to preserve any monuments of antiquity. A dinner was held in his honour in Edinburgh in 1878 on the occasion of his jubilee as landlord, with an illuminated address being signed by 700 tenants. His statue stands in front of St. Giles Kirk in Edinburgh, with a decorated pedestal showing scenes from the history of his family. The Buccleuch Memorial was erected in his honour, Duke Street was named after him, and a portrait of him by Knighton Warren (commissioned by the Council) hangs in the Town Hall. In 1829 he married Lady Charlotte Anne Thynne, youngest daughter of Thomas, 2nd Marquis of Bath, who was Mistress of the Robes to Queen Victoria; she died in 1895, aged 84. Their children were: William Henry Walter (b.1831), who succeeded as 6th Duke; Henry John (b.1832); Walter Charles (b.1834), Captain of the 15th Hussars, who married Anna Maria, daughter of Sir William Edmund Cradock Hartopp; Francis Robert (b.1837), who died aged 2; Charles Thomas (b.1839), Admiral in the Royal Navy; Victoria Alexandrina (b.1844), who married the Marquess of Lothian and secondly married Bertram Talbot; Margaret Elizabeth (b.1846), who married Donald Cameron of Lochiel; and Mary Charlotte (b.1851), who married Walter Rodolph Trefusis. He died at Bowhill after being Duke for an unprecedented 65 years, and was buried at Dalkeith. Walter Francis John 'Johnnie' (1923–2007) 9th Duke of Buccleuch, son of Walter John, he attended Eton and served in the Navy during WWII. He then studied agriculture and forestry at Oxford and became Director of the Buccleuch Estates in 1949. He served as a Roxburghshire County Councillor 1958–60. He was Conservative M.P. for Edinburgh North, 1960–73, as Earl of Dalkeith. He was also Captain in the Royal Company of Archers, Lord Lieutenant of Roxburgh, Ettrick & Lauderdale, President of the Royal Highland and Agricultural Society for Scotland and served on committees for many benevolent organisations, including advocating for those with disabilities. In 1971 he injured his spine in a hunting accident, and was then confined to a wheelchair. In 1973 he succeeded to the Buccleuch titles on the death of his father. He was then in the House of Lords until the removal of hereditary peers in 1999. He was made a Knight of the Thistle in 1978, and changed his surname back to simply 'Scott'. He married Jane McNeill of Colonsay in 1953 (she had been a famous model) and they had 4 children: Richard, who succeeded; Lord William, who married Hafize Berrin Torolsan; Lady Charlotte-Anne, who married Count Bernard de Castellane; and Lord Damian, who married Elizabeth Powis. He was the biggest landowner in the U.K. (about 400 square miles), and owned many great art treasures (including da Vinci's 'Madonna and the Yarnwinder', stolen from Drumlanrig Castle in 2003). He died at Bowhill and his funeral was held at Melrose Abbey. Walter Henry (1861–1886) eldest son of William Henry, 6th Duke of Buccleuch. He had the title Lord Eskdale. He died from a gun accident when stalking deer near Achnacarry, and so the Dukedom was eventually inherited by his younger brother John Charles. Walter John (1894–1973) son of John Charles, he became the 8th Duke of Buccleuch in 1935. He was educated at Eton and Christ Church College, Oxford. He was a soldier, politician, farmer and banker, as well as Lord Steward of Her Majesty's Household and Chancellor of the Order of the Thistle. He was Commanding Officer of the 4th Battalion K.O.S.B. 1923–30. He was M.P. for Roxburgh and Selkirk Counties 1929–35 (while Lord Dalkeith) and was made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1933. He was also Lord Lieutenant of Roxburghshire 1932–73 and Captain General of the Royal Company of Archers, as well as being a J.P. for Roxburghshire and Dumfriesshire and Deputy-Lieutenant of Selkirkshire. He served as Aide-de-Camp to the Governor-General of Canada. He received honorary degrees from Edinburgh and St. Andrews Universities. In 1921 he married Vreda Esther Mary, daughter of Maj. William Frank Lascelles. Their children were: Elizabeth Diana, who married Hugh Algernon Percy, 10th Duke of Northumberland; Walter Francis John, who succeeded; and Caroline Margaret, who married Sir Ian Hedworth John Little Gilmour, Baron of Craigmillar. William Henry Walter (1831–1914) son of Walter, he had been Earl of Dalkeith, and became the 6th Duke of Buccleuch and 8th of Queensberry in 1884. He was educated at Eton and Christ Church College, Oxford. He was M.P. for Mid-Lothian 1853–68 and 1874–80 and stood unsuccessfully against Gladstone in the 1880 election. He was also Lord Lieutenant for Dumfriesshire from 1858 and Lieut.-Gen. of the Royal Company of Archers. He served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace in Roxburghshire. In 1885 he was made an Honorary Burgess when the foundation stone of the new Town Hall was laid and the Cottage Hospital opened (both by his wife); he then became first President of the Cottage Hospital Board of Management. He was President of the Hawick Fine Art Association and the Upper Teviotdale Fisheries Association and Patron of the Archæological Society and the West Teviotdale Agricultural Society. He presented a prize bat for the best batsman of the Hawick and Wilton Cricket Club in the late 1800s. In 1901 he was made a Privy Councillor. He also opened the Museum in Wilton Lodge in 1910 and was presented with a golden key in commemoration of his recent golden wedding. In 1859 he married Louisa Jane Hamilton, 3rd daughter of James, Duke of Abercorn; she was Mistress of the Robes to Queen Victoria and Queen Alexandra. Their children were: Walter Henry, Lord Eskdale, who died in a shooting accident aged 25; John Charles, who succeeded; George William, Captain in the 10th Hussars, who married Elizabeth Emily Manners, youngest daughter of the Duke of Rutland; Henry Francis, Major in the Royal Scots, who died unmarried; Herbert Andrew, Captain in the Irish Guards, who planted the British flag at Pretoria, and married Marie Josephine, daughter of James Edwards; Francis George, Aide-de-Camp to the Viceroy of India and married Eileen Nina Sibell Elliot-Murray-Kynynmound, daughter of the 4th Earl of Minto; Katherine Mary, married Major Thomas Brand, eldest son of Viscount Hampden; and Constance Anne, who married Douglas Halyburton, son of the 1st Earl Cairns. Lord William Walter (1896–1958) son of John Charles, the 7th Duke of Buccleuch and brother of Walter John, the 8th Duke. He was educated at Eton and Sandhurst. He was Captain in the 10th Hussars, received the Military Cross in 1919 and was Aide-de-Camp to the Governor-General of Canada 1925–26. He was also admitted to the Royal Company of Archers. He was Conservative M.P. for Roxburghshire & Selkirkshire 1935–1950, losing to Liberal A.J.F. MacDonald. In the 1930s he was connected with Sir Oswald Moseley's 'January Club' and British Union of Fascists. He is also referred to as Lt. Col. Scott. He married Lady Rachel Douglas-Home, daughter of the 13th Earl of Home and they had 5 children: Margaret Elizabeth; Frances Henrietta; Rosemary Alice; Jean Louise; and Walter William. He lived at Eildon Hall, St. Boswells. (the name is also sometimes un-hyphenated and occasionally spelled 'Montague').

Montagu-Scott (mon-ta-gew-sko) n. Charles William Henry (1772–1819) eldest surviving son of Henry Scott of Buccleuch and Lady Elizabeth Monatagu. He was called the Earl of Dalkeith during his father's lifetime. Educated at Eton, he was an English M.P. for Marlborough, Ludgershall, St. Michaels and Marlborough (again) in the years 1793–1807. He was called to the House of Lords as Baron Tynedale in 1807 and became the 4th Duke of Buccleuch and 6th of Queensberry in 1812. He was Lord Lieutenant of Selkirkshire 1794–1819 and Dumfriesshire 1810–19, as well as Colonel Commandant of the Dumfries Militia. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1813. He was also President of the Pitt Club of Scotland, Governor of the Royal Bank and President of the Highland Society. He provided assistance to both Sir Walter Scott and the Ettrick Shepherd (to whom he gave free tenancy of the farm of Altrieve), and had the 'Lay of the Last Minstrel' dedicated to him. He was on the subscription list for Jamieson's Scots dictionary in 1808. He was present at the 'Carterhaugh Baa' in 1815. He repaired Drumlanrig Castle and generally improved the Queensberry estates. However, Robert Wilson describes how he was reluctant to grant feus for woollen mill development on his property around Hawick. It is said that he led a relatively quiet and religious life, managing his estates rather than spending time in London. In 1795 he married Harriet Katherine Townshend, 4th daughter of Thomas, Viscount Sydney; she died in 1814. He was succeeded by his eldest son Walter Francis (1806–84), when the surname Montagu-Douglas-Scott began to be used. His other children were: Anne Elizabeth (1796–1844), who died unmarried, aged 47; George Henry (1798–1808), Lord Scott, who died of measles while a schoolboy at Eton; Charlotte Albinia (1799–1828), who married James Thomas, 4th Earl of Courtown, and died in Rome; Isabella Mary (1800–29), who married Peregrine Francis Cost; Katherine Frances (1803–14), who died aged 10; John Douglas (1809–60), who was M.P. for Roxburghshire; Margaret Harriet (1811–46), who married Charles Viscount Marsham, who was later Earl of Romney; and Harriet Janet Sarah (1814–70), who married Rev. Edward Moore, Honorary Canon of Canterbury Cathedral. In ill-health for at least 6 years, he died in Lisbon, where he had gone for his health, and

Montagu Street (mon-ta-gew-stree) n. street in Newcastleton off North Hermitage Street, opposite Whitcheater Street.

Montbenger (mont-beng-gur) n. lands in the upper Yarrow valley, near where the B709 meets the A708. These were Crown lands in the latter part of the 15th century, held by the Crichtons of Cranston Riddell in the early 16th century. It was owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch in the 16th and 17th centuries. William Elliot of Horsleyhill claimed he was owed ‘mails’ for his steading at the Easter part there in 1575/6. There were Scotts there in the 17th century (also written ‘Mountbenger’; it is ‘Mountbergeris’ in 1456, ‘Montbengear’ in 1468, ‘Monbrenearis’ in 1471, ‘Montberberis Estir et Westir’ in 1502, ‘Montbergar Wester’ and ‘Montbergar Eister’ in 1541, ‘Montberngeare, Estir and Westir’ in 1542, ‘Ester and Wester Montbenger’ in 1550, Montbenger Eistir’ in 1575/6, ‘Eister et Wester Montberringeris’ in 1634 and ‘Easter and Wester Montbengeris’ in 1663).

Monteath (mon-teeth) n. Miss (19th/20th C.) of St. Boswells. She rode on Common Riding Friday in 1914, perhaps the first woman to do this.

Monteath Mausoleum (mon-teeth-maw-zō-lee-um) n. mausoleum just west of Lilliard’s Edge, built in a domed Byzantine style with decorations reminiscent of India. It is the tomb of Gen. Sir Thomas Monteath Douglas (of Stonebyres, Lanarkshire), who had a distinguished military career in the early 19th century, spending much of his time in India. It was designed by the Edinburgh architects Peddie & Kinneir and erected in 1864 by Harkness, stonemasons of Hawick, under the supervision of Sir Thomas himself (with the lions carved by Alex Pirnie). The general took up residence there in 1868.

Monteviot Hoose (mon-teev-yi’-hoos) n. stately home about 2 miles south of Jedburgh. The lands there were held by the Earl of Lothian in 1678. The mansion was created from a farmhouse around 1740, with much later alteration. The lands were described in 1788 as ‘Spittal, now called Mount Teviot’. The house was lived in by Adm. John Elliot, then the Kerrs, and is now the seat of the Marquess of Lothian. The landscaping of the estate is on a grand scale compared with the modest size of the house – ‘Here stands Mountiviot, opening to the eye A second paradise for rural sweets ...’ [JR] (the name first appears as ‘Teviotmount’ in 1665, although the area was formerly known as ‘Ancrum Spittal’).

Montgomery (mont-gu-mu-ree) n. Agnes Brown (1866–1946) daughter of Hawick shoemaker George. In 1887 she was probably the ‘Miss Montgomery’ who was Lass to Cornet Tom Scott. In that capacity she was the first person to carry the bussed Flag in the Council Chambers, rather than take it to be displayed in a pub; however, it seems that the Provost’s sister, Jessie Watson actually bussed the Flag that year. In 1891 she married John Muir Hugh in Edinburgh and they had children Elizabeth Ballantyne (b.1892), Thomas Hugh (b.1894) and Jean Muir (b.1895). David (19th C.) married Mary Douglas in Denholm in 1821. George (18th C.) witnessed a baptism in Hawick for surgeon Walter Scott in 1731. George (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Douglas and their children included William (b.1833). George (d.1835) cooper of the Kirk Wynd, recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. Perhaps the same George was a cooper in Denholm on the 1801 ballot for the Militia. George (b.1824/5–1904) shoemaker in Hawick. In 1861 he was a boarder with Walter Ballantyne at 7 Back Row, and was employing 3 men. He may have first married Margaret Elliot in 1844. He married Elizabeth (‘Betsy’, 1832–94) Ballantyne in 1854. His children included: George (b.1844/5), presumably from his first marriage; Elizabeth (b.1856/7), born in the U.S.A.; John (b.1858); and Walter (b.1860); James (1864–1921), who married Margaret Dawson; and Agnes Brown (1866–1946). He died at 66 High Street and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. George (19th C.) resident of Hawick who married Sarah Elder. Their children included: Isabella Elder (b.1881). James (1721–1803) born in Peeblesshire, he was appointed Sheriff there at age 27, then served as M.P. for Dumfriesshire and for Peeblesshire before becoming Solicitor General and then Lord Advocate. He was often called upon as a legal arbitrator, and in that role he was asked for his opinion on Hawick’s rights to the Common in 1765, driven by the Town’s intention to put the land to better use. His opinion at that time was that the Common belonged jointly to the successors to the particates named in the Charter of 1537 and ‘neither the Duke of Buccleuch as superior, nor the Burgesses who have neither houses nor lands, are entitled to any share in the division’. After the Council decided to let parts of the Common adjacent to the neighbouring lands, he was again asked his opinion in 1766. This time his opinion had changed somewhat and he suggested that the Duke's tenants may have a right of pasturage on the Common, and he recommended formal arbitration to resolve the issue. He appears to have given no weight at all to the annual marking of the boundaries of the Common by the Burgesses of Hawick. He was in fact later the issuer of the decision to give 30% of the Common Moor to Buccleuch and other neighbouring landowners; this despite the fact that he was a close friend of the Duke of Buccleuch (working in Parliament to pass the Bank of Ayr bill, which directly affected both the Buccleuch and Queensberry estates), and hence could hardly be considered to be impartial. In 1777 he was appointed Chief Baron of the Exchequer. In 1778 the Magistrates of Hawick presented him with a carpet, stating that he 'did not know that any carpets of such size, without a seam, had been made in this country'. He purchased Stanhope in Peeblesshire and was said to be enthusiastic about agricultural improvement. He retired in 1801 as Baronet of Stobo. James (18th C.) recorded at Hummelknowshaugh in 1780. He married Isabel Douglas and their children included George (b.1780). James (b.c.1805) recorded as a horse-keeper on the Fore Row in 1841. His wife was Sarah, and their children included Mary, James, Agnes and Elizabeth. James (19th/20th C.) local cricketer, having the highest batting average for the Hawick and Wilton club in the 13 years from 1886 until 1898. He also scored 43 in a match for Roxburgh County against an M.C.C. visiting side in 1895. Janet (18th/19th C.) grocer on the Howegate, listed in Pigot's 1837 directory. John (b.1814/5) shoemaker who lived at 'Kirkgate' (i.e. St. Mary's Place) according to the 1851 census. He is probably the John listed as a shopkeeper on Needle Street in Slater's 1852 directory. He firstly married Agnes Smith in Wilton in 1837, but she died in 1840. His second wife was Isabel and their children included Agnes, Elizabeth, Janet and Ann H. His wife may have been Isabel Cairns, recorded as a school mistress in 1841. Robert (16th C.) minister at Stirling, he was appointed as titular Archbishop of Glasgow in 1581, even although he had opposed episcopalianism. However, these were troubled times, his appointment was disputed, there were violent clashes at Glasgow Cathedral and he was deprived in 1585. He was later minister in Ayrshire.

Robert (18th C.) married Janet Douglas in Denholm in 1787. Walter B. (19th/20th C.) lived at Briar Lea on Wilton Hill. His wife was Janet. Their sons George and James Richardson were killed in WWI, while 2 other sons survived. William Augustus (1872–1948) born in Hawick, he studied piano, organ and music theory, graduating with a B. Mus. from Durham in 1897. He was organist and choirmaster in Gainsborough Parish in England and emigrated to Canada in 1913. There he was organist and choirmaster in Sherbrooke, Calgary and Halifax. He published more than 100 musical compositions, including works for voice, organ, piano and violin (also spelled 'Montgomerie' and 'Montgomery').

Moodie (moo-dee) n. George (b.1823/4) son of Robert. He was a millwright on Sunnyside in Denholm. He also served as the Registrar and Inspector of Poor for Cavers Parish. In the 1860s he and his father Robert are recorded together as millwrights. He married Elizabeth Turnbull, and their children included: Jane; Robert; and Elizabeth O. James (18th/19th C.) millwright in Lilliesleaf, as recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He could be the James whose children baptised in Lilliesleaf included: Robert (b.1789); Thomas (b.1790), also a millwright; and James (b.1800). He may also be the James who married Janet Inglis and had children: Jean (b.1806); Mary (b.1808); John (b.1811); Janet (b.1813); and Christian (b.1815). John (16th C.) probably name for a tenant or similar associates of James Douglas of Cavers recorded in 1541. His name appears to be 'Johnne mudy'. Robert (18th C.) resident of Rigg (i.e. Caerlenrig) in 1731 when his son William was baptised in Cavers Parish.

Robert (d.1783) wright in Lilliesleaf. James Hunter served his apprenticeship with him and later fell off the steeple in Jedburgh. Robert (b.1789) from Lilliesleaf Parish, son of James, he was millwright in Denholm. He is probably the millwright of that name who gave a valuation for machinery in Selkirk in 1836. He is recorded in Denholm in 1837 and in 1841 was probably on Leyden Road. He married Elizabeth Oliver, and their children (baptised in Cavers Parish) included: James (b.1820); Elizabeth (b.1821); George (b.1823); Jane (or 'Jenny', b.1826); Alison (b.1828); Margaret (b.1831); Mary (b.1833); Robert (b.1836); Mary (again, b.1838); and Andrew (b.1841). He was still alive in 1861, and recorded around Leyden Road. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. He married Elizabeth Lister and their children included: James (b.1817); Agnes (b.1820); and George (b.1822). He could be the same man as the millwright, if he married twice. Thomas (b.1790) son of James, he was a millwright on Main Street in Lilliesleaf, recorded in Pigot's 1837 directory. In Slater's 1852 directory he was listed as a millwright and wright in Lilliesleaf. In 1831 he married Agnes Burn (or Burns) and their children included: William (b.1827/8), illegitimate child with Isabella Fall; Jessie (b.1832); Jane (b.1834); Agnes (b.1835); George (b.1837); Thomas (b.1839/40); Helen (b.1842/3); Robert (b.1845); John (b.1847); and Jemima (b.1852). He died before 1861, when his widow was recorded as head of the household (also spelled 'Muddie' and 'Mudie').

Moodlaw (mood-law) n. small Loch and steading at the head of the streams that feed the Rankle Burn, lying just over the border into Dumfries and Galloway. The boundary of Hawick Parish once extended almost this far. Robert Turnbull was recorded there in 1494/5. In the 19th century the lake was divided among the parishes of Roberton, Eskdalemuir and Ettrick, with the counties of Roxburghshire, Selkirkshire and Dumfriesshire meeting in the middle.

mool (mool) n., poet. soil, dust – 'The mool is heavy on the heart that loved us true an' free ...' [JoHa], '...whan I gae down intil the pitt? Sall the mool prayse thee?' [HSR], '...an' his enmies sall lick the mool' [HSR] (see also muil).

mool (mool) v., poet. to moulder – 'For laughing Fun she is the lass, That keeps the mind frae moolin'' [JoHa].

Moore see Moore

the Moor (thu-moor) n. another name for the Mair.

Moore (moor) n. Adam (b.1811) son of James and Betty Nichol. He was a road contractor in Castleton Parish. He was recorded as a labourer at Whiteknowe in 1835–7, Upperraw in 1838, Pinglehole in 1840 and Riccarton in 1841. He was a road contractor at Riccarton Cottages in 1861. He married Janet Elliot and their children included James (b.1833), Mary (b.1834), James (again, b.1837), Elizabeth (b.1839), Elizabeth (again, b.1843), Janet (b.1846), Matthew (b.1849), John (b.1851), William (b.1853), an unnamed child (b.1855), Adam (b.1856) and Ann (b.1859). His wife lived the last few years of her life with her son James at Bonchester Bridge, and was buried in Castleton in 1907. Alexander (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Easter Burnfoot in 1723 and Appletreehall in 1724 and 1727. In 1721 he witnessed a baptism for Robert Riddell in East Burnfoot and in 1727 a baptism for William Scott in Newton. He married Marion Miller in Wilton Parish, and the 'bell and mortcloth' were hired for her funeral in 1738. Their children included: Margaret (b.1718); Adam (b.1721); John (b.1723); Alexander (b.1724); and Elspeth (b.1727). The witnesses in 1724 were Walter and John Scott and in 1727 were James and John Dryden. Alexander (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Borthaugh in 1748. He married Mary Brown in 1738 and their children included: George (b.1739); James (b.1745); George (again, b.1748); and Adam (b.1750). James (18th/19th C.) servant, labourer and hind at Dinlabyre. He was listed among male heads of households 1835–41. He emigrated to America in 1841. James (b.1837) son of Adam and Janet Elliot, he was born at the Knowe in Castleton Parish. He moved to Rulewater, to take over from his son James as carrier in that district. He then succeeded Thomas Smail as carter at Wolfelee. In 1863 he married Jane, daughter of Robert Thomson and sister of Andrew, who was shepherd at Wigg. Their children included: Margaret (b.1863); Janet (b.1865); Adam (b.1867), hind at Bonchester; Robina Thomson (b.1869); Mary Ann (b.1871); Jane (b.1873); James, who was carter in Rulewater for about 5 years; Andrew Thomson (b.1881); and Matthew, who worked with his father. John (17th C.) servant to Walter Scott of Westport. In 1679 Janet Henderson was cited by the Council for publicly accusing him of 'stealing of ane pair of plaiding hose off some thorns'. Rev. John (19th/20th C.) from Alloa, he was minister at Hawick Baptist Church 1919–22. He arrived just after the manse was built. He was involved in open air sermons and the 'no-licence' movement. He was afterwards minister at Bridgeton and then Buckie. Michael (1965–) born in Northern Ireland, son of a Chaplain in the Army. The family moved to the Borders in 1981 when Rev. William H. became minister of Ancrum, Jedburgh Old Parish and Edgerston. He attended Edinburgh University and worked as a researcher for Archy Kirkwood. He then worked as a chartered accountant before taking over as Liberal M.P. for Tweeddale, Ettrick & Lauderdale from David Steel in 1997. After boundary changes he was elected M.P. for the new Berwickshire, Roxburgh & Selkirk seat in 2005. Re-elected in 2010 he became Secretary of State for Scotland (also written 'Moor', 'More' and 'Mour'; the name may have formerly been the same as Muir).

Moorfield see Muirfield

Moormaw (moor-maw) n. former farm in Hassendean Parish, later called 'Lees', with 'West Lees' still existing. Charters for the Easter and Wester parts was granted by John Scott of Burnhead to John Scott, Vicar of Hawick in 1535 and 1539. And in 1544 East Moormaw was sold by John Scott, Vicar of Hawick back to John Scott of Burnhead. However, in 1606 William Scott in Catslack was served heir to these lands of his great-grand-uncle, John Scott, Vicar of Hawick; at that point Easter Moormaw was a '40 shilling land'. It is recorded being occupied by a branch of the Scott family in 1666. It is probably the place where Walter Scott of Catslack paid the land tax on £52 in 1663 and John Scott of Catslack in 1678. It seems possible it is the 'milnmaue' in Hassendean Parish, where Andrew Donald and Thomas Sanderson were located at the time of the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. It is the 'Mowmaw, or Millmae, commonly called Lees' owned by William Scott of Burnhead and valued at £52 according to the Land Tax Rolls of 1811 (also written 'Muremaw'; it is 'Murmaw' in 1544 and transcribed 'Eister Mirmawok' in 1607; see also Milma).

moor-powt (moor-pow) n., poet. a young grouse, used as a term of endearment – 'Come, my pretty moor-powt, favour me with a single glance of your bonny face' [JTe].

Moorsom (moor-sum) n. Jermyn (d.1951) married Pamela Irene Milborne-Swinnerton-Pilkington and lived at Hyndlee. His brother, Raisley Stuart (1892–1981) was involved with the Bloomsbury set between the Wars.

moose (moos) n. a mouse – 'ee're no feard o a wee moose, ir ee?', 'Well aw feel like a moose in Hamlin toon When aw hear the Drums an' Fifes gaun roon' [MB], 'This century-auld cat and moose ploy has had a bad psychological effect on the Station ...' [DH].

Moose (moos) n. nickname for Robert Paitioner in the late 19th century and more recently for Ian Nichol.

the Moose (thu-moos) n. nickname in use in the early 19th century (possibly the same as Moose).

the Moose's Den (thu-moo-seez-den) n. former name for the 'snug' in the Queen's Heid.

moosey (moo-see) n. a small mouse, often used affectionately – 'moosey, moosey, change yer hoosey' (also spelled 'moosie').

Moosey Gray (moo-see-grā) n. nickname for some male members of the local Gray family.

mop-mop (mop-mop) n., arch. pet name for a rabbit.

moppy (mo-pee) n., arch. a bunny, childish name for a rabbit – '...ti girn the bits o moppies skiltin aboot' [ECS], 'Ther's a moppie gaen skiddlin owre that paster the now, duist' [ECS] (also written 'moppie').

Moravia see Murray

Moray see Murray

Morebattle (mōr-baw'-ul) n. village in the eastern Borders, on the Kale Water. There are several ancient encampments near here, as well as the reconstructed 16th century Corbet Tower. A fire in the Manse there destroyed the pre-1708 records of the entire Synod of Merse and Teviotdale (the origin is probably Old English for 'building by the lake', since a lake near there was only drained in the 19th century; the name first appears in about 1120 as 'Mereboda').

Morlaw (mor-law, -lō) n. Duncan (15th C.) witness to Hawick's earliest known sasine in 1453. His name is written 'Morlay'. It is reasonable to think that he was an ancestor of the later Morlaws in Hawick. Isobel (17th C.) recorded in Hawick in 1641. She was ordered to pay money that she owed Helen Deans as her fee for a period in the previous year, 'but assoilzied fra her hois and schone'. Presumably Deans was a servant of hers. Janet (17th C.) resident of Dean Mill recorded in a 1650 list of communicants (recorded as 'Jannet Morling'). She may have been one of the last descendants of John to have the family name. James (16th C.) recorded as witness to a Hawick sasine of 1558, where his name is recorded as 'Morlaw'. It is easy to imagine that he was son of John from the 1537 Charter. John (16th C.) recorded in the Selkirk Protocol Books of 1530/1

when he purchased rigs from William and Adam Ker in Shaws. In 1532 he purchased from William Walker a croft and a tenement in Hawick. He was recorded as being 'John Morlawe of Todschawe', suggesting that he owned the lands of Todshaw in the Borthwick valley. His tenement was at the Tower Knowe, described as being 'on the north side of the king's street between the tenement of Alexander Paslaw on the east, the Slytryk water on the west and north and the said king's street on the south', while the croft 'lies on the east side of the Slytryk water with the Teviot water on the north and the tenement of James Blair on the west'. The croft is surely what became known as Morlaw's Croft (and so the 'east' in the Selkirk record must be an error for 'west'). Perhaps the same John is recorded in 1532/3 when he purchased rigs in Selkirk from John Scott. He purchased further land in Selkirk from the Kers of Shaws in 1534 and also complained that they owed him 2 bolls of flour. In 1535 he bought a tenement in Selkirk from Alan 'Mithag'. He is also mentioned in the 1537 charter as being the holder of 3 particates on the north side of the main street in Hawick, with his surname written 'Morlo'. He was still recorded as owner of a tenement in 'Peilgait' in Selkirk in 1543. Thomas (16th C.) owner of a tenement on the main street in Selkirk in 1528. In 1530 he gained a rig of land near Selkirk and in 1531 another tenement, according to the Protocol Books. In 1538 he purchased a small piece of land in East Haining. In 1539 he was one of the tenants who Thomas Scott warned to remove themselves from his lands of Haining. However, in 1540 he had sasine for an eighth part of East Haining. In 1542/3 he purchased a tenement in Selkirk and further lands in 1544 (also spelled 'Morlaw', 'Morlawe', 'Morlo', 'Morolawe', etc.; this may be the same surname as the modern 'Morland'/'Moreland' or Morley).

Morlaw's Croft (mor-laz-kroft) n. area of around 2 acres lying to the west of what became Orrock Place. The name was in use in the 18th century, but by the 19th century became referred to as 'the Back o the Yairds'. An item in the Selkirk Protocol Books for 1532 records how the croft was sold to John 'Morlawe' of Todshaw by William Walker, nephew and heir of John Walker. It is described as being 'on the east [which must be an error for 'west'] side of the Slytryk water with the Teviot water on the north and the tenement of James Blair on the west'.

Morlo see Morlaw

Mormons (mor-minz) n., pl. members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, founded in the U.S.A. in the 1820s. Among their activities are sending young men (and now occasionally women) on two year missions, isolated from friends and family, to try to make converts. There was apparently a mormon from Salt Lake City living off Denholm Main Street in the years around 1900. Missionaries have been showing up in Hawick since ??.

morn (mōrn) n. tomorrow is generally referred to as the morn – 'let's gaun oot the morn night', 'It's duist an off-pit o teime hevin ti gaun there the morn' [ECS].

mornin (mōr-neen, -nin) n. morning – 'how er ee this mornin?', 'she's still in mournin this mornin', 'A'll cry in as A gaun bye the morn's morneen' [ECS] (also spelled 'morneen' and most commonly pronounced with een; the time after this but before noon is often called the forenin).

Morpeth (mor-peth) n. town in Northumberland on the Wansbeck River, an important market centre, with a bridge built by Thomas Telford, and an interesting old clock tower. Morpeth Castle was once the seat of the Lords Dacre, Wardens of the Marches. It was also the site of a Covenanter's siege of 1644. It has celebrated the Morpeth Gathering in April since 1968, with the 'Border Cavalcade' commemorating Lord Greystoke's return from Otterburn in 1388. Population 14,400.

Morren (mo-rin) n. John (1863–1950) born in Auchindoir in Aberdeenshire, in 1902 he moved from Aberdeen City Police to be Superintendent of the Hawick Burgh force. He lived at Glenview on Orhrad Terrace. He remained as Chief Constable until 1909, taking over as Chief Constable of the Berwickshire, Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire Constabularies. He retired in 1933 and moved back to Aberdeen. He was awarded the King George V Coronation (Scottish Police) Medal, as well as the O.B.E. He can be seen in a photographic portrait in full uniform, with remarkable moustache.

Morris Clyde (mo-ris-klīd) n. pen-name for the writer of the poem 'The Hawick Gathering Cry', published in 1897.

Morrishaa (mo-ris-haw) n. Morrishall, former farmstead in Wilton Parish, between Wilton Dean and Whitehaugh, near Brieryhill, lying beside the modern Whitehaugh Road. Thomas Sinton was there in 1771. John Morton and family were there in at least 1835–1851. It was probably deserted in the 1850s and derelict soon after.

Morrison

It was also known as 'Murrayshall' (it was 'Morrowshall' in 1771; it is marked on Stobie's 1770 map).

Morrison (mo-ree-sin) n. Alexander (17th/18th C.) son of Robert, baker in Edinburgh, his mother being a Home. In 1693 he was served heir portioner, along with James Dickson and John Shoreswood, in the Barony of Home, inherited from Jean, daughter of John Home. This included superiority over lands in Hassendean, and explicitly Appletreehall, as well as the lands of Redfordgreen, Drycleuchlea, Huntly and Hartwoodburn. James (15th/16th C.) recorded as a fugitive in 1502, this being for the murder of John and James Jackson. William Douglas of Cavers dealt with his escheated goods. Rev. James (1732–1824) born in Perth and Kinross, he was licensed by the Associate Presbytery of Earlston in 1756 and in the same year ordained as minister at Norham (just across the Border). He was Clerk of the Anti-Burgher Synod and Presbytery for more than 50 years. He is one of the people claimed to have started the first Sunday School, this being in 1756 or 1757. It is recorded that in 1766 he was in Hawick to perform a baptism for Robert Brown and Agnes Scott, members of the Anti-Burgher congregation, who did not yet have a local minister of their own. It thus appears that he may have been a temporary preacher at the Green Kirk, before John Young arrived. He is buried at Norham. James (1816–93) evangelical preacher who was one of the founders of the Evangelical Union, after being ousted from the Synod of the United Secession Church in 1841. His first visit to the Borders was to preach in Hawick and Denholm in a December of the mid-1840s. On one Sunday he preached at the old Cameronian Chapel in Denholm, then in the open air at the Tower Knowe to a crowd of 700–800, and finally in the Subscription Rooms (with the seats removed) to perhaps 1,000. This was part of the impetus for forming Hawick Congregational Kirk in 1848. He returned in early 1849 to formally induct Alexander Duff as the first E.U. minister in Hawick and later to open the new church. James (b.1829/30) from Lanark, he was head gardener at Wauchope in the 1860s. His wife was Helen and their children included John, Anne H. and Elizabeth. John (b.1822/3) head gardener at Weens in the 1860s. From Lanark, he was probably younger brother of James, gardener at Wauchope. His wife was Mary and they had a daughter Mary J.D. Robert (18th C.) merchant in Hawick. He was described as late Bailie in 1735 in the deposition where the widow of Robert Scott of Falnash sold her property on the Howegate to Patrick Hardie. William (16th C.) tailor who was owed money according to the last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1574. It is unclear if he was from the Hawick area or Edinburgh. William (19th C.) earthenware and glass dealer on Needle Street, listed in Slater's 1852 directory. He could be the William listed in the 1851 census as a boot closer from Edinburgh, living as a lodger on the Round Close. William, J.P. (1839–92) born in Craig Madderty, Perthshire, he became a detective with the Leith Constabulary, then came to Hawick around 1865. He acted as Super-intendent of Police and Procurator-Fiscal for the Burgh for 11 years, as well as being Fire-master and managing the Hawick Advertiser from 1876–90. His company was printer, publisher, book-seller and stationer at 3 High Street. He was on the Town Council for at least a dozen years, serving as a Bailie for most of that time, and being a candidate for Provost. For several years he provided the refreshments for the riders at Myrselawgreen on the Friday of the Common Riding. He was the first Bailie to carry the Flag at the Chase in 1887 when that practice was revived (and the Provost of the day could not ride). However, in 1890 he galloped round the course with the Flag, to the cheers of the crowd, but the derision of the Common Riding organisers, since it was against all tradition. He was also Chairman of the Parochial Board, as well as being involved with the School Board, the Gas Company board, the Hawick Bowling Club, the Masons and the Common Riding. He was a Liberal in politics and was a candidate for Provost in 1890. He left Hawick suddenly in 1890 and died accidentally near Seattle (U.S.A.) a year and a half later. His wife was Margaret Gregg, who wrote some poetry under the pseudonym 'M.G.M.' He lived at Morrison Cottage, which gave its name to Morrison Place. Mrs. William nee Gregg (1834–98) wife of Bailie Morrison, whom she married in Leith in 1862. They had 6 children in Hawick. She wrote poetry in the local papers and in 'Modern Scottish Poets' using the initials M.G.M. She died at 3 Morrison Place. William (1863–1911) only child of Bailie William to reach adulthood. He grew up in Hawick, became a printer with his father, emigrated to Australia in 1883 and became the New South Wales Government Printer.

Morrison Cottage (mo-ree-sin-ko'-eej) n. house built by William Morrison on what became known as Morrison Place, and still exists there.

Morrison Place (mo-ree-sin-plis) n. originally part of the ‘Green Wynd’ it was named in 1883 after Morrison Cottage, built by William Morrison there. The street was popularly known in the 19th century as Hospital Brae. It is likely that it runs along part of what was known as the ‘Common Vennel at Myreslawgreen’ at the time of the 1537 Charter.

Morrison’s (mo-ree-sinz) n. W. Morrison & Co., printers, publishers, stationers, booksellers and bookbinders at 3 High Street in the latter part of the 19th century. It was run by William Morrison, joined by his son, also William. The company’s ‘Business Directory’ came out in at least the year 1890.

mort (mor) n., arch. the skin of a sheep that has died a natural death – ‘Mort-woo, Wool of such skins’ [JoJ] (also ‘murt’).

mort-cloth (mor’-kloth) n., arch. a black velvet pall placed over coffins on their way to the cemetery. The Hawick Parish one was hired out by the kirk session, the money used to help the poor of the Parish. This was in fact the major source of revenue for the Kirk Session. Deaths were often recorded in the ledgers as ‘mort-cloth’ hires. The Hawick Parish ‘mort-cloth’ was used from at least 1712, and in 1720 a new one was provided by William Elliot of London (who was born at Southfield); this being of Genoan velvet and much finer than the Dutch velvet it replaced. The new cloth was kept by one of the elders (Bailie Ruecastle in 1721). There are also records of a 2nd (presumably the older velvet one, sometimes called ‘the little cloth’, although this may have been intended for children) and even 3rd cloth (possibly just of cheap black material) being rented for lesser fees; in the mid-18th century there were the ‘best’, ‘second’ and ‘littell’ ‘cloaths’. Other mort-cloths owned by incorporated trades were in use until 1721, with a ‘memorial’ against the use of private mort-cloths issued in 1726. The use of the cloth was widely debated in the mid-19th century, it fell into disfavour by the 1860s and is said to have been last used for Tibbie Leithead in 1870. The fee was 18 shillings Scots for those in the town and 20 shillings for the country part of the parish. There were such cloths in use in other parishes, e.g. in Wilton in the 18th century there are records of rentals for the ‘new mort-cloth’, second mortcloth’ and ‘little mortcloth’ – ‘Wm Dickson gave in account of ye profit of ye 2 mortcloths ...’ [PR1724], ‘Received for the bell & mortcloth at the funeral of a stranger who dead at Bundrau ... 14s’ [Wil1729], ‘This day a man in the Hungreyhill was buried having the Mortcloth payed’ [Ash], ‘O, have ye heard the news of late, That things have come to sic a state, The fouk o’ Hawick are talking great Against our bonnie mortcloth, Some say it is a gross abuse, Some say they’ll it nae langer use, And some they will not pay the dues O’ hiring out our mortcloth’ [TP] (also spelled as one word ‘mortcloth’).

mortify (mor-ti-fl) v., arch. to bequeath in perpetuity, particularly when given to a public body – ‘I hereby mortifie and dispone to the said Paroch of Hawick all and hail the Soume of Nine thousand Merks Scots money to ly as ane mortified fund’ [PR], ‘... who are to bestow the money mortified by the late Mr Alexander Orrok, our minister here ...’ [PR1714] (Scots Law term).

mortification (mor-ti-f-kā-shin) n., arch. property or money bequeathed to charity – ‘And by the said mortification her Grace is patron of both for presenting the schoolmaster when vacant ...’ [PR1714].

mortifier (mor-ti-fl-ur) n., arch. one who mortifies, person who bequeaths something to a public body – ‘They in the highlands got the best part thereof according to the desire of the mortifier’ [PR715].

Mortimer (mor’-i-mur, -ee-) n. Rev. Cyrus M. minister of Robertson from 1930–54. He started the first troop of Boy Scouts in Robertson Parish.

Morton (mor’-in) n. Adam (15th C.) bequeathed 6 sheep in the 1491/2 will of Sir David Scott of Branhholme. He is listed as ‘Ade Mortoun’. Adam (17th C.) resident of Briery Yards according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. In 1709 he appears to have been servant to William Scott, tenant in Wilton. He was probably the Adam, married to Anna Henderson, whose children, baptised in Wilton Parish, included Helen (b.1695), Anna (b.1702), Isabel (b.1704), Helen (b.1707) and Jean (b.1709) He is probably the Adam who in 1698 witnessed a baptism for William Scott in Lees and Isabella Morton (perhaps his sister). Andrew (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He witnessed a baptism for John Scott, tenant in Falnash, in 1706. George ‘Geordie’ (16th/17th C.) recorded as ‘in Harrett’ (presumably Harwood) in the 1622 Commissioners’ Court in 1622 when he was cleared, along with Walter Turnbull (tenant of Skelfhill) of stealing 2 sheep from ‘Laird Swarley’ (an Englishman). Rev. James (1783–1865) said to be a cousin of Dr. John Leyden, he was Prebendary of Lincoln and Vicar of Holbeach in Lincolnshire. He wrote

‘The Poetical Remains of the late Dr. John Leyden’ (1819) and ‘Monastic Annals of Teviotdale’ (1832). He became acquainted with William Norman Kennedy after a visit to Hawick, in which he was given a tour of local archaeological sites, along with Robert White of Newcastle. John (15th C.) listed in 1463/4 among the men who were rewarded by the King for assisting in the capture of John Douglas of Balveny, probably part of the force led by Scott of Buccleuch. He is recorded as ‘Johannes de Mortoun’. The other men were Scotts, Turnbells, a Gledstains, a Langlands, a Dalgleish etc., and so he is probably local. John (15th/16th C.) recorded in ‘le craik’ (presumably Craik) in 1502 at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh. He was fined for non-appearance, and acted as his own surety. John (d.c.1683) at Appletreehall in 1683 when his will is recorded. His surname is written ‘Mortoune’. John (b.c.1840) agricultural labourer in Wilton Parish. He was listed at Murrayshall, among heads of households, 1835–41. His wife was Agnes and their children included Jeannie, Isabella, Katherine, Agnes, Betty and Mary. Robert (b.1778/9) from Dalkeith, he was a farmer and gardener living at Damhead in 1841. In 1851 he was at Upper Damside. He is listed as a gardener in Slater’s 1852 directory. His wife was Catherine and their children included William, Catherine and John. Rev. Thomas ‘Tom’ (1919–2013) born in Kilmarnock, he studied Arts at Glasgow University and trained for the ministry there. He was ordained as minister of West Port Kirk in 1945 and remained until 1951. He then moved to St. Nicholas’ Church in Cardonald, and in 1947 was translated to Stonelaw, Rutherglen, where he was minister until he retired in 1986. In 1978–79 he was Moderator of the Glasgow Presbytery. His wife was Netta. William (16th C.) holder of a particate of land on the north side of the public street according to Hawick’s 1537 Charter (also spelled ‘Morten’, ‘Mortin’, ‘Morton’ and ‘Mortoune’; in earlier times this is easily confused with Mertin).

mort-safe (mor’-sāf) n., arch. a device for preventing a coffin from being stolen, often an iron cage that could be locked over a grave. They were prevalent in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. Records in Cavers Parish in 1826 show that 2 such devices were purchased and quite explicit rules laid out for their use, with William Thomson and Robert Dryden in charge. A padlock from the device used at Cavers up until about 1830 is in the Museum.

Moscrop (mos-krop, -krip) n. Adam (16th C.) 2 men with the same name, one ‘Mr.’ and one ‘Sir’ were chaplains and notaries to an instrument following an inquest over disputed land in Jedburgh in 1533. They could easily have been descended from the earlier Patrick and/or James. One of them was probably the Adam who was notary for a sasine of lands in Feu-Rule in 1560 and for a document for Lady Catherine Kerr of Ferniehirst in 1564. ‘Master Adam Mostrope curate in Jed’ was involved in the marriage of John Rutherford of Hunthill and Christian Pringle in 1529. Adam (16th C.) recorded in Riddell in 1580 when his servant Robert witnessed an agreement between James Riddell in Maxton and John Riddell in Newton Mill. Clement (16th/17th C.) listed as ‘in Southfield’ in 1611 when he was part of the assize at the Justice Court on Jedburgh. It is unclear if this was the local Southfield or perhaps the one near Kelso. James (15th C.) one of the witnesses to the 1490 sasine in which Robert Scott purchased land in Hawick from Robert Cessford. His wife may be the ‘uxori Jacobi Moscrops’ who received 40 shillings in the will of Sir David Scott of Branhholme in 1491/2. James (16th/17th C.) one of several local men accused in a 1612 document of charging more than the allowed interest rate on loans. He is described as ‘in Flexis’ (presumably Flex) and was one of the men who appeared to answer the charges. Perhaps the same James is witness to a sasine of 1610 involving the Scotts and the Turnbells and land on the Kirkwynd. John (17th C.) Burgess of Jedburgh. Along with Alexander Kirkton (Provost of Jedburgh) he was joint owner of Nether Bonchester until selling it to Walter Scott in 1653. He was referred to as ‘younger’, suggesting his father was also John. Patrick (15th C.) notary for Hawick’s earliest known sasine in 1453, where he is described as ‘bachelor in decrees, priest, Glasgow diocese’. He was also the notary for the 1452 sasine in which William Douglas of Drumlanrig was regranted the Barony of Hawick; he is there ‘Patricius Moscrops, presbyter Glasguensis diocesis, bacallarius in decretis’. He was notary for the sasine carried out at Milsington in 1453. He was also notary for a legal instrument (relating to lands in Eckford) which was witnessed in the house of John Walche (presumably Waugh) in Hawick in 1454. He was notary for a document relating to the lands of Whitchesters, signed at St. Mary’s Kirk in 1455, and the associated notarial instrument made at Branhholme the following year. He could be the Patrick who had a sasine for ‘Glennysland’ in Roxburghshire in 1461. Probably the same man was witness in 1478 to a document granting rights in Selkirk to David Scott, younger of Branhholme. Robert (15th/16th C.) resident of Jedburgh recorded in 1502 when he had remission for the murder of Gilbert Black, with Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst as his surety. His surname was written ‘mostrope’. Robert (16th C.) recorded in 1580 as servant to Adam in Riddell when he witnessed an agreement between James Riddell in Maxton and John Riddell in Newton Mill. Robert (17th C.) resident of ‘Dodburne in Kirkton Parioch’ according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. William ‘Will’ (16th C.) one of the men indicted in 1552 for involvement in the murder of Sir Walter Scott of Branhholme and Buccleuch. He is recorded as ‘Ville Moscrope in Jedburgh’. William (17th C.) resident of Cavers Parish, his children were baptised in Hawick Parish. He probably lived in the country area towards Teviothead. He married Marion Rae and their children included: Margaret (b.1670); Isobel (b.1672); Janet (b.1676); and an unnamed son (b.1686). The witnesses in 1676 were schoolmaster John Purdom and James Elliot. William (17th/18th C.) married Agnes Turnbull in Bedrule in 1700. William (17th/18th C.) married Cecily Best in Bedrule in 1708. William (18th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. His children included Thomas (b.1762), Mary (b.1767), and Isabel and Janet (b.1769) (also formerly ‘Moscrip’ and ‘Moscrope’).

moss (mos) n. marshy land, bog, morass, moorland, usually high up and sometimes applied to an area used for cutting peats and turfs – ‘He’s guided them o’er moss and muir, O’er hill and houp, and mony ae down’ [T], ‘How swift they flew! no eye could view Their track on heath or hill; Yet swift across both moor and moss, St. Clair did follow still’ [JL], ‘The skulls o’ elk-deer, bisons, tups, Fund i’ the mosses, Worm-eaten duds, auld cheens, an’ raips, Fossils o’ fishes’ [JoHa], ‘... Of the snort of the nags as they toil at the steep; Of the suck of the hoofs when the moss rides deep’ [WHO], rough grass that grows on moorland, especially Eriophorum vaginatum, the hare-tail cotton grass, and related species – ‘The plant, called the moss, rises before any other in the spring, affords excellent nourishment, and is carefully sought after by the flocks’ [RAB] (the word occurs locally in place names, such as Adderstonelee Moss, Barnes Moss, Berry the Moss (thu-mos) n. popular name for the area of wetlands to the south of Lilliesleaf village, also known as Lilliesleaf Moss.

Moss (mos) n. John (17th/18th C.) maltman in Hawick. He witnessed baptisms in Hawick in 1722 for carrier Thomas Porteous, in 1725 for carrier Thomas Porteous (again), in 1743 for James Oliver, tenant in Earlside, and in 1746 for merchant Andrew Ekron. In 1724 he married Bessie Richardson, who was also from the Town of Hawick. Their children included Helen (b.1725) and Janet (b.1738). The 1725 baptism was witnessed by Robert Ruecastle and Henry Orrock.

mossbluiter (mos-bli’-ur) n., arch. the bittern, Botaurus stellaris, the common snipe, Capella gallinago – ‘...cultivating wastes, where the whaup and mossbluiter are heard, or where the wild fowls of heaven are destined to reside’ [RW] (also bog-bluter and sometimes heather-bleat, from the noise made by the snipe’s tail feathers during courtship, or the booming call of the male bittern).

Mossbrae (mos-brā) n. placename in Robertson Parish. Robert Scott was recorded there in 1717, John Turnbull in 1718 and James Donaldson in 1725–28. It is unclear where exactly this might be.

Mossburnford (mos-burn-fōrd) n. hamlet about 3 miles south of Jedburgh. Mossburnford House dates from the early 19th century, but is on the site of a much earlier house. This was once home of a branch of the Rutherfords and was visited by Burns in 1787.

mosscheeper (mos-chee-pur) n., arch. the meadow pipit, Anthus pratensis (also muir-cheeper and titlin).

moss-corn (mos-kōrn) n., arch. the silverweed, Potentilla anserina, especially its edible roots – ‘... the roots of which, like small parsnips, are sometimes eaten under the name of moss-corns’ [JAHM].

moss-crops (mos-krops) n., arch. the cotton-grass, Eriophorum vaginatum – ‘There were plots of Eriophorum or ‘Moss-crops’ ...’ [BNC1889].

moss-dub (mos-dub) n., poet. a pool in marshy land – ‘Gude keep ye aye frae warlocks, witches, Black moss-dubs, and dirty ditches ...’ [JoHa].

mosses (mo-seez) n., pl., arch. areas of moorland, particularly those from which peats are cut – ‘... and that they must not spread peets or set any bings within the said mosses for the space of fifteen days ...’ [BR1743], ‘... generally got his peats and turf for the use of his ffamily from the mosses and muir in the Common’ [C&L1767].

moss-haggs (mos-hawgz) n., pl. boggy moorland, particularly pits where peats have previously been cut – ‘The breadth of the Border, parched and dried, Went sore from the swords of the sun, The wild flowers drooped and the moor-fowl died In the moss hags one by one’ [WHO], ‘... a few acres of broken ground, termed in pastoral phrase ‘moss-hags’, lending a darker feature, and heightening the effect by contrast’ [RJS] (also spelled ‘moss-hags’; cf. hagg).

Mosshills Loch (mos-hilz-loch) n. small body of water in the Target Hills, lying between the Braid Road and Ormiston, also known as the Target Pond (it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Mosshills Road (mos-hilz-rōd) n. former name for part of the road above the Wellogate, probably the narrow road towards Ormiston that goes past Mosshills Loch. The name is used in Robert Murray’s ‘Hawick Songs and Song Writers’, when it is suggested that Sir Walter Scott may have conducted the Wordsworths here in 1803.

Mosshooses (mos-hoos-eez) n. Mosshouses, former cottages on the farm of Mackside that were lived in during the 18th and early 19th centuries, but were already gone by the beginning of the 20th.

Moss Knowe (mos-now) n. hill to the south-east of Shielswood Loch, being a shallow hill reaching a height of 299 m.

Mossman (mos-mun) n. Alan (16th C.) Burgess of Edinburgh, recorded in a charter of 1531/2 receiving the lands of Borthaugh and its mill from Roger Langlands. His acquisition of the land was involved in an agreement with Lawson of Highriggs, perhaps settling a debt of John Scott of Borthaugh. Later that year, however, he sold Borthaugh, Commonsides and Dryden to Walter Scott of Branxholme and his wife Janet Kerr. James (17th C.) resident of Cavers Parish at a farmstead called ‘the Mount’. In about 1678 he was fined 1000 merks for attending conventicles, this being a larger sum than the other 6 or 7 people who were fined at the same time, this presumably because he was considered as a ringleader. The accusations against him included that he ‘hath conversed and conducted the said Mr John Welsh and others up and down the country in arms, and hath furnished them with horses to that purpose’. It was suggested that he was imprisoned on the Bass Rock, to face later transportation. However, he was among the men who escaped from their ship in London. What happened to him afterwards is not known. James (18th C.) early hosiery manufacturer in Hawick. There is a record of 1791 (from the Board of Trustees for Manufactures) of him receiving £10 towards purchasing a frame for making ribbed stockings, and a few years later he received money for a twisting mill. In 1790 and 1792 he witnessed baptisms for skinner James Renwick. He is probably the stockingmaker whose unnamed child is recorded dying in 1805 and whose unnamed child and grandchild are recorded dying in 1808. He is probably the merchant James whose son James died in Hawick in 1816. He may be the James who married Janet Renwick in 1783, and whose children (baptised in Hawick) included Elizabeth (b.1784) and Adam (b.1785). The witnesses in 1784 were flesher Gideon Renwick and shoemaker William Renwick (who were surely related to his wife). James (18th/19th C.) fishing tackle maker of the Howegate, recorded in Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. Margaret (18th C.) cook at Branxholme in 1785, when she was working for Adam Ogilvie.

Mossspark Rig (mos-pawrk-rig) n. area of moorland on the west side of the Hermitage Water near Leahaugh. There is an ancient enclosure near the river there, and another close to the confluence with the Thief Sike.

Mosspatrick (mos-paw-trik) n. former name for an area roughly between the heads of the Allan Water and the Braidlie Burn off Hermitage. This may correspond to the ‘Queen’s Mire’ on modern maps (it is recorded in Douglas of Cavers papers in the 15th century and is ‘M^cPatrick’ in 1516; ‘Mosspatrickhope swire’ is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Mosspatrickhope (mos-paw-trik-hōp) n. former house at Mosspatrick, once a home of the Elliots. It is probably the ‘Mal Patrikhope’ which was granted by William Douglas, Earl of Angus to Archibald Douglas of Cavers in 1428, along with Braidlie and ‘Le Schewis’, and granted to a William Douglas of Cavers in 1470, with sasine given in 1472. It is transcribed as ‘Makpatrikhope’ in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale, when it was valued at 10 merks and had William Elliot as tenant. Later in the 16th century it was tenanted by another William Elliot. It was owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch by 1632 (it is ‘Mal Patrikhope’ in 1428, ‘Mawpatrichoip’ in 1470, ‘Mawpatrikhope’ in 1472, ‘Mospatrikhoip’ in 1581 and 1587/8 and ranscribed ‘Makpatrikhope’ in 1632; ‘Moss patrick hoopeswyne’ and ‘Mospatrik hopswyre’ appear on separate sheets of Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Mosspaul (mos-pawl) n. hotel on the A7 near the highest (853 ft) point of the road, on the watershed on the way to Langholm, and very close to the boundary of the Scottish Borders with Dumfries and Galloway. A shelter has existed here for hundreds of years; it has been suggested that this was perhaps established by the monks of Melrose Abbey, and although there is no evidence for this suggestion, they did own the neighbouring lands of Penangushope and others (in Ringwoodfield to the north). Lawrence Elliot was there in 1494/5. It was listed among the lands in Ewesdale held by Alexander, Lord Home in 1509/10. In 1525 the lands were among those in Ewesdale resigned by Simon Armstrong to his superior George, Lord Home; this was carried out at Kelso Abbey (suggesting this Abbey held control over Ewesdale Parish). This transfer of the superiority back to the Homes was confirmed in 1535 when the King revoked the preceding charter. It is probably the ‘Mossfauld’ listed in 1663 among the lands owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch in the Lordship of Ewesdale. The inn is first definitively recorded in 1767 (by Dr. Carlyle of Inveresk), but could be much older. It became an important stopping point for mail coaches and carters when the road was improved in the mid-18th century. In the early days it is said to have been occasionally used by debtors trying to nip over the county border to escape either the Roxburghshire or Dumfriesshire authorities. John Scott is recorded living there in 1779 and 1782 and was explicitly listed as innkeeper there in 1788. John Oliver was a servant there in 1799 and Thomas Dryden in 1801. James Ruickbie wrote a poem after seeing the improvements made to the buildings in the early years of the 19th century. Robert Govenlock was landlord for 45 years until 1861. The hotel was much improved, with a large stabling area to the west, consisting of as many as 42 stalls, where the coaches horses were exchanged. It was a very busy place for several decades. However, with the building of the Hawick-Carlisle railway the hotel fell into disuse, its licence lapsing in 1865, and the building becoming derelict in the latter part of the 19th century. There were tall poles lining the road at intervals, which were used to guide the coaches through snow drifts; some were still in place in the early 20th century. The inn was resuscitated in 1900 through a private company of local gentlemen, largely to cater for cycling enthusiasts, the land being feued on good terms for use as a wayside hostelry. The more modern building was smaller than its predecessor. A bowling green was also added for a while on the western side and a 6-hole golf course was also opened. It is also the location of the Mosspaul ride out of 24 miles over rough moorland. This first took place in 1901, and is traditionally 2 weeks before Common Riding weekend. The Mosstroopers’ Club erected a memorial cairn there in 2000 – ‘The lasses o’ Lin’op are braw, An’ them o’ Mossipaul they are bonnie . . .’ [JoHa] ‘. . . The sure march of time now of life has bereft thee, Thy glory’s departed now silent Mossipaul’ [WMc], ‘Oo get yon spaiacial feelin as the Saxhorn Band leads the Mosstroopers safe in frae Mossipaul’ [IWL] (the name is probably derived from the boggy ground, with the roots being the old Celtic ‘megestu’ for ‘open land’ and ‘pol’ suggesting ‘boggy hollow’ or ‘upland stream’; the 2nd syllable has also been suggested to indicate that a pole here once marked the county boundary, but that seems less likely; there is an even more fanciful suggestion that it relates to a chapel to St. Paul that may have been on the site, but there is no evidence for this, and it may be a confusion with the chapel to St. Paul which was a few miles further south at Ewes Doors; the name perhaps first appears in 1494/5 as ‘mos paul’; it is ‘Mospall’ in 1506, ‘Mospaul’ in 1509/10, ‘Mospall’ in 1525, ‘Mospaule’ in 1535 and ‘Mispaul’ in 1782).

Mospaul Bothy (mos-pawl-bo-thee) n. house at Mospaul, behind the hotel. It was rebuilt fairly recently, on the site of a former building, which local tradition says was itself on the site of the ancient wayside hostel dedicated to St. Paul (for which there is no evidence of course).

Mospaul Burn (mos-pawl-burn) n. stream that flows to the west to join the Black Burn and Lang Grain near Moospaul. The upper part rises on Carlin Tooth and flows through Penangus Hope, forming part of the boundary between Roxburghshire and Dumfriesshire. Note that the Black Burn is also called the Mospaul Burn as it runs to the south to join the Ewes Water.

the Mospaul Club (thū-mos-pawl-klub) n. former organization composed of the Directors of the committee that raised funds for the rebuilding of Mospaul Hotel, plus some of their friends. It was in some loose sense a continuation of the earlier Wisp Club. It was formed in 1900 and held an annual outing and dinner at the hotel. Dr. McLeod was the first President. The dinners were interrupted by WWI, and although it met again after the war, it petered out a few years later.

Mospaulgreen (mos-pawl-green) n. area near Mospaul. John Lawson was living there in 1755. It was one end of the ‘Mospaulgreen to Hare-moss’ Turnpike road, improved about 1770, being the Roxburghshire part of what became the A7 (it is ‘Mospalgreen’ in 1755).

Mospaul Hotel (mos-pawl-hō-tel) n. name sometimes used for the hotel at Mospaul, formerly called the ‘Mospaul Inn’. The newer building opened in 1900, with a celebratory luncheon. An illustration ‘An Unrecorded Vision’ by Tom Scott was created especially for the occasion.

Mospaul Inn (mos-pawl-in) n. inn based at Mospaul, once a popular stopping-off place between Carlisle and Edinburgh. It was first definitively recorded in 1767 (by Dr. Carlyle of Inveresk), but could be much older. When the road was improved in mid-18th century, this John Scott was innkeep there in at least the 1770s and 1780s and Robert Govenlock in the first half of the 19th century. In the early 1800s the inn was much improved, with a large stabling area added.

After the Waverley Line was opened to Carlisle the road route was much less used and the inn fell into disrepair. In about 1900 a group of local men asked the Duke of Buccleuch for permission to rebuild the inn, partly intended for cyclists. Thereafter it was usually known as the Mospaul Hotel.

Mosspeeble (mos-pee-bul) n. farm on the A7 between Mospaul and Langholm, just south of Unthank. Like other parts of Ewesdale, the superiority was held by the Homes in the early 16th century. Adam Scott was a farmer there in 1585 and Nichol Scott was recorded there in 1590. The lands were listed in 1663 among those owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch in the Lordship of Ewesdale. It was surveyed along with other Scott of Buccleuch properties in 1718, when it was combined with ‘Byercleughwater’, consisting of 1592 acres, bounded by Tarras, lands of the Laird of Arkleton and Unthank. Robert Aitchison was there in at least the period 1785–97. In 1800 it was leased by William Moffat. Alexander Borthwick was farmer in 1841 and Capt. Stewart in the 1860s. There are remains of an ancient settlement south-east of the farmhouse (it appears on Gordon’s c. 1650 maps as ‘Mospeel’ and ‘Mospepill’ and Blaeu’s 1654 map as ‘Mosspeels’; it is ‘Mospeule’ in 1506, ‘Mospeble’ in 1509/10, ‘Mospebill’ in 1525, ‘Mospeble’ in 1535, ‘Mospebil’ in 1585, ‘Mespeble’ in 1590 and ‘Mossepeople’ in 1663; the name is probably of Cumbric origin, meaning ‘field of the tents’).

Mosspeeble Cottage (mos-pee-bul-ko’-eej) n. former cottage near Mosspeeble farm in the Ewes valley. John Murray and 3 others were living there in 1841.

Moss Toor (mos-toor) n. placename near Hawick, recorded in 1582. Robert Weens ‘in Mos-toure’ witnessed an agreement in Hawick for Alan Deans and Alexander Weens.

Moss Toor (mos-toor, -tow-ur) n. ruined 15th century tower near Eckford, which could only be approached through the march from a causeway on the north side. It was destroyed in 1523, rebuilt and burned by Sir Ralph Evers men in 1544.

mosstroop (mos-troop) v., arch. to freeboot, rieve – ‘Whitslade is slumbering undisturbed and down in Harden Glen The tall trees murmur in their dreams of Wat’s mosstrooping men’ [WHO].

mosstrooper (mos-troo-pur) n. one of a band of raiders operating on the boggy moorland of the Borders around the 17th century, a marauder – ‘By moor and moss and river, To the swish of swathéd grass And burnside reeds aquiver, The dead mosstroopers pass’ [RSC].

Mosstrooper (mos-troo-pur) n. member of the Ancient Order of Mosstroopers. Membership consists of those who have ridden to Mossypaul and back on the annual ride-out.

the Mosstroopers’ Club (thu-mos-troo-purs-klub) n. club formed of members of the Ancient Order of Mosstroopers. It existed from probably 1901, when there was a ride-out to the newly opened Mossypaul Hotel, with the riders being entertained there by the directors. There was originally a ‘secret’ initiation ceremony, with new members smearing the sign of ‘the Hawick cross’ on their foreheads. It was ‘reconstituted’ following the suggestion of J.E.D. Murray at a meeting in 1920. One of the main aims was to encourage mounted supporters to follow the Cornet. The first club President was T.G. Winning in 1920 and since then there has been a new President each year. The Club motto is ‘Aye Defend’, their song is ‘The Mosstrooper’s Song’, and the Club badge was designed by J.E.D. Murray, with his own favourite horse’s head making the main part of the design. Badges were presented to some women in the period 1920–31, with this ceasing after a female rider broke her leg. The Club’s tie was designed in 1951, and is moss green with red and yellow stripes. A junior tie was designed in 1995. Perhaps the main event in the Clubs’ calendar is the Smoker for the Cornet, held on the evening of the Mossypaul Rideout. The Club also holds an annual ball (since 1920), Burns night (since 1949), organises race meetings, gymkhanas and other events, and regularly contributes to causes that preserve the town’s traditions. The first gymkhana was held at Mansfield Haugh in 1951. A CD was released under the Club’s auspices in 2013. A book ‘The Time it has Rolled’ was published in 2020, decribing 100 years of the Club.

The Mosstrooper’s Song (thu-mos-troo-purs-sawng) n. song composed by Adam Colledge, with words by J.E.D. Murray, written in 1928 and published in 1931, with the subtitle ‘Four Hunder Horsemen’. It was officially adopted as the anthem of the Mosstroopers’ Club in 1937. The tune bears a similarity to Costa’s ‘March of the Israelites’. It has remained popular despite having a different chorus for each verse.

Adam Ingles changed the accompaniment for the 1957 song book, which probably added to its popularity. It was slightly altered again by Ian Seeley for the 2001 song anthology.

the Mosstroopers’ Stakes (thu-mos-troo-purs-stāks) n. race during the Common Riding.

Mossy Knowe (mo-see-now) n. steading on the south side of the Teviot, where the North-house Burn joins. William Murray was joiner there in the early 19th century. Widow Mary Murray and her family were there in 1841. This area is also know as ‘Change Hoose’. The name may derive from the enclosure about 500 yards further up the River. This is a low earthen bank, much eroded, covering an area about 300 ft by 200 ft with a gap in the north-east (it is Moozieknowe’ in 1841).

the Mote (thu-mō) n. Norman built earth-work, once topped by a defensive wooden tower, 312 feet (95 m) round at its base (about 30 m diameter) and 25–30 feet (about 8 m) high. It is situated in Mote Park, roughly behind 23 Loan. In the 19th century it was conjectured to be associated with Druids, sun-worship and human sacrifice, and was also believed to be a burial mound. It was also traditionally said to have been a place of justice (as first stated by Robert Wilson). An archaeological investigation by Dr. Alexander O. Curle in 1912 revealed an ancient ditch and several artefacts (now in the Museum) of Norman date, clearing up any doubt about its origin; this included pottery shards, a bone needle and a coin of Henry II. It was probably a fairly standard ‘motte and bailey’ construction (as should always have been clear, given the name), with the bailey to the north-east, enclosed in a wooden palisade. This was the seat of the Lovels and possibly Douglasses until they moved to where Drumlanrig’s Tower is now. It is likely that the location had legal significance long after the wooden structure on the top was gone. In 1484 the sasine for the Barony of Hawick was granted ‘at the principal messuage of the barony of Hawick, called the Mote’, and the same phrase was repeated in 1514; this suggests that the site (whether or not there was still a building there) was at that point recognised as the Baron’s legal headquarters. Lands in that area were once held by a branch of the Scotts, with William ‘in the Mott’

being one of the 24 ‘pensioners’ of Buccleuch mentioned by Scott of Satchells. The Mote is now in the centre of a park and has a staircase (38 steps) and seat on top. Each Common Riding the Cornet and other Principals sing ‘Teribus’ on the top of the Mote to greet the Saturday dawn (although in 1896 this visit was shifted to 1.30 a.m.); this tradition is shown in a photograph from 1911. It may be that the Mote once formed a more important part of the Common Riding events, since in about 1710 Rev. Robert Cunningham wrote in his poem that this ‘artful Mount’ was where the natives ‘acted all their games of May’ – ‘It first be torn not by the plough The ancient bonny green Moat-Knowe; For sair I fear it, too, maun fall, Though reared by hands Druidical’ [AD], ‘‘Is it natural or artificial?’ asked a stranger at a little boy. ‘It’s neither of the two; it’s just the moat’’ [RJT], ‘We’ve a Moat, which down the ages, Witnessed many a deed of fame’ [TC], ‘... Where, into Silvert Teviot, Slitrig glides Beneath the shadow of the auld green Moat’ [TK], ‘While the Moat with grass o’er-growing, Dear Auld Hawick, o’ershadows thee’ [TK], ‘And the Moat’s there, and the Haugh’s there, And the auld soul-stirring sangs’ [WL], ‘The green auld Mote stands sentinel The echo o’ St. Mary’s bell Still rings oot owre hill and dell In Hawick ma Border hame’ [IWL] (often locally spelled ‘Moat’, leading to some confusion about its origin, with people incorrectly envisioning a water-filled ditch, rather than a defensive mound; note also that hills where open air courts were held were often called ‘moot-hills’, and this may also be relevant to the origin, or simply another source of confusion; it is ‘le Mott de Hawik’ in 1511, ‘le Mott in Hawyk’ in 1511/2 and ‘the Mote’ in 1793 and 1821; other surviving examples of mottes include those at Riddell, the Haining and Phenzhopehaugh).

motey breid (mō-tee-breed) n., poet. a curranty loaf – ‘Motey bread right plenty’ [JoHo].

Mother Riley’s (mu-thur-rī-leez) n. former popular name of the Bourtree Place fish and chip shop, named for the older Mrs. Shiel, after the popular films of the 1930s and 40s – ‘Headin Weensland way, in Bourtree Place an auld freend speaks sae kindly, Great haggis puddins, chips and fish served up by ‘Mother Riley’ [??].

mottie (mo’-ee, mo-tee) n., arch. a peg acting as the target in quoits.

mou (mow, moo) n., arch., poet. mouth – ‘... And boomed against the milkye waye, Afore it closed its mou’ [JTe], ‘... Were’t no the greed o’ that glib, growlin’ mou’, The State’s unsatisfied, rapacious maw’ [JoHa], ‘The rubies gang to mak her witchin mou ...’ [WL], ‘Ne’er judge you a lass by the shape o’ her mou’ [DJ] (also spelled ‘moo’, ‘mow’ and ‘mou’); cf. Muckle Mou’d Meg; the common Teviotdale pronunciation is mow, even when written ‘mou’).

mowd (mowd) n., poet. soil, earth of a graveyard – ‘I’ll fight wi’ the bodie an’ cangle, Till I get him laid i’ the mou’d’ [JoHa] (cf. mools and muil).

Mouly Sike (mow-lee-sīk) n. small stream off the north side of the Black Burn in Liddesdale.

mount (mown) v., arch. to adorn, trim (also mun).

Mount (mown) n. former farmstead where Perryshiel Sike meets the Whitrope Burn, just south of Whitropefoot. It may be the farm of that same name in Cavers Parish where James Mossman farmed before he was prosecuted in 1678 for being a Covenanter. This is probably where Gilbert Elliot ‘at Mount’ (son of William of Penchrise) lived around 1700. William Barton was shepherd there around 1840. In 1851 road labourer Andrew Elliot and family were there, in 1861 William Beattie’s family and in 1868 John Kyle (marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

mountain dew (mown’-in-joo) n., arch. homonymous name for whisky, often referring to the illicitly distilled sort – ‘... might partake of pot-luck with him, taste his maut and mountain dew ...’ [RW], ‘... They’re penurious and few, If they tried my Mountain Dew They would tippie on the sly, says John George Luff’ [JCG].

mountain wine (mown’-in-wīn) n., arch. phrase used in the 18th and early 19th centuries for a white (or Malaga) table wine.

Mountbenger (mown’-beng-gur) n. farm in the Yarrow valley, near the Gordon Arms, where the Mountbenger Burn meets the Yarrow Water. Mountbenger Law, to the north, reaches a height of 543 m. It was formerly Crown land, leased to the Crichtons in the late 15th century. John Chisholme was there in 1579 and John Hislop in 1581 (‘Estir Munbergeris’ and ‘Westir Munbergeris’ are recorded in 1489, ‘Montberger’ in 1492 and ‘Munbarneger’ in 1579; ‘West Muntbenger’ and ‘East Muntbenger’ are on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

Mount Common (mown'-ko-min) n. lands in the Ettrick valley, by the Tima Water. Mount-common Hill reaches a height of 462 m. The lands were owned by the Crown from about 1456. The lands were let at 'half ferme' to David Scott (probably of Buccleuch) in 1459. They were described as a land of 2 steadings in 1488, namely Deephope and Gamescleuch. They were let to Alexander Scott and David Scott in 1469. It remained Crown property until at least 1502. In 1541 it was 'Montcolmone, alias Deiphope', when occupied by William Scott, paying £10 yearly. It was once part of the parish of Rankilburn. It has long been part of the Buccleuch estates. and was listed among the farms of the Duke of Buccleuch being let by public roup in Hawick in 1755 (it is 'Moncomane' in 1456, 'Montcolman' in 1459 and 1469, 'Montcowmane' in 1488, 'Montcowman' in 1492, 'Montcommone' in 1502 and 'Mountcommon' in 1755; 'Mon Comon Hill' is marked on Blaeu's 1654 map).

mounter (mown'-ur) n., arch. term used in the 19th century for a person who trims garments.

Mount Hawick (mownt-ha-wik) n. hill in Western Australia, south-west of the town of Halls Creek. It was named on April 27th 1894 by David W. Carnegie (1871–1900, youngest son of the Earl of Southesk), as described in his book 'Spinifex and Sand, A Narrative of Five Years' Pioneering and Exploration in Western Australia' (1898). Carnegie's journey across Western Australia is described as one of the last great explorations of the Australian wilderness. He named it after his prospecting partner Lord Percy Douglas (who was also Lord Douglas of Hawick). Carnegie died in Nigeria as a result of being shot with a poisoned arrow. Mount Hawick is approximately at Latitude 18°54' South, Longitude 127°1' East (there is also a separate 'Hawick Hill' in Western Australia).

the Mountin Sang (thu-mown'-in-sawng) n. name sometimes used for the 'Auld Sang', particularly as sung at the Tower Knowe when the Cornet and supporters mount their horses for the marching of the Common on the Friday. The singing is led by the official 'Sang Singer'. Until 1921 it was sung from a window of a room at the Tower, while from 1922 it has been performed on the steps outside.

mouster (mow-stur) n., arch. moisture – 'For daye an' nicht thy han' was hovie apon me: my moustir is turnet intil the drouth o' simmer' [HSR].

Mouswald (mows-wawld) n. Gilbert (14th/15th C.) Archdeacon of Teviotdale from 1404 when he exchanged for another benefice with John de Merton. He appears to have still held it in 1308, but this is somewhat confusing, since William Macmorrin also held the position in that year. He gifted a missal to Glasgow Cathedral in about 1400.

mout (mowt, mow') v., arch. to eat food with small bites, nibble (also moot and cf. mowp).

movit (moo-vee', -vi') pp., arch. moved, instituted a legal action – '...anent the slauchteris and vtheris caussis movit be the sonis of vmquhile Adame Scot of Alanehaucht aganis me, the said Walter ...' [SB1585], '...he sall nevir thole the richteous til be muvet' [HSR], '...the warld sal alsua be sete sicker that it canna be muvet ...' [HSR].

mow (mow) n., arch. the mouth, v. to mouth, to grimace (more common in Teviotdale than the pronunciation of 'moo'; cf. mou).

Mow see Molle

Mowat (mow-i') n. John (17th C.) listed as resident at Todshaw in Wilton Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. His surname is recorded as 'Mouatt'. John (20th C.) minister of St. Andrew's Kirk 1922–30. Robert (d.c.1686) tenant in Ashieburn in 1686 when his will is recorded. His surname is written 'Mowit'.

Mowbray (mō-bree) n. Arthur (18th C.) factor to James Douglas of Cavers in at least the period 1775–79. Francis (d.1603) son of John of Barnbogle, near Queensferry. His sisters had been attendants of Mary, Queen of Scots, and he probably retained Catholic sympathies. He was involved in (at least rumours of) several possible rebellions in Scotland. He was said to have been in the retinue of Walter Scott of Buccleuch at about the time of the rescue of Kinmont Willie in 1596. He was imprisoned in Edinburgh Castle in 1602, accused of treason. He used a rope made from bedding to try to escape, but fell onto the rocks and died. However, his body was still hanged, drawn and quartered. Whether he actually took part in the events on the Border in 1596 is not known. Galfrid (14th C.) appointed Sheriff of Roxburgh by Edward III in 1334.

mow-bund (mow-bund) adj., arch. mouth-bound, unable to get used to a new phrase – ‘The grieve said he was mow-bund to his maister’s new name Sir William’ [GW].

mow-cue (mow-kyoo) n., arch. a twisted halter used for curbing a young colt (noted by J. Jamieson).

mowd (mowd) n., arch. a house moth (also spelled ‘moud’).

the Mowd (thu-mowd) n. nickname for someone in the late 18th or early 19th centuries (also spelled ‘Moud’).

mowdie (mow-dee) n., arch. a mole – ‘The moudies powtelit out o’ the yirth, And kyssed the synger’s feete’ [JTe], a house moth (used diminutively or affectionately; also spelled ‘moudie’).

the Mowdie (thu-mow-dee) n. nickname in use in the early 19th century, perhaps the same as the Mowd or Wattie Mowdie.

Mowdie Maxwell (mow-dee-mawks-wel) n. fictional character in ‘The Gutterbludes’, described as ‘Alex Maxwell Esq. o’ the Kirkstyle’.

mowdie-wart (mow-dee-war) n., arch. a mole.

Muckle Bleak Law (mu-kul-bleek-law) n. hill to the south-east of East Buccleuch and west of Kingside Loch. It reaches a height of 383 m.

Muckle Cavers (mu-kul-kā-vurz) n. former popular name for Cavers Toonheid.

Muckle Corbie Sike (mu-kul-kor-bee-sik) n. stream in upper Liddesdale, running roughly to the north to join the Thorlieshope Burn. It runs parallel to Little Corbie Sike.

Muckle Cote (mu-kul-kō') n. former name of a farm near West Cote in Cavers Parish, perhaps essentially the same as the modern West Cote. The farm of 'Little Cote' lay further to the east. William Dryden and William Blyth were listed there in 1694 – 'Little Cot, Muckle Cot, Crook and the Trows, Worchart, Wormston and Cavers Knowes' [T] (it is 'Miklecoatt' in 1694).

Muckle Dod (mu-kul-dōd) n. hill between Langhope Burn and Todrig Burn, just west of Todrig. It reaches a height of 363 m and has Little Dod as its eastern spur.

Muckledale (mu-kul-dāl) n. alternative name for Meikledale.

Muckle Heid (mu-kul-heed) n. Muckle Head, hill in upper Liddesdale, to the east of Cliffhope Burn. It reaches a height of 422 m.

Muckle Knowe (mu-kul-now) n. hill just to the north of Mabonlaw farm.

Muckle Knowe (mu-kul-now) n. hill in the upper Borthwick valley, just west of Wolfcleuchhead, reaching a height of 425 m.

Muckle Knowe (mu-kul-now) n. hill just to the right of the B711 after Alemoor Loch. It reaches a height of 349 m and is part of Bellen-dean Rig, with Little knowe to the south-east.

Muckle Knowe (mu-kul-now) n. hill between the Priesthaugh and Dod Burns, to the south of Gray Coat. It reaches a height of 396 m and has a cairn on a rocky outcrop a little south of the peak (it is 'Meikle Knowe' on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

the muckle leet (thu-mu-kul-lee') n. phrase used in the 18th and early 19th centuries for the list of acquaintances named by the friends listed by the Cornet. This formed the longer list of people formally invited to the Common Riding festivities – 'There was the Cornet's leets, enumerating his own circle of acquaintances, and there was the 'muckle leet', prepared by the Cornet in consultation with his immediate associates' [WSR].

Muckle Michael (mu-kul-mI-kul) n. nickname for Michael Anderson of Denholm.

Muckle Mou'd Meg (mu-kul-mood-, -mowd-meg) n. actually Agnes Murray, daughter of the Laird of Elibank, apparently hard to marry off because of her appearance, she eventually married Sir William Scott of Harden in a choice between her and the gallows. Details of the real marriage are preserved in 2 separate contracts, separated by a few months in 1611. The romanticised story is told in the ballad, one version of which is Hogg's 'The Fray at Elibank'. Wullie Landles also wrote a long poem based on the story – 'In loan or steedin' whene'er they saw her, Muckle Mou'd Meg was the name they'd caa her' [WL], 'What Am A ti dae, mun, what Am A ti dae? Ave either got ti mairry Meg or face the hingin tree. Was ever man gien sic a choice, doon through a history? What Am A ti dae, mun, what Am a ti dae?' [IWL].

Muckle Sike (mu-kul-sīk) n. small stream in the headwaters of Twislehope Burn in the upper Hermitage valley, south of Twislehope Hope. It rises near Mid Hill joining East Grain to become Deep Gill.

mucklest (mu-kul-ist) adj. biggest – '...and what a haggis she got, the mucklest chieftain o the puddin race imaginable, threi fit in diameter ...' [IWL].

Muckle Swine Cleuch (mu-kul-swīn-klooch) n. stream that rises on Needs Law and flows westwards to join the Caddroun Burn near Singdean. Cathide Sike is a small side stream. Little Swine Cleuch lies just to the south (it is marked 'Swines Cleuch' on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

Muckle Thwarter Gill (mu-kul-thwar'-ur-gil) n. stream in eastern Liddesdale, rising on Thwartergill Head and running southwards to join the Kershop Burn to the west of Scotch Kershop.

muckle ti mean (mu-kul-ti-meen) adj., arch. much to be pitied, to be greatly sympathised with – 'Folk are muckle ti mean that beide on aether seide o the Mairches atween twae prood an towty countries 'at canna grei an are aye cuissenoot' [ECS], 'Even my douce auld neebor The Moat Looks muckle to mean and lane' [DH], 'The poor o' the parish are muckle to mean In a but or a ben they dwell by their lane' [RF] (noted by E.C. Smith).

the Muckle Toun (thu-mu-kul-toon) n. soubriquet for Langholm.

muckle wheel (mu-kul-wheel) n., arch. simple design for a spinning wheel popular in the 18th century. In the earliest form there was a large, wooden fly-wheel, which was propelled by a shove of the hand, with the operator walking backwards to draw out the yarn, the length of which was then wound on a spindle and the process repeated. Later a drive belt linked the small spindle to the large wheel, which was still typically driven by hand until foot treadles came in much later. This was the first machine to be widely used in the beginnings of the knitwear industry in Hawick, and was common in homes into the 19th century.

It was effectively replaced by the ‘spinning jenny’ – ‘...a small trade in yarns spun by women on the ‘muckle’ wheel ...’ [WSR] (also known as the ‘meikle wheel’; cf. little wheel).

Muckle Whitlaw see Meikle Whitlaw

Muckle Wrae Cleuch (mu-kul-rā-klooch) n. small stream in upper Liddesdale, rising on Windy Knowe and lying to the west of Little Wrae Cleuch. Both streams have steep gorges.

Muckle Willie (mu-kul-wi-lee) n. nickname for William Scott in 1599.

muck-sel (muk-sel) n., adj. very dirty, literally ‘muck itself’, or ‘muck’s self’ – ‘We could be muck’s sel and dirt teh the eenholes’ [HAST1958] (also written ‘muck’s sel’ and variants).

mud (mud) n., arch. pet form of mother.

mudgeons (mu-jinz) n., pl., arch. movements of the features showing displeasure or scorn.

Mudie (mu-dee) n. James C. (19th C.) teacher of the Academy based at the Subscription Rooms in the mid-19th century. He was later joined by James Brand, but apparently a clash of personalities led Brand to leave and start his own school. The school was known as ‘Hawick High School’ and was in competition with the public ‘Buccleuch School’ across the street. It ran until around 1874. He eventually wound up the school and left Hawick, possibly because of the competition from ‘Brand’s Schuil’. He also served as Session Clerk for Hawick Free Kirk 1866–74. In about 1874 he was recorded owning part of the former lands of Patrick Cunningham in Hawick (see also Moodie).

Mudie’s monkeys (mu-deez-mung-keez) n., pl. former nickname for pupils at the Subscription Rooms Academy, taught by Mr. Mudie, and used as a taunt by pupils from the Grammar School (‘Dodds’s whulps’).

muffatei (mu-faw-tī) n., arch. a muffetee, small muff, usually worn over the wrists.

mug (mug) v. to handle messily, touch with dirty fingers, bungle – ‘deh mug they photis’, n., arch. a bungle, instance of messy handling.

mugger (mu-gur) n., arch. an itinerant tinker – ‘Originally muggers were a bohemian class of the tinker (tinkler in Hawick) kind, but the word has come to denote ‘people of disreputable habits and appearance’. An inference is that the old name of mugger was derived from the nature

muggit (mu-gee’, -gi’) adj., arch. exhausted – ‘A’m fair muggit oot’ [GW].

muggit (mu-gee’, -gi’) adj., arch. soiled or spoiled through ill-use – ‘Muggeet is allied closely to maiggeet, though not necessarily inferring actual handling or fingering, whereas the latter term does. On the other hand, the rough ‘fondling’ which a kitten often receives at the hands of a child is more often spoken of as a muggeen than as a maigeen, probably more from the effect than from the deed’ [ECS] (see mug and cf. maigit).

muify (mi-fee) adj., poet. steamy, humid, warm and moist – ‘Oot in the muify stable She socht a place to lie’ [WL] (cf. muth).

muil (mil) n., arch. a mule.

muil in wi (mil-in-wi) v., arch. to seek intimate acquaintance with, especially by insinuation – ‘Ti muil in wui = to insinuate or wheedle one’s friendship or companionship upon another’ [ECS].

muiller (mi-lur) v., arch. to crumble, moulder away, cause to crumble – ‘Ti muiller bread’ [GW], ‘Frost muillers the clods’ [GW] (noted by E.C. Smith).

muillery (mi-lu-ree) adj., arch. crumbly.

muillin (mi-lin) n., arch. a crumb – ‘...yet the dogs eet o’ the mulins whilk fa’ frae their maisters’ table’ [HSR], ‘There was a gey little hote o muilleens left for Lazarus!’ [ECS], ‘A herbour for auld muillins O’ lang-forgotten pieces ...’ [DH] (also spelled ‘muilleen’ and ‘mulin’).

muils (milz) n., pl., arch. earth of a graveyard – ‘Let this beide as a merk o the respect o the wreiter ... ti yin that may the muils lie licht on; the auld yeh-teime keeper o Jethart Aibbey!’ [ECS] (cf. mools).

muin (mūn, min, moon) n., arch. the Moon – ‘A duil mirk nicht an’ nae muin’ [??], ‘In a far Scots moor ’neath the siller mune, A plover’s cry in the cluds abune ...’ [JYH], ‘Wi’ awe-struck face, the startled mune Stood still an’ glowered’ [WP], ‘Through the hert o’ the hills, By the licht o’ the stars and the mune’ [WL], ‘The mune she shines sae bricht, Till a’ the yirth is marlt wi’ The grymins o’ her licht’ [DH], ‘... wi a last gledge at St. Mary’s clock keekin owre the ruifs like a sma local moon’ [DH], a month – ‘He wad sit a muin’ [GW] (also spelled ‘mune’ and pronounced with a variety of vowel sounds).

muir (mūr, mewr, moor, mār) n. moor, moorland, unenclosed upland – ‘The said day the baylyeas and towne Counsell did appoynt and ordaine the meiths and marches of the Common muire, moss and pasturage to be ridden ...’ [BR1712], ‘... Yer haunts nae mair she will molest, On muir or mead’ [JH], ‘I met a man ootbye the muir; He watcht a rabbit in a snare’ [DH] (note that the word is now most often pronounced mār, while the older pronunciation was mūr or a deep vowel combining i and ā; it is not always clear which pronunciation is meant when it is written ‘muir’).

the Muir (thu-mūr, mewr, moor, mār) n. Hawick Moor (see also the Mair).

the Muir (thu-mūr, mewr) n. former name for lands in Liddesdale, recorded as ‘The Mure’ in the 1541 rental roll. The precise location is uncertain, but they are listed between Brighthouse and Heuchhouse, with a value of 5 shillings and 4 pence.

Muir (mewr) n. Sir Adam of Rowallan (14th C.) son of William. He married Janet Muir, from the Pokellie side of the family. His children included: Adam, who succeeded; Sir Reginald, who was Chamberlain of Scotland; and Elizabeth, who married King Robert II. Sir Adam of Rowallan (d.1399) son of Sir Adam. He married Janet, daughter of John Danielson of that Ilk. He was succeeded by Archibald and probably also had daughters Jean and Elizabeth. Alexander (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Margaret Thomson and their children included Bessie (b.1678), Agnes (b.1680) and an unnamed child (b.1687). The witnesses in 1680 were Walter Paisley and Dand Gray (based on which, he probably lived at Weensland). He could be the Alexander who received money from the Wilton poor box in 1705. Sir Archibald of Rowallan (d.1298) son of Sir Gilchrist. He probably held lands in upper Teviotdale, like his father. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir John Montgomery. He was succeeded by his son William and also had daughters Jean and Margaret. He died in battle near Berwick. Archibald of Rowallan (d.1426) son of Sir Adam. He probably held the lands of Commonsides, Dryden and Harwood, like generations of his family before. He married Euphame, daughter of Kennedy of Dunmuir. His eldest son John died before him and he was succeeded by his grandson John, who died at Flodden. Sir Gilchrist (d.c.1280) possibly son of Sir Adam. He was said to have gained the family seat of Rowallan Castle through marrying Isabel, daughter and heir of Walter Comyn. However, another version (in the 17th century family history by Sir William Muir) states that he was dispossessed by Comyn until Alexander III raised a sufficient force to eject the Comyns and re-establish him at Rowallan. He fought at the Battle of Largs. He was succeeded by Sir Archibald of Rowallan. He was also said by his 17th century descendant to have acquired lands in Roxburghshire through his marriage to Isabel Comyn, specifically ‘Cuminside, draden and harwoods’; these are surely the lands of Commonsides, Dryden and Harwood in upper Teviotdale. Support for the connection with the Comyns comes from part of the family shield of the Muirs of Rowallan being that of the Comyns. His family were still associated with the lands of Commonsides, Dryden and Over Harwood until the early 16th century. Gordon (1959–) son of Bob and Jean, he attended the High School and then trained as a graphic designer in London and New Mexico. He worked for a while as a woodblock artist in Tokyo and in 1984 was a founding partner of Border Image. Along with his old school friend Doug Veitch, he brought the Zimbabwean band the Bhundu Boys to Britain in 1986. He then managed them on a year long tour, which was pivotal in the World Music movement of the time. As a sculptor he has several pieces in public spaces, e.g. ‘Alex the Goose and Friend’ and ‘Leap of Faith’ in Belfast, a set of pieces in Coatbridge and memorials to the men who died building the Forth Bridge. In 2020 he and Paul Hogarth re-designed the landscaping around the Hornshole Monument. James (17th C.) resident of Woll in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll. His surname is written as ‘Muere’. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Hornshole in 1731. He married Jean Lamb in 1720 and their children included: John (b.1721); William (b.1723); Isabel (b.1726); Janet (b.1728); James (b.1731); and Walter (b.1733). The witnesses in 1731 were James Dryden and John Scott. James (b.c.1770s) servant at Roan according to the ballots for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799 and 1801. Jean (1933–) school-teacher and long-time Cavers resident, originally from Banffshire. She married Acting Father Bob, and has long been involved with the Archaeological Society. She is author of ‘Cavers: a keek in the window’ (2000), for which she also provided sketches. She also wrote ‘Airchie Oliver’s a Hunder and a Half’ and co-wrote ‘Airchie Oliver’s Birthday Cairds’ with Jim Coltman. In 2015, she, along with her husband and son Gordon, wrote an article about the leaders of the Scottish Renaissance,

MacDiarmid and Johnstone being friends of the family. John of Rowallan (d.1513) grandson of Robert and son of John and Elizabeth Stewart. In 1508 he was directed by the Privy Council to grant 'warrandice' to George Scott of Whames (grandson of Stephen Scott of Muirhouse) in the lands of Dryden, Commonsides and Over Harwood. In 1510/1 George Scott wrote a letter of acquittance, stating that he (John) had paid him (George) the £40 and 14 merks owed for these lands. He may thus be the last Muir of Rowallan to have been associated with lands in upper Teviotdale. He married Margaret, 3rd daughter of Archibald Boyd of Bonshaw; they had 4 sons (including Mungo, who succeeded) and 4 daughters. He was killed at Flodden. His great-great-grandson was a poet and politician, who wrote a family history. John (d.1579) Rector of Ashkirk from about the time of the Reformation. He is recorded as holding the parsonage of Ashkirk Parish until his demission in 1570, when it was presented to John Hamilton; he is there recorded as 'John Murie'. He was deprived in 1573 for failing to subscribe to articles of religion. He is presumably the same 'Sir John Muir' who died in 1579 when the vicarage of Ashkirk was given to Thomas Cranstoun. John (17th C.) recorded as being in Weensland in 1687 when his daughter Helen was baptised in Hawick Parish. His wife was Isobel Blyth and the witnesses were James Gray and James Miller. He could be the resident of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. It is possible he is the John 'mure' who witnessed (along with Walter Paisley) the baptism in Robertson Parish of a 'bastard child' of Adam Scott of Burnfoot in 1686. John (17th C.) carrier listed among those who subscribed to the fund for the new Kirk bell in Hawick in 1693/4. He could be the same as the John who was in Weensland. John (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Greenbank in 1785, 1786 and 1788, with his surname recorded as 'Moor'. He married Esther Turnbull in 1784 and their children included: Nelly (b.1785); James (b.1786); and John (b.1788). He may be the 70-year old recorded at Deanburnhaugh in the 1841 census, living with Janet (probably his daughter), and Walter Nichol (who later married Janet). John (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf, recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Robert of Rowallan (d.1504) from near Kilmaurs in Ayrshire, he was nicknamed 'the Rud'. He held the lands of Dryden, Commonsides and Over Harwood in 1462 as security for a loan to Stephen

Scott of Muirhouse. He paid 200 merks for these lands, the document being signed in Edinburgh (presumably where he lived). His name is written 'Robertus Mure de Rowallane'. In 1477 he gave a discharge to Robert Scott of 'Dogehauch' for the balance of the loan. It seems unlikely he ever lived in upper Teviotdale, but his family had been associated with these lands from the 13th century. He married Margaret Newton, daughter of the Laird of Mitchelhill. They had 4 sons (including John, who succeeded) and a daughter. In 1508 his grandson John was directed by the Privy Council to grant 'warrandice' to George Scott in the same lands. Rev. Robert (1832/3–1882) from Ayr, he became minister at Holm of Balfron and then minister of Allars Church from 1864. He is said to have been of saintly character and with a very liberal outlook. He suffered from ill-health for several years and died in office, leaving a 9 month vacancy at Allars. He wrote 'The Perpetuity of Christian Friendship' in Logan's 'Words of Comfort' and contributed articles to 'Forward'. He married Susan, daughter of Dundee Merchant William Duncan. They had 4 daughters and 1 son: one daughter wrote short stories; one was a classical scholar; Anne Davidson, who became a well-known watercolour artist; and Sir Robert. Sir Robert, F.R.S. (1864–1959) son of Rev. Robert, he was born at Balfron, Stirlingshire, but his father became minister at Hawick shortly after he was born. He spent 16 years growing up in Hawick. He was educated at Hawick Grammar School and Teviot Grove Academy and then Edinburgh University. He chose to follow a career in pathology, first working in Edinburgh, then being offered the Chair of Pathology at St. Andrews and then he was Professor of Pathology at the University of Glasgow 1899–1936. He served on the Medical Research Council and many other bodies related with cancer and disease. During WWI he had a position overseeing hospitals in Scotland. He became a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1911, had a royal medal in 1929, was knighted in 1934 and received the Lister Medal in 1936. He was also a member of the Royal Society of Edinburgh. He returned to Hawick in 1926 as the Callants' Club guest. He was said to have a shy and aloof character, but delighted in deflating pompous colleagues. He never married, but in later life live with 2 of his sisters in Edinburgh. At the age of almost 90 he flew to Australia to visit his eldest sister. He died in Edinburgh. His 'Manual of Bacteriology' (1897) went through several editions, and his 'Textbook of Pathology' (1924) was extremely successful. Robert 'Bob' (1930–) local vet, who was Acting Father in 1975. He was the first Acting Father to accompany the 'Big Threi' to the Coble on the Saturday. He served as President of the Callants' Club. In 2020 he featured in a video for the song 'The Grey', written by his son Gordon. He is married to Jean and father of Gordon, John and Janet. William of Rowallan (13th/14th C.) son of Sir Archibald. He probably owned the lands in upper Teviotdale that were first held by his grandfather. He married a daughter of William Lindsay of Craigie and was succeeded by Sir Adam (formerly written 'Mure' and sometimes 'Moor').

muir-band (mewr-bawnd) n., arch. a hard layer of sand and clay below the topsoil, impervious to water, and believed to hinder the full exploitation of the land – '...there exists, not much below the surface, a stiff, dense and sterile clay, which denies all passage to moisture, as well as to the roots of plants ... commonly denominated 'muir-band' ...' [RJE] (also muir-bund).

muir-burn (mewr-burn) n., arch. a controlled burning of moorland to encourage new growth – '...How grand the scene yon russet down displays, While far the withering heaths with moor-burn blaze!' [JL].

the Muir Burn (thu-mūr-, mār-burn) n. stream that joins the Liddel at the very southernmost point of Castleton Parish. It forms part of the boundary between Roxburghshire and Dumfriesshire. The area has many signs of ancient use, including rig and furrow field markings, enclosures, a former lime quarry and workings, and several burnt mounds. Additionally there is the site of a chapel, on the east bank of the stream, but over the Dumfriesshire line. The chapel remains measure about 12.5 m by 5 m, with a doorway on the south side. The hill there is still known as Chapel Knowe. This is probably the 'landis of Mureburne' listed among the Dumfriesshire possessions of the Scotts of Buccleuch possessed in the 1663 marriage contract of Anne, Countess of Buccleuch (it is 'Mire burn' in 1718, 'Mare Burn' on Stobie's 1770 map and 'The Mareburn' in 1821).

muir-cheeper (mewr-chee-pur) n., arch. the meadow pipit, Anthus pratensis (also moss-cheeper and titlin).

muircock (mewr-, mār-kok) n. a male red grouse – 'Where the muircock cries its burley Owre the heather plaided braes' [WL].

Muir Ferm (mewr-ferm) n. former name for Pilmuir farm.

Muirferm (mewr-ferm) n. former name for a farmstead in Wilton Parish. It is recorded as 'Moorfarm' on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, with James Grieve the farmer there. It is unclear where this was, but presumably distinct from Muirfield.

Muirfield (mewr-feeld) n. area between Groundistone and Hassendean. The lands and farm were formerly part of Hassendean Common, which was divided in the late 18th century. William Douglas was recorded there in 1772 and John Oliver in 1791. George Bell was farmer there in 1797. Andrew Little was shepherd there in 1835. Labourer Adam Brydon was there in 1841. A drove road used to pass over here, between Hassendean Common and Groundistone. To the north-east are signs of rig and furrow cultivation. To the north of the farm is a triangulation station at a height of 262 m (also called 'Moorfield', so marked on Stobie's 1770 map).

Muirfield (mewr-feeld) n. former name for lands in Abbotrule. It is recorded in the 1678 valuation roll as 'Muirfield acres (Abbotrule)' when Charles Kerr held the teinds.

muirfowl (mewr-fowl) n., arch. the red grouse, Lagopus scoticus – 'The muirfowl a' they kenn'd her weel, The maukin oft she gar'd them squeal' [JH].

Muirheid (mewr-heed) n. (Muirhead) Andrew see Andrew de Durisdeer. George (15th/16th C.) son and heir of Robert of Windyhill in Dumfriesshire. He appears to have had a dispute with Douglas of Cavers over the £10 lands of Denholm Mains. He was recorded in 1490 as 'Master George Murehede' when he granted a charter of lands within Denholm and Cavers. He gave sasine of these lands to William Douglas of Cavers in 1491/2. He was said to be a 'familiar servitor' of the King and was probably related to Master Richard 'Murehead' who was Lord Clerk Register and Secretary. He married Anabelle Grierson, with whom he is recorded in a charter for Windy-hills in 1506/7. Robert (15th C.) recorded in 1479 when James Alemoor of that Ilk and John Turnbull 'in the Fithe' were ordered to pay rentals to him for his lands in Cavers Parish. Additionally William Douglas of Cavers did not appear when called to pay the £25 owed for the mails of these same lands. In 1490 his son and heir

George had a charter from James IV for lands in ‘the dominical lands of Denhame, and ten-pound land lying in the town and territory of Caveris.’ He is recorded as being of ‘Windihillis’, which is probably the village of Windyhill near Closeburn, Dumfriesshire. Witnesses to the document were Bishop Robert Muirhead of Glasgow and Dean Richard Muirhead of Glasgow, who were presumably relatives. Rev. Robert (1706/7–84) minister of Southdean Parish from 1756 until his death. He married Elizabeth Ainslie in 1779, and she died in 1800. Robert ‘Bob’ (1933–2018) local football manager. He was born in Steeland, Fife, left school to become a carpenter, but then joined the Merchant Navy. He did his National Service with the Black Watch and then joined the Territorial Army. Stationed at Stobs Camp, he met Rosaline (or ‘Rosie’) Whillans in Hawick and the couple were married in 1955. He helped organised dances in the Town in the 50s and 60s. He worked at Wilson & Glenny’s, and was then a railway fireman, before moving to Pringle’s and then Slumberland. As a lover of football, he was a life-long Rangers fan, and got involved with team management in Hawick. He managed Hawick United for 8 years, a period which included the team winning the grand slam of 5 trophies. He then managed Hawick Royal Albert, leading them to win the East of Scotland Cup. He enjoyed travelling in Europe and hiking in Scotland. He was a founder member of the Hawick Bodybuilding Club, was part of the committee that created the Youth Centre and was a life member of the Burns Club. The family lived on Wilton Path and Overhall Road; he and his wife lived to celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary. His daughter Lesley was born in 1955 and his grandson Greg McLeod was Cornet in 2003.

Muirhouse (mewr-hoos) n. Muirhouse, former name for lands in the barony of Crichton and county of Roxburghshire. The lands were owned by a branch of the Scotts in the 15th century. The name is lost, and the precise location is uncertain (but somewhere near Pathhead). Stephen Scott had a charter of Muirhouse in 1450 and a sasine in 1463; he appears to be the same man who was also ‘of Wilton’ as well as other lands, and was a son of Robert Scott of Rankleburn. Muirhouse was inherited by Stephen’s son Robert, who had a sasine in 1464, then there was a dispute over inheritance by Robert’s son George (also of Borthaugh), with a counter-claim by Patrick, Earl of Bothwell. George Scott must have won this case, since his son John had a confirmation in these lands in 1526/7 (note that there are many other places of the same name, including one near Lilliardsedge, another near Dyfesdaile in Dumfriesshire and at least 6 others in Midlothian; it is ‘Murhaus’ in 1464 and ‘Mvrhous’ in 1505).

Muirhooselaw (mewr-hoos-law) n. Muirhouselaw, place name south of Maxton, being essentially the same place as Ancrum Moor and Lilliard’s Edge, and hence sometimes referred to as the site of the Battle of Ancrum Moor in 1545. A trial of 1502 describes how 4 Henrisons were taken from their farm there by rievvers and ransomed to the English. It is recorded being leased from Thomas Hamilton to John Haliburton in the 17th century. Haliburton of Muirhouselaw gave evidence at the trial of George Turnbull of Belses in 1603. Many of the buildings of the estate are in a picturesque pink-red sandstone. There is a triangulation pillar above the farmhouse, at a height of 178 m (the name ‘Muirhouse’, now lost, deriving from the Old English ‘mor hus’, meaning ‘house on the moor’, first appears about 1200, while this name first appears in 1529 as ‘Murrieslaw’, is ‘Moreislaw’ in 1603 and ‘Murouslaw’ in 1621; it is ‘Murrilaw’ on Blaeu’s c.1654 map).

Muirknowe (moor-, mewr-, mūr-now) n. former name for lands in the Barony of Riddell. According to the services of heirs in 1636 and 1669 they corresponded to part of the lands of West Lilliesleaf (it is ‘Murieknow’ in 1636 and ‘Murieknow’ in 1669).

Munro (mun-rō) n. Adam (b.1834) son of William, he continued the rope-making business of his father. In 1861 he was still living with his parents and siblings at 1 Bourtree Place. He married Christina Govenlock and their children included: Mary (b.1871); and William Alexander (b.1873), who was a chemist. Daniel (b.1831/2) from Ireland, he was appointed Superintendent of the Roxburghshire Constabulary by the new Town Council in 1861. In the 1861 census he was living on Jedburgh High Street with his wife Elizabeth and children Janet, Archibald, Helen and Daniel. He was given an increased police force to improve law and order on the streets of Hawick. However, he was dismissed in 1867 and charged with breach of trust and embezzlement.

Eliza (b.1829/30) daughter of Congregational minister and rope-maker William. She was mistress of the Infants' School on Buccleuch Street in 1852.

John (17th C.) listed among the subscribers for the new Kirk bell in 1693/4. He is probably the John, married to Isobel Henderson, whose children born in Hawick included: Helen (b.1680); William (b.1683); and Agnes (b.1687). Robert (1868–1955) born in Alness, he was educated at Aberdeen Grammar School and Edinburgh University. Admitted to the Scottish Bar in 1893, he became King's Counsel in 1910. He was Liberal M.P. for Wick 1910–18 and Liberal M.P. for Roxburgh and Selkirk after 1918–22, the first such M.P. after the Border Burghs constituency was dissolved. He was Privy Counsellor from 1913 and Lord Advocate 1913–16, before becoming Secretary of State for Scotland 1916–22. He later became Lord Alness, Chief Justice Clerk. He was created Baron Alness on his retirement from the bench in 1933. He was later Lord-in-Waiting to King George VI and awarded the Grand Cross of the Order of the British Empire. He opened the War Memorial in the Park at a special ceremony in 1920. Rev. William (1798/9–1883) rope-maker from Berwick who became Congregational Church minister for around 40 years. In Pigot's 1825/6 directory he was a rope and twine maker and flax dresser on the High Street. He witnessed a baptism for weaver Charles Scott in 1826. He appears to have first become minister of the newly (re-)formed congregation in 1836, which faltered for several years, with a 2nd splinter Church also forming in 1842. In Pigot's 1837 directory he was a rope-maker at the East Port and in the 1841 census he was at 'Eastend' and still a rope-maker. By 1851 he was at 1 Bourtree Place and minister of the 'Cong. Union Chapel'. In Slater's 1852 directory he was still listed as a roper-maker, and separately as minister of the Independent Chapel on Melgund Place. In 1847 he invited John Rutherford of Kelso to preach at a series of prayer meetings in Hawick, which took place in the Spring of 1848, ultimately lasted for 7 weeks, and led to the founding of the Evangelical Union Kirk in Hawick (the present Congregational Kirk). However, some dispute led to him to withdraw his support from this ‘mission’, hence the forming of the E.U. Kirk, separate from his own. He was Chairman of the Parochial Board for 20 years and active in public service. He was also first Vice-President of the Hawick Total Abstinence Society. He was noted for courageously visiting the sick and dying during the 1849 cholera epidemic, as a result of which he had a public funeral. He was succeeded as minister in 1873 by Rev. W.L. Walker, by which time the congregation must have been dwindling. He is probably the William Munro who is recorded in about 1874 as owner of the ‘particate lands’ that had earlier been owned by Robert Herkness. He married Alison, daughter of Yeddie Smail. Their children included: Alexander (b.1826); Eliza (b.1830), who was an infant teacher; Adam (b.1834), who continued the rope-making business; Agnes (b.c.1837); Alison (b.c.1839); Margaret (‘Maggie’, b.c.1842); William Alexander (b.c.1844); Charles (b.c.1847); Mary (b.c.1850); and an unnamed son who died in 1840. He may also have had a son John who, along with 2 other Hawick men, was in a tweed manufacturing partnership in Cork (but there may be confusion over the name). A portrait of him exists. He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery (with ropemaker symbols). William Alexander (b.c.1845) son of Rev. William. He was a clerk at Thomas Purdom & Sons. He was connected with Allars Kirk for its last 5 decades, being Session Clerk. He was described as being ‘notable for his fine appearance’ (also written ‘Monroe’).

munsie (mun-see) n., arch. someone deserving contempt, a monstrosity, fright, sight, spectacle – ‘...an aamaist the whole road-end cam ootther-oot ti waal an glowr at the unordnar munsie’ [ECS] (from French ‘monsieur’; mainly from the Scottish North-east).

munt (mun) v., arch. to mount – ‘The leikes o yon’s no ti be munteet at a teerin kip ...’ [ECS], to trim hosiery work – ‘Some weemen ‘took in stairs teh wesh’ and others munteet at h’yim, and ‘toltn’ was common’ [HAST1958] (also mount).

muntibank see muntybank

muntin (mun’in) n., arch. a bundle of finished hosiery work – ‘The munteen is the bundle of work so completed’ [ECS].

muntybank (mun-tee-, mun’-ee-bawngk) n., arch. a mountebank, itinerant quack, charlatan, trickster – ‘Like siller muntybanks they spring ...’ [DH] (many spelling variants exist, see also mounteback).

murder (mur-dur) adj. pathetic, intolerable, very annoying – ‘ee’re murder, yowe’, also occasionally said in an endearing way.

Murderdean Sike (mur-durdeen-sik) n. small stream just to the south of the Note o the Gate. It rises on the southern slopes of Dog Knowe and forms part of the headwaters of the Caddroun Burn, and hence the Liddel (the origin of the name is unclear).

murder polis (mur-dur-po-lees) interj. mock call to the police, used as an exclamation of consternation, or often ironically – ‘hei shouts ‘murder polis’ whenever onybody tries ti get near eet’, adj. pathetic, annoying – ‘her performance was murder polis’ (the same as ‘murder’).

murders (mur-durz) n., pl. Hawick was once a very much more violent place than today. Murders are recorded at least in the years: 1813 (near Kirkton); 1814 (Mill Port); 1824 (Kirkton); 1861 (St. George’s Lane); 1867 (the Slitrig); 1875 (Kirk Wynd); 1888 (the Loan); and 1906 (Howegate and High Street).

Murdie (mur-dee) n. Henry (b.1830/1) son of David, he was farmer at Lanton Mains. He was a registered voter in Bedrule Parish.

Murdieston (mur-dee-stin) n. lands in Larnarkshire, formerly held by the Scotts of Buccleuch. Sir Richard Scott of Rankilburn and Murdieston swore fealty to Edward I in 1296. He acquired the barony through marriage to the heiress of Inglis of Murdieston. In 1446 Sir Walter Scott exchanged these lands for those of half of Branxholme with Inglis of Manor (also written ‘Murthockstone’ and variants; it is ‘Murthouston’ in 1426, ‘Murthostoun’, ‘Murthastoun’ and ‘Muirthoustoun’ in 1431 and ‘Murthowstoun’ in 1446).

Murdoch (mur-doch) n. Rev. Aiden Burn minister at St. Cuthbert’s Kirk in the 1960s. There is said to have been a split among his congregation in the early 1960s.

Murelton (mew-rel-tin) n. former lands in Liddesdale, recorded as ‘Muryelton’ in the c.1376 rental roll. It had a special status ‘tenetur de domino in capite per humagium reddendo’. The location is uncertain.

Muremaw see Moormaw

murlin (mur-lin) n., arch. a young lamb’s skin after it has recently been shorn – ‘The flesh of a starveling sheep that dies of weakness and disease; ... the skins of such sheep are termed murts or murlings’ [JL].

murn (murn) v., arch. to moan, grumble, lament – ‘I am trublet; I am bowet down gritly: I gae murnin' a' the daye lang' [HSR], 'It's for that puir dumb beist I murn, It's end is near, ye see' [WiSp], 'I murn in my compleenin an' mak' ane noyse' [HSR], '... Murnin in tongues man kent afore His first word was let-fa, They keen and souch and blaw' [DH], 'Each 'eer, as Januar' – end returns, Ilk yowe and stirkie waefu' murns ...' [DH], n. a moan, lamentation (see also mur-nit).

murnin (mur-nin) n., arch. mourning, grieving – 'But sune we're shot o' murnin, And or the day shall dee ...' [WL].

murnit (mur-nee', -ni') pp., poet. mourned – 'We hae pipet untill yow, an' ye haena dancet: we hae murnet untill yow, an' ye haena lamentet' [HSR].

Murphy (mur-fee) n. John (d.1917) oldest of a family of 10 from Lothian Street, he worked at Glebe Mills. He was killed in France during WWI and awarded the Military Medal. Mick played rugby for the P.S.A. and Y.M., as well as running at local games, winning many half-mile races before hanging up his spikes at age 24. He then served as fitness coach for Hawick United, moving to Hawick Royal Albert, where he was manager for 2 spells. Ronald 'Ronnie' Hawick man who was a swimming internationalist. He was also the first official President of the 1514 Club in 1977.

Murray see Earl o Murray

Murray (mu-ri) n. Adam (15th/16th C.) resident of Muselee. In 1502 John Scott 'in Walls' had remission for stealing a horse from him. Adam (17th C.) witness to a baptism for William Scott and Helen Elliot in Hawick in 1639. Adam (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His wife was Agnes Gledstains and their children included: Rachel (b.1672); and James (b.1689), who was baptised in Kelso. Adam (17th C.) tenant in Templehall on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Adam (17th C.) tenant in Mains in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. He may have been son of James, recorded in Mains in 1682. Adam (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Margaret Hutton and their children included: William (b.1762); Adam (b.1766); and John (b.1779). Adam (18th/19th C.) resident of Mervinslaw in Southdean Parish according to the 1799 ballot list for the Militia. His occupation appears to be 'Waxdresser' or perhaps 'Flaxdresser' (but is hard to read). Adam (b.c.1780) driver in Newcastleton according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish. Perhaps the same

Adam married Helen (or 'Nelly') Oliver and their children, baptised in Castleton Parish, included: David (b.1806); George (b.1808); Janet (b.1810); and William (b.1812). Adam (b.1827/8) from Newcastleton, he was a baker at 41 High Street. His wife was Ann and their children included Thomas, Christina, Margaret and James. Adam (1835–1922) born in Hawick, son of William and Agnes Stevenson. He emigrated to Ontario, living in Waterloo Township and Galt, where he worked as a spinner and tobacconist. He was a member of the Hawick Dramatic Club. He firstly married Lillias, daughter of Francis Napier Scott and secondly married Mary Frances Dobbin. He had 10 children in Canada and was buried in Bridgeport Free Cemetery, Kitchener, Ontario. Agnes (17th C.) listed at Todshawhaugh among 'The poor in Hauick Parioch' on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Agnes (b.1806/7) grocer on the Loan. She was listed in Slater's 1852 directory. In 1841 she was living with her husband William, a woollen spinner and their children. In 1851 she was a widow, living at about 11 Loan with her children Thomas, Adam, William, Agnes and Robert. It is not known what her maiden name was. Agnes (b.1822/3) straw hat maker in Newcastleton, listed in Pigot's 1837 directory. In 1841 she was living with her sisters Jane (also a straw hat maker) and Margaret (draper and spirit dealer) and brother William (surgeon) at about 1 South Hermitage Street. In 1851 she was a milliner, living with her sisters Margaret and Jane. Agnes (1829–1916) daughter of Andrew of Spittal Tower. She married railway guard James Lambert and later kept a wash-house at 29 Wellogate Place. Her daughter Helen kept up the wash-house. Alexander (15th C.) recorded in 1428/9 when he gave a sasine at the command of Archibald, Earl of Douglas, of the Barony of Hawick to William Douglas of Drumlanrig. He may have been an officer or bailie for the Baron or Earl, or possibly he held the rights of the Barony while the heir to Drumlanrig was a minor. He is probably the 'Sandris of murray' on an assize for lands in Bemersyde in 1425. He is also probably the 'Alexandrum de Murrase' who was on the inquest for the lands of Eilrig in 1426. Probably the same 'Alexandro de Murray' witnessed the 1431 document transferring Heap from the Langlands' to the Scotts; in his attestation to the same transfer he is 'Alysander off Murray off Cranstoun'. In 1432 he witnessed a charter for lands in Sprouston being granted to Thomas Cranston of that Ilk and another for William Cranston being granted

Nether Crailing in 1434. In 1443 he is 'Alexander 'de Moravia' of Cranston when witness to a charter for William Cranston of Crailing. Alexander (d.bef. 1485) Rector of Hawick. He was 2nd son of John of Philiphaugh, brother of Patrick of Falahill and uncle of John, 'the Outlaw Murray'. As a cleric, he was sometimes referred to as 'Master'. He was mentioned regularly in the Exchequer Rolls from at least 1460, being King's Receiver and then Clerk of the Chancery from 1465. He was Clerk and Director of the Chancery of Scotland in 1477. He was also one of the Auditors of the Exchequer and a Canon of Moray from at least 1464. His name appears between 1476 and 1482 as Rector of Hawick. In 1476/7 he was listed as Rector of Hawick and Directory of the Chancery when he has a charter for lands in Berwick. In 1479 he brought an action against David Scott of Buccleuch for the sum of 44 pounds of tax belonging to the church, but collected by Scott; there is no record of how this was resolved. Also in 1479 he was assigned the 'grassum' for part of the lands of 'Warmwod' in Ettrick Ward. He was listed as 'rectore de Hawik' when he witnessed a charter for James Hunter, Rector of Cranston. In 1482 he was also recorded as Rector of 'Petty and Brachly' when witness to an Inverness-shire document (along with the Rector of Ettrick Forest and others). About 1484 he appears to have himself been 'rector of The Forest' (i.e. Yarrow Kirk), and was still Director of the Chancery. His brother William is mentioned in 1485, by which time he was deceased. In 1536/7 it is written that John Scott took over as Vicar of Hawick following the death of Alexander Murray; however, this must either be an error or a later man of the same name. Alexander of Orchard (16th C.) recorded in 1575/6 making a complainant regarding 'mails' for Elibank. It is unclear how he was related to other Murrays, but he was surely connected with the Murrays of Blackbarony. Alexander (d.1682) son and heir of Sir Robert of Priestfield. In 1672 he was served heir to his father's lands in Hawick. This was explicitly the annual rent of 600 merks for the 20 husbandlands of lands in the east of the Town of Hawick and 8 husbandlands of land in the west of Hawick. It is unclear where these lands were, why they were owned by Murrays, and what happened to them. He married Janet, daughter of James Rocheid of Inverleith. He was succeeded by his son Sir Alexander of Melgum (1682–1713), who married Grizel, daughter of Patrick Kynynmound of that Ilk. Alexander (b.c.1790) from

Brownmuir in Selkirkshire, he was a cattle dealer in Lilliesleaf. He lived with his brothers William (a teacher) and Walter (an agricultural labourer) on the Loan in 1841 and on the south side of Main Street in 1851 and 1861. His wife was Janet and their children included Thomas, Jessie, Margaret and John W. He was still alive in 1861, although a widower. Alexander Davidson (1840–1907) son of Thomas, clothier in Denholm and Hawick, with his mother being Mary Scott, daughter of Charles Scott, Hawick linen manufacturer. He was younger brother of Sir J.A.H. He was an apprentice at the Hawick Advertiser and was local correspondent for the Southern Reporter. He was a prominent member of the Hawick Mutual Improvement Society. He left Hawick in 1862 to become editor of the Peeblesshire Advertiser. He later was editor of the Fife Journal and Dumfries Courier, before becoming editor of the Newcastle Daily Journal, a position he held for 37 years. He married Elizabeth Stuart Honeyman of Cupar, and she died in 1926, aged 81. They had 7 children. He published a story 'Charnwood; or, lost, found and faithful!' in 1876, set in the Borders in the mid-19th century, and a novel 'The Barringtons' in 1908. Andrew of Blackbarony (16th C.) son of John, who was Burgess of Edinburgh, and died at Flodden. He was a great-grandson of John of Philiphaugh. There was a 'retour of service' for him to inherit his father's lands in 1513/4, with a special dispensation because of his age. In 1541 he claimed the tenancy of the Crown lands of the wester side of 'Warmwod', 'alias Quhitehauch Braa' (in Ettrick), then occupied by Walter Scott in Synton; he also claimed Priesthope in Ettrick and Glenypet in Yarrow. He was one of the 4 'curators' of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch. In 1564/5 he was listed (on the Buccleuch side) on the bond between the Scotts and the Kers, and his support was also mentioned in the 1568/9 bond. He firstly married Elizabeth, daughter and heiress of William Lockhart, and had a daughter Marion, who married James Pringle of Whytbank. He secondly married Grizel Beaton, widow of Sir William Scott of Kirkurd, and was thus Sir Walter's step-father. Their children were: Sir John of Blackbarony; Andrew; Sir Gideon of Elibank; William of Dunerne and Newton; Elizabeth, who married James Bothwick of Newbyres and Sir Thomas Hamilton of Priestfield; and Agnes, who married her cousin Patrick Murray of Falahill, but was mentioned in a potential marriage contract in 1568/9, part of the resolution of the feud between the Kers and the Scotts. Andrew (17th C.) possibly the father of Andrew of Spittal Tower. He is said to have come from the Braemar area, and refusing to join the force under his superior, the Earl of Mar, he was forced to flee south, where he joined a troop of horsemen under Douglas of Cavers. Andrew (17th C.) married 'Heilling' Hogg in Ashkirk Parish in 1641. Andrew (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1648 he witnessed a baptism for Walter Douglas. He married Margaret Scoon and their children included Adam (b.1643), Helen (b.1646) and Isobel (b.1654). His wife's name was recorded as Janet in 1646. Andrew (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Jane Anderson and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1671. The witnesses were John Elliot and William Gray. Andrew (17th C.) tenant in Kirndeane in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Andrew 'The Hazel Dog o the Toor' (1715–77) second son of John and brother of John (and ancestor of Sir James A.H.). He carried on running the farm tenanted by his father, Spittal Tower. He is recorded as gardener at Tower in 1753 when one of his children was baptised. He married Elizabeth (or 'Betty') Spottiswoode, who came from an old Melrose family (her sister Isobel married James Hood of Dryburgh, ancestor of the Hoods of Lilliesleaf). Their children, baptised in Cavers Parish, were: Elizabeth (b.1747), who emigrated to Canada; Isabel (b.1751); Andrew (b.1753); William (b.1754); Jane (b.1756); John (b.1758); Helen; James (b.1764); Agnes (b.1767); and Mary (1770/1–1845). Andrew (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Betty Inglis and their children included: Thomas (b.1775); and Andrew (b.1777). He may be the spinner whose child died in Hawick in 1809. Andrew (1753–94) eldest son of Andrew and Elizabeth Spottiswood. He was a tenant farmer, with farms leased from the Dicksons of Hassendeanburn, first Westerhouses and then Newton. He was also tenant at Spittal Tower, like his father. In 1791 he was recorded at 'Spittalhall' when one of his children was baptised in Wilton Parish. In 1789 he married Isabella Henderson of Bonchester and she died in 1841/2 (although she was still living with her son William in Hawick in 1841). There is a story about him finding a box of gold when ploughing the fields at Westerhouses. He is supposed to have said to his wife 'I am just going to shave and take it down to the Burn', and then he delivered it to Mr. Dickson, who rewarded him with a year's free rent.

His children were: Andrew (1781–1848), who emigrated to Australia; Jean, who died young; James (b.c.1785), who married Christine Winthrope of Hawick and was Sir J.A.H.'s grandfather; William (b.1789), stockingmaker and merchant of Hawick; Elizabeth (or 'Betsy'), who married whipmaker Michael Ogilvy; Jane (b.1791), who married William Clerk; and John (b.1793), who died young. Several of his children were christened in Wilton Parish. Andrew (b.c.1780) servant at Myredykes according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish. He may have been younger brother of John, who was there in 1799. Andrew (1781–1848) eldest child of Andrew of Spittal Tower. He was an agricultural labourer in Oxnam Parish. It is possible he is the Andrew recorded at Gatehousecote on the 1801 Militia ballot in Hobkirk Parish. He married Isabella Cranston (whose sister was the grandmother of Cogsmill teacher Andrew Oliver); she died in 1832, aged 48 and is buried at Oxnam. After his wife's death he emigrated with his family to Australia. Their children included: Robert (1811–92), who married Jane Blair and was buried at 'Haning' near Bendemeer, New South Wales; Margaret Ann (1813–39), who died on the voyage to Australia; Andrew (1815–46), who became ship's master and was lost at sea; Isabella (1817–98); William (1819–76), who died at sea; Elizabeth (1821–77); and Jane (b.1824). He died near Melbourne. Andrew (b.c.1783) farmer at Old Castleton in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border'. He was also listed there in 1841. His wife was Janet and their children included George and John. Andrew (18th/19th C.) servant at Eilrig. His name was added to the Militia ballot in Robertson Parish in 1806. Andrew (1819/20–1907) born in Kirkton Parish, he moved to Hobkirk Parish with his father, who was a hind at Rulatownhead. In 1851 he was an agricultural labourer at Hallrule Mill and in 1861 was a ploughman at Kirknowe. In 1857 he married Betsy, the eldest daughter of the miller at Hallrule, James Laidlaw; she died in 1906. Both he and his wife died at Forkins and are buried at Hobkirk. Their children were: Isabella (b.1857), who died aged 5; and William (b.1858). Andrew (b.1821/2) son of William and brother of William and John. In the 1840s he opened a school in a room at the top of Baker Street. He later left for college, and the school was continued by his brother John, moving to the old East Bank Kirk. He returned later to assist his brother William in running the much larger school, which moved to 8 Kirkgate (i.e. St. Mary's Place). They were living at 7 Kirkgate in 1861, presumably next to the school. This eventually became St. Mary's and ultimately Trinity. Andrew (1823–82) son of weaver and merchant William. He was a frameworker in Hawick. In 1851 he was living on Nichol's Close and in 1851 at 3 Back Row. He married Isabella Brown and their children included Jane, Helen, William and John. Anne (1694–1737) daughter of Bennet, Laird of Chesters, she married her cousin John Murray, who was the Duke of Buccleuch's tenant at Unthank, and died in 1728. In 1734 she moved to Hawick, where she died. Her son James (b.1713) emigrated to North Carolina in 1735, and is an ancestor of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Sir Archibald of Blackbarony (d.bef. 1634) son of Sir John. He was knighted by James VI when he was young, and was made a Baronet of Nova Scotia in 1628. He married Margaret Maule, a descendant of the house of Panmure. Their children were: Sir Alexander, 2nd Baronet; Walter of Halmire; Robert, ancestor of the Murrays of Murray's Hall; Margaret, who married Sir John Hope; Bethia, who married Sir William Forbes of Craigievor and secondly Sir Alexander Forbes of Tolquhone; Helen, who married Sir John Carstairs; and Elizabeth, who married William Scott of Mangerton. Archibald (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1719 he was herd at Hislop. He married Bessie Black and their daughter Bessie was baptised in 1719, with witnesses 'Mr' Thomas Hume in Commonsides, Robert Scott, tenant in Falnash and Archibald Scott in Hislop. Archibald (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living in Denholm in 1733 when he married Betty Little. Archibald (b.1744) was probably his son. Archibald (18th/19th C.) tailor in Denholm, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 2 horses. He was probably related to James (grandfather of Sir James A.H.), a tailor in Hawick, who learned his trade in Denholm. Cameron 'Cammie' (1975–) son of Ernie, from Jedburgh and June, he was born in Hawick and brought up in Prestonpans and Haddington. after leaving school he joined Hawick R.F.C., being part of their 1996 cup-winning side. He later played professionally for the Borders and Edinburgh before returning to Hawick in 2001/2 and finishing his playing career with Melrose. He was first capped for Scotland in 1998, eventually gaining 24 caps. He works as a P.E. teacher at Berwickshire High School. He married Diane and they have sons Glen and Jack. Charles (18th C.) workman in Hawick Parish.

He married Isabel Dryden and their children included: Isobel (b.1770); Robert (b.1772); Charles (b.1776); and Daniel (b.1778). The witnesses in 1776 were the whole congregation. Charles Oliver (1842–1923) son of Thomas and Mary Scott, he was born in Denholm. Brother of Sir James, he was known as an engraver. He worked as a clerk in a woollen factory in Hawick until the age of 21. He then attended the Edinburgh School of Design, working by day as a lithographer. He was Gold and Silver Medalist at the Royal Scottish Academy School. He settled in London in 1868, being on the staff of 'Punch and Judy'. In London he became an engraver and was a founder member of the Royal Society of Painter Etchers. He first exhibited his plates in the Royal Academy Exhibition in 1878. He also worked on some local projects, including the reproduction of Tom Scott's 'Return to Hawick', and some original etchings of Hawick, for example images of the old Town Hall and St. Mary's Kirk. There is also a well-known picture of Sir Walter Scott's Tomb at Dryburgh Abbey. He married Elizabeth Wilson, daughter of Archibald Campbell from Glasgow and they had 7 children. He died in Croydon. Christina nee Winthrope (18th/19th C.) daughter of Hawick writer (i.e. lawyer) Thomas. She married a Mr. Stewart and became widowed. A story is told of how she met her new husband James Murray. Apparently she dreamt she was walking in her father's garden at the Wheathole and there met a man she did not recognise, but then saw him in East Bank Kirk (built on the site of the garden), later was introduced to him and eventually they were married. The marriage was in 1806. Her name is also recorded as 'Christian'. David (b.1704) son of David, he was born in Ewes Parish. He lived at Whiggills farm in Castleton Parish. He married Elizabeth Murray (b.1716). Their children included: Elizabeth; Agnes (b.1740); David (b.1743); John (b.1746); William Easton (b.1749); Jean (b.1751), who married Andrew Kyle; and Thomas (b.1754). David (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Isabel Nixon and their children included: John (b.1781); Adam (b.1781); and Elizabeth (b.1783). David (18th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. His unnamed child was baptised in 1786. David (c.1770–1841) son of James and Anne Dalrymple. He was a joiner at Teindside and perhaps also in the Borthwick valley. In 1799 he was listed at Teindside on the ballot for the Militia. His wife Mary Anderson died in 1819, aged 43. In 1820 he secondly married Mary Wilson, daughter of a Hawick blacksmith. The Murray family living at Mossyknowe in 1841 are probably his widow Mary and children James (a journeyman joiner), Henry, David and John. David (1791/2–1815) son of Thomas, tenant at Whisgills. He was described as ‘six feet six inches high; and to a majestic and well-proportioned person, he joined the mildest dispositions of mind’. He died aged 23. David (19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their daughter Jane Weir was baptised in 1838. David (b.1793/4) from Oxnam Parish, he was a woollen handloom weaver in Hawick. In 1841 and 1851 he was living at about 1 Millport with his family and mother-in-law Jean Renwick and in 1851. In 1861 he was at ‘27 High St, 2nd Back House. He married Rosina Renwick and their children, baptised in Hawick Free Kirk, included: John (b.1837); Jean (b.1838); Alison (b.1840); James (b.1842); Catherine Miller (b.1844); Elizabeth (b.1845); Alexander (b.1848/9); Robert (b.1851); Helen (b.1853/4); and Rosina (b.1855/6). David (b.c.1800) stocking weaver in Hawick. In 1841 he was living at about 42 or 44 High Street. His children included David, William, Andrew and James. David (b.c.1800) from Ireland, he was a framework knitter in Hawick. In 1841 he was living at about 42 or 44 High Street and in 1851 was living at about the Crown Close on the High Street, with his family as well as his brother-in-law and sister-in-law Robert and Martha Hardie. He married Helen Hardie and their children included David, William, Andrew, James, George and Isabella. David (b.1819/20) probably son of David. He was a woollen framework knitter living at 4 Teviot Crescent in 1851 and at Wilton Dean in 1861. His wife was Margaret and their children included David, Andrew, Walter, Adam and Thomas. David (1832/3–83) son of James, he was tenant at Whisgills, like his father. He married Elizabeth Robson, who died in 1896, aged 54. Their children included Jessie Temple (1877/8–1938) and probably James who also farmed at Whisgills. They are buried at Ettleton. David (1870/1–1911) youngest son of William, teacher at St. Mary’s School. He trained as a doctor at Edinburgh University and became assistant to Dr. James Brydon in the Sandbed. He later married Dr. Brydon’s daughter Mary. He then worked in Dumbarton and Edinburgh, but returned to Hawick as partner to Dr. Brydon about 1901. He carried on for a few years after Brydon’s death in 1905, later taking on

Dr. Samuel Davidson as a new partner, but dying himself not long after, aged only 40. He left 2 daughters. E. Judith local art teacher. In 2009, along with Lesley Fraser, she produced the booklet ‘Hawick Common Riding, An Illustrated Guide’, as well as the children’s version ‘The Kidz Guide’, distributed to senior primary pupils. ‘My First Common Riding Book’, aimed at nursery and primary school children followed. Elizabeth ‘Bessie’ (17th C.) resident of North Synton in 1694 when she was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among ‘ye poor’. Elliot (18th/19th C.) married Violet Elliot in 1805 in Southdean, and she died at Bonchester. Their children included Charlotte (who married Adam Bell from Camp-town), Charles (who worked at Wolfelee), Walter (farm servant, who died at Old Jethart) and John (servant at Wauchope and hedger for Minto estate). Elliot (b.c.1840) from Hobkirk Parish. He took over as blacksmith at Chesters from his uncle John Waugh in the early 1870s. He remained as blacksmith for more than 30 years, so that between him, his uncle and his uncle’s father (Robert), they had been blacksmiths at Chesters for about 95 years. Francis (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Scoon and their children included: Janet (b.1670); Margaret (b.1674); and Marie (b.1675). The witnesses in 1674 were John Murray and John Scoon (who may have been fathers or brothers of the couple). He could be the Francis born in 1643 to Alaexander and ‘Manie’ Scott. Frank James (d.1943) younger brother of J.E.D. He was a plumber, like his father. He married Mary Dickie, and had 2 children, John Archibald Campbell (who worked in hosiery) and Mary Margaret. Gavin P. (19th/20th C.) 4th man to serve as Secretary for the Congregational Kirk. George (17th C.) weaver at Whitehaugh in Wilton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Perhaps the same George, from Wilton, married Jane Wright and had a son James baptised in Hawick in 1683. The witnesses were John Henderson and James Halliday. George (18th/19th C.) farmer at Castleton, recorded along with John on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. John’s name came first and so was presumably his elder brother or father. George (b.1803/4) from Castleton Parish, he was shepherd at Ruletownnead in 1861. He probably took over as shepherd there from his father, and was likely brother of Andrew. His wife was Jane and she had a son John Hume from a previous marriage. They had a daughter Jane.

George (b.c.1810) grocer on the Howegate, probably at No. 16. He later worked as a mason's labourer. He married Helen Tully and their children included Agnes, George, Janet and David.

George (b.1806/7) from Castleton Parish, he was a shoemaker journeyman in Hawick. He was living at about 43 High Street in 1841 and on the Kirkwynd in 1851. His wife was Sarah and their children included Helen and Ann. George (19th C.) shepherd of Allanhaughmill. From about 1848 he was one of the first Trustees of Hawick Congregational (then Evangelical) Kirk. He could be the agricultural labourer listed at Haysike in 1841, with wife Margaret and children John, Thomas and Helen. George Oliver (b.1857) younger son of local historian Robert. In 1863 he presented to the Museum an amulet found in the Glebe allotments. He provided a horn mull (or perhaps the snuff) for the Snuffing in 1889. He became a doctor in Tunnel City, Wisconsin. He married Sarah Johnstone and their children were Robert Oliver and Agnes Ariska.

George Malcolm 'Malcolm', C.B.E. (1937/8–) educated at Hawick High School, he qualified as a Fellow of the Faculty of Actuaries in 1961. He was a Director of the Scottish Life Assurance Company and President of the Faculty of Actuaries 1994–96. He was awarded a C.B.E. in 1995. He has been President of the Callants' Club and Hawick R.F.C., as well as honorary secretary of Edinburgh Borderers R.F.C. and involved with the Scottish Sports Council, the General Teaching Council of Scotland and Craiglockhart College.

Sir Gideon of Elibank (d.1621) 3rd son of Sir Andrew of Blackbarony. His mother was Grizel Beaton, widow of Sir William Scott of Kirkurd, and thus he was half-brother to Sir Walter Scott, 10th Laird of Buccleuch. Sir Walter owed him 'males' for the lands of Glenpyet in his last testament of 1574. In 1592 he was 'of Glenpoyte' when he served as surety for William Scott of Hartwoodmyres and Walter Scott of Stirches. In 1594 he was 'Jedion Murray of Glenpint' among the 180 or so followers of Sir James Johnstone who had a 'respite' for their role at Dryfe Sands the year before. He may have been educated for the church and was 'chantour' of Aberdeen. In 1590 along with John of Blackbarony, Patrick of Falahill and other Murrays he was put under caution not to harm Robert Scott of Haining and James Scott, 'callit Mekle Jame Eister'. He is probably the 'Mr. Gedioun Murray' who witnessed a document in Edinburgh for Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1591. In about 1591 he killed a man called Aitchison. In 1592, along with Walter Scott of Goldielands, he was given a commission to 'demolish the houses and fortalices of Harden and Dryhoip', because of Walter Scott of Harden's involvement in the Falkland Raid. He is probably the 'Jedion Murray of Glenpint' listed among the supporters of Sir James Johnstone at Dryfe Sands in 1593 and about the same time he was 'of Glenpoyte' when he was surety for William Scott of Hartwoodmyres and Walter Scott of Stirkschaws. In 1594 he was 'Mr. Gedeon Murray of Glenpoytte' when he witnessed a document for the Duke of Lennox and also witnessed a bond of 'manrent' for the Beatties to Sir Walter Scott, signed in Hawick in 1595. In 1595 the King confirmed a charter granting him 'Elebank, or Eleburne, in the forest and Lordship of Ettrick'. In 1596/7 Sir Walter of Buccleuch granted him the lands of Crichton, this being signed in Hawick. He was Provost of Crichton, this patronage later going to the Earl of Buccleuch. In 1598 he was procurator for Sir Walter Scott of Branhholme in a claim that Sir Walter should be responsible for Walter Scott of Harden. In 1598 he acted as commissioner to Sir Walter Scott in a contract with the Homes of Wedderburn regarding the lands of Whitsome, and witnessed a charter at Branhholme in 1599. In 1598/9 he resigned the lands of Easter and Wester Deloraine and Carterhaugh to Sir Walter Scott of Branhholme. In 1599 he witnessed the bonds (signed at Branhholme) between Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch and the Armstrongs and Elliots of Liddesdale. In 1602 he and his brother John were responsible for removing Scott of Hundleshope and others from lands belonging to Stewart of Traquair, and he was also surety for Robert Scott of Thirlestane. Also in 1602 he signed a bond among Border Laids for keeping the peace. Additionally he was surety for Robert Scott of Thirlestane in 1602. He was still witnessing documents for Scott of Buccleuch in 1603. In 1604 he and other Murrays had a caution not to harm the Stewarts of Traquair and elsewhere. He was knighted in 1605 and appointed as one of the 5 Scottish Commissioners given responsibility to ruthlessly carry out the pacification of the Borders. In 1606 he added lands of Langshaw (in Elwand Water) and Whytbank (in Selkirkshire) to his estates. In 1607 he was mentioned in a Melrose document relating to the lands of Langshaw (where he is 'Jedeane' and is referred to in relation to Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch as 'beand full sister and brother bairnes'). In 1608 he was appointed to ensure that the Presbytery of Jedburgh elected 'a constant moderator', against the wishes of the ministers. In 1608 (although the date may be suspect) he received the teinds of Hawick Kirk in a 'tack' by Rev. William Fowler, with the consent of Lord Scott of Buccleuch. This was to last for his lifetime and then 19 more years. In 1610 he became a Privy Councillor and Comptroller and was named to the Commission for keeping peace in Selkirkshire. He served on the Judiciary Court in Jedburgh in 1611. He represented Selkirkshire in Parliament in 1612. In 1613 he was appointed Treasurer Depute and created Lord Elibank. He was Depute-Treasurer for the Justices who prosecuted the Earl of Orkney in 1615. He made preparations for the Royal visit to Scotland in 1617. He was appointed as a Commissioner for the Middle Shires in 1618. He appears to have been a willing instrument of the King in imposing Episcopacy on the Scottish people. In 1621 he was accused of abusing his office by Sir James Stewart of Orkney, and it is suggested that he may have poisoned himself over the disgrace. He married Margaret, daughter of Dionis Pentland. He was succeeded by his son Sir Patrick, 1st Lord Elibank of Ettrick Forest, while Walter was another son. A marriage contract of 1611 exists between his daughter Agnes ('Muckle Mou'd Meg') and William Scott of Harden – 'The Laird o' Elibank, ee to ee Wi' Wat o' Harden could never see' [WL]. Gideon (1772/3–1839) resident of Colterscleuch Toll. He married Margaret Oliver (1778/9–1843). They are buried at Teviothead. Gideon (b.c.1795) handloom weaver in Newcastleton. In 1841 he was at about 10 Whitcheater Street. His wife was Margaret and their children included James, Jane, Adam and Andrew. Gordon F. (20th C.) Town Hall Legal Assistant 1958–60 and Depute Town Clerk 1960–62. Graeme (d.2000) well known reciter, brother of Philip. Harold James Ruthven (1868–1955) son of Sir James A.H. He was known as an educationalist, inspector of schools, chess historian and champion of left-handedness. He wrote an article 'The Family of Sir James Murray' in the 1928 Archæological Society Transactions and a biographical sketch of his father's life in the 1934 Transactions. He also provided family-related notes to James Haining for his monumental inscriptions. Helen (b.c.1780) grocer in Newcastleton, listed in 1837. In 1841 she was at about 2 Langholm Street. Henry (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He was married to Ann Bell and they had several children baptised at Netherraw and Upper Raw. Their children included Adam (b.1795), Robert

(b.1797), Betty (b.1799), James (b.1802), Margaret (b.1806) and George (b.1806). James of Bowhill (d.1513) recorded in about 1529 in the Selkirk Protocol Books. He was said to have 'died under the banner of our deceased supreme lord king James IV' in about 1529, when his only daughter and heir Isabel gave the south part of Bowhill to her uncle, Michael Scott of Aikwood, and Michael's son William. Also in 1529 his daughter granted her lands of the west side of Kershope to Michael Scott. This suggests that he had married a sister of Michael Scott of Aikwood. He was probably related to the deceased Thomas of Bowhill recorded in 1539. James (15th/16th C.) Rector of Wilton. He witnessed a sasine at Galashiels in 1503 where John Murray of Falahill assigned the Lordship of Ettrick Forest to Queen Margaret. Although it is feasible that a different Wilton is meant, the witnesses included Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch and other Borderers. He may have been related to either John of Falahill or the notary, John, who was a Clerk of St. Andrews Diocese. James of Falahill (d.c.1529) elder son of John 'the Outlaw'. His sisters Elizabeth, Isabel and Janet married Sir James Douglas of Cavers, Robert Scott of Howpasley and Sir Robert Stewart of Minto, respectively. He held several lands in Selkirkshire and also Peeblesshire. In 1519/20 he resigned 'Eldinghop' (in Yarrow) to Walter Scott of Branxholme. He was on an inquest in Jedburgh in 1523. In 1524/5 he was one of those who promised to help keep order with the newly appointed Warden and Lieutenant of the Borders, the Earl of Angus. He is probably the James recorded in 1526 as Sheriff of Selkirkshire. In 1527 he had an agreement with Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme to end their feud; he agreed to forgive the Scotts and their allies for all former killings and spoliation in return for 500 merks Scots, and he also agreed to end his dispute over the lands of Kirkurd. In 1528 he agreed to deliver up all charters etc. relating to Kirkurd and give up any claim to the lands. Also in 1528 he assigned his lands of Lewenshope to his wife. He married Margaret Home and/or a daughter of Sir John Cranston and was succeeded by his son Patrick in 1530. James (16th C.) tenant in Sundhope in the Yarrow Valley. He was recorded in 1539/40 as 'layman of the diocese of Glasgow when he was decreed to be within the 4th grade of consanguinity with Marion, daughter of Adam Dalglish of Deuchar. James (16th C.) tenant of Swinstead in Kirkton Parish. In 1581 he was 'in Swynsteids' along with Hector Jardine when they

(along with several Elliots) witnessed the sasine for Gavin Gledstains inheriting Stobs from his deceased brother George Gledstains. Sir James (17th C.) son of John of Falahill and Philiphaugh. He was knighted by Charles I. In 1628–33 he represented Selkirkshire in Parliament. He married Anne, daughter of Sir Thomas Craig of Riccarton. He died before his father and his son Sir John succeeded to Philiphaugh. His daughter Janet married James Scott of Gala. James (d.1658) 2nd Earl of Annandale, son of John, 1st Earl. In 1641 he was served heir to his father's 5-pound Chapel lands of Caerlenrig, and also a huge number of other lands. He moved to England and lived quietly there during the Civil War. He married Jean Carnegie, Viscountess of Stormont. He died without issue. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Bessie Armstrong and their son William was baptised in 1648. James (17th C.) recorded in 1656 when his daughter Agnes with Isobel Nixon was baptised in Hawick. This was labelled 'for: in Cavers', making it clear that the couple were unmarried and that at least one of them was from Cavers Parish. The witnesses were Thomas Johnston and William Nixon (probably related to Isobel). James (17th C.) recorded as schoolmaster in Selkirk in 1668. James (d.c.1682) recorded as tenant 'in Mains of Liddesdaill' in 1682, when his will is listed. He was surely related to Adam who was at Mains in 1694. James (17th C.) herd at Borthwickshiels in 1683. His daughter Bessie was baptised in Robertson Parish in that year, with witnesses Thomas Elliot and William Elliot (perhaps the tenant in Borthwickshiels and his son, who became Laird of Borthwickbrae). It is possible that he is the James, married to Helen Robson, whose son James was baptised in Robertson in 1686. Sir James of Philiphaugh (1655–1708) eldest son of Sir John and Anne Douglas of Cavers. He was served heir to his father in 1677. He was Senator of the College of Justice. He served as M.P. for Selkirkshire in 1678, 1681–82 and 1702–03. He was then Lord Clerk Register. In 1680 he was involved in a dispute with Selkirk over the boundaries of its Common and had a discharge with the Burgh (probably over annual rent) in 1681. In 1684 he was arrested and tried for helping Covenanters. He acted as a Commissioner for assessing the rents of the local farms of the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1694. He contributed £500 to the Darien Scheme in 1695. He married Anne Hepburn of Blackcastle and secondly married Margaret, daughter of Sir Alexander Don of

Newton. His children were: John, who succeeded; James, who died unmarried; Alexander, also died unmarried; Rachel, died unmarried; Anne, married Pringle of Haining; Elizabeth; Jane; and Margaret. He died at Inch. James (17th C.) resident of Shielswood in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll. He may be the James who witnessed a baptism in 1689 in Ashkirk Parish for William Coltart and others in 1690 for Walter Wilson and for Thomas Smith. He may be the James who married Helen Nivison and whose son Robert was baptised in 1690, with witnesses Thomas Nivison and Water Coltart. James (17th C.) herd at Broadhaugh on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. James (17th C.) listed as resident at Outsideside on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th C.) listed at Newbigging among 'The poor in Hauick Parioch' on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th/18th C.) married Janet Smith in Bedrule Parish in 1698. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He married Janet Laidlaw and their daughter Helen was baptised in 1702. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He married Mary Nichol in Robertson in 1702. James (b.1703), John (b.1704), William (b.1706), William (again, b.1707) and Janet (b.1707) may have been his children. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was recorded as a gardener in Clarilaw in 1711 when his son Robert was baptised. James (b.1710) and John (b.1713) may also have been his children. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Denholm. His daughter Isabel was baptised in 1709. Isabel (b.1701) and Archibald (b.1704), baptised in Cavers, may also have been his children. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He married Margaret Hislop in 1709. His surname is recorded as 'Morrew'. James (17th/18th C.) resident at Merrylaw. In 1724 his daughter Bessie was baptised in Cavers Parish. Other children, baptised in Cavers, who were probably his, include Bessie (b.1713), Ann (b.1715) and Ann (again, b.1719). James (17th/18th C.) weaver in Wilton Parish. He was at Burnhead in 1709 and at Newton in 1711. His children included: Jean (b.1709); and William (b.1711). He could be the James who married Elspeth (or Janet) Turnbull in Wilton in 1707. He could also be the James, who married Marion Turnbull in Bedrule in 1703, and whose son Andrew was baptised in Wilton in 1716, or the James, married to Agnes Brown, whose son James was baptised in 1716. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Craikshiel in 1718 and Craik in 1720. He probably married Bessie Dickson or Marion 'Dixon' (it is unclear whether these are different women) in Roberton in 1717 and their children included: Bessie (b.1718); and an unnamed son (b.1720). James (18th C.) married Mary or Marion Rutherford in 1726, the marriage recorded in both Bedrule and Hobkirk Parishes. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Janet 'Blacker' in 1728. James (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Dykes in 1730 and 1738. His children included Isabel (b.1730) and Adam (b.1738). He may be the James who married Mary (or Marion) Rutherford in 1726, the marriage being recorded in Bedrule and Hobkirk parishes. He could also be the James whose children baptised in Bedrule Parish included James (b.1727), Isabel (b.1736) and Archibald (b.1738). James (1713–81) born at Unthank in the Ewes valley, son of James and Ann Bennet. His father died in 1728 and in 1732 the lease of Unthank and Fiddleton were taken by Robert Elliot of Fenwick and Walter Scott (his cousin, farmer at Commonsides and uncle of Sir Walter Scott the writer). He then became a merchant's apprentice in London, and emigrated to North Carolina (it is said in 1735, although this is impossibly early, since his wife was only born in 1724), while his mother moved to Hawick in 1734 (where she died). He married his cousin Barbara, daughter of Andrew Bennet of Chesters; probably the same Barbara's 'bride money' was paid in Ancrum Parish in 1744. Their children were Elizabeth Dorothy, Archibald, John, Jean and two children who died in infancy. Elizabeth married Edward Hutchinson Robbins, their daughter Annie Jean Robbins married Joseph Lyman, whose daughter Catherine Robbins Lyman married Warenn Delano and had a daughter Sara (or Sallie) Delano, who was the mother of U.S. President Franklin Delano Roosevelt. James himself was exiled after the American Revolution, being loyal to King George, and dying in Halifax, Nova Scotia. Some of his correspondence (including a brief account of a visit to Hawick) was published in 'Letters of James Murray, Loyalist' (1901). James (18th C.) Ann Riddell in Roberton Parish in 1744. James (18th C.) married Margaret Nichol in Wilton Parish in 1744. James (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His children included Janet (b.1746), John (b.1748) and James (b.1751). James (1716/7–92) resident of Teindside. He married Anne Dalrymple, who died at Teindside in 1809, aged 80.

Their children included: William, James, Nelly, Elizabeth (or 'Betty', 1758) and Anne (b.1766), who probably all died young; David (1768/9–1841), joiner; and John, who also died at Teindside at the age of 70. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Burnfoot in 1747 and 1751. He married Helen 'Hoom' (i.e. Hume) and their children included: Margaret (b.1746); John (b.1747); Janet (b.1749); William (b.1751); and Helen (b.1760), baptised in Hawick. The witnesses in 1747 were Walter Scott and James Dryden and in 1751 were Robert and John Scott. James (18th C.) resident at Borthwickbrae in 1743 and 1753. His children, baptised in Roberton Parish, probably included Helen (b.1743), Robert (b.1745), Thomas (b.1747), Bessie (b.1749), Ann (b.1751), Walter (b.1753) and James (b.1755). He is probably the wright in Mains (presumably Borthwick Mains) who died in 1775 and is buried in Roberton Cemetery, along with his wife Anne 'Rickeltoun' (d.1797). James (b.1741) 2nd son of John, farmer at Spittal-on-Rule. He trained for the ministry and became minister at the Presbyterian Church in Harbottle. James (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. His children included William (b.1761) and John (b.1768). James (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included: an unnamed child (b.1764); Archibald (b.1766); William (b.1768); James (b.1773); and William (b.1778). It is possible that James and William were the tailor and labourer recorded in Denholm on the 1801 Militia ballot. James (18th C.) resident of Ewes Parish. In 1783 he was at 'Drummondshall'. He married Margaret Scott and their children included: Elizabeth (b.1783); Janet (b.1787); Margaret (b.1795); and William (b.1797). The witnesses in 1783 were John and James Carruthers. James 'Jamie' (b.c.1755) probably from Ettrick, although possibly the James, son of James, born in Roberton Parish in 1755. His story of encountering a ghost at the Bishop's Stone (on Woll Rig) in about 1775 was recounted to someone in 1831 who wrote about it in the Border Counties' Magazine in 1880 (reprinted in 1904). He married Jean Rae In Yarrow in 1810; she had worked as a servant at Headshaw. Their children included: Jean (b.1811); and William (b.1815). James (1756/7–1827) joiner at Borthwickbrae, probably the son of James born in 1755. He is recorded as owner of a horse at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He is buried in Roberton Cemetery. His children included: William (1802/3–27). He may be the same as the James who lived at Borthwick Mains. James (18th C.) married Isabel Ingles in Cavers Parish in 1787. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was living at Borthwick Mains in 1788 and 1792 and Borthwick Burnfoot in 1798. He married Ann Turnbull in 1787, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Robertson Parishes. Their children included: Betty (b.1788); James (b.1790); Walter (b.1792); and an unnamed son (b.1798). James of Philiphaugh (1769–1852) 3rd son of John. He was a Commander in the Indian Navy. In 1809 he married Mary Dale, daughter of Henry Hughes. They had 3 sons and a daughter, and he was succeeded by the eldest son, Sir John. His daughter died at Beechwood in about 1901 and was the last in the line of Murrays of Philiphaugh. James (b.1777/8) labourer in Newcastleton. In 1851 he was at about 10 South Liddell Street, living with his wife Elizabeth, children William (b.c.1800) and Isabel (b.1824/5) and grand-daughter Margaret Crozier (b.1847/8). He was a widower in the same place in 1861. He may be the shepherd recorded in Newcastleton on the ballot for the Militia in 1801. James (18th C.) servant at Boghall in Castleton Parish. In 1797 he was listed among men on the ballot to serve in the Militia. In 1799 he was among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in the parish of Castletoun'; he was at Boghall, but with Brox in brackets, suggesting he had previously been there. James (b.c.1775) born in Yarrow Parish, perhaps son of John. He may be the weaver in Hawick, listed among the men balloted to serve in the Militia in 1797; however, in 1799 he was listed among those whose names had not been drawn, but were no longer living in the area. He worked as a soldier, being listed as Private and then Corporal in the Dumfriesshire Militia. He married Mary Scott in Canongate, Edinburgh in 1803; his wife was daughter of miller Robert Scott (perhaps miller at Roughheugh) and born in Wilton Parish. His children (born and baptised in Musselburgh, Dalkeith and Wilton, but all registered in Wilton) were: John (b.1806); Robert (b.1808); and James (b.1810). There was also an earlier son, whose name is unknown. The baptism of James in 1810 was witnessed by John Thomline and George Wallace. He may have later had children: Christina (b.1824/5); Thomas (b.1812/3); Andrew (b.1826/7); Mary (b.1827/8); and Helen (b.1829/30). The family were living at 'Nixon's Mill' (probably Lynnwood Cottages) in 1841, where he was a wool spinner. They were in

Dumfries in 1851, where he was working as 'Under Carder Master Wool'. James (18th/19th C.) married Sarah Scoon in Wilton Parish in 1805. James (b.c.1770s) tailor in Denholm according to the ballot lists for the Militia in 1799 and 1801. William was listed after him in 1801 and may have been related; it is possible they are the sons of James baptised in Cavers 1773 and 1778. James (18th/19th C.) resident of London who subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He presumably had a local connection. James (18th/19th C.) mason in Newcastleton, listed among heads of households in 1835. James (c.1785–1843) from the Spittal family, he was 3rd child of Andrew who farmed Westerhouses and Newton. He was paternal grandfather of 'Dictionary' James. He seems likely to be the tailor in Denholm listed on the ballot for the Militia in 1799; however, if so he would have to have been born no later than 1780. In 1806 he married (with a curious story of her seeing him in a dream before she knew him) Christina, daughter of Thomas Wintrobe, who was a writer in Hawick; the marriage was recorded in both Wilton Parish and East Bank Kirk. He became a tailor, learning his trade in Denholm and later having a shop at 67 High Street (which became the Co-op grocers). He was listed as a High Street tailor in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was long an elder of the East Bank Secession Church, having been one of the original subscribers, receiving money in exchange for bonds (which through some irregularity were all later taken by his grandson Andrew, leaving the rest of his grand-children with nothing). His children, baptised in East Bank Kirk, were: Isabella (b.1807), who married Hawick shoemaker William Somerville; Andrew (b.1809), tailor in Morebattle, who married Minnie Buglass; Thomas (b.1811), father of Sir James A.H.; Elizabeth (b.1813), who died young; Stewart (b.c.1815), a roper with Munro's, who married Isabella Anderson; James (b.1817), a tailor in Hawick who married Isabella Maben; and Elizabeth (or 'Betty', b.1819), who married stockingmaker Andrew Hood. In 1841 he was listed as a tailor on the High Street, living along with 'Cathrine' (probably his wife Christina, otherwise a sister), and children James and Betty, as well as another James (probably a grandson, perhaps a young 'Dictionary' Murray). James (b.c.1780s) joiner at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot according to the 1812 ballot for the Militia in Robertson Parish. He may be the son of James baptised in Robertson in 1790. Perhaps the same James married Helen Renwick and had a son James baptised in Robertson in 1816. James (1789–1853) youngest child of John and Mary Cleuch and grandson of John, farmer at Spittal-on-Rule. He was father of Gen. Sir John Murray. He was educated at Denholm, Minto and Jedburgh schools and Edinburgh University. He studied to be a minister, but due to a speech defect he had to give up his ambition (which apparently was not an impediment to becoming a teacher!). He ran a private school in Hawick for several years before being appointed schoolmaster of Hawick Grammar School in 1821 (perhaps as assistant from 1818). He was appointed as Session Clerk in 1821, and as such was the last to carry on the practice of reading the scriptures in church between the morning and evening services. However, he kept only sporadic records in the Session books. He was the first teacher at the new United Schools, when the Parish and Grammar Schools merged in 1825. His favourite saying when punishing pupils was ‘I’ll trim ye!’ He subscribed to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. He gave up as session clerk in 1850, but was headmaster right up until his death in the first few days of 1853. In a directory of 1852 he is listed as Porochial Schoolmaster on Teviot Square. In 1825 he married Margaret (1790–1851), eldest daughter of Thomas Irvine, farmer at Wauknell, Eskdale; her brother was Maj.-Gen. Sir Archibald Irvine. They had at least 4 children: John Irvine (b.1826), who became a General; Elizabeth Little (b.1828), who married Col. Ryall, but died of cholera and had no surviving children; Thomas Irvine (b.1830), who died in infancy; and Thomas Irvine (again, b.1835), who probably also died young. He is buried in St. Mary’s churchyard. James (18th/19th C.) married Mary Armstrong in Cavers Parish in 1817. James (1796/7–1871) son of Thomas and Janet Ingles, he was tenant farmer at Whisgills in Castleton Parish. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. He was at Whisgills in 1841, was farmer of 450 acres there in 1851, with 2 labourers and in 1861 he was recorded as farmer of 700 acres, employing 3 men. He married Elizabeth (or ‘Betty’) Scott, who died in 1874, aged 78. Their children included: Elizabeth (or ‘Betty’, 1817–24); Thomas (1827–58), tenant in Burnmouth; Elizabeth (b.1828); John (b.1830); Agnes (1833–80); David (1833–83), also tenant at Whisgills; Janet (b.1834); Mary (b.1837), who married Adam Scott; Jane (b.1839), who married John Irving; and Mary, who married Adam Scott. They are mostly buried in Ettleton Cemetery.

James (18th/19th C.) married Agnes Stevenson in Hobkirk in 1822. James (18th/19th C.) married Janet Scott in Cavers in 1829. James (b.1806/7) born in Castleton Parish, he was a handloom weaver in Hawick. In 1851 he was living on the Round Close. His wife was Elizabeth and their children included Walter, Agne, Gideon, John, James, William, Catherine, Jane and Margaret. James (18th C.) married Jean McFarlane in 1837, the marriage recorded in Lilliesleaf and St. Boswells Parishes. James (18th C.) married Eliza Thomson in Hawick Parish in 1837. James (b.1810) son of James and Mary Scott. His father was a soldier, and he was born and baptised in Wilton. He worked as a handloom weaver. In 1841 he was living on Punchbowl Close, was at 5 Teviot Crescent in 1851 and was on Mather’s Close in 1861. He married Isabella Howison and their children included: David (b.1833); Robert (b.1835); William (b.1836/7); Isabella (b.1839/40), who must have died young; James (b.1846/7); Jane (or Ann, b.1848/9); Isabella (again, b.1850/1) and Helen (b.1853/4). James (b.1810/1) born in Wilton, he was a shoemaker in Hawick. He was on the Kirk Wynd in 1841 and at 25 Loan in 1851 and 1861. His wife was Catherine and their children were John, Robert, Helen, Walter, Andrew and Mary. He may be the James, son of John and Mary Scott, baptised in Wilton in 1810. James (1812–75) from Coldstream, he was a blacksmith with premises on Brougham Place. The location was afterwards used by Gould the framesmith. He married Christian, who died in 1896, aged 82. Their children included several who did not reach adulthood, plus Isabella and another daughter who married William Taylor of Ashybank. James (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Janet Beattie and their children included Betty (b.1833) and Helen (b.1835). James (19th C.) married Helen Nichol in Robertson Parish in 1838. James (b.1817) son of James, he was uncle of Sir James A.H. He was a tailor in Hawick. He married Isabella Maben in Hawick Parish in 1842. James (19th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Isabella Whitson and their son James was baptised in Hawick Free Kirk in 1842. James (19th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Catherine Brown and their children, the last 4 baptised in Hawick Free Kirk, included: James (b.1832); John (b.1834); John (again, b.1835); Catherine (b.1844); James (again, b.1846); Andrew (b.1849); and Mary (b.1852). James (b.1825/6) from Canonbie, he was a ploughman at Whithaugh Cottages in Castleton Parish in 1861. His wife was Ann and their children included Andrew, Agnes, Mary, Elizabeth and Janet. James (19th C.) founder of J. Murray & Sons, plumbers and slaters of Hawick. He was an elder in Allars Kirk. James (b.1835/6) from Newcastleton, he was a finisher of tweeds living at 12 Back Row in Hawick in 1861. He married Agnes White and their children included James. James (19th C.) married Elizabeth (or 'Eliza') Rodger in Hawick Parish in 1852. Their daughter Helen was baptised in Hawick Free Kirk in 1853. James (19th C.) married Catherine Huggan in Hawick Parish in 1852. Sir James Augustus Henry 'Dictionary Murray' (1837–1915) born in Denholm, in the Crown Inn on Main Street. He was eldest son of Thomas Murray (clothier in Denholm and later Hawick, from the Spittal Tower family) and Mary Scott (also of Hawick, daughter of Charles Scott, linen manufacturer, and from the Boonraw family), and was a distant relative of the Hawick schoolmaster who was also James Murray. His middle names were added only after he went to Hawick and discovered that some people had more than one Christian name. He developed an early interest in botany, geology and astronomy, as well as languages. He was educated at Cavers, Denholm and Minto schools, attending school only between the ages of 6 and 14½. By the time he left school he had already studied Latin, French, German, Italian and classical Greek. He became a Junior Assistant Master at the United Schools of Hawick in 1854 at age 17. 3 years later he was made headmaster of a new private school in Hawick, the Subscription Academy. He was apparently keen on taking his pupils on excursions to study local botany, geology, etc. He was a founder member of the Archaeological Society in 1856 (when he was still only 19 years old), being the third official member and its first Secretary, as well as contributing many articles (51 in all) on a huge range of topics; he was also the last surviving founder member of the Society. In the early years of the Society, he talked at a large fraction of meetings, covering botany, geology, archaeological artefacts, local history, 'Two Days' Ramble up the Slitrig and down the Liddell', etc. He made a 5-foot long map of 'Scotland under the Romans', which he talked about at one of the first meetings of 1856. He wrote a series of articles in the Hawick Advertiser in the 1850s, describing the botany of the area. He also presented the Museum with a cabinet of insects he had collected. In Hawick he was also involved with politics as well as the Total Abstinence Society. He had many talents, for example his sketch of Leyden's birthplace was used as the frontispiece for the 1858 collection of Leyden's works. In 1863 he made stencil copies of the stones describing Walter Scott of Goldielands, which were uncovered in St. Mary's Kirk. He was a member of the Congregational Kirk in Denholm. In 1862 he married Maggie Isabella Sarah Scott (1834–65) in Belfast; she was an infant teacher and daughter of a Hawick clerk. In 1864 they moved to London for his wife's health, where nevertheless she died in 1865 (of consumption, aged 31), and their infant daughter Anne Marie Gretchen the year before (buried in the Wellogate Cemetery). There he worked for the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China in Threadneedle Street. He obtained a reader's ticket for the British Museum and resumed his interest in languages, soon meeting several philologists who lived in the London area. In 1867 he married Ada Agnes Ruthven (1845–1936), with Alexander Graham Bell as the best man. In 1870 he was appointed schoolmaster at Mill Hill School, north-west of London and lived in a nearby house called 'Sunnyside'; he regarded his time there as the happiest of his life (apart from when he was in Hawick of course). He completed 'The Dialect of the Southern Counties of Scotland' (1873), the first systematic study of any dialect; it also contains a translation of the Book of Ruth into Lowland Scots. He also gave papers at meetings of the Philological Society. Contributing more seriously to philological study, he produced editions of 'The Minor Poems of Sir David Lindsay' (1871), 'The Complaynt of Scotland' (1872) with an extensive introduction and glossary and 'Romance and prophecies of Thomas of Erceldoune' (1875), again with notes. He obtained a B.A. from London University in 1873 and an honorary LL.D. from Edinburgh University in 1874. He became President of the Philological Society in 1878 and around 1879 he took over as editor of the 'New English Dictionary on Historical Principles' (to become the Oxford English Dictionary). An undertaking of gargantuan proportions, he died before it was completed, although the work was finished under his organisation and inspiration. Much of the work was carried out in a glorified shed in his garden, referred to as the 'Scriptorium'. In 1885, after the second volume was published he gave up his teaching job permanently and moved with his family to Oxford to work full time on the dictionary in a new Scriptorium in the garden of 78 Banbury Road, renamed Sunnyside. Apart from the occasional family holiday he worked tirelessly on the dictionary.

He was made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1906, when he was also at the presentation of the Provost's Chain event, on the 50th anniversary of the Archæological Society. He had 10 surviving children, all of whom were given Anglo-Saxon first names and middle names given after relatives, including: Harold James Ruthven, who wrote an influential history of chess, as well as providing an article on him for the Archæological Transactions; and Sir Oswyn, who became Secretary to the Admiralty. He received a knighthood in 1908, as well as honorary degrees from 9 universities. He died of heart failure following a year of illness, in which he completed the volume 'Trink to Turndown' on schedule. He is buried at Wolvercote Cemetery near Oxford. A plaque marking his birthplace is in Denholm, and another in Hawick, where he lived on Bourtree Place. The definitive biography is 'Caught in the Web of Words' (1977) by his grand-daughter K.M. Elisabeth Murray, and he is also the 'Professor' (although he never held that title) in Simon Winchester's 'The Professor and the Madman' (1998, British title 'The Surgeon of Crowthorne'). His contribution to the systematization of language is immense. All major dictionary projects that came later have followed the principles he laid out. Words from the Hawick area are well represented in his original volumes (but unlike modern dictionaries, he left out all words considered obscene in his day). James (b.1860) son of Robert and Elizabeth Hunter, he was born in Hawick. He moved to Edinburgh, where he worked as a baker, and later the family lived in Kelso. He married Jane McMichan. James (1874/5–1965) farmer in Whisgills, descended from the earlier Murrays of Whisgills farm. His wife Mary Janet Elliot died in 1908, aged 32. His 2nd wife Margaret Brown died in 1956, aged 76. They are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. Dr. James (1875/6–1920) doctor in Allendale, he died in Newcastleton. His wife Elizabeth Jane Murray came from Whisgills, and died in 1963; she secondly married William B. Paterson of Rutherglen. They are buried at Ettleton. Janet (b.1820/1) grocer on Wilton Place, listed in Slater's 1852 directory. She was wife of John, tailor at the Sandbed. In 1851 she was a widow at Wilton Place, with her children John, Elizabeth and William. In 1861 she was at Dove-mountain with John and William. Her maiden name may have been Wilson. Joan (14th C.) daughter of Sir Maurice, Earl of Strathearn, who was also Baron of Hawick. Through her father she inherited the Barony of Hawick, which then passed to her husband, Sir Thomas of Bothwell. There is some confusion here over multiple Joannas, but it seems likely that it was not her, but her daughter, who married Archibald, 3rd Earl of Douglas. It seems that she was promised to Douglas, but may have died in the plague that ravaged Britain in 1362 (and probably also killed her husband a year or so earlier). Douglas seems to have instead married the daughter, also Joan. Joan or 'Joanna' (d.aft. 1401) probably daughter of Sir Thomas Murray of Bothwell. However, she is often confused with her mother, Joan, who was daughter of Sir Maurice, Earl of Strathearn (and in fact the evidence that there were 2 separate women is not clear). She appears to have been the heiress of the Bothwell titles (including the Barony of Hawick), and after the death of her mother she married Archibald Douglas, 'the Grim', 3rd Earl of Douglas; however, she would have been quite young when this happened. The Hawick Barony then passed to the Douglasses. John (15th C.) witness in 1431 to the transfer of the lands of Heap between the Langlands' and the Scotts. All of the other men who wrote special testaments were local lairds, including Alexander Murray, who must have been a near relation. He was recorded as 'Jhone off Murray' and could have been John of Falahill. John of Falahill and Philiphaugh (d.1477) descendant of Roger de Moravia. He had a charter of the lands of Philiphaugh in 1461. This included the lands of Harehead, Hangingshaw and Lewishope. In 1462 he was appointed Herd-keeper to Queen Mary of Gueldres. He was also Keeper of Newark Castle in the 1460s. In 1463 he was on the panel of retour for Archibald Douglas, 5th Earl of Angus, as heir to his father. He had the lease of Lewenshope and Hangingshaw from 1471 and in 1480 the lease was passed to his son Patrick. In 1475 he was keeper of the King's property at Bowhill. His sons included: Patrick of Falahill, the eldest, who succeeded; William in Sundhope; and another, whose son John was Burgess in Edinburgh and progenitor of the Murrays of Blackbarony. John (d.c.1485) brother of Ninian. Along with his brother he leased the Crown lands of Kershope on the Ettrick in 1485. In the following year the lease passed to his widow Elizabeth Sinclair, and son Thomas. He was stated to have been killed when his property was devastated by traitors and rebels. John (d.bef. 1494) resident of the Kershope area. In 1494/5 Steven Turnbull, brother of the Laird of Whithope, had remission for his slaughter. Turnbull was also cited for other crimes, including bringing in 'traitors of Leven' for the pillaging and burning of Ker-shope and the theft of 80 cows from the tenants there. John of Falahill (d.1510) eldest son of Patrick of Philiphaugh and Falahill. He was nephew of Alexander who was Rector of Hawick and was probably the closest historical person to 'the Outlaw Murray' of the ballad. In 1488 he was joint tenant with his father in the Crown lands of Lewenshope and Hangingshaw, and later with his son John. In 1489/90 he had a charter for lands in Peeblesshire. He was Ranger of Yarrow Ward until 1489, when he had the lease of Tinnis for his fee. In 1491 he was 'procurator' for Alexander Lord Home in an instrument granting Home tenancy in the lands of Harden. He is probably the John who acted as surety for several people at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1493. He is probably the John 'de hangitshaw' whose brother Thomas served as a surety at the Justice-aire in Selkirk in 1494/5 and who himself served as surety for John Scott in Tushielaw. Also in 1494/5 it is recorded that he had livestock stolen from Newark by Robert Scott of Deloraine. He is also recorded being 'de hangitschaw' in the accounts for the Selkirk Justice-aire of 1494/5, when he was pledge for John Wilson in Hartwoodmyre. He was owner of Westerhouses in Hassendean Parish, receiving the lands 'under reversion' (i.e. on non-payment of a loan) from Alexander, Lord Home. In 1497 he had a charter for Cranston-Riddell. In 1499 he had a 'tack' of lands with David Hoppringle of 'the Tynnes'. Also in 1499 he was assigned the lands of 'Levinishop' and Hangingshaw in Yarrow, along with his son John (which may be an error). About the same time he gave his permission for Walter Scott to take the lease of Haining. In 1500 Walter Scott of Braxholme was recorded as assignee of him and Ninian (probably a brother or other close relative), when goods of Philip Turnbull of Whithope were recovered as part of 19 score merks that he owed them; this was for the damage done to their lands of Ker-shope. He was Depute Sheriff of Selkirkshire in 1501. In 1501/2 he was witness to another bond of reversion for the lands of Harden, also involving Alexander, Lord Home. In 1502-09 he had the lease of the Crown lands of Hangingshaw, Lewenshope and Harehead. In 1502 his farms at Fas-theugh and Hangingshaw were raided by Philip Turnbull in Whithope and David Turnbull in Carlinpool. Also in 1502 he was surety for a man from Fairnilee who had remission for murder. In 1502/3 at Galashiels he infetted Queen Margaret in the lands of Ettrick Forest and Newark Tower.

He served as surety at the Justice-aire in Selkirk in 1505. In 1506/7 he was one of the men to whom Walter Scott of Howpasley, tutor to the Laird of Buccleuch, had to give in his accounts. In 1507/8 he had a letter of obligation with Robert Scott of Whitchesters, involving a loan, with the tower in Hawick 'between the bridges' as security. He was appointed as High Sheriff of Selkirkshire, which the King had to humiliatingly give him according to the ballad. He was Sheriff of Selkirkshire in 1508 in a charter for lands in Selkirk and in 1509 in the document where Adam Hepburn inherited the lands of Alemoor. In 1508 he had a charter for Falahill and Whitlawsland, in 1509 had a charter for the lands of Peel Hill and also in 1509 had a reversion with George Douglas, Master of Angus, for the lands of Selkirk. In 1510/1 he and his wife had a charter for the lands of Cranston-Riddell. He married Janet Forester and later Margaret, daughter of Patrick Hepburn. His children were: James, who succeeded; William, ancestor of the Romanno, Stanhope and Clooney branches; John, who was recorded in the Exchequer Rolls in 1507/8; Patrick, who had a charter for Broadmeadows in 1510; Elizabeth, who married Sir James Douglas, 5th Laird of Cavers; Isabel, who married Robert Scott of Howpasley; and Janet, who married Sir Robert Stewart of Minto. Tradition attributes his death to Scott of Buccleuch or perhaps Scott of Haining at a little mount below Newark Castle. However, he was actually killed by Andrew Ker of Gateshaw and Thomas, brother of Philip Scott of Headshaw, according to cases at Jedburgh Justice-aire in 1510. John (15th/16th C.) son of John of Falahill. In 1507/8 he leased the Crown lands of Hangingshaw, Lewenshope and Harehead. He was recorded as son and heir of John of Falahill in 1509 and still leasing Crown lands in 1513. He may have been the Sheriff in Selkirkshire recorded at the Justice-aire at Selkirk in 1510. At that court he was among men found guilty of burning some of the wood in Ettrick Forest. He is probably the John of Falahill who had a charter for the lands of Bold and Philiphaugh in 1512. John of Blackbarony (d.1513) Burgess of Edinburgh, he was grandson of John of Philiphaugh, his father's name being unknown. He is John of 'blac barony' when he acted as surety at the Justice-aire held in Peebles in 1498. He was recorded in the Exchequer Rolls of the early years of the 16th century as Chamberlain of Ballincrief and 'customar' of Haddington. In 1505/6 he was an assignee of the executors of William in Sundhope, his uncle. He is probably the John junior who was allowed the 'fermes' of Winterburgh in 1506 and Carterhaugh in 1507. In 1507 he had a charter of the Barony of Blackbarony or Hatton. He is probably the 'Master John Murray of Blakbarony' who in 1510/1 was granted the lands of Briery Yards, in the Barony of Hassendean, which had been forfeited by Cuthbert Cunningham, Earl of Glencairn. In 1511 he had a charter for lands in Edinburgh and Haddington and in 1512 and 1513 other charters for lands in Selkirkshire and elsewhere. In 1503/4 he married Isobel, daughter of Richard Happar. They had 2 daughters, and a son, Andrew of Blackbarony. He died at Flodden. John 'Jock' (16th C.) tenant of Gavin of Elliot of Falnash in 1569. Elliot acted as cautioner for his tenants at a meeting in Hawick, assuring that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. Sir John of Blackbarony (16th/17th C.) son of Andrew. He was knighted by James VI at Stirling upon announcing to the King the birth of his eldest son, Henry, Prince of Wales. In 1575/6 he was a complainant regarding 'mails' for 'Glenpoit and Preischoip' (this being Glenpyet in the Yarrow valley). In 1580 he was named in a transaction in Selkirk. In 1581/2 he acted as cautioner for Robert of Aikwood. In 1586 he is recorded as one of the 'curators' of the young Walter Scott of Buccleuch. In 1587 he served as a cautioner for Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch after he was released from prison in Edinburgh Castle. He served as cautioner for Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1590. He may be the John who witnessed a bond of 'manrent' in Hawick in 1595, between the Beatties and Sir Walter of Branhholme (Gideon Murray, his brother, was also a witness). In 1607 he was in dispute with the Burgh of Selkirk. In 1610 he was appointed keeper of the rolls for the Justices of the Peace in Peeblesshire. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir Alexander Hamilton. Their children were: Andrew, who died before his father; Sir Archibald, who succeeded; Sir John of Raveling; Col. Walter of Pilmore; Alexander; Patrick; William; Margaret, who married Sir Robert Halket of Pitfirrane; Agnes, who married Sir John Riddell of that Ilk; Elizabeth, who married Sir Robert Ker, 1st Earl of Ancrum; Grizel, who married Sir William Douglas of Casbogle; Christian, who married Sir William Veitch of Dawyck; Isabel, who married Patrick Scott of Thirlestane; and possibly another daughter who married William Scott of Mangerton. Sir John of Falahill and Philiphaugh (d.c.1640) son of Patrick of Falahill, he was the first of the family designated 'of Philiphaugh'. He had a charter of 1584, as heir to his father and also held lands at Hangingshaw and Traquair. He was probably the 'Johnne Murray, sone to the Sheriff of Selkirk' who was among Borderers cited for non-appearance in 1578/9. He was probably the 'younger in Philiphauch' recorded in Selkirk in 1581. He is probably the John in Philiphaugh who witnessed a transaction in Selkirk in 1582. He was served heir to his father in 1601 in the lands of Philiphaugh, as well as the office of Sheriff of Selkirkshire. He represented Selkirkshire (or 'the Forest') in the Parliament of 1612. In 1614, on behalf of his wife, he paid money to the Donaldsons of Broadmeadows. In 1618 he was listed as one of the curators of the young Andrew Scott of Aikwood. Also in 1618 he was appointed as a Commissioner for the Middle Shires. In 1620 he had a precept of sasine for Broadmeadows. He was recorded in documents in the Walter Mason Collection in 1610 and c.1620. In 1622 and 1623 he was on the Commission for keeping peace on the Border. In 1623 a man was found guilty of stealing an ox from his servitor, John Murray, from the lands of 'Low, otherwise called the Catclughe'. He had a charter of 1624 involving lands in the Barony of Buccleuch. In 1624 he and his heir James gave sasine of Broadmeadows to Andrew, son of William Scott in Fauldshop. He married Janet, daughter of Sir William Scott of Ardross (or perhaps Sir William of Harden) and secondly married Helen (or Isabel), daughter of Sir James Pringle of Galashiels. His children included: Sir James of Balincrief, his eldest son, who married Anne, daughter of Sir Thomas Craig of Riccarton and whose son succeeded to Philiphaugh; Gideon, aide-de-camp to Charles I, who died in service; Joan, a daughter who married James Kerr of Chatto; Anne, who married John Shaw; Grezel; John of Ashiestiel; William, who died fighting for the King; David, who also died the same way; Helen, who married Scott of Broadmeadows; Elizabeth, who married Rev. Robert Knox of Kelso, as his 2nd wife; and Isabel. He was succeeded by his grandson, Sir John. Sir John (d.1640) 1st Earl of Annandale, son of Sir Charles of Cockpool and Margaret Somerville. His siblings included: Sir James of Cockpool, who married Janet, daughter of Sir William Douglas of Drumlanrig, but died without an heir; Sir Richard, whom he eventually succeeded; Jean, who married John Maxwell of Kirkhouse; and another sister, who married Robert Elliot of Redheugh. In 1616 and 1624 he sent a letter to Walter Scott, Lord of Buccleuch, expressing his support and essentially apologising for raids against Buccleuch and into England. He was a great favourite of Charles I and acquired a huge estate. Among his lands and rights were the 5-pound land of the Chapel lands of Caerlenrig, which his son James inherited in 1641. He was created Earl of Annandale in 1624/5 and acquired vast estates. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Shaw. He was succeeded as 2nd Earl by his son James, who died without issue and the title became extinct. Sir John of Ravelrig (17th C.) 3rd son of Sir John of Blackbarony. He was granted lands in Belses by William, Earl of Lothian in 1634. He was one of the overseers of the tutors of the children of Walter, Earl of Buccleuch, who died in 1633. John (17th C.) tenant in Woll when he signed the 'Confessions of Faith' in Hawick in 1638. It is unclear how he was related to other Murrays. He may be the John who married Janet Hogg in Ashkirk in 1636. John (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Margaret Redford and their children included: Francis (b.1690); Adam (b.1692); Elizabeth (b.1694); Jean (b.1696); and Anna (b.1699). The witnesses in 1690 were Francis (perhaps his father or brother) and William Dunlop. He may be related to the earlier tenant in Woll. Sir John of Philiphaugh (d.1676) son of Sir James, he succeeded his grandfather Sir John. He was heritable Sheriff of Selkirkshire. In 1646 he was recorded as a judge for trying people in Selkirkshire and Roxburghshire. In 1643, 1646 and 1649 he was on the Committee of War for Selkirkshire and was Convenor in 1644. He joined with Graham's force in 1646 and claimed for damages he sustained against Montrose in 1649. In 1648 he was one of the prominent men named on a Commission to suppress the thieves on the Border. He is probably the 'John morray of ...' who witnessed a baptism in Ashkirk in 1656 for Thomas Scott of Whitslade. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire from 1661. He married Anne, daughter of Sir Archibald Douglas of Cavers and secondly married Margaret, widow of John Trotter of Charterhall and daughter of Sir John Scott of Scotstarvet. His children were: Sir James, who succeeded; John of Bowhill; Col. William; Archibald, Thomas and Lewis, who died young; Anne, who married Alexander Pringle of Whytbank and later Robert Rutherford of Bowland; Janet; Rachel; Elizabeth; and Jean, who died young. In 1688 his wife was served heir to their daughter Jean. John (17th C.) married Marian Lillico in Bedrule in

1694. John (17th C.) resident at Wester Heap according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. John (17th C.) resident at Easter Highchesters according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. John of Bowhill (c.1667–1714) younger son of Sir John of Philiphaugh and brother of Sir James. He was a Senator in the College of Justice. He served as representative to Parliament for Selkirk 1689–1702 and for Selkirkshire 1703–07. In 1704 he was a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire and for Selkirkshire. He was a great supporter of the Union, and was briefly part of the first Parliament of Great Britain until he became Lord Bowhill in 1707. He owned the estate of Bowhill (temporarily out of the hands of the Scotts) and built the house there in 1708. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir John Scott of Ancrum and their children included John (farmer at Unthank). He was succeeded in the lands of Bowhill by his nephew Lieut.-Col. James. There was an elegy written on his death. John (1669/70–1749) gardener at Spittal Tower, who was a direct ancestor of 'Dictionary' Murray. He came from Hobkirk Parish, renting the garden haugh and enclosure at Spittal Tower in about 1712. His father may have been Andrew, but that is uncertain. He is recorded as gardener at 'Tower' in 1715. In 1701 he married Isobel Turnbull (from Bedrule), who died in 1746, aged 67. They had 7 children (several baptised in Cavers Parish): John (1709–72), the eldest son, with several later generations having the same name; Margaret, eldest daughter, married James Veitch, and her grand-daughter married Castleton Schoolmaster William Scott; Jean, who died in infancy; Agnes (b.1713); Andrew (b.1715); James (b.1720), who also died in infancy; and Mary (b.1724). They are buried in Bedrule churchyard. John (1677–1728) born at Unthank, son of John (from the Philiphaugh family) and Margaret Scott of Ancrum. He leased the farms of Unthank and Fiddleton from the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1722. His son James resigned the lands to Robert Elliot of Fenwick and Walter Scott (farmer at Commonsides) in 1733. He married his cousin Ann, daughter of Archibald Bennet of Chesters (near Ancrum) in 1712 and their children were: James (b.1713); Archibald (b.1715); Barbara (b.1717); Anna (or Anna, b.1719); John (b.1721, who became a doctor in Norwich); Andrew (b.1723); William (b.1724); Elizabeth (b.1726); and Andrew (b.1728). John (17th/18th C.) tailor in Howcleuch. In 1712 in Hawick Parish, he married Marion Paterson, who was 'servitrix to Walter Grieve' in Branhholme

Park. Their son William was baptised in Hawick in 1719. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hoscode in 1712 when his daughter Bessie was baptised in Robertson Parish and in 1719 when his son John was baptised. He may also be the John resident at Outerside in 1715 when his son James was baptised and in 1717 when his son William was baptised. Other John (17th/18th C.) resident of Chisholme Mill in 1720 when his son Robert was baptised in Robertson Parish. Helen (b.1723) may also be his child. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Whithope in 1718 when his daughter Mary was baptised and in 1721 when his twins Walter and Helen were baptised in Robertson. John of Philiphaugh (d.1753) son of Sir James. He was heritable Sheriff of Selkirk. He was M.P. for Linlithgow 1725–34 and for Selkirkshire from 1734 until his death. In 1737 he was involved in a bon with a tenant in Philiphaugh. In 1711 he married Eleanora, daughter of Lord Basil Hamilton, and she died in 1783. Their children were: Basil, who died young; John, who was also M.P. for the Linlithgow Burghs; Charles, who died unmarried; James, who succeeded his brother; Janet, who married Mr. Dennis of Jamaica; Eleanora, who married Sir James Nasmyth of Posso; Mary, who married John Macqueen of Jamaica and possibly also Sir Alexander Don, 4th Baronet of Newton; and Margaret, who married Capt. Baugh. John (1709–72) eldest son of John and brother of Andrew. He was the grandfather of the Hawick Rector James Murray, and great-grandfather of Gen. Sir John Murray. He became tenant farmer at Spittal-on-Rule in 1730. He shared the tenancy with the Veitches and the Bunyans, his part including the orchard (hence he was referred to as ‘Gardener in Toure’). He was recorded as gardener at Spittal or at Tower when his children were baptised in Cavers Parish. He married Jean Henderson in 1734 at Newton in Bedrule, and she died in 1786, aged 72. Their children (baptised in Cavers Parish) were: John (b.1735), who was also tenant at Spittal and married Mary Cleuch; James (b.1741), who became Presbyterian minister at Harbottle; Isabel (b.1744), married Mr. Thomson, farmer at Netherraw; Archibald; Andrew (b.1747), whose grandson was editor of the Kelso Mail; Jean (or Jenny, b.1755), lived at Harbottle, then at Hawick; Betty, married James Veitch; Margaret (b.1757); and William (b.1759), who had sons Veitch and John. The baptism of Andrew appears to have been recorded twice in 1747. He is buried in Bedrule kirkyard along with most of his family. John (18th C.) resident of Ewesdale. He married Betty Park and their children included: James (b.1753), born in Langholm; and Margaret (b.1759), baptised in Ewes, who probably married Adam Jardine. John of Philiphaugh (d.1800) 2nd son of John of Philiphaugh. He owned the lands of Todshaw in 1757 when its head lands were divided from those of Mabonlaw. He was also involved in a dispute with Henry, Duke of Buccleuch over teinds for Todshaw in the period 1745–70. He was M.P. for Linlithgow Burghs 1754–61. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire and Selkirkshire in 1761. He was listed on the roll of electors for Roxburghshire in 1780. He paid the land tax for his lands of Philiphaugh in 1785. He was also listed among the voters of Selkirkshire in 1788. He sold a large part of the estate of Philiphaugh to John Johnstone of Alva (brother of William Johnstone Pulteney). He married a Thomson and was succeeded by his sons John and then James. John (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Sophie (or ‘Suffie’) Anderson and their children included: Isabel (b.1762); and Jean (b.1770). John (1735–1809) eldest son of John, farmer and gardener at Spittal-on-Rule. On his gravestone he is referred to as ‘Gardiner at Spittal’. He farmed at Spittal in partnership with his mother until her death in 1786 and may have ceased farming there altogether when the holdings were merged in 1807. In 1782 he married Mary Cleuch, who died in Denholm in 1816, aged 65. Their children were: John, whose family emigrated to Australia; Mary (b.1785), who married brewer Alexander Russell and secondly hosier Thomas Scott; Jane (or ‘Jean’, b.1787), the youngest daughter; and James (b.1789), schoolmaster in Hawick. He died at Denholm-Townfoot and is buried in Bedrule kirkyard. If he was 65 when he died, he was born in 1743/4. John (1745/6–1826) farmer at Whisgills in Castleton Parish. He is recorded there in the Horse Tax Rolls of 1788–91. He is probably son of David and was succeeded as farmer by his brother Thomas. He appears not to have had any children and is buried along with his brother’s family at Ettleton. John (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Isabel Reid and their son John was baptised in 1782. John (18th C.) listed as house servant and groom at Stirches in 1785 and 1786, when he was working for Gilbert Chisholme. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was fined in 1785 for his 'irregular marriage'. Perhaps he is the John whose daughter Betty was baptised in 1787. John of Philiphaugh (d.1830) son of John. He was listed in 1805 and 1819 as a Commissioner for Selkirkshire. He died unmarried and was succeeded by his brother James. John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Huntlyhill (in Bedrule Parish), recorded as owner of 3 horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Castleton, recorded along with George on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. John (18th/19th C.) recorded as labourer at East Middles in Lilliesleaf Parish in the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. John (b.c.1770s) servant at Whisgills according to the ballots for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799 and 1801. John (b.c.1770s) servant at Myredykes according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. He may have been brother of Andrew, who was listed there in 1801. Perhaps the same John was a servant at Liddel Bank on the 1801 ballot. John (18th/19th C.) drover from 'Benpeth' (probably Bentpath) whose death is recorded in Hawick in 1824. John (18th/19th C.) linen and woollen draper in Newcastle, listed in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He is probably the Castleton merchant of the same name who subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. John (1777/8–1851) born in Castleton Parish, probably son of Robert and Marion Crozier. He was a smith in Newcastle according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799; he was also a blacksmith on the Militia ballot in 1801. He was a feuar of Newcastle, as well as being a farmer and blacksmith, probably on North Hermitage Street. He was a farmer at about 37 North Hermitage Street in 1841 and 1851. He married Anne Jardine (1802/3–57), who came from Gretna and was significantly younger than him. Their children included: Robert (b.1828), who was a carter, and emigrated to Ontario; twins Walter and Marion (b.1830); John (b.1831/2), a blacksmith, who also emigrated to Ontario; James (1836–1908); Jeanie (b.1837); and Matthew (b.1841). He and his wife are buried at Ettleton cemetery. John (1780–1845) son of John and Mary Cleuch. He farmed at Denholm Townfoot and later at Camp-town, where he died. He married Isabella Veitch. Their children were: John; Thomas; Robert; George; William; Agnes; Veitch; James; Walter; and Hugh. The children all emigrated to Australia, where they settled on the Murray River. He is buried in Bedrule kirkyard. It is possible he is the John 'Junr.' who was listed as a servant at Spittal on the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish. John (b.c.1780) mealdealer in Newcastle. He was living on North Hermitage Street in 1841 and 1851 (when he was 'Formerly Mealdealer'). He married Margaret (or 'Peggy') Murray and their children included: David (b.1811); Betty (b.1813); George (b.1815); Matthew (b.1817); Isabel (b.1819/20); Thomas (b.1824); and Marion (b.1827). John (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Janet Grieve and their children included: William (b.1807); James (b.1811); and Mary (b.1813). John (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Betty Smith and their son William was baptised in 1812. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Helen Nichol and their children included: William (b.1813); Mary (b.1816); Elizabeth (b.1818); Jane and Margaret (b.1820); Agnes (b.1822); and Janet (b.1825). John (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Janet Nichol and their children included: Charles (b.1814); David (b.1815); and Thomas (b.1817). John (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Mary Elliot and their son Thomas was baptised in 1818. John (1806–90) born in Wilton Parish, son of James and Mary Scott. He trained as a clothier and tailor. He was recorded on the High Street in Pigot's 1837 directory. On the 1841 census he was listed at about No. 1 Sandbed, with wife Janet and children John, Elizabeth and a new-born (William). In Hawick he married Janet (b.1818), daughter of William Williamson and Elspeth Turnbull. Family history states that in about 1851 he emigrated to Canada with his wife and sons James, John Scott and Robert. His wife was said to have died on the voyage, and he settled down as a farmer, purchasing land in Euphrasia Township, Ontario, in 1855. However, the census records show that by 1851 his widow was a grocer on Wilton Place. In 1861 she was at Dovemount (probably about No. 2 Princes Street) and the census says 'surname Willison deleted'. It is possible there were 2 different Johns being confounded here, but more likely is that some of the information is incorrect, and that his wife returned to Hawick after they emigrated. John (b.1807/8) born in Castleton Parish, son of Thomas and Janet Ingles. He became farmer at Wolfelee. In 1851 he was farmer of 145 arable acres and 3000 acres of pasture, employing 5 people. In 1838 he married Helen (or Ellen), daughter of Thomas Stavert; she died in 1852, aged 59. Their children included: Thomas (1845–61); John (d.1855); Archibald Stavert (b.1849), who emigrated to Australia; and Helen Stavert (b.1852), who died in infancy. The family are buried at Etleton. John (1814/5–92) son of William (teacher in the Canonbie area) and Helen Bell. He himself became a teacher in Langholm. He came to Hawick in the late 1840s to run the school at the head of Baker Street, which had been started by his brother Andrew. The school grew, and moved to the old East Bank Kirk. He is listed as teacher at a school in the East End in 1852. He was assisted by his younger brother William, who eventually ran the school that would become St. Mary's and ultimately Trinity. He himself left to become schoolmaster at Longnewton and eventually at Caverton Mill, near Kelso. He married Jane Richardson, who died in 1915, aged 84. Their children included Graham, who was a tobacconist at 17 High Street, and Nellie, a milliner who retired to Denholm. John (1815/6–88) born in Hobkirk Parish, he was 3rd son of Elliot. He worked as a servant at Wauchope for 19 years, then worked as a hedger at Minto and spent his last 15 years of employment as farm steward at Dimpleknowe. In 1849 he was among the original congregation of Wolfelee Free Kirk. In 1861 he was Land Steward, living at Wauchope Cottages. He married Helen, daughter of Robert Waugh, Chesters blacksmith in 1839. They had 4 sons and 2 daughters, including: Robert, carpenter at Blacklee who married Margaret Jackson; John; William, who worked as a successful wool broker in Melbourne, then went to Japan; Violet; and a daughter, possibly Elizabeth, who married Hawick grocer Mr. Brydon. He died at St. Boswells. John (1815/6–83) father of J.E.D., he was a slater and plumber in Hawick. He had a brother, James. His wife was Margaret Dodd (daughter of the chief drummer with the Drums and Fifes), who died in 1902, aged 78. In 1841 he was living with Margaret on O'Connell Street. The family later lived at 2 Union Street. Their children were: Isabella A., who married teacher James Brand; Robert (b.1856), who was a commercial traveller in London; James Edward Dodd (b.1858); Alison (b.1861), who married Rev. John Gordon; and Frank James (b.1863); along with Isabella, Margaret and Alison Scott, who all died young. He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. John of Philiphaugh (1817–82) eldest son of James. He was Deputy Lieutenant and J.P. in Selkirkshire. In 1840 he married Rose Mary, heiress of William Andrew Nesbitt.

Their children were: John Forbes Pringle Nesbitt, who succeeded; James (b.1845), who married Mary Russell; and Jesse Rose Mary, who married Sir William Lewis Salisbury Trelawny. Gen. Sir John Irvine, K.C.B., V.C. (1826–1902) son of James, the Hawick schoolmaster, and Margaret Irvine from Eskdale. He was 3rd cousin of Sir James A.H. He was born in Hawick and must have grown up in the town. He joined the East India Company at the age of 16 and was sent out to Calcutta in 1842. He was appointed to the 71st Native Infantry later in 1842, and rose through the ranks of the Bengal army, eventually becoming commander of the Indian army. He received a medal during the Punjab Campaign of 1848/9, was mentioned in dispatches and wounded at the Battle of Alighur in 1857, commanded a brigade of horsemen at Kutchla Ghaut in 1858 and then on the Nepal frontier, receiving another medal. In 1865/6 he was on the Bhootan Expedition, for which he received another medal. He became Lieut.-Col. in 1866, Col. in 1868, Maj.-Gen. in 1882, Lieut.-Gen. in 1887 and Gen. in 1891. He received the K.C.B. on the Queen's Golden Jubilee in 1897. He retired to Kensington. In 1854 he married Wilhelmina Stanley (d.1912), daughter of Col. Duncan Archibald Malcolm; he was son of Thomas Malcolm, who was brother of the 4 knights of Burnfoot. They had 6 children: Lieut. Archibald Ross, who served in Afghanistan, but died of cholera at the age of 24; Duncan, who died in childhood; Minnie, who married Maj. Wright; Caroline, who married T.W. Rawlings; Mary Stewart, who worked with the Salvation Army, being sent out to South Africa in the Boer War and France and Belgium in WWI, being awarded an O.B.E.; and Agnes Meade, who married Capt. Woolscombe of the K.O.S.B. John (b.1829/30) farmer at Upper Burnmouth in Castleton Parish. In 1861 he was farming 400 acres and employing 3 men. He lived with his sister Agnes. He could be the John who was on the Town Committee of Management in Newcastleton in the 1860s. He subscribed to David Anderson's book of verse in 1868. John Scott (1835–1904) son of John and Janet Williamson. He was born in Hawick, and in about 1851 he sailed to Canada with his father and maternal grandfather, William Williamson. They settled in Euphrasia Township, Grey County, Ontario, where he farmed. He married Jane Quinton and they had 8 children. John, J.P. (1835/6–1911) from the Annan area, he became a draper in Hawick (at 31 High Street) and later actuary for Hawick Savings Bank. He also served as a Town Councillor and was Burgh Treasurer in the 1880s. He was Treasurer of the Working Men's Building & Investment Society and possibly the same John Murray was an early committee member of Hawick R.F.C. His sister Janet married Hawick teacher William Murray (probably her second cousin). He married Elspeth Ferguson, who died in 1929, aged 86. Their children included John (who died in Vancouver), Peter Wilson (of the bullion department in a London bank) and Elizabeth (who married Abraham P. Hindle).

John Edward Dodd 'Jed' (1858–1936) son of slater and plumber John. He was writer of the words for many Hawick songs, particularly 'The Mosstroopers' Song', 'Clinty's Song', 'The Wail of Flodden', 'Meda's Song' and the 'Invocation'. He also wrote poems such as 'Hornshole' (published when he was 14), 'Oor Gutterblude', 'The Reeky Howe' (also known as 'Naething New', composed for the 1889 Dinner) and 'Lest We Forget'. In addition there were several comedic plays, and musical plays written with Adam Grant, including 'Turning Back the Clock', 'The Caddie's Ghost' (1894), 'The Tramp' (1896), 'The Witch o' the Wisp Hill' (1901), 'Kirsty o' Cocklaw Castle' (1904) and 'The Gutterbludes' (1905); only for the last 2 do scripts survive. Additionally he wrote many of the words for the 'Quarter-Centenary Pageant', acting as Pageant Master. Born at 57 High Street, he apprenticed with John Wield, druggist, but had his health damaged by chemicals. He then left Hawick to pursue work in the chemist's, grocery and insurance trades, returning to Hawick in 1886 when he started his photographic business. His studio was first where the Post Office was later built (at the corner of Bridge Street and Croft Road), moving to 43 Bridge Street in 1902 (designed by J.P. Alison, who lived next door). This became one of Hawick's foremost photography businesses, closing in 1972. An ardent supporter of the Common Riding, his return to Hawick coincided with the rejuvenation of the ceremonial aspects, and he quickly became involved. J.E.D. was Cornet in 1890 (when he recited a specially-composed poem) and Acting Father no less than 4 times (the last time at the age of 67). He helped inaugurate the annual Cornet's dinner in 1895, ordered the Curds and Cream for almost half a century and acted as marshal for many years. He was a founder member of the Callants' Club in 1903. During WWI he personally rode the marches each Common Riding day, against the wishes of the Council and the Callants' Club. In 1920 he suggested the founding of the Mosstroopers' Club, and his horse was the model for the badge. In addition he was involved with the local Amateur Operatic Society (doing their stage make-up until the year of his death). He was a keen Mason, succeeding James Thomson as Bard of Masonic Lodge 424; in 1894 he photographed the Provincial Grand Office-bearers at Jedburgh Abbey. He became an honorary life member of the golf club after the success of 'the Caddie's Ghost' at their 1894 fund-raiser. He was also a great walker and lover of the outdoors, publishing a book entitled 'Over the Rolling Stones by One of Them'. He additionally wrote an introductory article for James Edgar's 'Hawick Songs and Recitations' (1892). He was also known as painter, particularly of animals. He married Margaret 'Daisy' Young (daughter of a Sandbed baker), who had been his Lass, and they had one child, Melgund. The Museum mounted an exhibition devoted to his life in the late 1990s. A portrait of his favourite horse 'Oakwood Daisy' is in the Museum, along with an inkwell made from the foot of another, called 'Ben'. There is also a painting of his, 'Mrs. Reid, with Betsy the Cow, Pilmuir'. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery in an unmarked grave, although a plaque was unveiled there in 1990. The J.E.D. Murray Memorial Challenge Trophy was first presented at the 1938 Common Riding race meeting. A plaque was unveiled at 57 High Street in 2006 and the Mosstroopers' Club held a celebration in 2008 to mark the 150th anniversary of his birth. His son Malcolm was among the visitors who visited Gallipoli in 2015. John (1898–1992) born in Selkirk. In 1915 he walked to Galashiels to volunteer for the K.O.S.B., even although he was only 16. He was sent to Gallipoli in August of that year, surviving the Dardanelles campaign. He was at the Somme in 1916 in was captured at Lys, spending 14 months in a German prisoner-of-war camp. After the war he worked as a designer in Dumfries and then came to Hawick, where he worked at Blenkie's for 45 years, becoming head designer. He married Alice Little in 1936 and they lived at 12 Loan. He regularly lay a wreath to commemorate the 12th of July and was the last surviving member of the Gallipoli Comrades' Association. Katherine Maud Elisabeth (1909–98) grand-daughter of James A.H. In 1977 she published a biography of her grandfather entitled 'Caught in the web of words: James A.H. Murray and the Oxford English dictionary'. Keith 'Eeker' (1962–) originally football mad, he was part of the Hawick team that won the

British Youth Club five-a-side Championship in 1977. However, he excelled further as a rugby player, turning out for the Wanderers and the Trades before joining Hawick R.F.C. at age 17. He was part of the Greens team that won 5 Scottish League Championships and was club captain in 1988/9. As a policeman, he also played for the British Police several times. He additionally represented the South of Scotland, including in the Hong Kong Sevens in 1983, and was capped 3 times for Scotland in 1985. After multiple concussions he retired from rugby at the age of 26, returning to play football with the Waverley. He worked as a police constable and then for Scottish Ambulance Service. He married Judith and they have a son Gary. Kevin police officer from Hawick. He became a Superintendent of the Lothian and Borders force and had responsibility for security at the 2014 Commonwealth Games. Malcolm, C.B.E. (1938–) born in Hawick and raised at 12 Loan, son of John, who was the last surviving connection between Hawick and the Gallipoli campaign. He turned down the chance to study science at Edinburgh University, instead joining the Scottish Life Assurance Company. By the time he retired in 1999 he was Chief Executive and Director. He served as President of the Insurance Society of Edinburgh and the Faculty of Actuaries. Always a keen sports enthusiast, he played for Hawick Trades and Edinburgh Borders, was Hawick R.F.C. President in 2002–04 and has been Chairman of the Bill McLaren Foundation. He has also been a longtime member of Hawick Golf Club. He was Chief Guest of the Common Riding in 2011 and has served as Callants' Club President. Margaret (1629/30–1707) wife of William Craw. After her husband died in 1671 she took over his share of the tenancy of Braxholmetown farm. This she did until at least 1677, with her son James later taking over. She is buried in Borthwick Waas Cemetery. Margaret (b.1820/1) draper, grocer and post-mistress in Newcastleton in the 1850s and 60s. She lived on South Hermitage Street with her twin sister Jane (who was a hat-maker), and another sister Agnes (also a milliner). Her business was listed as 'Margaret Murray & Co.' in Slater's 1852 directory. She was probably related to the earlier draper, John. Mary (18th/19th C.) resident at Newcastleton, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Matthew (d.1840) son of John and Ann Jardine, he was born in Castleton. He worked as a farm servant, general labourer and stone quarrier. In 1866 he married Jane

(b.1837) daughter of William Kyle and Robina Cavers. Their children were: John (b.1867); William (b.1868); Anna Jane (b.1870); and Thomas (b.1872). Sir Maurice 'de Moravia' (1276–1346) Earl of Strathearn. Born in Drumsargard, Cambuslang, Lanarkshire, he was probably eldest son of Sir John of Drumsargard and an unknown mother. His step-mother (or perhaps mother) was Mary, daughter of Malise, 7th Earl of Strathearn. In 1320 he witnessed the charter granting Sir James Douglas the Lordship of Jedburgh. He may have fought at Halidon Hill in 1333, and is recorded as Sheriff of Lanark in 1334. He was granted the Barony of Sprouston in an undated charter of David II. At about the same time he was also granted the ward of Walter Cumming of Rowallan in the Barony of Hawick (although it is unclear what exactly this means). He was granted Braxholme by David II after it was forfeited by John Baliol; this may have been around 1333, when he would still have been quite young. There is a suggestion that he was granted Braxholme (and perhaps Hawick) as early as 1329 (although this is unclear). He supported Andrew Murray (guardian for David II) in his rejection of English peace terms in the late 1330s and became a favourite of David II when he returned from France in 1341. He had custody of Stirling Castle in 1342. In that same year he had a grant from David II of the Barony of Hawick and Braxholme (possibly a regranting), as well as Sprouston and Strathaven in Lanarkshire. This was probably to try to curb the power of Robert the Steward in Clydesdale and William Douglas of Liddesdale (both out of favour with the Crown). He was granted the Earldom of Strathearn in 1343; this had been forfeited by his relative (perhaps uncle) Malise of Strathearn. In 1344 he was one of the cautioners for the followers of Alexander Ramsay, who had been murdered by William Douglas. He witnessed many royal charters in the early 1340s. He was created a Justiciar, and would undoubtedly have become more powerful still had he not been killed at the Battle of Neville's Cross. Robert the Steward would later claim the Earldom of Strathearn for himself. In 1339 he married Joan (or Joanna) of Menteith, daughter of Wallace's betrayer. She was widow of Malise Murray (his own step-grandfather) and of John Campbell, Earl of Atholl. After his death his widow married William, Earl of Sutherland. He may have had an illegitimate son Maurice and also appears to have had a son William. His daughter Joan (or Joanna, who might instead have been his granddaughter, or his wife's daughter with the Earl of Sutherland) married Sir Thomas Murray of Bothwell, and later she (or more likely her daughter of the same name) married Archibald Douglas 'the Grim', passing on the Hawick Barony to the Douglasses. Ninian (15th/16th C.) possessor of the lands of Kershope in Ettrick. He and his brother John leased the lands in the mid-1480s, but they were attacked and their property destroyed, with John being killed in about 1485. He and his son John were given the lease of these Crown lands in 1490. In 1494/5 Lawrence Rutherford in Oakwood had remission for stealing sheep from him at Kershope. He was still leasing half of Kershope in 1502. In 1500 Walter Scott of Branxholme was recorded as assignee of him and John of Falahill in recovering money that Philip Turnbull of Whitehope owed them for the damage done to their lands. He is probably the Ninian who, along with John (as well as James Ker) had their farms of Fastheuch and Hangingshaw raided sometime before 1502. Also in 1502, Robert Jackson in Wolfcleuchhead had remission for bringing in 'traitors of Leven' to steal from his farm and peel at Kershope. Probably the same Ninian was on the 1509 panel for Adam Hepburn inheriting the lands of Ale Moor. Thomas is listed after him, and possibly a relative. Norman N. (d.2017) plumber who was Cornet in 1959. Sir Oswyn (1873–1936) born at Mill Hill, London, he was a son of Sir James A.H. He went into the Civil Service and became Secretary to the Admiralty 1917–36. His wife Lady Mildred wrote a biography of him. Patrick of Falahill (d.c.1492) son of John. He acquired land near Philiphaugh in about 1477. He had a sasine for the lands of 'Pringillisland' and 'Litsterland' in Selkirkshire in 1477. From 1477 he was granted the lease of Lewenshope and Hangingshaw, which had been in the hands of his father. In 1479 he gave his seal to an obligation involving the Kers of Cessford. In 1484 and again in 1488 he and his son John had the lease of Lewenshope and Hangingshaw. Around 1485–90 he was also tenant of Bowhill along with his brother Peter. His children included: John, 'the Outlaw Murray'; Thomas, mentioned as brother of John in 1494/5; and Margaret. Patrick of Falahill (d.1580) son of James of Falahill and grandson of 'the Outlaw Murray'. He held the office of hereditary Sheriff of Selkirkshire. He also held the lands of Philiphaugh, according to a charter of 1528. In 1530 he was served heir to his father James in the customs and duties of Selkirk, as well as the Sheriffship. However, there was a dispute in that year, with John Scott, Vicar of Hawick, producing royal letters breaking the privilege office of Sheriff that he held; Alexander Tait of Pirn was procurator for a counter-claim that the letters did not discharge him from being Sheriff. In 1531 he owed teind sheaves for his lands of Hangingshaw. In 1533/4 in Selkirk he had a bond between William Stewart of Traquair. In 1534 he required William Douglas of Bonjedward to appear at his court. In 1535 he declared that his forebears and tenants had always kept their herds on Selkirk Common. In 1536 the Bailies of Selkirk complained that he had come to the common 'with a multitude of men in violent oppression with swords, staffs and cudgels' and taken away cattle belonging to one of the Bailies; he declared that he had only come to the common with his servants to peaceably pasture his own cattle. In 1536/7 he complained about others encroaching on his 'friend' Thomas, who had farmed at Easter Bowhill for 40 years. He was 'of Hangitschaw' in 1541 when recorded as owner of the lands of Lewenshope and Hangingshaw in Yarrow, as well as 'Hairheid' in Ettrick. In about 1544 there was a 'summons of reduction' against him by the Provost and Bailies of Selkirk (probably regarding Selkirk Common). In 1547/8 he was listed among the supporters of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme in a bond along with the Kerrs. In 1564/5 he was one of the witnessed to the bond between the Kers and the Scotts. In 1569 he was among the lairds who signed a bond to keep peace on the Border. In 1576 there was an agreement with the Burgh of Selkirk restoring him to his lands. He married Margaret, daughter of John, Lord Fleming, secondly married a daughter of Lord Borthwick and thirdly married Elizabeth Ormiston, who was a widow. His eldest son was James, who married Margaret, daughter of William Stewart of Traquair, and whose son Patrick succeeded. His son Malcolm is recorded in 1573 and 2 sons Malcolm and James in 1590. He also had a daughter, Catherine, who married James Somerville of Cambusnethan. Conflicting with the usual genealogy, in 1579 his son and heir Patrick is recorded in a transaction in Selkirk. Patrick of Falahill (d.1601) grandson of Patrick of Falahill. He is probably the Patrick 'of Fawlayhill' who in 1580 witnessed was named in a transaction in Selkirk and witnessed several others. In 1581 he had an arrangement with Robert Scott of Haining over the 'feu mail' of Haining. He may be the Patrick 'ooy and heir' to the deceased

Patrick of Falahill who in 1581/2 granted a sasine to Adam Scott of Bonnington. In about 1588 he was appointed as one of the Parliamentary Commissioners for Selkirk and Peebles. In 1590 there was some dispute between him and the Bailies and Burgesses of Selkirk, with a band signed that they would not harm him or his dependants. Additionally he served as caution for Robert Scott of Aikwood not to harm William Douglas, Earl of Angus or his dependants; his 'father-brothers' Malcolm and James were witnesses. He is listed on the 1590 'Roll of the Clans'. In 1599 there was a complaint that he was not performing his duties as Sheriff of Selkirkshire, specifically failing to apprehend a number of men. He married Agnes, daughter of Sir Andrew Murray of Blackbarony, and secondly married Marian, daughter of Sir Lewis Bellendon. His children were: Sir John, who succeeded; Patrick, who held lands in Annandale, and was with Robert Scott, younger of Haining, when he attacked Selkirk Mill in 1608; James, a merchant in Edinburgh; Isabel, who married John Abernethy, Bishop of Caithness; Margaret, who married Ralph Kerr of Primside and Greenhead; Elizabeth, who married Robert Scott of Haining; and Jean, who married John Scott of Tushielaw. Sir Patrick of Lainshaw (16th/17th C.) represented Selkirkshire in Parliament in 1617. His Lairdship was later called Langshaw. It is possible he was the same man as Sir Patrick of Elibank. Sir Patrick of Elibank (d.1649) son of Sir Gideon. He was served as heir to his father in 1621. He was Keeper of Caerlaverock Castle. He was involved in a feud with James Cranston in about 1610. In 1621 he succeeded to his father's lands of Langshaw in Melrose Parish. He was also infefted in lands by the Commendator of Melrose in about 1621. In 1622 he was involved in a 'wadset' with Walter, Earl of Buccleuch, over the lands of Blackgrain in the Lordship of Ettrick. He married no less than 5 times. He was M.P. for Haddington Constabulary 1628–33 and 1640–41. He was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia and then elevated to the peerage as Lord Elibank. He was succeeded in 1650 by his son Patrick, 2nd Lord Elibank. Sir Patrick of Deuchar (1625/6–89) son of James, who was 3rd son of Patrick of Falahill, with his mother being Berthia Maule, of the Panmure family. His brothers were Sir James of Skirling and Sir Robert of Priestfield. He was M.P. for Selkirkshire in 1665, 1667 and 1669–74. He was appointed as a Justice of the Peace for Selkirkshire in 1663 and as a Commissioner of Supply for Selkirkshire in 1685. He is probably the Patrick who had a dispute with the Burgh of Selkirk over Common land in 1665. He paid the land tax in Selkirkshire in 1678 and is recorded representing Henry Hislop in a discharge in 1684 with the Bailie of Selkirk. He may have married Euphan, daughter of James Baird. Patrick of Cherrytrees (18th C.) eldest son of James of Cherrytrees. He was admitted as an Advocate in 1751 and was Sheriff of Roxburghshire from 1769. He served as Sheriff-Depute of Roxburghshire in 1780 and was on the roll of electors for the county. He was probably succeeded by George of Cherrytrees, who owned the lands in Yetholm Parish in 1788. Richard (b.1818/9) farmer and innkeeper in Newcastleton. In 1861 he was on Douglas Square, farming 40 acres. In the 1860s he was listed as proprietor of the Crown Inn on Douglas Square (perhaps at the same location). His wife was Jane and their children included Mary, Robert and Jane. Sir Robert of Priestfield (d.1672) 2nd son of James of Skirling and grandson of Patrick of Falahill. He was brother of Sir Patrick of Deuchar and Sir James of Skirling. He was Lord Provost of Edinburgh and represented Edinburgh in Parliament. He acquired the lands of Cameron, Priestfield and Melgum in Forfarshire. He also held 2 tenements in Hawick, which were inherited by his son Alexander in 1672; it is not clear where these pieces of land were located. He firstly married Helen, daughter of Alexander Hay of Kenneth, and secondly married Jean, daughter of John Dickson of Hartree. His children included: James, who died young; Alexander, who succeeded him; John (b.1656); Robert; William (1662–1703); and James (again, b.1669). Robert (17th C.) resident at Todshawhaugh according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. His son Robert was baptised in 1703. Robert (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish recorded at Borthwickbrae in 1718 and 1721. He may be the Robert who married Bessie Learmonth in Robertson in 1714. His children probably included: James (b.1715); William (b.1718); Robert (b.1721); and Margaret (b.1723). Robert (18th C.) married Janet Helen Kyle in Minto Parish in 1744. Robert (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was recorded at Ormiston in 1755. He married Elspeth (or Euphan) Grieve and their children included John (b.1752) and Walter (b.1755). William (b.1756) and August (b.1765), also baptised in Cavers, were probably his children. Robert (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Elizabeth (or 'Betty') Little and their children included: Betty (b.1763); and David (b.1766). Robert (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Mary Young and their son John was baptised in 1789. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish, perhaps related to the earlier Robert in Ormiston. He was recorded at Sunnyside in 1795. Probably the same Robert was farmer at Ormiston Mains, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 3 horses. His children included Mary (b.1795) and Walter (b.1798). He may be the Robert who married Betty Pott and whose children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included Robert (b.1805) and Adam (b.1806); the same couple also had a son Richardson (b.1812), who was baptised in Hawick. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton, who lived at Pathead and then Toftsholm. He was probably the smith in Newcastleton, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 2 horses. He was one of the first feuars to commence building in Newcastleton; it is said by some that he built the first house and received the nickname 'Provost' because of this. He probably first married Margaret Nichol in 1771; she died at Millholm in 1774, aged 31, and is buried at Ettleton. His 2nd wife was Marion Crozier. Their children were: John (b.c.1777), who was a blacksmith; Marion (b.1781), who married mason John Nichol; Robert (1784–1859), who married Nellie Scott; Margaret (1788–1882), who married Robert Mitchellhill, and emigrated to Galt, Ontario; and Jane (b.1790), who probably died young. His first wife may have been Margaret Nichol, who died at Millholm in 1774, aged 31, and is buried at Ettleton. Robert (b.c.1770s) labourer at Hummelknowes according to the 1799 ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish. He may be the Robert whose children baptised in Cavers included Mary (b.1795) and Walter (b.1798). Robert (b.1780s) father of plumber John (who was father of J.E.D.) and James. He married Alison Erskine Scott. Robert (b.c.1780s) labourer at Todshawhaugh. His name appears on the Militia ballot list for Roberton Parish in 1812; he is absent from the rectified list, suggesting he had moved or become too old. He could be the Robert, son of William and Beatrix Scott, baptised in Roberton in 1792. He could be the Robert, married to Margaret Tait, whose children, baptised in Roberton, included Euphemia (b.1814) and Jane Scott (b.1816). Robert (1784–1859) nail-maker in Newcastleton, listed in Pigot's 1837 directory and Slater's 1852 directory. In 1841 he was at about 47 North Hermitage Street. He was probably son of Robert and Marion Crozier. He married Helen (or 'Nellie') Scott, who died in 1874, aged 83. Their children included: Betty (b.1812); Robert (1813–56); Marion (b.1816); Archibald (1817–44); John (b.1821); James (b.1823); William (b.1824); Thomas (1828–47); and Jean (1831/2–51). They are mostly buried in Ettleton Cemetery. Robert (18th/19th C.) married Margaret Matthison in Cavers in 1812. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton. He married Margaret Tait and their children included Euphemia (b.1814) and Jane Scott (b.1816). Robert (18th/19th C.) baker in Newcastleton. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. He is also listed in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories. He does not appear in the 1841 census. Robert (19th C.) married Betty Chisholme in Wilton in 1828. Robert (b.c.1810) foreman at Weensland Mills. He was living there in 1841, along with Jessie, probably his wife. Robert (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Agnes Beavers and their children included Robert (b.1833) and Margaret (b.1834). Robert (19th C.) married Janet Dickson in 1834, the marriage being recorded in both Hawick and Cavers Parishes. Robert (19th C.) married Janet Tweedie in Hawick in 1834. Robert (b.1821/2) shepherd at Old Castleton in 1851 and 1861. He is still recorded there in 1868. His wife was Rachel, and their children included Janet, Marion and Jane. Robert 'Robbie' (1831–1901) born in Hawick, son of weaver William and Helen Biggar, and cousin of Sir James A.H.'s father. He worked in the hosiery trade with William Watson & Sons, then at Currie's on Millbank. He was a Councillor in 1868/9, where he was known as a supporter of the allotments, the Working Men's Building Society and the Co-operative Society. He became manager at Wood Brothers hosiery factory in Innerleithen around 1870. In that town he took part in promoting public lectures and the temperance movement and when he left he was entertained at a dinner when he was given an illuminated address. He then took over Peter Laidlaw's business at Wilton Grove for a few years in the 1870s, taking a partner in 1879; however the partnership lasted only 3 years. He was a founder member and President of the Archæological Society in 1856 (with only his distant cousin Sir James outliving him), major contributor to the Transactions and served as Museum Curator (after his return from Canada). From 1858 he was the Hawick correspondent for the Border Advertiser and also wrote for the Teviotdale Record and the Border Beacon. He was also President of the Temperance Burns Club in Hawick. He was a Liberal in politics and a member of the East Bank Kirk. He emigrated to Canada in 1882, living mainly in Galt, where he was engaged in the hosiery business there. While in Canada, he kept up with news from Scotland, contributed to local newspapers and would enthusiastically meet any Borderers he could (including Lord Minto at one point). He returned to Hawick in 1895 and was one of the people present at the excavation of the cairn at Belvedere on the Cavers estate in 1895. Thereafter he devoted his time to literary pursuits, contributing to the local and Border newspapers, as well as the Newcastle Chronicle, 'Journal' and 'People's Friend'. When contributing to the local press he sometimes wrote under the pen-name Romanus' and at other times as 'B.O.B.', giving us 'The Reckoning' for example (despite, or perhaps because of, being a strong advocate for total abstinence!). He wrote several books of local interest, including 'The Gypsies of the Borders' (1875), 'Hawick Songs and Song Writers' (1881, 1889, 1897) and 'Hawick Characters' (1901), both of which ran to several editions (they were originally published in serial form in the local press, with 'Hawick Characters' collecting many articles originally written by others). His 'History of Hawick, from Earliest Times to 1832' (1901) is a treasure-trove of anecdotal information; it was followed by 'History of Hawick, from 1832' issued by the publisher in 1902 from notes that he left. In later life he was generally regarded as the most knowledgeable local historian, possessing 'an enormous store of MS. and printed materials relating to old Hawick, he was never at a loss to put his finger on information in relation to any subject'. He was said to be the greatest expert on the False Alarm of 1804, but sadly did not live to see the centenary celebrations. He lived at Allars Crescent in the latter part of his life. In 1853 he married Agnes, daughter of George 'Pie' Oliver, who died in 1901, aged 72; when they married he was living in Brougham Place. Their children included: William (b.1855), a merchant in Aberdeen; and George Oliver (b.1857), a doctor in Wisconsin. He died after a brief illness, one of the first of his life. A memorial stone was erected in the Wellogate Cemetery by his friends and members of the Archæological Society, containing the motto 'Leal to the Border'. A portrait of him was painted by Frank Wood in 1897, and is now in the Museum. Robert (19th C.) married Mary Ferguson in Hawick in 1842. Robert (19th C.) married Rachel Hislop in Catleton in 1846. Their children included Jane (b.1851i) and Marion (b.1853). Robert (19th C.) married Marion Greig in Wilton Parish in 1847. Robert (19th C.) married Sarah Dagg in Castleton Parish in 1850. Their children included Sibella (b.1850) and James (b.1853). Robert (19th C.) married Mary Telfer in Castleton Parish in 1850. Their son John was baptised in 1851. Robert (19th C.) married Agnes Turnbull in Hobkirk Parish in 1850. Robert (19th C.) son of John. He was a carpenter at Blacklee in Hobkirk Parish. In 1868 he married Margaret Jackson, from Crookholm, Canonbie. Their children were John (chemist and druggist), James (also a carpenter, died age 27) and Margaret (who married Thomas Smith). Robert (19th C.) married Euphemia Bowie in Hawick in 1853. Robert (b.1835) son of John and Isabella Howison. He was a frameworker in Hawick, living at 50 High Street in 1861. He married Elizabeth Hunter, who was from Earlstoun. His children included James (b.1860), who became a baker in Edinburgh. Robert (b.1856) elder brother of J.E.D. He was a commercial traveller in London and had eight children. Robert (19th/20th C.) resident of Trow Knowes. In 1906 he contributed to the fund for the renovation of Kirkton Kirk. Roger (d.1330) son of Archibald, he is one of the earliest known ancestors of the local Murrays. He was recorded as being 'de Moravia'. In 1321 he was granted the lands of Fala by James, Lord Douglas. The Murrays of Falahill, Philiphaugh and Blackbarony are all descended from him. Roger (15th/16th C.) leased half the lands of Sundhope in the Yarrow valley in the period 1487–99. The other half went to William, who was his brother. The pair appear to have had their farm raided several times, e.g. by Robert Turnbull in Castlehill (near Branxholme), who was charged with stealing 15 score sheep from Sundhope. He leased half of Windydoors in 1502 as well as half of Sundhope with Thomas (who was surely another relative). Possibly the same Roger was 'in old age, deprived of strength' whose land had been 'despoiled by thieves' who in 1532/3 sold his Selkirk tenement and rigs to his younger son James. Sarah (1744–1811) of Kensington, who wrote a travel guide 'A companion, and useful guide to the beauties of Scotland ...' published in 1799. She visited Hawick in 1785, her short account including the following:

‘Some young lads passing through the churchyard at Hawick whilst I was in it, with dogs and some strange looking things on their backs, I inquired what they were going to do with them, but their language to me was as Arabic. On my shaking my head as a token of not understanding them, they began screaming in the highest note of their voices, taking me, I suppose, for a deaf woman: and at last we separated, laughing at our inability of understanding each other’. Sir Thomas of Bothwell (d.1361) son of Sir Andrew. The identity of his mother seems to be unknown. He succeeded to his father’s estates after the death of his elder brother John. In 1351 he was a hostage in England, in place of David II. He returned to Scotland in 1352 and was knighted by the following year. He was involved in negotiations for the release of David, and was involved with the Treaty of Berwick in 1357. He appears to have returned as a prisoner to England in 1358, and although he may have returned to Scotland again, he was back a prisoner in London in 1359. He married Joan (or Joanna) Moray, daughter of Sir Maurice of Strathearn, who had been Baron of Hawick. He was granted the Barony (along with that of Sprouston) in a 1358 charter of David II. However, this may have been a re-granting, since it seems likely he gained the Barony through marriage to the daughter of the previous Baron. He was described in 1358 as ‘panitario nostro Scocie’ (i.e. pantler of Scotland). He probably died of the plague in London. Although it is often stated that his widow later married Archibald, Earl of Douglas, it seems more likely that Douglas married his daughter (and heiress), who was also called Joan. Through her the Barony of Hawick passed to the Douglasses. Thomas (16th C.) recorded ‘in Newhall’ in 1531/2 when he was part of an inquest to rule on a land arrangement in Selkirk. He was probably tenant at Newhall on the Ale Water. He is probably the Thomas, son of William of Newhall recorded in 1498. Thomas of Bowhill (d.bef. 1539) recorded in 1536/7 when Patrick of Philiphaugh complained on his behalf about others farming at Easter Bowhill. It was stated that he had occupied those lands for 40 years. He is also recorded in 1539 in the Selkirk Protocol Books when his widow Christian Murray sold her part of North Bowhill to Robert Ker, Burgess of Edinburgh. His son and heir had a dispute over the lands of South Bowhill. He was probably related to James of Bowhill, who died at Flodden and whose daughter Isobel gave the southern half of Bowhill to Michael Scott of Aikwood (probably her uncle) around 1529. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Ewes Parish. In 1761 he married Margaret Riddell, who was from Hawick. Their children included: Thomas (b.1762); Walter (b.1762); Gideon (b.1765); John (b.1765); George (b.1767); and Margaret (b.1771). Thomas (1754–1834) son of David and Elizabeth. He was farmer at Whisgills in Castleton Parish, perhaps taking over from his brother John. He was recorded on the 1792–97 Horse Tax Rolls. He was also taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. He was still farmer there in the 1830s. He married Janet Inglis, who was from Millholm, with her maternal grandparents being Brydons from Ettrick; she died in 1852, aged 84. They had many children, including 7 daughters who grew to adulthood and all married: Jean (b.1783), married Rev. John Law of the Newcastleton Burgher Kirk; Agnes (b.1784), who married Walter Armstrong, ‘the auld merchant’ in Newcastleton; Elizabeth (b.1788), who died young; David (1791/2–1815), who was very tall; Elizabeth (again, 1794–1845), who married Peter Oliver; James (b.1792), who also farmed at Whisgills; Mary (b.1804), who married Robert Elliot in Hermitage; Thomas (b.1796); Julie (b.c.1799); John (b.1803), who died young; and John (again, b.1806), who also died young. One of his daughters agreed to marriage after dreaming about her dress being snagged by her husband-to-be as he was angling. Margaret (1799/1800–61), who married shepherd John Scott, may also have been his daughter. The family are buried in Ettleton Cemetery (and the dates on the headstone do not all match the birth years from the parish records). Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Borthwickbrae. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. Thomas (b.1794/5) labourer in Robertson Parish. In 1841 and 1851 he was at Robertson Glebefoot, described in 1851 as a ‘Road Contractor’. His wife was Margaret and their children included Beatrix, Jessie, Walter, William, Robert and Thomas. He was probably the son of William baptised in Robertson in 1794. Thomas (d.1842) labourer at Upperraw and Whiteknowe. He was listed as male head of his family in 1835–41. Thomas, LL.D. (1792–1872) of Edinburgh, was made an Honorary Burgess in 1836 after delivering a series of lectures in the town on ‘the Science of Political Economy’. He wrote several books on varied subjects. Thomas (1811–73) father of Sir James A.H. Born in Denholm and baptised at Eat Bank Kirk, he had a clothiers business in Hawick. His father was James (descended from the Murrays of Spittal Tower), and his mother Christina Winthrope (whose father was a 'writer' in Hawick). He became a journeyman tailor, travelling the north of England and witnessing the opening of the Liverpool and Manchester Railway in 1829. He eventually returned in 1835 and settled in Denholm, since Hawick had too many tailors at the time. However, he moved into Hawick in 1858, his house and business being at 6 Bourtree Place. He was for a while a member of the old Town Council. In 1835 he married Mary (1803–88), 6th child of Hawick linen manufacturer Charles Scott. They had 5 children, all born in Denholm: James (1837–1915), lexicographer extraordinaire; Charles, who died young; Alexander Davidson, newspaper editor; Charles Oliver, engraver; and Margaret Scott, who married Alfred Marshall, and later lived with her mother at 10 Wellogate Place. Thomas (1827–58) son of James, who farmed at Whisgills. He was tenant farmer at Burnmouth. Thomas (19th C.) resident of Kirndeane in Castleton Parish in 1868. Walter (17th C.) resident of Dryden in Ashkirk Parish in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll among 'ye poor'. Probably the same Walter is recorded in 1691 having a daughter Margaret baptised, with no mother's name given. The witnesses were John and Andrew Riddell. Walter (17th C.) resident at Stobicote according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Walter (1693/4–1719) buried at Borthwick Waas. His gravestone is adjacent to that of James and others associated with Teindside. Walter (18th C.) farmer who was replaced by Abraham Armstrong as tenant of the Duke of Buccleuch in about 1796. This was probably at Shankend farm. Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was recorded at Borthwick Mains in 1792 and 1795 and at Greenbank in 1798. He married Margaret Laidlaw in 1791 and their children included: James (b.1793); Margaret (b.1795); and Thomas (b.1798). Walter (b.c.1795) stockingmaker, giving his name, for a time, to Murray Place, although he only owned property in the area from 1814 for less than two years. He inherited 66 High Street (and the area behind 66 and 68, which became Murray Place) from a relative William Turnbull, tailor, in 1814, and sold it to Robert Leyden in 1816. His wife was Elizabeth and their children included Margaret. Walter (b.c.1800) mason on the Kirk Wynd in 1841. His wife was Euphemia, and they also has a daughter called Euphemia. Walter (19th C.) married Hannah Hardie in Southdean in 1836.

Walter (19th C.) Church Officer of Hawick Free Kirk 1874–87. William (15th C.) leased half the lands of Sundhope in the Yarrow valley from the Crown in the period 1487–99. His son John was also mentioned in 1492. His brother Roger leased the other half of Sundhope. In 1494/5 he had 30 oxen and cows, a horse and goods stolen by David Turnbull, son of the Laird of Whithope. There were still Murrays at Sundhope in the late-17th century. William of Newhall (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1498 at the Justice-aire in Peebles. He had remission for bringing in John Douglas, a 'traitor from England' about 30 years earlier, with John, Earl of Morton as his surety. He was also fined for the non-appearance of his sone Alexander, John, Thomas and William. William of Romano (d.c.1560) son of William of Shillinglaw. He was listed among the Borders men who followed the Homes in an attack on the Earl of Arran, for which they had remission in 1526. His brother Alexander was also listed. He married Joneta, heiress of John Romano of that ilk. His children included: William, who succeeded; John; James; Christian, who married William Cockburn of Henderland; and Marion, who married Thomas Dudingstoun of Southouse. William (16th C.) recorded in Sundhope in 1581 when he witnessed a transaction in Selkirk. William (d.c.1633) acted as Chamberlain to the Scotts of Buccleuch for part of the rents in Branhholme and Wilton in the period 1631–33. In the period 1633–37 his wife Isobel Wilson performed the duty in his place. William (17th C.) servitor to Francis, Earl of Buccleuch, recorded in 1646 when he witnessed a document relating to lands in Edinburgh. William (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Pott and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1643. William (17th C.) recorded as 'in Templehall' when he witnessed a sasine relating to Harwood lands in 1664. Col. William of Bowhill (17th/18th C.) younger son of John of Bowhill, with his mother being Anne, daughter of Sir Archibald Douglas of Cavers. He purchased the lands of Bowhill in 1690 and his older brother John later became Lord Bowhill. He married Agnes (b.1677) daughter of Hawick Town Clerk Walter Gledstains. In 1722 he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for the later Town Clerk Walter Gledstains, his brother-in-law. William (17th/18th C.) wright in Hawick. In 1716 he witnessed a baptism for weaver Robert Wight. William (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Burnhead in 1724. He married Janet Scott and their children included: John (b.1717); Jean (b.1720); Robert (b.1722); and Walter (b.1724). The witnesses in 1724 were John and Walter Scott (who may have been related to his wife). It is possible that William (b.1705), George (b.1707), James (b.1710), Helen (b.1712) and William (b.1714) were also his children. William (18th C.) resident of the Dykes in Cavers Parish in 1724 and 1731. His children, baptised in Cavers, included William (b.1724), Margaret (b.1728) and Elizabeth (b.1731). It is probable that Walter (b.1726), whose baptism is recorded in both Cavers and Bedrule, was also his child. William (18th C.) married Janet Dalgleish in Robertson Parish in 1743. Their children probably included Agne (b.1744), James (b.1746) and Andrew (b.1751), William (b.1740s) younger son of John, farmer at Spittal-on-Rule. He had 2 sons: Veitch, who was a builder, working on Ancrum Bridge; and John. William (18th C.) married Henrietta Tait in Hawick Parish in 1754. She may be the daughter of shoemaker Willaim Tait baptised in Hawick in 1730. William (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Helen Elliot and their son William was baptised in 1764. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included William (b.1764) and Henrietta (b.1769). William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Fowler and their children included Margaret (b.1771), Katherine (b.1774), James (b.1776), John (b.1779) and John (again, b.1781). William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. His children included Helen (b.1781) and Betty (b.1782). William (18th C.) married Elizabeth (or 'Betty') Douglas in Kirkton Parish in 1767. He could also be the William whose marriage is recorded in Castleton Parish in 1766, although with no wife's name given. Their children, baptised in Castleton, included William and Elizabeth (b.1768). William (18th C.) married Elizabeth Richardson in Bedrule Parish in 1781. His children may have included Isabel (b.1792), Peggy (b.1794) and Violet (b.1802). It is possible that Robert (b.1788) and Helen (b.1790), baptised in Hobkirk Parish, could also have been his children. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His son James was baptised in 1786. William (18th C.) married Betty Nichol in Hawick Parish in 1793. William 'Wullie on the Wundi Sole' (d.bef. 1805) resident of Hawick. He married Margaret Todd in Hawick in 1794. His nickname 'Willie on the windowsole' is recorded when his child died in 1787 and when his wife died in 1805. It seems likely that what is meant is the modern 'window-sill', but it is still unclear why he might have had this nickname. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He is recorded at Scaurnook in 1786, 1788 and 1794. He may be the William who married Beatrix Scott in Robertson in 1786. His children, baptised in Robertson, included: James (b.1786); Walter (b.1788); Beatrix (b.1790); Robert (b.1792); and twins Thomas and William (b.1794). William (1771/2–1833) schoolmaster in Canonbie, who died in Langholm. He married Helen Byers, who died in 1866, aged 70. Their sons Andrew, John (b.1815/6, later teacher at Caverton Mill, near Kelso) and William (b.1828/9) were teachers in Hawick. Their other children were Fanny (who died aged 95), Thomas (who also married a Helen Byers), James (b.1831/2) and Janet (b.1833/4). William (b.c.1780) labourer in Denholm according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. He was listed right after tailor James, who may therefore have been related; he and James could be the sons of James baptised in Cavers in 1778 and 1773, respectively. William (18th/19th C.) married Margaret (or 'Peggy') Oliver in Cavers Parish in 1800. Their children Charles (b.1806) and George (b.1809) were baptised in East Bank Kirk, while Thomas (b.1801), Anne (b.1803) and Charles (b.1807) were baptised in Kirkton Parish. William (b.1787/8) from Brownmuir in Selkirkshire, he was teacher at a school in Lilliesleaf. He ran his own school (separate from the Parochial School), which was probably on the Loan in the village. His was probably the 'adventure school' described in the New Statistical Account (1840) as teaching 'English reading, writing, and arithmetic, the latter only tolerably well, the former two in the most vulgar manner'. It went on to say that the 'teacher has no education superior to a common labourer, and refuses to apply for further education'; if not strictly accurate, this suggests strong disagreement with the minister, who probably wrote the account. He was recorded as teacher at Lilliesleaf in Pigot's 1837 directory and Slater's 1852 directory. In 1841 and 1851 he was living with his brothers Alexander and Walter. In 1861 he was on Main Street with his brother Alexander and his family. William (1789–1872) 3rd son of Andrew of Spittal Tower. He was a stockingmaker in Hawick and later a merchant. In 1841 he was living on Miller's Close off the High Street, in 1851 was on Brougham Place and in 1861 he was a grocer and china merchant at 75 High Street. He was Church Officer at the East Bank Kirk for 32 years. In 1822 he married Helen

(or 'Nelly') Biggar in 1822, the marriage recorded in both East Bank Kirk and Wilton Parish; she was daughter of Robert Biggar, and died in 1871, aged 77. Their children were: Andrew (1823–82), baptised in East Bank Kirk, who married Isabella Brown; Jane (b.1825), who married John Marchbank; Elizabeth (b.1827), who married Andrew Smith of Dalkeith; Agnes (b.1829); Robert (1831–1901), local historian and writer; Isabella (b.1833), who married James Lambert and kept a wash-house; Helen (b.1835), who married Andrew Lambert; and William (b.1838), who married Margaret Anderson and later Mary Ann Hope. William (b.1792/3) from Traquair, he was a famer at Haughhead in Ashkirk Parish. In 1851 he was farmer there of 8 acres and in 1861 he was at 'Nook Haugh' farming 10 acres. He was still recorded there in 1868. His wife was Philia Oliver and their children included Mary and Philia. His sister-in-law Janet Oliver (from Ashkirk) was living with the family in 1861. William (1794–1875) son of William and Batrix Scott, he was born in Robertson Parish. In 1841 he was at Scaurnook with his mother. In 1851 and 1861 he was a retired shepherd living with his daughter and son-in-law at Scaurnook. His first wife (according to the gravestone) may have been Helen Grieve, who died in 1822, aged 20. He had sons William (d.1819), who died in infancy, and James (d.1841), who died in an accident at the age of 5. His daughter Helen married carrier John Elliot. He died at Scaurend and was buried in Robertson Cemetery. William (18th/19th C.) married Esther Scott in Bedrule Parish in 1818. William (18th/19th C.) resident of the Hawick area who married Janet Scott. Their son Andrew (b.1819) was baptised in East Bank Kirk. William (b.1800/1) son of James, who was a labourer in Newcastleton. In 1851 he was living with his parents at about 10 South Liddell Street and described as 'Formerly Surgeon'. William (19th C.) married Margaret Turnbull in Lilliesleaf Parish in 1823. Their son John was baptised in Minto in 1824. William (b.1802/3) from Castleton, he was a joiner in Teviothead. In 1841 he was at 'Moozieknowe' in Cavers Parish, at Mossy Knowe in 1851, as a master joiner, employing 2 men, and still there in 1861. He married Elizabeth (or 'Betty') Young. Their children included: John (b.1829); Elizabeth (or 'Betty', b.1831); Thomas (1835–68), who died in an accident in Manchester; Douglas (b.1839); and James (b.1843). He is buried at Teviothead. William (c.1805–bef. 1851) woollen spinner in Hawick. He was living on the Loan in 1841 and his widow was there in 1851. He married Agnes Stevenson in Kirkton in 1822 and their children included George (b.1827), Thomas (b.c.1829), Adam (b.c.1835), William (b.c.1837), Agnes (b.c.1839) and Robert (b.1841). William (b.1812/3) shepherd at Blackcleugh in Teviothead Parish. He is recorded there in 1851 with his wife Janet and children Thomas, Andrew, George, William, Margaret, Walter and Elizabeth. In 1861 he was shepherd at Sundhope in Castleton Parish and had an additional daughter, Mary. Dr. William (1813/4–65) surgeon in Newcastleton, brother of Margaret, Jane and Agnes. He was listed as a surgeon on Pigot's 1837 directory and Slater's 1852 directory. In 1851 he was 'MRCS Edin. Genl. Pract. (Surgeon)' visiting Dinlabyre. In 1861 he was at about 48 South Hermitage Street, and listed as a surgeon, but blind. He collected antiquities from the district, having the last hand-cuffs used in the village, as well as the supposed key from Mangerton Tower and a brass mortar-gun from Hermitage. He presented Liddesdale fossils and other items to the Hawick Archæological Society. He was listed as a surgeon in Newcastleton in the 1850s when he was on the Borders Union Railway Committee for Liddesdale. When it was decided that the Liddesdale route would be taken for the railway, he rode his gig to the head of the Liddel with flags flying, to announce the good news to the district. In 1843 he married Agnes, daughter of Thomas Scott, a Newcastleton innkeeper. Their children included John (b.1844), Helen (b.1846), Isabel (b.1848), Elizabeth Janet (b.1851) and Mary Agnes Thom (b.1854). Isabel and Mary emigrated to Elmira, Illinois. He is buried at Etleton Cemetery. William (b.1814/15) tailor on the High Street. He was listed in Pigot's 1837 directory. In 1841 he was living at about 6 High Street with his wife Margaret and daughter, also Margaret. In 1851 he was a widower in a lodging house on Walter's Wynd. He married Margaret Scott in Hawick Parish in 1834 and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1835. William (19th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He married Helen Scott and their son William was baptised in 1835. William (19th C.) married Janet Chisholme in Hawick Parish in 1835. Their children included: Thomas (b.1837); Andrew (b.1838); George (b.1840); William (b.1842); Margaret (b.1844); Walter (b.1847); Elizabeth (b.1849); and Mary (b.1852), baptised in Cavers. William (19th C.) married Elizabeth Martin in

Hawick Parish in 1836. William (19th C.) resident of Hawick. In 1841 he was a woollen stocking dresser living on O'Connell Street and in 1851 was on Wilton Place. He married Isabel Scott in Hawick Parish in 1839. Their children, baptised in Wilton, included Walter (b.1840), Anne (b.1842), William (b.1843), Andrew (b.1845) and James (b.1854); Walter's baptism was also recorded in Hawick Parish. William (19th C.) married Mary Gotterson in Hawick Parish in 1841. William (b.1806/7) stocking-maker in Wilton Parish. In 1851 he was living at No. 4 Front Row, Wilton Dean and in 1861 also at Wilton Dean. He married Agnes Armstrong in Hawick Parish in 1842. Their children, baptised in Wilton, included David (b.1843). William (19th C.) married Anne Scott in 1843, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Castleton Parishes. William (19th C.) married Margaret Grieve in 1843, the marriage recorded in both Wilton and Robertson Parishes. William (b.1821/2) woollen framework knitter in Hawick. He was living at about 69 High Street in 1851. He married Mary Hislop in 1844, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Wilton Parishes. Their children, baptised in Hawick Free Kirk, included: David (b.1844); Jane (b.1846); and Margaret Scott (b.1849). William (19th C.) married Joan Little in Hawick Parish in 1845. William (b.1822/3) from Langholm, he was a woollen handloom weaver in Hawick. In 1851 he was living on Backdamgate and in 1861 at Weensland. He married Mary Pow in 1847, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Wilton Parishes. Their children included Richard (b.1847/8), William (b.1849/50) and John (b.1854/5). William (19th C.) married Mary Kelley in Hawick Parish in 1852. William (19th C.) married Margaret Lockie in 1854, the marriage recorded in both Wilton and Melrose Parishes. William (1831/2–1906) Hawick teacher for over 50 years. Son of William, he was born at Broomieknowe, Canonbie. He came to Hawick in 1850, to help run the school started by his brother Andrew at the top of Baker Street, and continued by his other brother John. The school had moved to the old East Bank Kirk, then to the foot of the close at 9 High Street and then to 8 Kirkgate (i.e. St. Mary's Place). He was living at 7 Kirkgate in 1861. He was hired as a teacher at St. Mary's School in 1864 and became the first Headmaster at Trinity in 1876. He was also on the Town Council for 5 years and served as Session Clerk for St. Mary's. When he retired in 1903 he built Carradoyne in Fenwick Park, where he died. He married Janet Murray, eldest sister of J.P. John (and probably his second cousin). Their children included: William, who worked at the Commercial Bank in Hawick, moved to England and retired to Langholm; John, an architect in Liverpool; David (who was assistant to Dr. James Brydon in the Sandbed; and Elizabeth Carruthers, who married Rev. Stewart Burns. William (b.1837/8) from Newcastle-ton, he was a tin smith. In 1861 he was living on Drumlanrig Place. He married Jane Dodd Hobkirk in Hawick in 1858 and their children included Margaret (b.1859/60). William (1838/9–1916) youngest son of William and brother of poet and historian Robert. He married Margaret, daughter of Alexander Anderson and she died in 1877, aged 33. Their children were William (printer in Costa Rica), Isabella (who married August Louis Roye from Detroit), Andrew (a chemist in Costa Rica who married twice) and 3 children who died young. He later remarried to Mary Ann Hope. He was said to be a striking personality (in contrast to his brother Robert), with a tall stature and a long flowing beard in later years. In 1908 he was elected librarian of the St. Andrew's Society of Detroit. Soon after he returned to Hawick and became an active member of the Archaeological Society, being joint secretary in 1910 and 1911 and writing some articles. William (b.1855) eldest son of local historian Robert. He became a merchant in Aberdeen. He married Georgina Scott and later Catherine Hosie. His children were Margaret, Agnes Oliver, Jane Stewart, Helen Georgina, Janet Brown and Robert. William (19th/20th C.) gardener at Borthwickshiels. His grandmother was a sister of Walter Scott ('Wat o the Knowe'). He was a Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. William (d.1915) son of William and Margaret Anderson, he was descended from the Spittal Tower Murrays and was nephew of local historian Robert. He became a printer in Costa Rica and married Agnes MacNair. His younger brother Andrew was a chemist in Costa Rica and married his sister-in-law Margaret MacNair (in earliest times interchangeable with 'Moray', and became 'Moravia', 'Moravie', etc. when written in Latin; other spellings include 'Murra' and 'Murraye' and 'Murry').

Murray Bros (mu-ri-bru-thurz) n. D. & R. Murray, knitwear warehouse and retail business. It was established in 1960, based in Tower Mill, expanding with shops in Haddington, Kelso and Penrith. It later moved to the former Orrock Church. In 2004 the business switched to trading solely in china and giftware and closed in 2007, following the retirement of Ronnie Murray.

Murray Place (mu-ri-plis) n. lost street name, being the area behind 66 and 68 High Street, named after Walter Murray, stockingmaker who was there for only about 2 years from 1814. The new houses there were built in the early 1860s and for a few years referred to as Albert Place, but Murray Place by the 1868/9 Valuation roll. The name was dropped altogether in 1968 as it became simply the lower part of O'Connell Street.

Murray Place (mu-ri-plis) n. street in Denholm, between Douglas Drive and the Ashloaning, where 10 new houses were built in the 1950s.

the Murrays (thu-mu-riz) n. Scottish family, probably all originating from an ancient line connected with the area of Moray or Moravia in the north-east of Scotland. The most important Lairdship locally was that of the Murrays of Falahill and Philiphaugh, descended from Archibald, who signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. In the 16th century these Murrays were involved in many feuds, as well as in the struggles against the English. There were long Murrays in Rulewater and in Hawick there were several important families (most of which are directly related), which gave us lexicographer Sir James A.H. Murray, local historian Robert Murray, songwriter J.E.D. Murray and others.

Murray-Stavert (mu-ri-stā-vur) n. Archibald Stavert (19th/20th C.) lived at Saughtree and later Stanegarthside. He served as a Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire.

Murray's Temperance Hotel (mu-riz-tem-pu-rins-hō-tel) n. teetotal establishment at 15 High Street in the late 19th century.

murt (mur) n., arch. the skin of a sheep that has died naturally – 'Ane murt lamb skin [is stated to be hardly worth two shillings Scots]' [BR1700], 'Murt, A lamb-skin before castration-time, Teviotd.' [JoJ] (also 'mort').

murther (mu-thur) n., arch., poet. murder – '...but when he heard ane crying murther he straight way went up to make riddance and to allay tumult' [PR1716], 'Thaye sley the widaw an' the fremet, an' nurther the faetherliss' [HSR] (older version of the word murder).

Muselee (mewz-, -māz-, mūz-lee) n. farm across the Borthwick river from Deanburnhaugh, below Broadlee. It was in Hawick Parish until 1689/90 when Robertson was formed. The Muselee Burn joins the Borthwick here, and the 276 m Muselee Hill is above. A narrow lane between 2 dykes to the left of the house is part of an old drove road, with cattle passing from the west through here and over to Teviothead and on to English markets. Alexander Scott 'in Mouslaw', recorded in 1501, could have been tenant here. Adam Murray is recorded there in 1502. 'Archibald Ellott in Muselit, undir the Laird of Cheisholme' is recorded in 1586/7 and he was 'of Mouslie' in 1598/9. The lands were owned by a branch of the Riddells from at least 1618 and passed to the niece of Charles Riddell of Muselee in 1849 when he died unmarried. In 1627 it was valued along with Woodburn as paying '120 lb., vicarage 20 lb'. Archibald Elliot of Muselie, 'a common a notorious thief and fugitive' was tried in 1628. There were 4 'communicants' recorded there in 1650, namely Thomas Laidlaw, Malie Wilson, Robert Laidlaw and James Laidlaw. John Riddell paid the land tax on £100 in Hawick Parish in 1663 and 1678 (probably for Muselee, which was in Hawick Parish at that time). George Heatley was there in at least 1732–34 and Andrew Main in 1741. By 1788 (and still continued in 1811) the owner was Charles Riddell and the value was unchanged. John Scott was living there in 1792 and Thomas Grieve is recorded as farmer there in 1797. About the same time John Laidlaw was shepherd there. William Aitkin was farmer there in 1841. Robert Brown was farmer in the 1860s Capt. George Hutton Riddell was the owner in about 1874. (also formerly spelled 'Mooslie', 'Muislie', 'Muselie', 'Muslie', 'Musla' and variants; it is 'muselee' in 1502, 'Muselit' in 1586/7, 'Mouslie' in 1598/9, 'Mouslie' in 1616, 'Mewslie' in 1628, 'Museley' in 1653, 'Muislie' in 1663, 'Muslie' in 1682, 'Moosilie' in 1690, 'Muislie' in 1678 and 1695, 'Musely' in 1719, 'Mewslie' in 1761, 'Muisly' in 1732, 'Mooselee' in 1797 and 'Muslie' in 1841; it is marked on a 1650 parish map as 'Mooselie', on Blaeu's 1654 map as 'Meusly' and is absent from Stobie's 1770 map and Ainslie's 1821 map; the name may be from Old English 'mos-leah' meaning 'fodder lea').

Muselee Burn (mewz-lee-burn) n. stream that runs into the Borthwick Water roughly from the south-east, joining near Muselee. It forms part of the probable boundary line of the Catrail, with a section of the linear earthwork ending near the stream, about 300 m north of Broadlee Loch. It then runs in a south-easterly direction to connect with the headwaters of the Teindside Burn.

Muselee Hill (mewz-lee-hil) n. hill to the south-east of Muselee farm in the Borthwick valley, reaching a height of 276 m. A linear earthwork runs for about 500 m from Muselee Burn to the east, across the southern slopes of this hill, ending in the headwaters of the Wood Burn. It is presumably an old agricultural boundary.

Muselee Drive (mewz-lee-driv) n. short street in Lilliesleaf, running to the north at the west side of the village, usually written ‘Muselie Drive’.

Muselee Sike (mewz-lee-sik) n. small stream on the south side of the Borthwick valley, between Muselee and Woodburn. It is distinct from Muselee Burn, which lies to the west.

the Museum (thu-mew-zee-um) n. Hawick’s museum is located in Wilton Lodge, it houses a permanent display of knitwear and hosiery history, as well as other local artefacts, paintings, natural history and achæology. Many more items of local interest are in storage than can be displayed at one time. It grew out of the collection of the Archæological Society, which first opened to the public in premises at the east end of the High Street in 1858. It can be seen upstairs in the property of Milligan’s (site of the Liberal Club) in an 1858 photo. A steady stream of artefacts were donated to the Society over its first few decades, and were on public display initially only for a few hours on Saturday evenings. There was a catalogue published for the 1866 exhibition given in connection with the Archæological Society. The collection moved to the old Grammar School building and then the Buccleuch Memorial, where at least one photograph exists showing the collection packed into the available space. In 1906 it was offered to the Town Council, under the condition that Wilton Lodge be converted into use as a Museum. This followed in 1910, when it was opened by the Duke of Buccleuch (who was given an ornate golden key to mark the occasion, and was the first person to sign the visitor’s book). J.P. Alison drew up the original plans for converting the house into a museum. Extensive renovations were carried out in 1959 to showcase the local exhibits, and in 1975 the Scott Gallery extension was added. In 1984 the Museum became the headquarters for the Roxburgh District Museums Service. In early 2007 a new lift was added and other renovations carried out. In 2017 the trust ‘Live Borders’ took over the running of the Museum.

Musgrave (muz-grāv) n. James (18th/19th C.) weaver at ‘Bellshaws’ (probably Belses) in Castleton Parish. In 1797 he was listed among men on the ballot to serve in the Militia and in 1799 was at ‘Bellshaws’, previously ‘Bellshiels’, among those whose names had not been drawn, but were no longer living in the area. Sir John (c.1450–c.1515) Englishman who was important on the Marches around 1500. In 1502 Adam Turnbull ‘in Hornishole, now in Chalmerlane-Newtoun’ had a remission for several crimes, including ‘the treasonable inbringing’ of him to the ‘Burning of Selkirk and Hereschip, and Stouthreif of goods therein’. He was probably son of Sir Thomas and younger brother of Sir Richard. He was knighted after the Battle of Stoke Field. He was Sheriff of Cumberland from 1489 and Constable of Bewcastle (along with his son Thomas) from 1493. He married Joan, daughter of John Crackenthorpe and secondly Margaret (or Dorothy), sister of John Dudley. He may also be the same Sir John whose wife was an inspiration for some of William Dunbar’s poetry. Sir John of Bewcastle (16th C.) son of Sir William and an unknown mistress. He was also known as ‘Jack a Musgrave’ and was leader of English raiding parties, serving as Captain of Bewcastle. In 1541 he complained that his houses had been burned by Liddesdale men. In 1542 he and 40 men ‘brent a towne in Tevedall caulyd Rowlle’, which was presumably on the Rule Water, perhaps Town-o-Rule. He took part in the battle of Solway Moss at the end of 1542. He led a force that intercepted a raiding party of Liddesdale men near Hexham in 1542/3. However, he was accused of ransoming Scottish prisoners. He married Jane Chamber and Agnes Thirlwall and his children included Adam, Ingram, Thomas, Richard and Lancelot. Thomas (16th/17th C.) son of Sir Simon, who was Captain of the English garrison at Bewcastle. He was younger brother of Christopher. In 1583 he sent a letter to Queen Elizabeth’s Chancellor in which he lists the chief Elliots and Armstrongs of Liddesdale. He acted as Captain of Bewcastle once his father was too old. In 1596 he attempted a retaliatory raid on the Armstrongs of Hollows, but was ambushed on the way home by John Armstrong of Langholm, Will Armstrong of Kinmont and others. They delivered him to Scott of Branxholme and he was returned after paying ransom. These events could have been inspiration for part of the ballad ‘Jamie Telfer o’ the Fair Dodheid’. In 1602 he fought a duel with Lancelot Carleton, after he had been accused of offering to give up Bewcastle to the King of Scotland. He married Ursula, daughter of Sir Richard Carnaby, and secondly married a Scottish woman. There were complaints from English Commissioners in 1606 that ‘he matched one of his base daughters with that bloodie and thee-vish clanne of the Armstrongs of Whithaughe in Liddesdale’ and that the sons of Sandy’s Ringan were known to frequent his house.

Mushet (mu-shi) n. Walter (15th/16th C.) recorded as being ‘of Holpaslat’ in 1499 when he was on the inquest for Richard Rutherford of that Ilk being served heir to his grandfather. Several of the other witnesses were local men, and so it is possible that this was ‘Howpasley’. Rev. William (d.1678) minister of Slains from 1635, he was translated to Hassendean Parish in 1664, presumably becoming the first Episcoplain minister. However, this was during the time of dispute about dissolving the parish, parts of the fabric having already been removed to Robertson. There was a disagreement with the Presbytery over the allocation of a glebe for him, resolved in his favour in 1668. He remained at Hassendean until his death. Several letters from him to Sir Gideon Scott of Highchester are in the National Archives. He married Christian, daughter of William Hay, minister of Crimond. He had a large family and no personal estate, so his son William (apparently lame in his right hand) was given a bursary by the Presbytery in 1670 and a younger son also given it in 1674. This younger son, or another altogether was Gilbert, who became minister of Cumbernauld. He additionally had at least one daughter, Margaret. There was also a Henry Mushet, minister at Bowden about 20 years earlier who may have been related (spelled ‘Musshit’, ‘Muschet’ and variants).

muslin kail (muz-lin-kāl) n., arch. soup made without any of the richer ingredients – ‘Musleen kail = kail boiled without meat (and possible without carrots). Gen. Scottish muslin kail = broth made simply of water, barley and greens’ [ECS].

musni (mus-ni) contr. mustn’t – ‘Hei mustni hev been in the fettle for writin’ [IWL] (cf. the older mauni and the interrogative version mussen; also written ‘mustni’).

musni’ve (mus-ni-uv, -niv) contr. mustn’t’ve, must not have.

Musselburgh (mu-sul-bu-ru) n. town in the Lothians, about 6 miles east of Edinburgh. Created a burgh of barony in the early 14th century, it was originally called Eskmouth and nicknamed ‘the Honest Toun’, supposedly after the Regent, Lord Randolph, took shelter there and no one gave away his place of concealment to the English. It is well known to Hawick folk for having a Common Riding, held in late July. The principals are the Honest Lad and Lass, and are elected by open vote of the ‘Honest Toun’s Association’. The festival really began in 1936, building on the ancient riding of the marches ceremony and partly inspired by Hawick Common Riding. The main song is ‘Come all ye Honest Lads and Lasses’. Population (1991) 20,630 – ‘For Musselburgh was a Burgh, When Edinburgh was nane, And Musselburgh will be a Burgh, When Edinburgh’s gane’.

Musshit see Mushet

mustart (mus-tar) n., poet. mustard – ‘The kingdome o’ heæven is like til ane grain o’ mustart-seed, whilk ane man tuik an’ sawet in his field’ [HSR], ‘Gif ye hae faith as ane grain o’ mustart-seed, ye sall say untill this mountain’ [HSR].

mustni see musni

mutch (much) n., arch. a linen or muslin cap, often starched, once worn by older women – ‘And couthie, kindly, auld grand dames Had on their brawest mutches ...’ [TCh], ‘...after the two women had torn each other’s mutch ...’ [JTU] (from Mediæval Dutch).

Mutch (much) n. James Whillans (19th/20th C.) boot and shoemaker, who was a tenant on the Weens estate from 1884. He was born at Ancrum House Lodge, his father being gardener to Sir William Scott, and his mother Christina Whillans. His wife ran a small grocer’s shop. In 1877 he married Agnes Jessie (b.1857), 3rd daughter of Andrew Davidson, from Burnfoot near Hawick. They had a son James (b.1885). James W. (b.1885) son of James Whillans and Agnes Jessie Davidson. He was born at Weens Cottages and educated at Hobkirk School. He served his apprenticeship with Pesco’s and was there for his entire working life, becoming Director 1900–58.

mutchkin (much-kin) n., arch. Scots unit of liquid measure equal to 4 gills or 2 chopins or quarter of a Scots pint, equivalent to about 3/4 imperial pints or 0.9 U.S. pints or 0.42 litres – ‘...Mary Sanderson, her half-pecke ane mutchkin short’ [BR1676], ‘Sent to the steiple head a mutchkin of brandie ... 0 0 7’ [BR1747], ‘They quickly for a mutchkin cry, As they’ve nae time for stopping’ [JoHa], ‘I’ll e’en take a seat, and a mutchkin I’ll be – Hurrah for the maister!’

quo Donald M'Gee' [JoHa], '... Till gills intae half mutchkins turned, Half mutchkins intae bottles ...' [VW], 'A mutchkin gless and some bits o' delf Ye'd grue to set on the kitchen shelf' [WL] (from Dutch via Middle English).

muth (muth) adj., arch. close, humid (said of the weather) – 'But it was the reverse from chilly. What Geordie termed a 'muth nicht' [BM1905].

Mutter-Howie (mu-tur-how-ee) n. Mutter, Howie & Co., coal business of the late 19th and early 20th centuries, based in Edinburgh. The local representative ran a haulage business out of the Station, carrying virtually anything around Hawick using Clydesdale horses and a wagon. Their yard was off what would become Mansfield Gardens. The word was also used to refer to horses of a sort fit for pulling coal wagons – '... The Mutter-Howie horses There's lots o' other names' [AY], '... Then the Mutter Howie man Takes eet tae the station' [AY], 'And ca'd them for a dirty clairt Frae Muter Howey's Horse and cairt ...' [DH].

the Mutual Assurance Company (thumew-choo-ul-aw-shoo-rins-kum-pi-nee) n. the South of Scotland Mutual Insurance Co. Ltd., also known as the South of Scotland Woollen Manufacturers Mutual Insurance Co. Ltd., was set up by local manufacturers in the early 20th century. Peter Scott was an early Director. The Museum has ledgers and other papers from the period 1938–1952.

Mutual Improvement Association (mew-choo-ul-im-proov-min'-aw-sō-see-ā-shin) n. former society in rural areas where members exchanged information on learned subjects. The first such society was formed in Aberdeenshire in 1846 and the movement became widespread during the second half of the 19th century, but eventually came to an end in 1962. There was a Hawick branch from at least 1858, with activity peaking probably in the 1870s – 'It might be a surprise, but doubtless, also, a satisfaction, to the members of the Mutual Improvement Society ...' [RJR] (also 'Mutual Instruction Society').

muzz (muz) v., arch. to bemuse, dumbfound, stupify – 'The sun ... thraetent an efter-heat ... fit tae muzz folk' [ECS].

muzzle-thrush (mu-zul-thrush) n., arch. the mistle-thrush, Turdus viscivorus.

My Borderland (mI-bōr-dur-lawnd) n. song with words by David Johnston and music by Albert V. Budge, probably written in 1951 and published the following year. The song has a wide range, and is suitable for the female voice. Its first public performance was by Ina Wintroppe.

Mycelaw Green (mIs-la-green) n. older name for Myreslaw Green – '... And ride to Mycelaw Green sae crouselly' [AB].

my gock (mI-gok) interj., arch. exclamation of surprise (also by gock).

mype (mīp) v., arch. to speak a great deal, to be very diligent – 'A mypin' bodie' [JoJ].

myre (mīr) n. a marsh, bog (note the pronunciation).

Myredykes (mīr-dīks) n. former farm in Castleton Parish on the road to Kielder, at the head of the Liddel. It is 'Myredykis' among lands in upper Liddesdale that belonged to Jedburgh Abbey, as listed in the early 17th century. It was owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch by 1623. It was surveyed for the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1718, when it covered 306 acres and was bounded by Peel, the Border, Hudshouse and Thorlieshope; the farmhouse appears to be shown on the east bank of the Peel Burn rather than the west. It was listed among the farms of the Duke of Buccleuch being let by public roup in Hawick in 1755. John Murray was a servant there in 1799 and Andrew Murray and Robert Boyd in 1801. William Elliot farmed there in the late 18th century. Thomas Elliot, Archibald Scott and their families lived there in 1851 and Thomas Murray's family in 1861. In the late 19th century John Elliot in Flatt carried on the lease after the death of his uncle John Scott-Elliot. The property is now under forest. There was once a railway bridge over the road there. A flanged axe-head found there is in the National Museum of Antiquities (also written 'Meerdykes' and 'Muirdykes', it is 'Meirdyakis' in 1623, 'Myerdykes' in 1718 and 'Myerdikes' in 1755).

Myre-quarter (mIr-kwar-tur) n. former name for lands in Belses. In 1580/1 they were wadset by 'Dand' Davidson to Walter Turnbull of Bewlie for an annual rent of 5 bolls of grain; they were at that time a '5 poundland'. They were included among lands served to Sir Thomas Ker of Cavers Carre in 1678, after the death of his son Andrew. In 1874 it was part of the estate of Belses owned by Sir George Douglas of Springwood Park (it is 'Myre quarter' in 1580/1 and 'Myre Quarter' in 1678).

Myres (mīrz) n. former name for lands in Lillieleaf. In 1528 John Scott 'in Myrris or Vest Manes in Lillescleff' received payment for 3 pieces of land, summing to £40. In 1531 John Scott 'of Myrris' assigned to his cousin Walter Scott, tutor of Haining, these lands, which he rented from the Archbishop of Glasgow. This was confirmed in 1530/1, where John's lands were described as 'that fourth part of the lands of Myris with pertinents lying on the west of the place of Myris', Walter to pay John £14. In 1595/6 Walter Riddell of that Ilk held the lands of 'West-Maynis alias Dunstane or Myris', suggesting this was the same place as West Mains and Dunstane.

Myreslaw Court (mīrz-lu-kōr') n. sheltered housing complex built at Myreslaw Green in 1973, adjacent to St. Margaret's Home. It is on the site of the former 'Green Kirk' (later used concerts, church events and as a warehouse) and also the house where the Cornet traditionally stopped for a stirrup cup on the way down from the Mair. It was the first purpose-built sheltered housing unit in Scotland, and used as a model by other local authorities (also written as one word).

Myreslawgreen see Myreslaw Green

Myreslaw Green (mīrz-lu-green, mīs-lu-green) n. part of the town Common in the West End. In 1740 it was used to pasture animals employed on building the Teviot Brig, and the Council ordered that no turf should be cut from there. It was first feued in part in 1766, for the Anti-Burgher meeting house and manse, and not immediately affected by the Division of 1777. Originally a pasture with only one building (the Green Kirk built in 1767), it was developed over the subsequent few decades. The area once included what is now Drumlanrig Place to Myreslawgreen and formed the western boundary of the Burgh. The 'common vennel at Myreslawgreen' referred to in the 1537 charter probably ran from Morrison Place to Coble Pool Lane (now on the High School grounds). When this area is reached by the riders coming back from the Moor on the Friday of the Common Riding, they are served refreshments, or 'a guid cauld calker', a tradition possibly began by 'Rodgie o the Green'. This was continued for about 70 years in the 20th century by the Misses McCallum. 'Myreslaw Green' appeared as a street name from at least 1824, and is now mainly used to the single street, which was originally part of Green Wynd. But it is also used more generally to mean that broad area of the West End surrounding the former green, including many streets named after leading Liberal reformers of Victorian times. The street used to contain the West-end branch of the Co-op, as well as Slattery's and Harry Scott's grocer's shops (the word itself is a mixture of Old English and Norse meaning 'green swamp' or 'marshy

the Myreslawgreen Mairches (thu-mīs-lu-green-mār-cheez) n. name formerly used for the boundaries ridden by the Common Riding cavalcade around the Myreslawgreen area, on their return from the Moor.

Napier (nā-pur, -pee-ur) n. Andrew (18th C.) mason of Hawick Parish. In 1747 he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for George Richardson. He married Margaret Graham and they had a son John baptised in Hawick in 1739. His other children included: John (b.1744); and Jean (b.1745). He may be the son of John baptised in Hawick in 1710. He could be the Andrew whose sister Janet died in Hawick in 1778. Basil (1877–1900) eldest son of Mark and grandson of Lord Napier. He was Lieutenant with the 34th Battalion, Imperial Yeomanry. He died during the South African War and is listed on the Hawick Boer War Memorial. Francis (1705–73) 6th Lord Napier of Merchiston and 3rd Baronet of Thirlestane. He was only son of Sir William Scott of Thirlestane and Elizabeth Brisbane, Mistress of Napier. He changed his name from Scott to Napier when he inherited his mother’s titles. He married Henrietta, daughter of Charles Hope, Earl of Hopetoun and secondly Henrietta Maria, daughter of George Johnston of Dublin. His children were: William, who succeeded; Charles of Merchiston Hall; Lieut.-Col. Francis of the Marines; John, who died unmarried; Mark; George; James, who died young; Patrick, Naval Captain; James John; Stewart; Henrietta, who married William, 12th Lord Ross; Hester, who married Alexander Johnson of Carnsalloch; and Mary, who also died young. Francis (1758–1823) of Thirlestane, 8th Baron Napier, 8th Lord Merchiston, often referred to as ‘Lord Francis Napier’. He was only son of William and grandson of Francis Scott. His family were descendants of the Scotts of Thirlestane (in Ettrick), who were in turn cadets of the Scotts of Buccleuch. He was an army officer who surrendered to Gen. Gates at Saratoga in 1777. Returning to Britain he continued in the Army, laid the foundation stone for Edinburgh University’s ‘Old College’ in 1789, was confirmed to the House of Lords in 1790, became Lord-Lieutenant of Selkirkshire and was also Lord High Commissioner of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland. In 1784 he married Maria Margaret, eldest daughter of Lieut.-Gen. Sir John Clavering. Thirlestane House (in the Ettrick valley) being too small, around 1790 he moved his home to Langlands, renaming the house Wilton Lodge. He paid tax on 5 female servants at Wilton Lodge in 1789 and 1790 and 3 in 1791, as well as 5 male servants in 1790, 3 in 1791–94 and 4 in 1797. He was taxed for owning a carriage at Wilton Lodge in the period 1789–95 and horses in the period 1789–94. He subscribed to John Learmont's book of poetry in 1791. He had some local involvement in politics, being the head of the group promoting war against France in those years, and chairing an influential anti-reform meeting in Hawick in 1792. In 1793 he headed the pro-war side of a public meeting held in Hawick to discuss the possibility of war with France. In 1797 he was recorded as owner of 2 work horses and 3 carriage or saddle horses at Wilton Lodge on the Horse Tax Rolls; he also paid tax on 3 non-working dogs in the same year. In about 1799 he was among the local men who contributed money to support the war against France. He was noted locally for his dress style. He still owned Thirlestane and other lands in Ettrick and Yarrow Parishes in 1802. He sold Wilton Lodge again in 1805; however, in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls he is still listed as owner of the 'Half Barony of Wilton, called Langlands', excluding most of Rougheugh, Silverbuthall, Howlands and Dovemount, but including Calaburn. There is a record of his 'Roup Money at Hawick' in 1805 in the Walter Mason Collection as well as several surviving letters from him in the period 1815–23. He was involved with setting up the Pastoral Society of Selkirkshire. He had 9 children, 6 of whom were born at Wilton Lodge. His children included: Maria Margaret (b.1785), who married Rev. Orfeur William Kilvington of Hatfield; William John (b.1786), who succeeded; Charlotte (b.1788), who died in infancy; Anne (b.1789), born at Wilton Lodge, who married Sir Thomas Gibson-Carmichael; Sophia (1791–1829), who was born at Wilton Lodge and died unmarried; Francis (b.1793), who must have died young; Charles (b.1794), whose descendants took the surname Napier-Clavering; Rev. Henry Alfred (b.1796); and Caroline (b.1798), who married Neville Reid. The witnesses in 1791 were Adam Ogilvie of Hartwoodmyres, Thomas Elliot Ogilvie of Chesters, Gilbert Chsholme of Stirches and Dr. James Wilson, surgeon in Hawick. In 1794 he paid Wilton Kirk for a private baptism – 'That valuable Captain Napier Benevolence plainly displays; And all for the good of our country, Did institute Thirlston Fair' [BY], 'There is Lord Napier o' the Lodge, And Gawin in the Hall, And Mr. Charters o' Wilton Manse, Preaches lectures to us all' [DJG]. Francis (1819–98) of Thirlestane, 10th Lord Napier, 1st Baron Ettrick. Son of William John, 9th Lord Napier, he worked in the diplomatic service and was Governor of Madras. He was created Baron of Ettrick in 1872. He married Anne Jane Charlotte Manners Lockwood and was succeeded by their son William. There is a memorial to him in Ettrick Church. John (17th/18th C.) mason in Hawick. His name is written 'Neper' in 1705 and 1706 when he witnessed baptisms (sometimes for fellow masons). In 1708 he witnessed a baptism for fellow mason Peter Mitchell and also for 'younger' carrier William Aitken. He is 'Naper' when he witnessed baptisms for William Aitken and for weaver James Beattie younger in 1710, for shoemaker Robert Elliot in 1712 and for weaver Andrew Jardine in 1713. He also witnessed baptisms in Hawick in 1716 for cooper John Turnbull and for Henry Paterson. He was recorded as 'merchant' in his child's baptismal record of 1718. He married Mary Graham in Hawick in 1705 and their children included Anna (b.1706), Walter (b.1707), Janet (b.1708), Andrew (b.1710), Isobell (b.1712), Agnes (b.1713), Margaret (b.1716), Agnes (again, b.1718), Katherine (b.1720), James (b.1723) and John (b.1729). The witnesses in 1710 were writer John Watson and wright John Pringle, in 1712 were flesher Thomas Briggs and mason John Turnbull, in 1716 were Andrew Turnbull and mason Peter Mitchell, in 1718 were gardener Walter Turnbull and Beadle John Scott and in 1720 were masons John Turnbull and Andrew Turnbull. Mark Francis (1852–1919) 3rd son of Sir Francis, 10th Lord Baron Napier of Merchiston and 1st Baron of Ettrick (and Viceroy of India), and great-grandson of the Lord Napier who stayed at Wilton Lodge. He stood unsuccessfully against Unionist Arthur Ralph Douglas Elliot in the 1886 Roxburghshire election, but defeated him to become Liberal M.P. in 1892. He was defeated in the 1895 election by the Conservative Earl of Dalkeith. In 1878 he married Emily Jones. Their children were: Basil, killed in action in South Africa; Claude Inverness; and Philip Henry. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. His children included: Marion (b.1694); and John (b.1696). The witnesses in 1696 were William and John Cavers. William (d.1775) 7th Baron Napier, eldest son of Francis. He was a Liet.-Col. in the Army and Deputy-Adjutant General of the forces in Scotland. He married Mainie, daughter of Charles, 8th Lord

Cathcart and was succeeded by his only son Francis, who lived for a while at Wilton Lodge. William John (b.1786) eldest son of Francis, he was 9th Baron Napier. Although born in Ireland, he spent some of his youth at Wilton Lodge, where several of his siblings were born. He served in the Royal Navy and was present at the Battle of Trafalgar. Back in Scotland, he undertook extensive planting at Thirlestane, was a member of Selkirkshire Farmers' Club and published 'A Practical Treatise on Store Farming'. He was superintendent of British interests in China for the East India Company. Before embarking on the journey out east, he took his eldest son on a trip back to Wilton Lodge, to remember the scenes of his youth. He was the first British representative to suggest the forcible seizure of Hong Kong. He died in Macao, only a few months after arriving in China. In 1816 he married Elizabeth, daughter of Scottish adventurer Andrew Cochrane-Johnstone. He was succeeded by his eldest son, Francis. A memorial to him is now in the Hong Kong Museum of History (also formerly spelled 'Naper', 'Neper' and 'Naprie').

Neil (neel) n. Adam (b.c.1780) son of Alexander, who was miller at Ashkirk Mill. He was recorded at Ashkirk Mill on the 1801 ballot for the Militia. He was a farmer at Synton Mill in 1841 and a miller at Synton Mill in 1851, employing 7 people and farming over 100 acres. In 1841 and 1851 he was unmarried and living with his sister Margaret; Esther and 3 children were living in the adjacent house in 1841 and also surely related. Alexander (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Marion Deans and their son Alan was baptised in 1676. Alexander (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Janet Scott and their son James was baptised in 1773. Alexander (18th C.) listed as owner of a 'House and Yard' in Minto Parish in 1779. It was owned by Lord Minto in 1811 and valued at £1 16s

7d. Alexander (18th/19th C.) farmer at Ashkirk Mill, recorded as owner of 2 horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. His son Adam (b.c.1780) was miller at Synton Mill, and he also had a daughter Margaret (b.c.1780). He may also have been father of Ann (or Agnes) who in 1800 married John Oliver, who was a labourer at Ashkirk Mill.

Alexander (b.1809/10) from Midlothian, he was a grocer and spirit dealer at about 28 High Street in 1851. He was also listed in Slater's 1852 directory. His wife Annabella was from Bamburgh.

[JT], '... A neive-fu saut to tang its gow' [WL], 'His wee bit grubby nieves were clenched, Twa baw-bees did they hold' [WFC] (also spelled 'nieve' and 'neeve'; cf. neffi).

neivefi (neev-fi) n., arch. a fistful, clenched handful – 'The most common was termed a 'neive-fu'' – as much meal as could be grasped by one hand' [V&M], 'A stane frae auld Glengarry hoose, A neivefu' yirth frae some grit sloose ...' [JoHa], 'Ther sall be ane neiffu' o' coorn in the yird ...' [HSR], 'A licorice stick, a neivefu' monkey nits, A bag o' locust – tidbits rare' [WL] (also written 'neivefu'' and 'neiffu'; note that the following word 'of' is often omitted).

Nellie (ne-lee) n. pet form of the name Nancy.

Nellie Herkness (ne-lee-hrrk-nis, -herk-nis) n. the niece in John Ballantyne's song 'Pawkie Paiterson'. She was the daughter of Nellie, who was sister of Robert 'Pawkie' Paterson – 'And as for Nellie Harkness, She ryse in the morn' [JSB].

Nellie Swinton (ne-lee-swin'-in) n. nickname for James Williamson.

nell-kneid (nel-nīd) pp., adj., arch. knock-kneed (noted by E.C. Smith; cf. nuil-kneid).

Nell o the Bar (nel-ō-thu-bawr) n. nickname of Nellie Oliver.

Nelson (nel-sin) n. Robert (d.1912) shoemaker in Hawick. He had a shop at the top of O'Connell Street. He married Margaret Johnston. Their children included son John and daughters Isabella ('Tibbie') and Marion Bell ('May'), who both emigrated to Australia. William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their son William was baptised in 1782. William (b.1782) carpet-maker in Hawick according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia.

Nelson's Plantin (nel-sinz-plawn-tin) n. plantation that runs along the south-west side of the Minto Hills.

nemine contradicente (ne-mi-nee-kon-tradi-sen-tee) adv., arch. unanimously, without dissent – 'The said day the Baillies and Councill convened did nemine contradicente ordain and appoint the Bellhouse upon the kirk steeple to be taken down and rebuilt ...' [BR1723] (common in formal records of the 17th and 18th centuries).

nemit (ne-mi') pp., arch. named, supplied a name – '... the quhilk precept had na officiar nemmit in to it nor indorsing as the copy of that ilk purports' [SPB1533] (also namit).

ner (ner) adv. nearly, nearby – '... Backed the wunner o' Tradesman's a'm in ner fifty quid' [MB], adj., arch. near, close at hand – 'The man's a naerr freind o' oar yn, eane o' oor neist o' kyn' [JAHM], prep., arch. near, beside – 'A was vext A'd naeboddy nerr iz ti speak ti' [ECS], 'Hicher up, nerr the croon o the hill, men war layin on an chaappin ...' [ECS], '... till hei awakened thrae a drunken sleep on the muir amang the whins ne'r the fence' [BW1939], (particularly common in the phrase vernerr; also spelled 'nerr', 'ne'r', etc.; cf. the older neyr).

ner-by (ner-bl) adv., prep., arch. nearby – '... another road-injin, wui the inspeirin name: 'Jethart's Here!', stuid nerrbye' [ECS] (cf. inby and ootby).

ner-hand (ner-hawnd) prep., arch. near, close to – adv., arch. near, nearly – 'The sweet was duist hailin off iz till A was nerrhand swutten ti deed' [ECS], adj., arch. near, close by (also written 'nerrhand').

nerr see ner

nerrest-hand (ne-rist-hawnd) adj., arch. nearest to, closest to – 'Tam was nerrest hand 'im' [GW], '... till there was nochts left o the nerrest-hand loch bit paddihs, fishes stankin for braith, an glet' [ECS].

nerr nicker (ner-ni-kur) n., arch. a narrow escape, close shave (noted by E.C. Smith).

nervish (ner-vish, -veesh) adj., arch. nervous, excitable – '... I'll hae anither drink, now did the red devil come sae close? Ugh, I'm gettin' nervish. Maxwell, hae a drink' [JEDM] (cf. nairvous).

Ness (nes) n. Rev. David (1863–1935) born in East Wemyss, he graduated M.A. from St. Andrews University in 1885 and was licensed to preach by Kirkcaldy Presbytery in 1889. He was licentiate at Saughtree Kirk 1889–92 and then assisted at Thornwood, Bothwell. He was ordained as assistant and successor at Whiteinch in 1894 and moved to Savoch in 1928.

Nessie (ne-see) n. aquatic monster supposed to live in Loch Ness, although there has never been convincing evidence. However, its cousin Wullie really does live in Wulliestruther.

the Nest (thu-nest) n. former name for Gled-snest adjacent to Colterscleuch.

neth (neth) prep., poet. beneath, below – '... But oot yont neth the mune's licht At the coortin' thrang ...' [WL].

nether (ne-thur) adj. under, lower, particularly lower-situated of 2 houses or farms (now particularly in place names, e.g. Nethrrow, Nether Bonchester, Netherhall, Nether Kirk and Nether Tofts).

Nether Ancrum (ne-thur-awng-krum) n. former name for what is now the village of Ancrum, with 'Over Ancrum' being across the river. The lands were held by 'David Ancrum' and a set of feuars in 1643 and valued at £944. It was later owned by Ogilvie of Chesters. In 1788 it was split between 8 separate owners, as well as 'Fewars of Nether Ancrum' (it is 'Nether Ankcrum' in 1548/9).

Nether Belses (ne-thur-bel-seez) n. Nether Belses, former name for part of Belses.

Nether Bonchester (ne-thur-bon-ches-tur) n. former farm, just below where the modern Bonchester farm is located, over the bridge at the base of Bonchester Hill. John Turnbull (called 'Case') was tenant there in 1494/5. In 1569 it was among the lands purchased from Jedburgh Abbey by Adam French, and is listed 'with the woddis of the samin'. In 1587 it was again 'with woods', along with Over Bonchester, among the lands of the Lordship of Jedburgh. Mark Turnbull was there in 1590/1 and still tenant in 1606. In 1617 Mark's widow Margaret Rutherford stated that his family 'held the rowme of Nethir Bonchester past memory of man, as kindlie tennentis and possessouris to the Abbotis of Jedburgh'. It was purchased by Walter Scott in 1632 from Alexander Kirkton (Provost of Jedburgh) and John Moscrop (Burgess of Jedburgh). It was then owned by a branch of the Scotts until sold by his great-grandson in the mid-1700s. It was valued at £180 Scots in 1643, 1663 and 1678 (although there seem to be errors in some records). Thomas Scott, brother of Walter, became the 2nd Scott Laird in 1653. Thomas was succeeded by his son Walter Scott in 1680, and he was recorded as Laird there on the 1694 Hearth Tax records. In 1707 it was owned by William Scott and valued at £180. In 1733 Walter Scott was succeeded by his son, also Walter. He was in turn succeeded by his son Thomas who sold the farm to William Oliver of Weens and Dinlabyre in 1779. Wright John Rule was there in 1788. In 1788 it was still valued at £180. The farm was sold along with Weens to Robert Nutter Campbell in 1793, and in 1796 he sold them to Adm. Thomas Pringle. Francis Renwick was tenant there in 1797. By 1811 the farm (or part of it) was owned by Thomas Cleghorn and valued at £31 4s 8d. The farm had a nursery garden that once supplied trees to other properties in the area. The old house was in a hollow below the present farmhouse's garden. It was a simple 2-storey building, taken down in the 1780s and part of it still standing around the 1830s. The doors and parts of the flooring were re-used on a cottage at Bridge-end (marked on Stobie's 1770 map; it is 'Nethir Bonechestir' in 1494/5, 'nethir Bunchester' in 1569, 'Neddir Bonechest' in 1581, 'Neddir Bonchester' in 1590/1, 'Nether Binchester' in 1603, 'Neither bondchester' in 1678, 'netherboonchaster' in 1694, 'Nether Boonchester' in 1761, 'Netherboonchester' in 1788 and 'Nether Boonster' in 1797).

Nether Burnmooth (ne-thur-burn-mooth) n. Nether Burnmouth, lands in the south part of Castleton Parish, distinct from Upper Burnmouth. Adam Armstrong was there farmer in 1797. In 1799 Archibald Armstrong was there, while John Beattie, John Douglas and Alexander Smith were wrights there (it is marked on Stobie's 1770 map).

Netherby (ne-thur-bee) n. village just over the Border into Cumbria, off the A7. Held by the Grahams in rieving days, Netherby Hall was built around an older tower in the mid-18th century – 'So boldly he enter'd the Netherby Hall, Among bride's-men, and kinsmen, and brothers and all' [SWS].

Nethercroft (ne-thur-kroft) n. another name for Northcroft, recorded in the 19th century. There may have been some confusion with Netherhall.

Nether Croft (ne-thur-kroft) n. former name for lands in the upper Teviot valley somewhere near Dryden, Teindside, etc. The name is recorded as 'Neather Croft' in 1686 among the lands of the Duchess of Buccleuch then occupied by Robert Grieve in Commonsides.

Nether Dykeraw (ne-thur-dik-raw) n. former farmstead near Dykeraw in Southdean Parish. James, Michael, John, Adam and Robert Oliver were tenants there in 1541, paying 25s yearly. David Oliver was there in 1694. James Hargrave was shepherd there in 1797 (it is 'Nethir Dykraw' in 1541 and 'nether dykra' in 1694).

Nether Ewes (ne-thur-yooz) n. former name for the lower part of Ewesdale, served by the Nether Kirk.

Netherhaa Burn

Netherfields (ne-thur-feeldz) n. former name for part of the lands of Foulshiels in Liddesdale. The farm was tenanted for the Scotts of Buccleuch by John Scott in Newark, but there was a dispute with the local Elliots. A gang of about 100, including the Elliots of Redheugh, Harts-garth, etc., searched for the farm workers there, but not finding them there, took away '12 dargs of hay woone for winter fodder'.

Nether Foulwud (ne-thur-fowl-wud) n. Nether Foulwood, former name for lands in Liddesdale, situated near where Foulwood Sike meets the Liddel Water, between Mangerton and D'mainholm. Over Foulwood was further up the stream. It is recorded as 'Foulwod inferior' on the rental roll of c.1376 and valued at 10 shillings. In a rental roll of 1541 'Nethir Foulwod' was leased to Simon Armstrong (probably of Tinnisburn) and still valued at 10 shillings. It became the modern farm of Gillside.

Nether Galalaw (ne-thue-ga-lu-law) n. former name for lands near Galalaw. It is unclear if this was part of the main farm, or a name for an adjacent farm. In 1534 Gavin Elliot sold the 40-shilling lands there to William Scott, the sealing of the letter of reversion being done at Hassendean Kirk and recorded in the Selkirk Protocol Books (it is 'Neder Gallelaw' in 1534).

Netherhaa (ne-thur-haw, -hal) n. Netherhall, former farmstead at the western end of Wilton Park, below 'Overhaa' (or 'Everhaa'), and on the eastern side of where the Wilton Burn meets the Teviot. This was once the back entrance to Langlands estate, and presumably owned by the Laird of Langlands. However, there is now no sign of a house there and it seems likely it was demolished when the Town took over Wilton Park. Thomas Irvine was there in 1726–29, John Blaikie in 1737 and John Scott in at least 1744–47. It is possible this is the 'Nethercroft, acquired from Langlands' recorded on the Land Tax Rolls of 1811, with Mrs. Shortreed as owner. A small mill lade is shown off the Wilton Burn, running past the farm, on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map. William Henderson was 'Overseer of Parks' there in 1851 (it is unclear whether the name is as old as 'Overhaa' or whether it was named later; it is marked on Stobie's 1770 map and still on the Ordnance Survey map of 1904).

Netherhaa Burn (ne-thur-haw-burn) n. another name for the Wilton Burn at the south end of the Park.

Nether Harden (ne-thur-hawr-din) n. former name for lands near Harden, and once part of the barony of Chamberlain Newton, which were resigned by Simon Scott of Fenwick to William Scott of Harden in 1540. The land seems to have been finally conveyed in 1556.

Nether Harden (ne-thur-hawr-din) n. former farm in Liddesdale, part of Harden. It is shown on the 1718 survey of Buccleuch properties, covering 420 acres, bounded by Potterlampoort, lands owned by the Laird of Whithaugh and the farms of Cocklaik and Dykeraw. The farmhouse was shown on the south side of the Harden Burn, where there is nothing on modern maps.

Nether Harwod (ne-thur-har-wud) n. former name for lands at Harwood on Teviot. Probably these same lands were recorded in an English financial document of 1335/6, when forfeited to the King by William of Keith. It is listed among the lands held 'in tenancy' by the Baron of Hawick in 1511, 1572, 1594 and 1615, along with 'Over Harwood' (it is 'Netherhardwode' in 1335/6, 'Nether Harewod' in 1511, 'Nethir Harwod' in 1572, 'Nethair Harwoid' in 1594 and 'Nathir Harwood' in 1615).

Nether Hawthornside (ne-thur-haw-thörn-sīd) n. former farm near Hawthornside, called 'Denesyde' in earlier times. It is described as being on the left-hand side going up Hawthornside Brae (which would confusingly place it on the other side of Hawthornside than the Dean Burn). It once contained some of the best land now incorporated into Hawthornside, and the Lairds were Turnbulls for several generations.

Nether Kirk (ne-thur-kirk) n. former common name for the church in the Ewes valley next to the A7 between Arkleton and Sorbie, in an area once called 'Kirktoon'. It is distinguished from the 'Ower Kirk o Ewes', which is a few miles further up the valley near Unthank, and served the lower part of the valley, referred to as 'Nether Ewes'. The original church was dedicated to St. Cuthbert and attached to Melrose Abbey. There are many records relating to incumbents of the church from the end of the 13th century. 'Robert fiz Rauf persone del Eglise de Seint Cuthbert de Ewytesdale' signed the Ragman Rolls in 1296. The right of patronage passed from Robert Graham to George Douglas, Earl of Angus, in 1456. Roger Kirkpatrick was Rector there in 1556. The patronage of the Kirk was long held by the Maxwells. The position of the church, as well as the minister's house and glebe, were shown on the 1718 survey of properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch. It was a relatively rudimentary structure, with a thatched roof; an entry in the session records describes how a young couple had to pay penance in the Kirk and also had to gather heather for the roof. A new church was built on the site of the old in 1866/7. The graveyard contains many old tombstones of the local families of Aitchison, Armstrong, Beattie, Borthwick, Jackson, Little, Rutherford and Scott. The family gravestone of the Malcolms of Burnfoot records the names of 3 of the 4 Knights of Eskdale, and the western side contains the burial place of the Scott-Elliots.

Nether Larriston (ne-thur-law-ree-stin) n. former tower-house at Larriston, situated near the modern farmhouse. It is unclear exactly where it was located. It is marked as 'Nether Laristone' on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Labourer Robert Oliver was living there in 1797 (it is 'Nather Lareistounis' in about 1624).

Nether Mains of Hassendean see Hassendean Mains

Nether Newhaa (ne-thur-new-haw) n. Nether Newhall, an older name for Burnfoot, once part of the Barony of Chamberlain Newton. The name was used in the late 15th century for the Lairdship held by a branch of the Scotts, later called Scott of Burnfoot. In 1484 the lands were granted to James Scott of Kirkurd by David Lindsay of the Byres, Baron of Chamberlain Newton and Newhall; it was held of the superior for the token fee of a silver penny at the Feast of Pentecost. In 1494 James Scott granted 'le Nethir Manes de Newhall' to his son David, along with Galalaw; this was explicitly the west part, above the common road, valued at 3 merks. 'Over et Nather Newhalls' are still referred to when the lands were inherited in 1585 and similarly in 1667. The lands were sold by Adam of Burnfoot and Gavin Plummer to the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1712, when they are described as 'Nether Newhall, otherwise called Burnfoot, with the milne, milne lands, multures, sucken, knaveship and sequels thereof within the paroch of Hassendean, Barony of Chamberlain Newton and Sheriffdom of Roxburgh'. Over Newhall was probably the same as Burnhead (it is 'Nethir Newhall' in 1494, 'Nethir Newhall' in 1532, 'Nether Newhallis' in 1609 and 'Nether Newhales' in 1667).

Netherraw (ne-thu-raw) n. farm and hamlet between Minto and Lilliesleaf. William Thomson was farmer there in 1797 when it is 'Netherrow'. In 1799 and 1801 the same man was recorded as tenant at 'Repperlaw Netherrow'. His son James, as well as Andrew Clerk, were there in 1799. James Henderson was there in the 1860s. William Cranston was farmer there in the early 20th century.

Netherraw (ne-thu-row) n. farm on the Hermitage Water, by the B6399, near the junction with the road from Steele Road. The house must have been there from at least the 16th century, and was distinguished from ‘Over’ or ‘Upper Raw’. This could be ‘the Raws’ where George Simpson is recorded as a subordinate of Robert Elliot of Redheugh in the late 16th century. It is probably the place transcribed as ‘Neirland’ in 1632, when possessed by Francis Beattie. William Scott was tenant in 1694 and Adam Armstrong was also recorded there. George ‘Hotson’ was tenant in the early 1700s. It was surveyed for the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1718, when it extended to 141 acres, bounded by Toftholm, the Hermitage Water, lands of the Laird of Hoscote and Over Raw. The farmhouse at that time was roughly in the same location as the modern building and the farm is described as ‘indifferent good land much damnified with the water’. David Jackson was farmer there in 1797 and John Hardie and Adam Telfer were shoemakers there in 1799 and Alexander Davidson in 1801. Walter Scott in 1835, Matthew Elliot in 1851 and Walter Scott in 1861. It was a home of the Elliots until the last farmer, Matthew Elliot died in 1877, when the old buildings were demolished. Some of the land was planted, becoming the Nether Raw Plantation, and the rest was attached to Harts-garth farm. The current house is modern (‘Rha’ is marked near there on Gordon’s c. 1650 map and ‘Raa’ on Visscher’s 1689 map, while Blaeu’s 1654 map shows both ‘N. Ra’ and ‘O. raa’ and Stobie’s 1770 map has ‘Upperra’ and ‘Netherraw’; it is ‘Netherraw’ in 1663 and ‘Netherrow’ in 1797).

Netherraw Cottages (ne-thu-row-ko’-ee-jeez) n. houses by the side of the road between Netherraw and Longhaugh. There was a blacksmith’s marked here on the 1862 Ordnance Survey map.

Nether Riccarton see Riccarton

Nether Soothfield (ne-thur-sooth-feeld) n. previously the lower farm at Southfield, now the site of the main farm. It lay just outside the old boundaries of the Common. The land was long owned by the Duke of Buccleuch and was contained within the Lordship of Whitchesters. It was surveyed in 1718 along with other properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, consisting of 145 acres, bounded by Hawick Common, Hawickshiel,

Nether Whisgills

Stobicote and Over Southfield. It was mentioned in a Hawick Parish evaluation in 1627, and then said to be ‘of that same nature’ as ‘Upper Southfield’. Robert Scott was recorded there in 1628 and John Elliot of Brugh was recorded as tenant in at least the period 1690–1704. Gilbert Elliot was there in at least 1700–04. Walter and James Scott were tenants in at least 1709–18. Walter and 2 James Scotts were there in 1713. John Elliot was cooper there in 1726. George Telfer was herd there in 1740 (it was ‘Neathersouthfeild’ in 1628, ‘Nether Southfeild’ in 1690 and ‘nether southfeild’ in 1694).

Nether Steele (ne-thur-steel) n. former name for part of the farm of the Steele.

Nether Tofts (ne-thur-tofts) n. farm near Kirkton, north-east of Upper Tofts. It was once part of the Cavers estate. Its lands are on the lower slopes of Ruberslaw. Adam Turnbull was there in 1682 and John Douglas in 1694, along with Andrew Blyth. The lands were inherited by William, son of Thomas Turnbull of Tofts in 1695. James Turnbull, Robert Scott and John Douglas were there in the early 1700s. Francis Scott of Gorrenberry was also there in the early 1700s. John Leyden (father of the poet and linguist) was there in the late 1770s and 80s. William Scott was there in 1787. Walter Blyth was farmer there in at least 1794–97, John Turnbull was there in 1797, Andrew Scott and William Welsh were servants there in 1799 and John Gray was a servant there in 1801. Robert Bulman was farmer in the 1860s. It was referred to as ‘Low Tofts’ in 1868 when G. Bulman was farmer there. Andrew Inglis, James Currie, Robert Glendinning and Robert Wood were there in the early 1900s. Robert Glendinning collected several artefacts that were ploughed up there, including flake scrapers and flakes, 3 spin-cles whorls, 4 stone axe-heads and a bronze axe-head, some of which are in the Royal Museum of Scotland (it is ‘Nethertafts’ in 1694).

Nether Wheel (ne-thur-wheel) n. former lands near the Wheel Kirk in upper Liddesdale. It is listed as ‘Nether Wheill’, along with ‘Kirk Wheiland’ and other lands in Liddesdale owned by the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1663 (see the Wheel Kirk).

Nether Whisgills (ne-thur-whis-gilz) n. former name for part of the lands of Whisgills. William Oliver was there in 1694. The farm was surveyed for the Duchess of Buccleuch in 1718, when it consisted of 528 acres. It was bounded by the Muir Burn, Upper Millstead, Reidmoss, Over Whisgills, Tinnis, Bankhead, Shipshielden and Gillfoot.

Nether Whitlaw (ne-thur-wei'law) n. farm to the south of Lindean village, a couple of miles north-west of Selkirk, adjacent to Over Whitlaw. It should not be confused with the farm of Whitlaw just south of Hawick. It was owned by the Kers of Faldonside in the late 16th and early 17th centuries. There were Porteouses there in the 19th century.

Nether Woollee (ne-thur-woo-lee) n. former name for part of the lands of 'Woollee' (or Wolfelee) in use from the 15th to 18th centuries (it is 'Nether Wollie' in 1479 and 1515, 'Nether Woulee' in 1522, 'Nether Woulie' in 1525 and 'Natherwolley' in 1627).

Netherwud (ne-thur-wud) n. Netherwood, large house on Sunnyhill, on the private drive that is a continuation of Roadhead. It was built in the 19th century for the Laings, being home to Thomas and his family. J.P. Alison was responsible for alterations in the early years of the 20th century. It may have been used as a boys' home at the end of WWII and is now split into flats.

the Nether Wulton Youth (thu-ne-thur-wul'-in-yooth) n. nickname for John Kyle who was a great runner in his younger days.

nettle-yirnest (ne'-ul-yir-nist) adj., arch. dead earnest – '...thae thochts ...gar iz bang up bleithe again an buckle tui in nettle-yirrnist!' [ECS] (from 'in ettle earnest'; cf. ettle-earnest).

neuk see nuik

the Neuk (thu-nook) n. small row of cottages on Eastgate in Denholm.

the Neuk (thu-nook) n. former farm on the Bonjedward estate. Andrew Caverhill was tenant there in 1800.

nevel (ne-vul) n., arch. a blow with the fist, v., arch. to punch, beat with the fist.

nevellit (ne-vu-lee', -li') pp., poet. punched, beat, bufetted – 'An' the husbanmen tuik his servents an' nevellet ane, an' killet anither, an' stanet anither' [HSR], 'Than did they spit in his face, an' nevellet him' [HSR].

Neville (ne-vul) n. Sir John (c.1341–88) 3rd Lord of Raby, son of Ralph. He was probably joint Warden of the English West and East Marches 1380–88, along with the Percys. He married Maud Percy and was succeeded by Henry, who became the 1st Earl of Westmorland. He died before his father, although his son Ralph became 2nd Earl of Westmorland. Sir John (1387–1420) son of Ralph, 1st Earl of Westmorland, and half-brother of Richard, 1st Earl of Salisbury. He was Warden of the English West Marches for a few years until his death. Ralph (c.1291–1367) 2nd Baron Neville de Raby, son of Ralph. He was Joint Warden General of the English Marches (along with Henry, 2nd Baron Percy) from 1334. He was probably the 'Sir Randolph' who was in possession of the Castle and manor of Hermitage shortly after the Battle of Durham in 1346, resigning them to Edward III about 1352. In 1354 he, along with Henry Percy, was appointed as a commissioner to deal with Elizabeth, widow of Sir William Douglas, former Keeper of Hermitage. He married Alice, daughter of Sir Hugh de Audley and was succeeded by his son Sir John. He also had a son who was Archbishop of York and daughters who married into the Clifford, Dacre, Percy and Scrope families. His youngest daughter Margaret married Henry Percy and was mother of 'Hotspur'. Ralph (c.1364–1425) 1st Earl of Westmorland, son of John and Maud Percy. He was probably Warden of the English West Marches along with Thomas de Clifford from about 1388. He married his cousin Margaret, daughter of Sir Hugh Stafford (with whom he had 9 children) and then Joan Beaufort, daughter of the 1st Duke of Lancaster (with whom he had another 14 children. He is the inspiration for the character 'Westmorland' in Shakespeare's 'Henry V', and it has even been claimed that his great-great-grandson wrote Shakespeare's plays. Richard (1400–60) 5th Earl of Salisbury, eldest son of Ralph, Earl of Westmorland. About 1420 he became Warden of the English West March (succeeding his eldest half-brother John). He remained Warden until 1424, when he was involved in negotiations for the release of James I. About 1433 he was again Warden of the West Marches, also took over the East Marches and Captaincy of Berwick in 1434, but resigned in the next year. His family had regular conflicts with the Percy's and supported Richard, Duke of York (his brother-in-law). He married Alice Montacute, heiress of the Earl of Salisbury. He was succeeded by his son Richard, 'the Kingmaker'. He was captured after the Battle of Wakefield and beheaded. Richard 'the Kingmaker' (1428–71) Earl of Warwick and Salisbury, eldest son of Richard, the 5th Earl. He was a great Yorkist supporter in the Wars of the Roses. He was Warden of the English East Marches from about 1453, perhaps along with his father initially (since he must only have been 15!). In 1464 his forces burned Jedburgh. He helped Edward IV

to gain the English Crown, but later switched his allegiance to put Henry VI back on the throne. He was killed by Edward IV's forces at the Battle of Barnet.

Neville's Cross (ne-vulz-kros) n. battle of 1346, in which the Scottish army under King David were routed at Durham by a smaller English army under York, Percy and Neville. On their way south the Scottish army recaptured Liddel Castle. Durham was attacked as a diversionary tactic to help the French. A relic of St. Cuthbert's is supposed to have helped the English victory and King David II was captured while fleeing. The Scots division under Sir William Douglas suffered particularly disastrously. Sir Michael Scott of Rankilburn and Maurice Murray (then Baron of Hawick) were killed there, while Robert Chisholme of Chisholme and Sir William Douglas (Knight of Liddesdale), as well as the King and about 50 other Barons, were taken prisoner. Afterwards the English army took possession of the Border territory and Hermitage and Roxburgh Castles surrendered, with several locals swearing (temporary) fealty to the English King. The name of the battle derives from the stone cross erected by Lord Neville in commemoration (destroyed in 1589). It is also known as the Battle of Durham.

nevy (ne-vee) n., arch. a nephew – 'The uncle turned red, and the nevy turned blue, Then they looked at each other, these good men and true' [JCG].

Nevysintonstead (ne-vee-sin'-in-steed) n. former name for lands in Liddesdale, recorded in 1541 as 'Nevtsintounsteid'. It is unclear where these lands were or what the name meant (although the 'nevy' part may refer to a nephew).

new (new) adv. newly, recently, just – 'The bairns new oot o the skuil for leave . . . [ECS] (more common than in standard English; see also i the new).

Newall (new-al) n. Broughton (b.1818/9) born in Hawick, he was a frame-worker. In 1851 he lived around the Crown Close and in 1861 on Factory Close. He married Mary Whillans (sister of 'Kinly Stick') and their children included Mary, Agnes, Margaret, Robert, Richard, Jane and James. He is probably the 'Auld Broughton' mentioned in the poem 'Hawick Immortals'. Richard (1850–1918) son of Broughton and Mary Whillans. The family lived at Orrock Place when he was young. He was 'boatswain Newall, who was up aloft' in William Easton's song 'The Anvil Crew'. Ironically he drowned in the Teviot, where he must have cavorted as a youth. Robert (b.1788/9) from St. Michael's in Dumfriesshire, he was a grocer and spirit dealer on the Howegate, listed in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was at about 12 Howegate in 1841. His public house is mentioned as existing during the cholera outbreak of 1832. By 1851 he was a frame-worker living at the Village. His wife was Agnes and their children included: Robert; Thomas, who married Margaret Kersall; and Margaret, who married William Gemmell. Thomas (b.1813/4) from Dumfries, son of Robert. He was a frameworker in Hawick. In 1861 he was living at 23 Loan. In 1852 he married Margaret Kersel (also written 'Newell').

New Appletreehaa (new-aw-, -ā-pul-tree-haw, -haw) n. New Appletreehall, name used for an area near to Appletreehall in the late 18th century. It is recorded in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when the residents there who owned work horses were John Reid, James Scott and James Crawford.

Newark Castle (new-urk-kaw-sul) n. ruin west of Selkirk, on a mound above the Yarrow, now within the estate of Bowhill. It was formerly called 'Cathmurlie' and had adjacent lands called 'Auld Wark'. The existing tower was built in 1423 by Archibald, Earl of Douglas and was used as a residence of the Earls until about 1446. It passed to the crown as the royal hunting seat of Ettrick Forest in 1455. John Murray was custodian in the late 15th century and Margaret Tudor had sasine of the castle and lands in 1503. Scott of Buccleuch was appointed Captain and Keeper in 1542. Several nearby farms were given by the Crown to the keeper of the castle. It was taken in a siege by Lord Grey (with the support of the Kers) in 1547, with 4 of Sir Walter Scott's servants and a woman being slain. Sir Walter Scott was appointed Captain and Keeper of the Castle in 1565/6. Over 100 of the Philiphaugh prisoners were slaughtered in its courtyard in 1645, with the nearby place of burial called 'Slain Men's Lea'. Cromwell's troops occupied it in 1650 after the Battle of Dunbar. It was one of the places where dragoons were posted in about 1676, so that they could scour the local countryside for people attending illegal field conventicles. For a while it was the home of Anne, Countess of Buccleuch, and is in Scott's 'Lay of the Last Minstrel'. But it was unroofed during the minority of Henry, 3rd Duke of Buccleuch, and preserved from decay during the time of Walter, the 5th Duke – 'He pass'd where Newark's stately tower Looks out from Yarrow's birchen bower' [SWS], '... And sudden he saw at his shoulder stand The walls of Newark, grey towered and grand' [WHO] (it is 'Neuwerk' in 1446/7 and 'the Castell of Newwerk' in 1547/8; it is marked 'Cast. of Newoork' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Newbattle (new-baw'-ul) n. Roger (13th C.) recorded in a charter of Walter of Riddell as owner of neighbouring lands in Lilliesleaf.

Newbattle Viaduct (new-baw'-ul-vI-a-dukt) n. longest viaduct on the Waverley Line, over the River South Esk, near the town of Newbattle, having 22 arches and being almost one third of a mile long (also known as 'Lothianbridge').

Newbie (new-bee) n. James (15th/16th C.) local clerk and priest. He held the benefice of Cavers Parish from about 1500. He was vicar there in 1501/2 when he was notary for a document relating to the lands of Feu-Rule. He is probably the same priest of Glasgow Diocese who was notary for the 1512 sasine transferring Harden from Walter Scott to his brother William. He also notarised the 1514 sasine of the Barony of Hawick, where he is recorded as 'Jacobus Newbe, presbiter Glasguensis diocesis'. In 1523 he was notary for a document relating to the lands of the Trows. Either the same or a different 'Jacobus Newby' was witness to a sasine for Douglas of Cavers in 1550. He may also be the 'James Nwby, messinger', who was implicated in the murder of Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1552 along with James Douglas of Cavers and several Kers; according to the indictment when the group were crossing the Rule he said to the people there 'Hard ze ony tythennis of the Lard of Bukclucht; he is put in vard, and will never cumme furth'.

James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Isobel Scott. Their son Samuel was baptised in 1635. James (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish who married Agnes Turnbull. Their children included Thomas (b.1654) and James (b.1655). James (17th/18th C.) Sheriff-Officer in Hawick. He gave evidence in 1681 at the trial of Covenanters, relating to the attack on Drumlanrig's Tower. In 1682 he gave evidence at the trial of Alexander Home, portioner of Home, one of the Covenanter leaders who besieged Drumlanrig's Tower. He was also listed as 'officer to the sheriff' among contributors to the new Kirk bell in 1693/4. He was probably the James recorded in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694 among those 'Payed but not listed in Hauick Toun'; he was probably from the west side. Presumably the same James was described as 'portioner of Hawick' in an Edinburgh marriage record of 1719, when his daughter Helen married Alexander Thomson, merchant in Edinburgh. He may be the James who was born in Hawick in 1655, with parents James and Agnes Turnbull. He is probably the James who married Margaret Gillespie, whose children included Robert (b.1671), with the witnesses being Mr. John Purdom and James Thorbrand. He could be the James who witnessed a baptism for Thomas Lunn in Hawick Parish in 1675, another for James Baptie in 1678 and one more for John Scott in Barn Knowe in 1680. Samuel (17th C.) ordered by the Council in 1658 to pay 4 merks for 'both-meall' (i.e. booth rent) until Whitsunday. He was on the list of Hawick men named in the 1673 trial following the so-called riot at St. Jude's Fair. Probably the same Samuel was fined in 1676 for assaulting masons Andrew Turnbull and Andrew Wilson and 'for casting downe the mason work at his own hand without ane complaint first made to the bailies thereof'; presumably he did not approve of the building work that they were doing for him! He is probably the Samuel born in 1635 to James and Isobel Scott. He could also be the Samuel who married Bessie Wilson and had a son Samuel in 1676. Thomas (d.1602) Reader at Hassendean Kirk 1576–80. He was presented to the vicarage of the Parish on the demitting of Thomas Weston in October 1576 and is recorded demitting this in 1595. Hence it appears he held part of the benefice of the Parish for at least 15 years after he was Reader there. Another record states that John Maddar (or Mather) was presented to Hassendean on his death in 1602, so he may have held some of the benefice even longer. In 1580 he witnessed a transaction for Robert Scott of Alton, done at the Monk's Tower. In 1582, along with Sir Thomas Ker (of Roxburgh Parish), Archibald Simson (of Lilliesleaf), John Scott (of Southdean), James Scott (of Ashkirk) and John McClellan (of Kirkandrews) were deprived for 'abusing the sacrements'. Then they were excommunicated in 1588 for continuing with the offence (which is unspecified, but may suggest that the men had been Catholic priests before the Reformation) and in 1590 ordered never to abuse the sacrements under pain of death. They were made to stand for 2 hours at the Market Cross of Edinburgh with a paper on their foreheads proclaiming their crime. Samuel (17th C.) merchant in Hawick. In 1669 he was found guilty of assaulting merchant William Elliot, cutting him 'with ane sword in ye head' and for 'strycking and wounding of him in his face with ane brydle'.

Newbiggin

He may be the Samuel who was born in Hawick in 1635, son of James and Isobell Scott. He is probably the Samuel who was married to Bessie Wilson, with son Samuel born in 1676. Thomas (17th C.) recorded in 1684 when he witnessed the financial document relating to the building of the 'Steeple Loft' in St. Mary's. He is described there as 'servant', although it is unclear what this means (also formerly written 'Neubie', 'Newby', 'Newbe' and 'Nwby').

Newbiggin (new-bi-gin) n. Newbigging, former farmstead that lay between Whitchesters and Southfield, bordering on the Common. It was later the shepherd's cottage for Whitchesters. The location can still be clearly made out, directly to the south of Whitchesters farm and east of the hill-fort. It was mentioned among the farms burned by the English in 1533. It was long a tenanted farm belonging to the Duke of Buccleuch, being contained within the Lordship of Whitchesters. James Scott was tenant there in 1627. The farm was surveyed in 1718 along with other Buccleuch properties, and at that time consisted of 111 acres, bounded by Whitchesters, Hawick Common, Over Southfield and Raesknowe. In at least the period 1690–98 the farm was leased to Robert Scott, James Davidson and Margaret Davidson. The householders listed in 1694 were Robert Scott, James Davidson and John Hogg (weaver), with Margaret Davidson and James Murray also listed there among 'the poor'. James Davidson was tenant in at least 1702–18. Weaver William Hood was living there in 1704. Walter Scott was joint tenant there in at least 1708–36. John Wilson was tailor there in 1708. Robert Scott was tenant in about 1710 and Andrew Davidson was also there. In 1711 John Wilson was tailor there and Robert Davidson was also living there. James Davidson was there in 1720. Walter Scott was there in about the 1750s and 1760s. Walter Scott and John Rutherford farmed here in 1797, William Heatley was there in at least 1799–1801 and William Scott was labourer there in 1841. It is said that residents of the farm were formerly weavers. Its buildings were already shown as ruined on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map. There is a spring near the old farmstead and the remains of a fort on the hill to the west. The fort must once have been quite extensive, measuring perhaps 90 m by 135 m, but has been partly obliterated due to ploughing, except on the steeper south and south-east sides. Its defences consist of 3 banks of piled rubble and there may be signs of 2 scooped huts on the knoll, which has been heavily quarried. There are also Newbiggings in Oxnam Parish and near Lauder, and several others elsewhere in Scotland (it must have been a 'new biggin' at some point; it is 'Newbiggyns' in 1533 and 'Neubigging', 'neubiging' in 1694 and 'Newbeggeng' in 1718; it appears as 'Newbrug' on Blaeu's 1654 map and 'New Beggen' on the 1718 Buccleuch survey).

Newbiggin (new-bi-gin) n. Newbigging, a farm that lay between Horsleyhill and Knowtownhead, once part of the Middle Mains of Hassendean. In the 1550s there was a dispute over these lands between the children of Gavin Elliot of Horsleyhill by his first wife and those by his second wife. It was listed in 1582 among lands for which Robert Elliot of Horsleyhill demanded the charters of his father from the widow of Sir Walter Ker of Cessford. It may be the Newbigging listed as part of the Stobs estate purchased by Gilbert Elliott from his half sisters in about 1608. Like much of the area, it became part of Minto Parish when Hassendean was suppressed in 1690. The disused quarry of that name is still marked on Ordnance Survey maps (the farm is marked on Stobie's 1770 map and may have been incorrectly transcribed 'Howbigging' in 1690).

Newbiggin (new-bi-gin) n. house at No. 9 Lockhart Place, which is a grade C listed building.

Newbiggin (new-bi-gin) n. (Newbigging) Heleen (17th C.) resident of Midlem. In about 1684 she was on a list of Covenanter fugitives. Sir William (1782–1852) surgeon in Edinburgh, based at 18 St. Andrew's Square. He gave evidence at the trial of Burke and Hare and became President of the Royal College of Surgeons. In 1825 he subscribed to 2 copies of Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick', and so it is possible he had some connection with the town. William 'Willie', took over as landlord of the Mosspace Inn in 1962.

Newbiggin Burn (new-bi-gin-burn) n. stream rising near the old Newbigging farm and flowing roughly south-west to join the Allan Water (marked 'Newbigging Hope' and 'North Burn' on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

the New Brig (thu-new-brig) n. original name for the North Bridge, built in 1832. It was usually referred to as the 'Station Brig' after the railway was completed in 1849.

Newburgh (new-bu-ru) n. farm in the upper Ettrick valley, once home of the Scotts of Newburgh. 'Newburghmill' was listed among the farms of the Duke of Buccleuch being let by public roup in Hawick in 1755 – 'Gae warn the lads of Thirlstone, Gemsleugh, and Newburgh fair, With Tushielaw, and Midgehope, in armour to appear' [WSB].

new-calfit (new-kaw-fee') adj., arch. having just calved – '...nyne new calfit ky, with thair followaris, price of the pece ourheid, five pundis' [SB1574].

Newcastle (new-kaw-sul) n. city in the north-east of England, approximately 62 miles south-east of Hawick, reached via the Carter Bar and A68. The city was the site of the interchange between Douglas and Percy that led to the Battle of Otterburn in 1388. It was also captured in 1640 by Montrose's Covenanter army, which included the Teviotdale Regiment under the Earl of Lothian. It was occupied for about a year, during which time there is a record in the Hawick Town Book of James Scott, former Bailie gathering contributions for the soldiers there. It was occupied again 1644–47, when Buccleuch was involved in the siege. Several Newcastle merchants (probably coal merchants) were made Honorary Burgesses of Hawick in the 18th century. The city was once connected to Hawick by rail via the Riccarton-Hexham line. The old road towards Newcastle was, until the 1830s, up the Cross Wynd and over the hills, via Ormiston, Birneyknowe and Blackcleugh; part of this can still be traced through the open country. Until the early 1800s the road through Rulewater went from Hawthornside to Forkins, via Highend, and then up Blacklee Brae to join the modern road towards Chesters – 'To Newcastell when that they came, The Douglas cry'd on hyght: 'Harry Percy, an thou bidest within, Come to the field, and fight'' [T] (note the accent on the first syllable).

Newcastleton (new-kaw-sul'-in) n. village 20 miles south-west of Hawick in the southern corner of Roxburghshire. It was effectively a replacement for the older settlement of Castleton, which lies further up the Liddel. The site was formerly the farms of Copshaw and the flat land was said to have been used for 'Horse coursing', with crowds from both sides of the Border coming to watch the races. This planned village was founded in 1793 by the 3rd Duke of Buccleuch, and laid out according to the design of Mr. Keir of Whitehaugh. The lay-out is a series of criss-crossed streets around 3 main squares. Its main purpose was as a handloom weaving centre, close to the Border and on the Liddel Water. The first settler was said to be from the Hermitage area and lived in a turf hut while the village was being built. Many early residents were weavers, other tradesmen and retired shepherds. Clog-making was also prominent, and the wearing of clogs in the village was common for much longer than elsewhere. Leases of holdings were originally for 99 years, with each householder responsible for erecting their own house. Each feuar also had 2 acres of land attached (later extended to 4 acres per 2-storey house and 2 acres for cottages), as well as a garden of $\frac{1}{8}$ acre, and the right to graze a cow on the hill. The management was by 3 elected bailies, one retiring each year. The 99 year leases led to much dispute in 1892 and subsequent improvements to the village. Most householders chose to convert their holdings into feus for purchase and feu-duty. The church (later St. John's) was built in 1782 (before the new village), with additions in 1891, but only became the parish church in the 1950s. There was a separate Free Kirk, built in 1853 on Langholm Street, a Secession (later United Presbyterian) Kirk built 1801–04 at the Townfoot (now the Heritage Centre) and an Evangelical Union Kirk built in 1850 on South Hermitage Street (and now a private dwelling). There was a subscription library already by 1839. There has always been a school here, but secondary school pupils have been bussed to Hawick since 1962 (and before that some of them took the train). A memorial statue of a K.O.S.B. soldier was erected after WWI. The village has the Liddesdale Heritage Centre, a local history museum. There was a weekly market starting in about 1837 and 2 annual fairs for the selling of sheep. The village formerly hosted 3 hiring days, when servants were hired in the area, and much activity took place, these being in April, May and November. The Holm Show is the annual fair in August, popularised in the song 'Copshawholm Fair', and has been running since 1893, while the Newcastleton Traditional Music Festival in July has been running since 1970. The Horse Tax Rolls of 1797 list the owners of horses in the village as James Oliver, James Aitchison, John Beattie, Robert Thomson, James Elliot, Thomas Mathieson, Thomas Dodgson, William Kyle, William Little, John Smith, Andrew Rutherford, Mary Murray, George Dalglish, Robert Murray, William Beattie, George Scott, John Leyden, Charles Grieve, William Winlaw, James Fell and Thomas Hall. The official name of the village was originally just 'Castleton', but the modern name appeared by the early 1800s. The village is also known as 'Copshaw', 'Copshawholm' or 'the Holm'. William Hall wrote

Newcastleton Burgher Kirk

‘Newcastleton: A Border Village’ (1905). Population (1991) 813 – ‘Newcastleton was the last o’ the battles And the curtain began tae descend ...’ [AY] (it is ‘New Castleton’ in 1797, with the first recorded appearance as one word being in the Kelso Mail of 1808).

Newcastleton Burgher Kirk (new-kaw-sul'-in-bur-gur-kirk) n. church established in Castleton Parish in the 1750s, originally called the Liddesdale Burgher Kirk or Copshawholm Kirk. Its origin lay in the secession movement of the time, which locally came to a head with the unpopular appointment of Simon Haliburton as Castleton Parish Minister. Their first meeting was under the ‘venerable oak’ near Snaberlee. The Edinburgh Anti-Burgher Presbytery was petitioned in 1751 and provided an occasional preacher, then the Edinburgh Burgher Presbytery was approached in 1753. Early preachers included John Brown (later at Haddington) and Archibald Hall (later Torphichen). A building was constructed on the banks of the Liddel at Geilbraehead about then. It was made of rubble with a thatched roof and earth floor. James Wylie was called, but declined, William Ronaldson also ended up elsewhere, and the apparently rebellious James Mitchell was also found wanting. So the first minister was James Fletcher, and not until 1762. Although a remarkable man, he was not a successful minister and the congregation was in decline by the 1790s. However, the name was changed to the Associate Kirk of Newcastleton in 1804, with a new building erected in the village there 1801–4. This was the first church built in the new village and usually referred to as the ‘Toonfit Kirk’, since the site was a former garden at the foot of the village. A Manse was also built at this time. A harmonium was donated to the church in the mid-1800s by Mrs. Tod, daughter of Rev. John Law. After the Secession churches merged it became known as Newcastleton United Presbyterian Kirk. However, further dissent led to the formation of the Free Church in Newcastleton, as well as the Congregational Church. It was renovated along with the Manse in 1875. With the merge of the secession churches with the Church of Scotland in 1929 the church became locally known as ‘the South Church’ (to distinguish it from ‘the Park Church’ and ‘Castleton Church’). From 1930 the charge was combined with that of the Park Church. A roll of the ministry is: James Fletcher 1762–1801; William Smart, ‘probationer’ 1802; Walter Dunlop

Newcastleton Free Kirk

Newcastleton Congregational Kirk

(new-kaw-sul'-in-kong-gree-gā-shu-naul-kirk) n. church established in Castleton Parish in 1849 by people seceding from the United Presbyterian congregation. In 1850 they erected a building on South Hermitage Street in Newcastleton. It is sometimes referred to as ‘Newcastleton South’ or the ‘Sooth Kirk’. By 1870 they had joined the Evangelical Union and in 1929 merged with the South Church (formerly the U.P. congregation), thereafter using the South Church building and manse. The National Archives have records for the period 1854–1934. A partial roll of the ministry is: William Davidson Black 1850–51; Supply ministers 1851–66; Robert Steel 1866–75; A. Turnbull 1876–77; Supplies again 1877–82; Peter Andrew 1882–83; George Davies 1883–86; William Paterson 1888–90; John Whitson 1890–91; R. Hunter Craig 1891–95; Supplies 1895–99; James W. Gillies 1899–1905; George A.E. Walker 1908–12; Charles Derry 1916–23; James Anderson 1923–26; Alexander R. Sparke 1939–42; John H. Carlin from 1942; William Kitching 1953–58; Idris J. Vaughan 1965–71; ...

Newcastleton Free Kirk (new-kaw-sul'-in-free-kirk) n. Free Church in Newcastleton, founded in 1850. Unlike other Free Churches, this was started following a dispute in the United Presbyterian Church, not the Church of Scotland. It started to meet in the ballroom of the Crown Inn. The first building was constructed in 1853 on Langholm Street (from plans made by Rev. J.B. Johnstone of Wolfelee). It burned down in 1891, but was rebuilt 2 years later. It was also sometimes called Newcastleton North United Free Church. The Free Church Manse was at 13 Douglas Square, built in 1857. It was taken over by the Church of Scotland in 1909. After the merge of the United Presbyterian Church in 1929 it became locally known as ‘the Park Church’, to distinguish it from ‘the South Church’ and ‘Castleton Church’. After Rev. Lowe retired as minister in 1934, the charge was merged with that of the South Church. In 1949 the building was turned into a village hall, with an extension built in 1956; it was named after Rev. Alexander Lowe, the last full-time minister of the church. The National Archives have records for the period 1850–1946. A roll of the ministry is: David Mackay 1856–60; Neil Shaw Ure, M.A. 1861–75; John Smith 1876–98; Alexander Lowe 1898–1834.

Newcastleton Golf Course (new-kaw-sul'-in-gōlf-kōrs) n. golf course outside Newcastleton, on Holm Hill. It is known for its views over the Liddesdale valley, as well as for its small greens. The club was founded in 1894. There are the remains of a settlement on a terrace south of Charles Sike, in an area of rough ground.

Newcastleton Kirk (new-kaw-sul'-in-kirk) n. Parish Church of Castleton on Montagu Street (see Castleton Kirk).

Newcastleton Schuil (new-kaw-sul'-in-skil) n. school in the village of Newcastleton, on Montagu Street. Since 1962 senior pupils have been bussed to Hawick High School. The old school-house adjoins the Parish Church, and has had a lintel inserted into the north gable, which bears the date 1621. Ebenezer Wells was schoolmaster there in the early 1800s, Alexander Fisher in at least the period 1825–52, John Brown in the 1860s and Andrew Hobkirk in the 1940s. School log books for 1875–1921 are in the Borders Archive.

Newcastleton Station (new-kaw-sul'-in-stā-shin) n. former station on the Waverley Line in Newcastleton. It was situated on Langholm Street and included a signal box, footbridge, level-crossing and station-master's house. All that survives is this last building, which has been converted into a private house.

the New Cut (thū-new-ku') n. popular local name for the cutting made to improve the main road (which became the A7) at Newmill in the early 19th century.

New Eer (new-eer) n., arch. New Year – ‘... Weel – at least till the New Eer!’ [RM], ‘Dauvit’s been oot o’ woark threh the New Eer; hei was putten away threh the mill’ [ECS], a gift given at the New Year, often in the form of an alcoholic drink, adj. relating to the New Year – ‘Whiles risin’ in a freshet o’ New ‘Eer snaw ...’ [DH] (often with the definite article; see also Hogmanany and New Year).

Newell Chemicals (new-ul-ke-mee-kulz) n. chemical factory supplying dyes and other products to the textile industry. It was based in a former hosiery factory at 7 Allars Bank, and also referred to as Newtrel Works.

new-fangelt (new-fawng-ul') adj. new-fangled, novel – ‘is that yin o they new-fangelt hurdie-gurdies?’, ‘Whan bagpipes new-fangl’d lugs had tir’d, They’d sneer, then he, like ane inspir’d ...’ [CPM], ‘New fangled deevils never heed them, Folk never prize things till they need them’ [WNK], ‘He couldna fash new-fangled things Wi’ all their fall-di-doo’ [WFC] (note the lack of a hard g; also spelled ‘new-fangled’ as in English).

Newfield (new-feeld) n. name for an area to the south-east of Hummelknowes, containing Newfield Hill (which reaches a height of 237 m) and Newfield Plantation. There was formerly a farmstead there, which is marked on Stobie’s 1770 map. Samuel Irvine was there in 1763 and is recorded as farmer there in 1797. Walter Irvine is recorded there in 1815.

Newhaa (new-haw) n. Newhall, farm on the north bank of the Ale Water, just east of Cavers Carre. This could be where Thomas Murray was in 1530/1. John Scott was farmer there in the 1860s (it is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Newhaa (new-haw) n. Newhall, former farmstead in Hobkirk Parish, between Harwood and Lurgiescleugh. This could be the Newhall in the parish of ‘Boldoun’ (perhaps Soudon) that in 1669 was inherited by William, son of Rev. James Douglas, minister of Hobkirk (marked on Stobie’s 1770 map).

Newhaa (new-haw) n. former name for an area in the Barony of Chamberlain Newton, split into ‘Over’ and ‘Nether’ lands, corresponding to the later Burnhead and Burnfoot (‘le newhalburnhed’ is recorded in 1502).

New Harwood (new-haw-ri', -har-wud) n. former farm near Harwood in Hobkirk Parish. It is recorded as ‘New Harrot’ in 1788 when Thomas Hope was there and ‘Newharrot’ on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, with John Ferguson as tenant and owner of 4 horses. It was also ‘Newharrot’ in 1821 when William Crozier was there.

New Heidshaw (new-heed-shaw) n. farm just outside Ashkirk village, on the Woll Rig road, and on the opposite side of the Headshaw Burn from Headshaw itself. James Turnbull was tenant there in 1709. George Kyle was farmer there in 1797 (it is ‘newheadshaw’ in 1709; it is marked on Ainslie’s 1773 map).

the new hew (thū-new-hew) n., arch. the appearance of newness, fresh look – ‘... composed of ee plus oo – a combination twice noted in our expression ‘the new hew’ (= the appearance of newness)’ [ECS], ‘The new hew’s off that wax-claith aaredies; it’s aa raateet wui thae taackets on eer shuin’ [ECS] (note the pronunciation with the diphthongal ee-oo).

Newhouse (new-hoos) n. Newhouse, former lands in Lilliesleaf Parish, once home of a branch of the Riddell family. Thomas Knox, George Knox and James Hill were there in 1694. Walter Riddell 'of Neuhaus' is also recorded separately, paying tax on 4 hearths, as well as having a gardener there. Alexander Chatto of Mainhouse paid the land tax there in 1811, when it was valued at £486. It was sold by Chatto and his son John to Mark Sprot of Riddell. There is still a farm there (it is 'Neuhaus' in 1694).

Newhouse (new-hoos) n. Newhouse, former farm on the north side of the Ettrick valley, just to the west of Ettrickbridge. This may be where Mary Scott, Lady Bonnington, was in 1617 when she complained that a group of supporters of Walter Scott of Harden undermined the walls of the house, causing it to fall. The hill 'Newhouse Kip' is marked on the modern Ordnance Survey map (labelled as 'Newhouss' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Newhouses (new-hoo-seez, -how-seez) n. Newhouses, farm just east of Newton ('the Nitton'). The modern farmhouse probably occupies the site of new houses built there in the 17th century, probably to replace Alton. The Taylor family were long farmers there. Residents in 1801 included Thomas and Ninian Huton, as well as John Gray. William Potts and his family lived there in 1841 and George Thomson farmed 156 acres there in 1851. There is an ancient earthwork about 200 m to the north-west of the farm. It lies on a ridge and consists of a bank and ditch enclosing an area about 30 m by 40 m, best preserved on the south-west and with a road through the middle (the name first appears in the 1690s).

Newland (new-lind) n. former lands in Liddesdale, recorded in the 1541 rental roll, with a value of 18 pence, and vacant at that time. The precise location if unknown, but judging by where it appears in the list, it must have been close to Copsshaw (confusingly it is also listed near the end of the document, with no value). It is also possible that it is the same as Newlands on the Hermitage Water.

Newlands (new-lindz) n. farm and surrounding area on the road between Hassendean and Lilliesleaf, adjacent to Huntlaw. It was inherited by Ralph 'de Neulandis' from his deceased father William in 1440. It was formerly in Hassendean parish, but moved to Minto in 1690. Walter Davidson was tenant there in 1632 when he had a feu-contract with Thomas, Lord Binning. David Scott in Newlands is recorded in 1643 as owner of lands in Belses. It was farmed by Davidsons in most of the 17th century. David Davidson of Newlands paid tax on £200 of land in 1663. The Marquess of Douglas paid the land tax on £80 there in 1678. Andrew Lamb was a tenant there in 1684 when he was listed among local men declared as fugitives for attending conventicles. William Halliwell was there in 1694. By 1788 it was owned by Sir Gilbert Elliot of Minto. Thomas Laidlaw was farmer there in 1797 and James Aitken in 1801. William Nichol was farmer in the mid-19th century. It was valued at £80 in the Land Tax Rolls of 1811. A drove road used to pass near here. It may also have been referred to as 'Howlands'.

Newlands (new-lindz) n. farm on the eastern side of the Hermitage valley, roughly opposite Netherraw. In the 1718 survey of properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch it was combined with Shaws (to the north), the farms together covering 245 acres, bounded by Roughley, Cleuchhead, Toftholm, Nether Raw and Millburnholm and including some land on the west side of the river; the farmhouse at that time is shown much further away from the river than the modern one and there are woods also shown, including young alders, between the farmhouses. John Lawson was a servant there in 1801. George F. Armstrong was gamekeeper there in 1851 and Hugh Johnstone in the 1860s. It was turned into a shooting lodge in the early 20th century. Newlands Plantation is just to the east.

Newlands (new-lindz) n. James (16th C.) servant of James Stewart of Wells. In 1592 his master complained that while ploughing at Wells, he was attacked by John, brother of Walter Turnbull of Bedrule, who 'boisted [threatened] and minassed [menaced] him and shoirit him for his lyffe, and cheissit him fra the said pleuch', later threatening to burn his crops and oxen and thereby was too scared to tend the fields. Robert (16th C.) recorded in 1539 as a subtenant of Margaret Falside and Walter Scott in their lands in either Ashkirk or Falside. Robert 'younger' (presumably his son) was also listed. Thomas (15th C.) on the 1482 panel for Elizabeth Cunningham inheriting the lands of Appletreehall and the eastern part of Hassendean.

Newlands Burn (new-lindz-burn) n. stream that rises near Hassendean Common, running past Huntlaw and Newlands farms to join the Huntlaw Burn.

New Licht (new-licht) adj., arch. relating to the more liberal faction within the Scottish Presbyterian Church, particularly among the Secessionists, those from the Burgher and Anti-Burgher sides combining into the United Secession Church in 1820 – 'They thoct to gie the Deil a fricht Wi' hauding up the torch 'New Licht' ...' [DA].

New Mains (new-mānz) n. former name for a farm in Cavers Parish. William Douglas was there in 1716.

Newmill (new-mil) n. village about 4 miles south-west of Hawick on the A7. Sometimes called Newmill-on-Teviot to distinguish it from the 'New Mill' in the Slitrig valley. It was formerly a farm attached to the corn mill. The farm was surveyed in 1718 along with other properties of the Scotts of Buccleuch, when it comprised 6 acres, with the mill lade clearly shown. In 1694 those listed there with hearths in their homes were Robert Thomson (with 2 kilns), John Dryden (blacksmith) and Alexander Riddell (miller). John Dryden was smith there in at least 1694–1702. Robert Thomson was tenant there in at least 1702–23. William Thomson, both 'older' and 'younger', were recorded there in the 1710s. James Dryden was smith there in at least 1718–25. Thomas Elliot was there in 1771. James Scott was there in 1791, Thomas Borthwick is recorded as the farmer in 1797, and residents in 1799 included John Grieve, William Hogg and Thomas Hume. Wrights Thomas Hume, William Hume and William Hogg were there in 1801. The village grew up around the mill on the river, which was still in active use in 1825/6 (according to Pigot's directory), when the miller was Alexander Borthwick. It was converted into a sawmill in the later 19th century. For a while it the village had its own school, which was established in 1804, also used as a community hall and contains a WWI memorial plaque. The village also had its own library from at least the 1830s. In the 1840s the village consisted of a row of thatched houses (the end one being the school), together with the blacksmiths and a few other houses on the other side of the road. The 1841 census lists 13 households. A new building was constructed for the school later, converted into Newmill Country Inn. The Home Mission met regularly in the village from about the 1890s until 1926. The remains of Allanhaugh Tower can be reached via a footbridge and there are also older earthworks near the Teviot further upriver, although largely obliterated by cultivation. A significant cutting was made in the early 19th century to improve the main road, this being referred to as 'the New Cut' (the name presumably comes from this being the replacement corn mill, probably for Allanhaugh Mill; it is 'neumilne' in 1694, 'newmiln' in 1700, 'Newmilne' in 1702, 1712 and 1716 and 'Newmiln' in 1797).

New Mill (new-mil) n. farm a few miles south of Hawick on the Slitrig, once the site of a corn-mill on the river. It is sometimes called 'Newmill on Slitrig' to distinguish it from Newmill on Teviot. There is a ford here, which was once used as part of a drove road. William Turnbull was miller in 1666. Lancelot Aitchison was tenant in 1694. Hugh Elliot was smith there in 1672. William Whillans was there in 1729. Robert Thomson was there in the 1780s. Robert Thomson and Thomas Borthwick were there in 1797, John Scott and Robert Thomson in 1799, and wright Thomas Telfer in 1801. James Reid was miller in 1841. The weir for the mill was damaged in the 1846 flood. Charles Mitchell was farmer in 1852, Thomas Turnbull in the 1850s and 60s, John Richardson in the late 19th century, Robert Turnbull around 1900, followed by his son Walter Turnbull. The Curds and Cream (meaning the Common Riding Friday 'Hut') was there in 1856. Cottages to the south are sometimes referred to as 'Newmill Cottages' or 'Railway Cottages' (sometimes 'Newmill' or 'Newmills'; it is 'Newmylne of Slitrig' in 1666, 'Neumilne' in 1694 and 'Newmiln' in 1797).

Newmill Burn (new-mil-burn) n. stream that flows from Branxholme Wester Loch to reach the Teviot near Newmill, with Vales Burn joining the Teviot just upriver.

Newmill Damfit see Damfit

Newmill Haa (new-mil-haw) n. village hall in Newmill-on-Teviot.

Newmill on Slitrig (new-mil-on-sli'-reeg) n. name sometimes used for New Mill to distinguish it from Newmill on Teviot.

Newmill Schuil (new-mil-skil) n. former small school in Newmill. It was established by the heritors of Hawick Parish in 1804. There were 40 pupils there in 1837. David Laidlaw was schoolmaster from 1837.

the New Road (thu-new-rōd) n. despite not being new for almost 200 hundred years, the name is still in use! It was built in 1815 and fully opened in 1816 as the new turnpike road from the Sandbed to Goldielands and on to Carlisle or the Borthwick, alongside the Teviot. It replaced the old road that went via the Loan, the Lumbuck and Martinshouse. The toll bar (Wester Toll) was situated outside the present High School. To provide access from the Sandbed, some houses between the Howegate and Orrock Place were demolished. The first part, along which houses were built, was named Buccleuch Street in 1815, while the remaining part within the town boundaries was named Buccleuch Road in 1905 – 'How micht

I come to the auld toon Sall I the New Road spurn, And glint the taps o' the lang lums Frae the brow o' Howdenburn?' [WL].

the New Statistical Account (thū-new-sta-tis-tee-kul-a-kownt) n. the 'New Statistical Account of Scotland', published 1834–45 as a follow-up to the original (sometimes called 'Old') 'Statistical Account of Scotland' (1791–92). It was a description of each parish in the nation, largely written by the local ministers, but also drawing upon the knowledge of schoolmasters and doctors. Roxburghshire is covered in the 3rd volume, with the entries mostly written in 1834–7 and published in 1841. It represents a valuable snapshot at that period, as well as providing many anecdotal pieces of information that are not otherwise recorded.

Newstead (new-steed, -sted) n. former farmstead in Wilton Parish, just to the east of Newton. An old quarry and a well are marked just to the north on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map. William Taylor was farmer there in 1841 and William Pringle in 1851.

Newstead (new-steed, -sted) n. village about a mile east of Melrose, which is the site of a large Roman fort, also called Trimontium, and houses the Trimontium Museum. An iron meteorite was found here in 1827 (sometimes 'Newsteads'; the origin of the name is probably just Old English for 'the new place' and is first recorded about 1540).

Newstead (new-steed, -sted) n. cottage to the south of the road through Old Castleton, near Byreholm.

Newton (new'-, ni'-in) n. farm on the A7 on the Heights just to the north of Hawick, usually known as the Nitton. This is essentially the same place known as 'Chamberlain Newton' from early times. The 'Chamberlain' probably comes from Walter Berkeley, an owner in the late 12th century who was Chamberlain of Scotland to William the Lion. The 'new' part of the name thus comes from even earlier than this! The grant of the lands to Berkeley by William the Lion was some time in the period 1173–82. The lands later passed to the Grundy family, who probably gave their name to Groundistone. Robert Grundy 'de Neuton' swore fealty to Edward I in 1296. There were Scotts of Newton recorded in the 16th to 18th centuries. Cottars living there in 1694 were Hector Shiel, John Taylor and Janet Brown. William Lamb was living there in 1688. Thomas Nichol was recorded there in 1721, Robert Scott in 1722, William Scott in at least 1727–32, John Cook in 1731, John Scott in 1733 and Walter of Newton in 1738. Robert Smith was farmer there in the 1760s. George Haliburton is recorded as farmer there in 1797 and James Reid was a labourer there at the same time. The owner recorded in 1811 was William Irvine, when it was valued at £238. John Oliver was a retired farmer there in 1841 and Janet Irvine farmed 383 acres there in 1851. Walter Scott was farmer in the 1860s (the name probably derives from Old English 'niwa tun', meaning 'the new farm'; it was 'Neuton' in the 1170s, and was also sometimes 'Neutoun', 'Newtoun' or 'Newtone'; see also Chamberlain Newton).

Newton (new'-, ni'-in) n. former farm in the Slitrig valley just to the west of Stobs. Newton Cottage is still marked on the Ordnance Surveys map. Newton Hill to the south-west has some settlements on it. In 1622 the lands of Over and Nether Swinstead were among those sold by Robert Elliot of Redheugh to Gilbert Eliott of Stobs; they were described as 'commonly called the lands of Hilend Barnes and Newtoun', suggesting that Newton was once part of Swinstead. James Best, John Hislop and Adam Hislop were there in 1694. William Scott and John Beattie and George Pott were there in the early 1700s. For a few years until 1779 it was farmed (along with Whitehillbrae) by James Sibbald, who later became a publisher in Edinburgh. In 1779 it was valued (along with Whitehillbrae) at £455 7s 4d, being an extensive farm on the Eliott of Stobs estate. John Riddell was farmer there in at least 1786–89 and George Riddell was also there in 1787. William Cochrane was there in 1791–94. Francis Aitkin is recorded as farmer there in 1797, James Aitkin in 1799 and Andrew Kerr in 1801. Along with Whitehillbrae it was still valued at about £450 in 1813 (marked 'Newtoun' on Blaeu's 1654 map, it is 'Neuton' in 1694).

Newton (new'-in) n. hamlet and farm on the right bank of the Teviot, on the A698 about midway between Denholm and Cleikum Inn, part of the Parish of Bedrule. It was referred to as the 'ten pound' land in the 16th century when owned by Grahamslaw of Newton. Adam Grahamslaw had sasine for the lands in 1504. Adam Grahamslaw of Newton had a charter for the lands in 1531 and John Grahamslaw sold them to Robert Kerr of Ancrum and Woodhead (who married his daughter Helen) in 1586. The 'procuratory of resignation' of 1531 records the names of the 16 tenants on the lands at that time. It was listed among the farms burned by the Earl of Hertford's men in 1545. There was a feud between the

Grahamslaws of Little Newton and Turnbells in Rulewater in the early years of the 17th century. This resulted in the 1601 death of 6 Grahamslaw brothers, probably all sons of John Grahmslaw of Newton. The farm at that time belonged to Robert Kerr and his wife Helen Grahamslaw, sister of the murdered men. The Kerrs of Newton held the lands through the 17th century. When inherited by William Kerr of Newton in 1639 the mill was described as recently built and the lands were valued at 12 pounds, 6 shillings and 40 pence. The Laird of Newton's lands, including the mill, were valued at £853 6s 8d in 1643, 1663 and 1678. The farms of the Laird of Newton featured prominently in the Hearth Tax list for Bedrule Parish at the end of the 17th century. The neighbouring farm of Stirkrigg was incorporated into it, around the end of the 18th century. Adam Chisholme of Newton is recorded in 1690. John Borthwick was tenant there until about 1698. Mrs. Helen Chisholme is recorded paying the tax for 17 windows there in 1748 and Dr. Andrew Wilson was taxed for 16 windows in 1753. The farm was bought by Thomas Elliot Ogilvie in about the mid-1780s and sold by William Ogilvie of Chesters to Thomas Scott of Peel in 1833. Peter Brown was tenant there in the late 18th century. George Hislop and John Chisholme were servants there in 1797. Blacksmith Thomas Dodds and ploughman Robert Rutherford were there in at least 1799–1801. Other residents in 1799 included John Adamson and servant John Laidlaw. Servant John Rutherford and servant William Forsyth were there in 1801. There were no signs of the former peel house by the end of the 18th century, although 'beautiful avenues of venerable trees' remained. The farm once had a corn or threshing mill, which at the end of the 18th century was 'scarcely discernible' because of floods. There was later a saw mill there, powered through a mill pond to the south. The mansion house was demolished sometime before 1845 and a new house built. The Robson-Scott family lived here from the mid-19th century and it was inherited from them by a cousin, Robert Lang. The farm was sold in 1982, with the 1100 acres being broken up. The former tower house here is marked by a stony mound in a field between the main part of Newton farm and the A698. A 'perforated stone macehead' found here is in Hawick Museum, as well as 2 other worked stones, one hemispherical and one conical, and also a 13th century bronze skillet, which was ploughed up in 1964. The Laird of these lands (probably Kerr) is referred to in a version of the ballad 'Raid of the Redeswire' – 'Gude Ederstane was not to lack, Wi' Kirkton, Newtoun, noblemen' (the name derives simply from the Old English for 'new farm'; it is 'Newtoun' in 1531, 'Nutone' in 1548/9, 'Newtoun de Baddralle' in 1586, 'Nuttoun' in 1642 and 'Newtoun' in 1643; it is 'Neutoun' on Blaeu's 1654 map).

Newton (new'-in) n. Alexander (15th C.) recorded as 'Alexandrum de Newtoun' in 1426 when he was on the inquest for inheritance of the lands of Eilrig, along with many other local men. In 1429/30 he was on the 'retour' panel for the lands of Caverton. Probably the same man was among the witnesses for the transfer of Heap from the Langlands' to the Scotts, carried out at St. Mary's in Hawick in 1431. Alexander (15th/16th C.) Vicar of Hawick, listed as first witness to the sasine giving the Barony of Hawick to James Douglas of Drumlanrig in 1514. He was recorded there as 'Alexandro Newton vicario de Hawik', immediately followed by 'Roberto Luderdaill cappellano'. So he was clearly the 'Vicar' (presumably meaning he held the vicarge teinds), with 'Luderdaill' being an additional Chaplain of some sort. He was probably replaced by William Cunningham, recorded as Parson in 1519/20. Archibald of that ilk (15th C.) Sheriff-Depute of Selkirkshire. He was on a 'retour' panel in 1446/7 for Ker of Altonburn. He was also a member of the 1456 panel that acquitted Andrew Ker of Altonburn of helping the English burn lands around Jedburgh. He was mentioned in the Exchequer Rolls of 1455 in relation to the Barony of Cessford. In 1463 he was 'Archibald of Newtoun of Dalcobe' when he retoured Archibald Douglas, 5th Earl of Angus, as heir to his father. He was also a member of the panel that decided on the disputed lands of Kirkton Mains and the Flex in 1464/5; he is recorded there as 'Archbald Newton of that ilke'. Fenwick (19th C.) draper from Falstone in Northumberland, in business with his brother Robert. He sold his wares from a travelling cart, being a frequent visitor to Liddesdale before the era of the motor car. He can be seen as an old man with his horse and cart in a photograph from 1890. George (d.c.1500) probably tenant at Synton. He was killed along with George Cavers during a raid on Synton, when 180 cows, 20 horses and other goods were stolen by David Scott, called 'Lady', tenant in Stirches. Scott had a remission for these crimes in 1502. James (15th C.) Rector of Bedrule, recorded in 1468 in a document for the Homes of that

Newton Don

Ilk. He is also recorded as Rector of 'Bothrule' (i.e. Bedrule) in 1479 in connection with an altar to St. Kentigern (or St. Mungo) dedicated in Jedburgh Kirk (i.e. the Abbey) to which he allowed '10 merks' from annual rent of 2 tenements in Jedburgh. Presumably the same man was witness to a document in 1478 outlining rights of David Scott of Braxholme within Selkirk; he is referred to there as 'dean of Tevadale'. Probably the same man is also recorded as Dean of Teviotdale in 1488/9 in a document where the priest of Hassendean renounces fees to the Abbot of Melrose. He was still Rector of Bedrule and 'commisario Thevidalie' in 1492/3 when he witnessed the confirmation of Rutherford and Wells to James Rutherford. James of Dalcove (15th/16th C.) probably son of Archibald, who he succeeded in 1481. He is referred to as 'of Dalcow' in 1487 when he sold the lands of Boonraw to Robert, son of Walter Scott of Headshaw. In 1494 he was on the panel for the inheritance of Synton by Alexander Erskine; he was listed as 'Jacobum Newtoun de Dawcofe'. In 1503 he presented John Wilson as suitor for his lands of Cessford Mains at the Justice-aire. In 1504/5 probably the same James 'of Dalcoif' had a letter of 'procuratory' to his superior, Patrick Earl of Bothwell, to sell the lands of Boonraw from David Hoppringle, Walter Scott of Howpasley, George Hepburn and William Middlemas to Robert Scott of Stirches. In 1505 he was mentioned as former owner of Boonraw in a charter to Robert Scott of Stirches. He was probably succeeded by another James of Dalcove. The family also owned lands at Newton in Lauderdale. James (15th/16th C.) apparently tenant of Synton when Adam Turnbull of Hornshole was accused of stealing 200 cows and 80 horses there in 1502. He also acted as surety for Turnbull in his remission for several crimes. He could have been the same man as James of Dalcove. Janet (15th/16th C.) wife of Adam Ker in 'St. Helen's Shaw'. In 1537 she had the tenants of James Ker of Mersington and others removed from her lands of Dalcove, Newton and Cessford Mains. She is also recorded in 1539/40 as 'lady of Dalcoif' (i.e. Dalcove). Along with her (presumably second) husband Adam Ker, she had to give up the non-entries of lands in Town Yetholm to Gilbert Ker of Primside and his mother Marion Pringle. As heiress of Dalcove (in Berwickshire) she inherited the lands in 1539 and resigned them to her son Thomas Ker in 1543. Nichol (19th C.) married Elizabeth Rutherford in 1840, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Wilton

Newton Mains

Parishes. Thomas (15th C.) recorded in 1494/5 as 'frater vicarius de Selkirk', i.e. brother of the Vicar of Selkirk. He was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire. Thomas (b.c.1780s) coachman at Borthwickbrae. His name appears on the Militia ballot list for Robertson Parish in 1812. He is absent from the rectified list, suggesting he had moved or become too old (formerly spelled 'Newtoun', 'Newtoun', etc.).

Newton Don (new'-in-don) n. mansion near Nenthorn, north-west of Kelso, built 1817-20 by Robert Smirke in neo-classical style for Sir Alexander Don, 6th Baronet. The original landscaping and furnishings were quite elaborate. The estate was much diminished to pay off Sir Alexander's debts and the rest sold in 1847 to Charles Balfour. The estate was connected with the Norman family of Morvile, then Newtons, Hepburns, Kers and others, before being acquired by Alexander Don in the mid-17th century, the name then changing to Newton Don.

Newtonhaugh (new'-in-hawch) n. former name for lands in Bedrule Parish, presumably a flat piece of land between Newton and the Teviot. It is recorded in 1666 that Thomas Rutherford was served heir to these lands, which had belonged to his father, John of Knowesouth.

Newton Hill (new'-in-hil) n. small hill between Stobs and Barnes Loch, being the north-eastern spur of White Knowe. There are the remains of two ancient settlements there. The western one measured about 100 m by 50 m and contains signs of at least 11 hut circles. However, it has been disturbed when the ground was used for military training. The eastern site is about 60 m by 40 m and is a fortified settlement, with some interior hut circles, and is still quite well preserved. There are also 2 linear earthworks crossing near the summit, from south-east to north-west. Alexander Michie first described these, suggesting a boundary connection with Gibby's Cleuch; it is unclear how old they are, or whether they represent separate phases of construction over an extended period.

Newton Hill (new'-in-hil) n. small hill near the farm of Newton in Bedrule Parish. It was also the name for a piece of land that was part of Newton in Bedrule Parish, according to the Land Tax Rolls of 1811.

Newton Mains (new-tin-mānz) n. former farmstead adjacent to Newton farm in Wilton Parish. William Elliot and his family lived there in 1841, while the Lintons were there in 1851 (also written 'Newtonmains').

Newton Mill (new-tin-mil) n. former mill in Bedrule Parish, associated with the lands of Newton. This was once a corn mill, which at the end of the 18th century was 'scarcely discernible' because of floods. It was later the location for a saw mill, powered through a mill pond to the south. The mill was among the lands held by the Laird of Newton in 1643, valued at £133 6s 8d and was owned by Thomas Ogilvie of Chesters in 1788.

Newton Moor (new-tin-moor) n. former name for the moor near Newton in Bedrule Parish. In about 1795 it is recorded that the minister of Bedrule had the right to cast 2 'darg of turf annually' here.

Newton Muir (new-tin-mewr) n. former farmstead in Wilton Parish, probably on Groundstone Heights. Agricultural labourer Thomas Hume and family were there in 1841, and it was abandoned in the 1850s.

Newton Pond (new-tin-pond) n. pond to the south of Newton farm in Bedrule Parish. It was formerly used to drive a threshing mill on the farm. Another pond to the southwest is labelled 'Newton Pond' on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, and is now 'Monks Pond' on maps. There was once a tradition that it was originally built as a fish pond by the monks of Jedburgh Abbey. The 1837 article in the New Statistical Account suggests it was fed by the Lady's Well, but this seems to be confounding the pond with the Ladies' Well much further down the Ruecastle Burn, near Knowesouth.

Newton Toor (new'-in-toor) n. former tower near Ruecastle in Bedrule parish, burned by Hertford's men in 1545. This is presumably an early version of the house at Newton.

Newton Wud (new'-in-wud) n. name for wood near Newton in Bedrule Parish, recorded in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls.

Newtoon (new-toon) n. another name for Newtown St. Boswells.

Newtown Mill (new-town-mil) n. name for Newmill in the 16th century (also 'Newtonne Milne' and other variants; this may be the 'Newtoun' marked on de Wit's c. 1680 map of Scotland, although that geography is confused and the one above Stobs may also be meant).

Newtown St. Boswells (new-town-sin'-bo-zulz) n. town situated on the Bowden Burn, and dating from at least 1654 (so not so new!). It really developed as a railway town on the Waverley Line and as a market centre close to St. Boswells' Green. The modern Roxburghshire County Council offices were built here in 1966–68. From 1975–1996 this was the administrative centre for the Borders Regional Council, and is now the centre for the Scottish Borders Council. Population (1991) 1,108.

New Westgate Haa (new-west-gā'-haw) n. house in Denholm, marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map at the north end of the Canongate.

New Woll (new-wol) n. farm south-west of the original Woll. It is marked on Ainslie's 1773 map, and so has been 'new' for a while now. The house is now part of the golf course, and is rentable as self-catering accommodation. Francis Scott was tenant there in 1731, William Fowler was there in 1788 and John Sprot was there at the end of the 18th century. In 1799 Alexander Harper was farmer there, while William Glendinning, John McKain and John Wilson were labourers. In 1801 the residents included Alexander, Francis and John Harper, as well as James Glendinning. The Brown family purchased the estate in 2001 (it is 'New Wooll' in 1731, 'Newwool' in 1788 and 'New Wool' in 1799).

the New Yairds (thu-new-yārdz) n. name used in Denholm for the plots of lands feued around the Green after being augmented in 1836. These comprised the original 8¾ acres of the 'auld yairds', plus the new approximately 6 acres, split among 60 people. Some feues were subdivided, and 2 were appropriated for the school and schoolmaster's house and to the road to Has-sendean.

New Year (new-yeer) n. a sum of money given to children at the New Year, or a drink offered to a visitor at the beginning of the year – '... But this time aw'll shake ee quite rigid Aw wad like ma New Year tae be tei' [AY] (cf. the older the New Eer and also cf. common ridin).

Nichol (ni-kul, ni-kol) n. Adam (15th/16th C.) listed at the 1493 Justice-aire in Jedburgh when William Douglas of Cavers was fined for his non-appearance. He was most likely the 'Ade nichol in dennum' who was cited again at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. He may have been closely related to James in Denholm, who was also recorded in 1493 and 1494/5. Probably the same Adam was one of the bailies appointed by James Douglas of Cavers in 1512 in order to give sasine of the lands of Denholm to William Cranston; his name appears to be given as 'Ade Nicholo'. Adam (d.1626) resident of Cavers Parish. A headstone in the old kirkyard commemorates the death of him and his wife Margaret Smith on the same day. Adam (17th/18th C.) resident of Denholm on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Perhaps the same resident of Denholm married Janet Turnbull in 1708. Their children included probably half of these: John (b.1708); Margaret (b.1708); Margaret (b.1710); James (b.1711); Bessie (b.1712); Jane (b.1714); Adam (b.1714); Andrew (b.1716); John (b.1716); William (b.1717); Adam (b.1719); Jane (b.1719); John (b.1721); Isabel (b.1724). Adam (18th C.) prehaps son of the earlier Adam. He was resident in Denholm in 1741 and 1742. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included: John (b.1741); and Robert (b.1742). Adam (18th/19th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Borthwickbrae Parkhead in 1793. He married Jane Scoon in Robertson in 1792 and their children included James (b.1793) and Beatrix (b.1796). Probably the same Adam was recorded as owner of a horse at Greenbank in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Adam (b.1769/70) farmer at Tandlew in Wilton Parish. He was already a widower by 1841. In 1851 he was farming 200 acres, with the farm being run by his son John. Adam (b.1800/1) born in Newcastleton, he lived in Robertson Parish. He was recorded as an agricultural labourer at Deanburnhaugh in 1841 and a shepherd at Milsington Shankfoot in 1851 and 1861. He married Betty Graham (from Cumberland) and their children included: Helen; Walter; Thomas; Andrew; Jane; James; and Robert. Adam (1818/19–70) mason in Newcastleton, son of John. His wife was Jessie Rutherford, who died in 1891, aged 71. They are buried at Ettleton. Adam (b.1825/6–78) son of Robert and Isabella Glendinning, he was born in Castleton Parish. He lived at Dryden with his parents and was shepherd at Pinlehole in 1861. He married Esther, daughter of William Hardie and Violet Douglas. Their children included: Violet (1859–1931), who married farmer William Steele; Isabella (1861–78); Christian (1864–89); Margaret (1865–1930), who married Michael Anderson Grieve; Elizabeth (1868–1937), who worked as a nurse; and Robert (1869–1937), draper who moved to Fulham. Agnes (17th C.) tenant at Binks in 1694 according to the Hearth Tax rolls. Alexander (18th C.) resident at Threephead in 1775 when his son Walter was baptised in Robertson Parish. Alexander (18th/19th C.) cooper who was listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Hawick. He married Mary Robson, and she died in 1787. Their children included: James (b.1777); Margaret (b.1773), baptised in Wilton; James (again, b.1785); and Jane (b.1785). He may also be the Alexander who married Margaret Gledstains in 1788. His son Walter died in 1801. He is probably also the cooper at Crumhaugh Hill whose wife died in 1824. Alexander Grieve (19th/20th C.) resident of Teviothead. In 1885 he married Agnes Purdom Scott, daughter of Robert Scott and Mary Purdom. Andrew (17th C.) tenant at Synton Mill, at the same time as Thomas. They are mentioned in a session record in Ashkirk in 1635. Andrew (17th C.) tenant in Denholm. In 1684 he was charged at a court in Jedburgh with not attending his parish church for a year and fined a year's rental, corresponding to £78 Scots. Andrew (18th C.) farmer in Minto Parish. In 1780 he was listed as holding part of Minto Hills farm 'in tack', the other part being held by Thomas Thomson. Andrew (18th C.) tenant in Blackhall. In 1758 he was among parishioners in Hobkirk Parish who were asked to provide broom for thatching the roof of the kirk. Andrew (b.c.1770s) servant at Hudshouse according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. Andrew (19th C.) farmer at Trow Knowes. He had a house built at Myreslawgreen in about 1879. Charles (b.1818/9) from Perth, he was a plasterer in Wilton. In Slater's 1852 directory he was listed on Wilton Path. In 1851 he is recorded as a master plasterer on Ladylaw Place, employing 8 men. His wife was Isabella and their children included Isabella and Christian. Christopher (19th/20th C.) grocery assistant in Hawick who was known for his efforts at poetry, much of it privately published in pamphlet form. He has been described as Hawick's answer to William McGonagal. An example of his verse is: 'We started off for Edinburgh By the twenty-past-ten train: When we got into the city It was pouring down with rain'.

Elizabeth 'Betty' (d.1787) housekeeper for merchant William Oliver (i.e. 'Auld Cash'). She died in Hawick. Elizabeth (18th C.) cook at Branxholme in 1785, when she was working for Adam Ogilvie. Francis (18th C.) resident of Abbotrule Parish in 1724 when he married Margaret Wilson in Robertson Parish. Isobel (b.1726), baptised in Hobkirk Parish, may have been their daughter. Francis (18th C.) resident of Harwood Mill. His son John was baptised in Hobkirk Parish in 1738. He could be the Francis who married Margaret Rae in 1732 and whose other children included Thomas (b.1740). He may be the same man as the Francis who earlier married Margaret Wilson. Francis (b.c.1775) servant at Bellshiels according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. He was either the Francis who was a servant at Flatt or the Francis who was a servant at Heughhead on the 1801 Militia ballot. He was also listed as a labourer at Tweedenbank among male heads of households in 1835–41 and as an agricultural labourer at Tweedenbank on the 1841 census. He is probably the Francis who married Elizabeth Telfer and had children including: Thomas (b.1800); Adam (b.1803); James (b.1805); Agnes (b.1807); Helen (b.1809), who married John Armstrong; and Betty (b.1812). Francis (d.1868) carter in Liddesdale, probably son of John and Mary Ogilvie. He sold his goods in a roup to pay passage for him and his family to emigrate to Canada in 1833. They sailed to New York on the Annawan, then on to Westminister Township (now London, Ontario). He married Janet Nichol (1793–1866) and their children included Elizabeth (1821–23), John (1823–1910), Thomas (b.c.1825), Francis (1827–1907), Mary (1830–64), Jane (b.c.1832), Adam (1834–1920) and William (b.c.1837). He is buried in the family cemetery at Dingman Creek, Ontario. George (16th C.) recorded in the Exchequer Rolls of 1540 as the King's shepherd in Bellendean. He was paid £3 6s 8d for 5 bolls of grain. George (16th C.) recorded in the will of Walter Scott of Buccleuch in 1574, when he was tenant farmer at Bellendean. He could be related to Simon and William who farmed at Buccleuch. George (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1648 his daughter Helen was baptised, who was conceived in fornication with Agnes 'Junck'. The witnesses were Thomas and James. Perhaps the same George married Helen Hislop and had children William (b.1650) and Jean (b.1652). George (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Helen Hislop. Their children included William (b.1650) and Jean (b.1652). The witnesses in 1652 were John Clerk and Adam Hislop (probably a relative of his wife). George (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Bessie Elliot and their children included James (b.1671), Bessie (b.1673) and William (b.1681). George (17th C.) resident at Sundhope in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. George (17th C.) resident at Hawick Shiel in 1694, according to the Hearth Tax rolls. He is probably the George, married to Bessie Elliot, whose children born in Hawick Parish included: James (b.1671); Bessie (b.1673); and William (b.1681). George (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their son John was baptised in 1754. Perhaps the same George also married Isabel and had a daughter Janet (b.1761). George (18th C.) married Isabel Hardie in Hawick in 1778. George (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included Christian (b.1793) and James (b.1796). George (1765/6–1841) tenant farmer at Philhope, probably son of John, tenant in Craik. In 1841 he was recorded there with his wife, 4 children, a labourer and 2 female servants. In 1820 (late in life) in Robertson he married Ann Burnet, who died in 1879, aged 79. Their children included: John (1820–70), who died at Philhope; Isabella (b.1822); James (b.1823); and William (1826–1902), also died at Philhope. He is buried in Borthwick Waas and may have been son of John (1717/8–92), who is in the adjacent burial plot. George (18th/19th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. He married Nanny Douglas and their children included: Margaret (b.1798), baptised in Crailing; and Agnes (b.1800), baptised in Kirkton. George (18th/19th C.) shepherd in Waterside in Southdean Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. He was listed as a servant at Waterside on the 1801 Militia ballot. George (19th C.) married Margaret Scott in Wilton Parish in 1848. Their son Robert was baptised in Hawick Free Kirk in 1849. George ‘Geordie’ (1820/1–74) agricultural labourer in Southdean Parish, originally from Jedburgh. In 1851 he was at Wolflee and in 1861 was a ‘Post Messenger’ living at Wolfhopelee. He carried the post from Bonchester to Chesters, but gave up in 1873 due to ill-health. He married Mary McQueen, who was from Glenshiel, Their children included Sarah (b.1846/7), James (b.1848/9), Archibald (b.1851), Christina (b.1853), Isabella (b.1855/6) and Donald (b.1860). He died at the Causeyfoot. Helen (17th/18th C.) resident of Greenholm in Castleton Parish. In 1699 she was reported to the Session for blasphemy, specifically saying ‘the Lord had broken His promise’ for giving them such a bad harvest; she had to ‘stand in sackcloth one day publicly upon the place of repentance’. Ian ‘Moose’, Cornet in 1984, he has also been 1514 Club President. His son Ross was Cornet in 2012. J. (18th/19th C.) hosier in Castleton. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. James (15th C.) listed at the 1493 Justice-aire in Jedburgh when William Douglas of Cavers was fined for his non-appearance. He was recorded being ‘in dēnū’, which probably meant Denholm. He may have been related to Adam, who was also listed in 1493. He was also cited at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. He may have been closely related to Adam in Denholm, who was also recorded in 1493 and 1494/5. James (16th/17th C.) resident of Hislop. In 1618 Walter Scott of Buccleuch complained that he had cut down 40 alder trees from his lands of Gorenberry. He may be related to Patrick, who was at Lairhope at the same time. He was absolved of the crime, after denying it on oath. James (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He married Helen Anderson and their children included: Janet (b.1651); and James (b.1656). William (b.1653), son of James and Helen ‘Paterson’ was probably a child of the same couple. The witnesses in 1651 were William Anderson and Simon Nichol (who were probably related to him and his wife) and in 1656 were Walter and Robert Nichol. James (17th C.) leased the farm of Todshawhill in 1671. He may be the witness (along with Robert) for a baptism for James Richardson at Howcleuch in 1683. Perhaps the same James was resident of Broadhaugh on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included Walter (b.1703), Isabel (b.1715) and Thomas (b.1717), James (17th/18th C.) living at Easter Essenside in 1710 when his son James was baptised in Robertson Parish. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Turn in Kirkton Parish. His son Adam was baptised in 1720. James (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Chapelhill in 1732. His unnamed child was baptised in 1732. Other children included William (b.1730), Agnes (b.1734) and James (b.1735). He may be the James who married Margaret in 1729. James (1715/6–76) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Mary Scott, who died in 1776, aged 45. Their children included Elizabeth Mary (d.1776), Robert (d.1782) and Archibald (d.1779). He and his wife died at Shaws and are buried in Castleton. James (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Margaret Beattie and their children included James (b.1766). James 'Pistols' (d.1778) married Margaret Scott, who died in Hawick in 1778. Their children, baptised in Wilton Parish, included: Jane (b.1736); Mary (b.1740); and Thomas (b.1743). He died in 1778, a few months before his wife, with his nickname given in the Parish record. James (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Martha Hislop (or 'Hazelhop') and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1762. The witnesses were Robert Laidlaw in Falnash and James 'Col-lur'. James (18th C.) recorded at Outerside in 1762 when his son John was baptised and at Outerside in 1765 when his son George was baptised. He is probably different from the James recorded at Chapelhill in 1765. He may also have been father of Margaret (b.1758), who was baptised in Roberton. James (18th C.) recorded at Chapelhill in 1764 and 1765 when his son John and daughter Jean were baptised in Roberton Parish. He could be the James recorded at Highchesters in 1772 when his daughter Jean was baptised in Roberton Parish. He could be the James (d.1792) commemorated at Borthwick Waas. James (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His daughter Mary was baptised in 1761. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1770 he is recorded living at Braxholme Woodfoot. He married Helen Turnbull in 1760. Their children, baptised in Wilton, included: Mary (b.1761); James (b.1763); and Helen (b.1770). The witnesses in 1770 were Thomas Scott and Andrew Turner. Perhaps the same James was listed at Muirside in Wilton Parish in 1791 when he paid the Cart Tax. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Wilton and Hawick Parishes. He married Christian Hart and their children included: Betty (b.1767), baptised in Wilton; and James (b.1772) and Janet (b.1775), baptised in Hawick. The witnesses in 1772 were James Murray and James Hart. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Elizabeth Renwick in 1787. James (b.c.1780) servant at Skelfhill according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish. James (b.c.1780s) ploughman at Woodburn recorded on the ballot for the Militia in Roberton Parish in 1812. He may have been related to John, who was at Woodburn Mill a little earlier. James (1791–1875) born in Lilliesleaf, son of John. He was an agricultural labourer in Roberton Parish. In 1841 and 1851 he was living with his family at Borthwickshiels Lodge, and in 1861 they were living at 4 Orrock Place. He married Elizabeth (1794–1881), daughter of John Cavers and Elizabeth Hislop; she died at Craik. Their children were: Elizabeth (b.1813); Janet (b.1815); Margaret (b.1817); Jane (1820–63), who married William Renwick and died in Hawick; Christian (b.1822); Joan (b.1824); John (b.1827); Barbara Pott (b.1829); Walter (b.1831); Williamina (or 'Mina', b.1833), who married George Nichol; and Jemima (b.1836). He died at 'Wheathaugh' and was buried at Borthwick Waas. James (18th/19th C.) baker of Hawick, recorded as owner of a horse in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He also paid the dog tax in 1797. James (d.bef. 1841) resident of Castleton Parish. His widow and son Adam were living at about 14 North Hermitage Street in 184. He married Janet Wells and their children included: Jean (b.1808); Thomas (b.1810); John (b.1812); James (b.1813); David (b.1816); Francis (b.1818); Helen (b.1820); Adam (b.1822); and Sarah (b.1826). James (1787/8–1866) carter in Newcastleton. In 1851 and 1861 he was at about 26 Langholm Street. He ran a cart to Langholm twice a week in the 1850s. His wife was Elizabeth (or 'Betty') Burnet from Hawick, who died in 1861, aged 73. Their children included: John (1809/10–16); William (1812–43), who married Janet Mitchellhill; James (1814–83), who married Jane Murray; Minnie (b.1816); John (b.1819); Thomas (b.1822); Janet (b.1825); Mary (b.1827); and Alexander (b.1830). He could be the labourer in Newcastleton recorded as head of household in 1835. James (b.c.1790) farmer on the Loan. He is recorded on the 1841 census at about No. 53, living with no family and 2 servants. James (b.c.1795) shoemaker in Newcastleton recorded in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was living at about 12 South Hermitage Street in 1841. James (19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. His widow and children were living at about 7 South Liddell Street in 1841 and were on the Round Close in Hawick in 1851. He married Susanna Elder and their children included: Walter (b.1827); Lillias (b.1828); James (b.1830); Andrew (b.1833); Robert (b.1835); and Peter (b.1836/7). James (b.1815/6) postman in Newcastleton in the 1860s. He took over from Jean Elliot, 'Lucie Lass'. He lived on South Hermitage Street. He made deliveries along the Liddel and Hermitage Waters on alternate days, going at least as far as Saughtree and Dinlees (with children attending the smaller schools being used to carry letters further afield).

He was recorded as a labourer in 1851, living at about 3 Langholm Street. In 1861 he was 'Post Messenger' on South Hermitage Street. He married Jane (or 'Jean') Murray in 1843 and their children included Mina (b.1843) and Mary Ann (b.1845). James (d.1860s) farmer in Hawick. He married firstly Jean Michie (d.1838) and secondly Margaret Scott (d.1870). He died at the age of 75 and was buried in St. Mary's kirkyard. James (19th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He married Margaret Murray and their daughter Jemima was baptised in 1850. James 'Jamie' (d.1903) devoted supporter of the Saxhorn Band for almost 40 years. Although he had no musical ability himself he carried the music chest, which he described as playing the 'Tin Box'. He worked for over 30 years in Elliot's stocking-shop - 'Eppy Sootie and Wullie Pairk, Geordie the Buck and Higgins Phill, Jamie Nichol the Hawick band clairk, The Duddy Laird and Shallow Bill' [HI]. Janetus (19th C.) carter in Castleton. In 1832 he acknowledged that he was father of Betty Paisley's child. His forename seems unusual. John (16th/17th C.) described as 'Johne Nicoll in Craikhoip' in 1622 and 1623 when he was cautioner for Will Elliot in Huntlaw. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Murray and their son Simon was baptised in 1650. Thomas (b.1642), with no mother's name given, may also have been his child. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Malie Grieve and their children included: Margaret (b.1671); and an unnamed child (b.1676). John (17th C.) resident of Denholm on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Either he is listed twice or there were 2 men with the same name at that time. John (17th C.) resident of Spittal-on-Rule on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. John (17th C.) listed as cottar at Whitfield in Wilton Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He must surely related to Robert, who was also listed there. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His children included Rachel (b.1701) and Mary (b.1703). John (17th/18th C.) resident in Alemoor in 1712 when his son Walter was baptised in Robertson Parish. Other children who could be his include James (b.1705), Janet (b.1705), Thomas (b.1714) and Bessie (b.1714); however, there are probably 2 families here. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1709 he was servant to Robert Thomson in Newmill and was also recorded in Newmill in 1710. He married Margaret Scott in Hawick in 1708 and their children included:

Robert (b.1709); and James (b.1710). The witnesses in 1709 were Walter Nixon, tenant in Hawick Shiel and merchant Walter Oliver, and in 1710 were Robert Thomson (tenant in Newmill) and John Dryden. It is possible he is the same John who was later at Allanhaugh Mill. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He was living at Lairhope in 1705 and was herd there in 1711. He married Esther Armstrong in Hawick in 1704 and their children included Janet (b.1705) and James (b.1711). The witnesses in 1711 were 'the two James Grieves tenants in Commonsides' (and hence the child may have been named after them). John (17th/18th C.) resident in Branhholme Town in 1717 when his son Walter was baptised in Robertson Parish. It is unclear why the baptism did not happen in Hawick, but 3 other baptisms of people from Branhholme Town happened on the same day. He may be the John who married Bessie Wilson in Hawick in 1708 and whose children, baptised in Hawick, included John (b.1711) and Bessie (b.1723). John (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Parkhill in 1717 and 1727. His children included Janet (b.1717) and Andrew (b.1727). Perhaps the same John was at Mabonlaw in 1723. He may be the John in Eilrig who in 1716 in Hawick Parish married Blench, daughter of James Scott, herd in Falnash. John (17th/18th C.) resident in Commonbrae in 1720. He married Janet Nichol and their children, baptised in Hawick, included: Margaret (b.1720); Janet (b.1724). The witnesses were John Chisholme, preacher at Caerlenrig and Robert Scott, tenant in Falnash. John (17th/18th C.) tenant in Allanhaugh Mill. He was recorded in 1718 as both 'workman in Allanhaugh miln' and 'servant in Newbigging', when one of his children was baptised in Hawick. He may be the John whose children baptised in Hawick Parish included William (b.1716) and Walter (b.1718). The witnesses in 1718 were James Davidson and Walter Scott, both tenants in Newbigging. His son William was created a Burgess of Hawick in 1737, suggesting that this may be when he reached the age of majority (consistent with birth in 1716). Perhaps the same John was recorded as 'workman in Crumhaugh' in 1722; he married Janet Rae and their children included Agnes (b.1720) and Janet (b.1722). The witnesses in 1722 were students John and Robert Cunningham. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Denholm. His daughter Janet was baptised in Cavers in 1722. Several other children, baptised in Cavers around the same time, may be his, e.g. John (b.1721), Janet (b.1722), Adam (b.1725),

John (b.1727) and Helen (b.1728). John (18th C.) resident at Priesthaugh in 1726 and 1728. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, include: Janet (b.1726); and Margaret (b.1728). Perhaps the same John was in Brugh in 1733 when his son William was baptised in Cavers Parish. John (18th C.) servant in Hawick. Along with ex-Bailie Walter Graham he witnessed a baptism for carrier George Richardson in Hawick in 1741. He may have been a servant of Bailie Graham. John (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Eilrig in 1735 when his son John was baptised. John (1717/8–92) tenant in Craik. He married Elizabeth Scott, who died in 1815, aged 88. Their children included: William (1759/60–1807), 2nd son; John (1762–87), 3rd son; twins Betty and Margaret (b.1764); George (b.1766), probably the farmer at Philhope; and Margaret (again, b.1768). He could be the John whose daughter Margaret died in Hawick in 1781. His daughter Elizabeth may have married Adam Scott (from Ettrick) in 1795. He may be the James who hired the Hawick mortcloth in 1760. John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His daughter Isabel was baptised in 1741. John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His son James was baptised in 1761. John (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish who married Margaret Inglis. Their children included: Margaret (b.1761); and John (b.1764). Mary (b.1763), with no mother's name given, may also be his child. John (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He married Mary Dickson in 1761 and their son John was born in 1762. He may be the same man as the father of George (b.1764), who lived at Broadlee. He was clearly separate from the contemporary John who lived at Craik. John (18th C.) barber and candlemaker in Hawick. In 1756 he married Mary Turnbull and she died in Hawick in 1787. Their children included: Robert (b.1757); and Michael (b.1760). The 1757 baptism was witnessed by Bailie Robert Howison and tobacconist William (who was surely a relation). John (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish who married Elspeth Little. Their children included: Mary (b.1769); Elspeth (b.1772); and Janet (b.1774); and John (b.1783). Perhaps the same John, married to 'Elizabeth Riddle' had children Margaret (b.1779) and Elizabeth (b.1781). John (18th C.) baker in Hawick. It is said that when coming back to Hawick from Kelso with a neighbour, they decided to have a race to reach the toll-bar at Spittal-on-Rule. His horse could not take the bend and leaped over the parapet of the Rule Water bridge there. However, since the river was in flood they both escaped injury and he was rescued by the miller, to continue on his journey later the same day. An inscription 'J.N. and his Horse's leap' was carved on the bridge. John (18th C.) married Grizel Graham in Castleton Parish in 1765. Their children included: Catherine (b.1766); and Janet (b.1769). John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1768 his child John with Elizabeth Noble was baptised, the couple being labelled as 'Fornicators' and the witnesses being shoemaker Robert Elliot and smith Robert Young. However, the same couple's proclamation of marriage was recorded in 1767. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Mary Nichol and their children included Jane (b.1770) and Walter (b.1775). John (1746/7–1819) weaver in Newcastleton. He married Mary Ogilvie, who died in 1795, aged 45. Their children included: Alexander, who died aged 12; John Little, who died in infancy; John (1790/1–1817); and Walter (1798/9–1818). The family are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. Francis (d.1868), who emigrated to Canada, may also have been his son. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Jane Ormiston and their daughter Margaret was baptised in 1779. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Betty Jackson and their children included: Janet (b.1784); David (b.1788); William (b.1790); Robert (b.1792); James (b.1795); John (b.1797); Helen (b.1799); Isabel (b.1802); and Betty (b.1806). John (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Elizabeth Thomson and their children included: James (b.1793); Robert (b.1795); Archibald (b.1797); Mary (b.1800); John (b.1802); Andrew (b.1804); and Walter (b.1806). John (1762–1839) son of John, he was baptised in Robertson Parish. He was shepherd at Broadmeadows. In 1792 he was living at Meadshaw. In Robertson Parish in 1790 he married Janet Brydon, who was from Ettrick Parish; she died in 1798, aged 30. Their children included: Isobel (b.1791); and John (b.1792). He died at Todshawhill and is buried at Borthwick Waas, along with his wife and mother Mary Dixon (1731/2–1807). He is probably the John, son of John, baptised in Robertson Parish in 1762. John (1764/5–1842) tenant at 'Carretrigg' (i.e. Carewoodrig). He married Jane Jardine, who died at Eweshopelee in 1851, aged 70. Their children included: Walter (1804/5–30); and Elizabeth (1812/3–28). They are buried at Ettleton. He was probably son of

John and Margaret Ingles, who are buried alongside his family. John (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Janet Anderson and their children included: Margaret (b.1790); Jean (b.1792); William (b.1794); and Janet (b.1797). John (18th/19th C.) resident of Lilliesleaf Parish. His children included: James (1791–1875), farm worker in Robertson Parish; an unnamed daughter (b.1792); and Christian (b.1794). He is probably the John (1761/2–1828), tenant in Whinfield, who is buried at Borthwick Waas (adjacent to James, who was hence likely to be his son). He could be the John son of Walter and Betty Stoddart baptised in Hawick in 1761. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as farmer at Woodburn Mill, when he owned 2 horses. He was living at Woodburn in 1800. He married Janet Cessford and their children included: John (b.1796); Betty (b.1798); William (b.1800); George (b.1802); and Janet (b.1805). John (b.c.1765) from England, he was a boot and shoe maker in Newcastleton. He was listed in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. In 1841 he was living with labourer Walter (probably his son) in the village. He may be the John who subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. John (18th/19th C.) recorded as 'Junior' mason at Whinfield in 1797 on a list of men on the ballot to serve in the Militia. He may have been son of John, who was farmer at Whinfield. John (1775/6–1867) from Kirkandrews, he was a mason in Newcastleton. He is probably the mason in Newcastleton listed in 1797 among men balloted to serve in the Militia. In 1799 he was in Blackburnfoot among those 'in the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in the parish of Castletoun' and he was still listed at Blackburnfoot on the 1801 Militia ballot. He is recorded by Pigot in 1825/6 and 1837 as a Newcastleton mason, as well as in Slater's 1852 directory. He and William Crozier were the masons who worked on the Holm Bridge. In at least 1841–61 he was on North Hermitage Street. He married Marion Murray, who died in 1868, aged 87. Their children included: Mary (b.1804); Nancy (b.1808); Robert (b.1810); Jean (b.1812); John (1814–78), who married Mary Dodd; James; Adam (1818–70) mason in Newcastleton; Thomas; and Margaret. He is buried at Ettleton along with some of his family. John (18th/19th C.) carter in Castleton Parish. He was listed as 'John, jun. carter, Castleton' when he subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821; this suggests that his father was also John. He may be closely related to James, who was also a carter in Newcastleton at about the same time. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Margaret Armstrong and their children included: Mary (b.1804); Alexander (b.1808); Jean (b.1810); and Nattey (b.1811). John (b.1792/3) born in Robertson Parish, he was shepherd at Billhope in Castleton Parish in 1841. In 1851 he was shepherd at Blackhall in Ewesdale and he was listed as a cadger and carrier at Raesknowe in 1861. He married Margaret Hobkirk, who was born in Ashkirk Parish. His children included: John (1818–83), baptised in Robertson; and Thomas (1826/7–46). His 2 sons are buried in Borthwick Waas. John (1801/2–89) feuar in Newcastleton Townfoot. In 1861 he was living at about 34 South Hermitage Street. He was probably the John who was on the Border Union Railway Committee for Newcastleton in the 1850s, and recorded as Newcastleton Town Clerk in the 1860s. He married Mary Elliot, who died in 1879, aged 71. Their children included: Janet (b.1829); Helen (b.1831); Jane (b.1833); Margaret (b.1835); Mary (b.1839); Elizabeth D. (b.1842); John (1845–1904), who died at Leeds; Agnes (b.1847); and Wilhelmina ('Mina', 1850/1–1926), who married a Tait and is buried at Ponteland. He and his wife kept a family register for the period 1802–54. John Pringle (1804–59) born at Huntly Hill, near Brechin, eldest of 7 children of John, farmer from Northumberland, and Jane Forbes from Aberdeenshire. He studied Mathematics and Physics at King's College, Aberdeen, trained as a minister at St. Mary's College (St. Andrews), but then turned to education. His first teaching job was at Duns. He came to Hawick in the early 1820s to teach in a school for practical education. He was master of the English (i.e. Parish) School from 1821 until the end of 1823. Here he was apparently inspired to follow an interest in astronomy by millwright Gideon Scott, and they watched a transit of Mercury in a garden at Allars Bank (probably in 1832, so he must have returned to Hawick specially for the event). He left Hawick, becoming editor of the 'Fife Herald', Headmaster of Cupar Academy and Rector of Montrose Academy, before becoming Regius Professor of Astronomy at Glasgow University in 1836. He was listed in Cupar in 1825 when he subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick'. He regularly gave lectures on astronomy, chemistry and geology. In 1831 he married Jane Tullis (1809–50), daughter of a Cupar printer. Their eldest child John, became a Professor and writer and their youngest, Agnes, married William Jack, Professor of Mathematics at Glasgow. In 1853 he secondly married the prominent anti-slavery campaigner and reformer Elizabeth Pease, against the objections of her friends and Quaker family. He was a life-long radical in politics, arguing for universal education. He was asked to stand as a Liberal candidate for Glasgow, and the Hungarian patriot Louis Kosuth stayed with him when he toured Britain. Although he published only 2 scientific papers (both on the Moon), he lectured extensively and published many popular books. He wrote the influential 'Views of the architecture of the heavens: in a series of letters to a lady' (1839) and 'Cyclopædia of the Physical Sciences' (1857), among other works. He was an inspiring teacher and gave popular public lectures, even travelling to the U.S.A., where he apparently influenced Edgar Allen Poe. He also returned to Hawick to give a popular lecture on Astronomy and was effusive in his praise for his former friend and inspiration, Gideon Scott. He popularised the 'nebular hypothesis' for the formation of the Solar System in books such as 'Phenomena and order of the solar system' (1838), and was the first to suggest a photographic study of sunspots. He is buried in the Grange cemetery, Edinburgh. There is a commemorative window to him at Bute Hall in Glasgow. John (b.1805/6) born in Roberton Parish, son of Adam, he was farmer at Tandlaw. In 1841 and 1851 he was helping his father at Tandlaw. In 1861 he was tenant at Tandlaw, farming 200 acres and employing 5 people. He was unmarried, but living with a housekeeper and 2 servants. Perhaps the same John was farmer at Coldhouse, listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835. John (b.1814/5) mason in Newcastleton, son of John. In 1861 he was living on North Hermitage Street. His wife was Mary and their children included James, Margaret, John and Marion. He may be the John who married Mary Dodd in 1854. John (b.1815/6) born in Ewesdale, he was shepherd at Ewesleeshope. His wife was Mary and their children included John. In 1851 he was also living with his mother Jane. John (1818–83) baptised in Roberton Parish, son of John who was shepherd at Billhope. In 1841 he was living with his parents at Billhope. In 1851 he was shepherd at Priestthaughshiel (and recorded being born in Ashkirk Parish). In 1861 he was shepherd at Braidhaugh south of Hawick. In 1841 he married Mary Stavert (the marriage being recorded in Hawick and Castleton Parishes), who died in Hawick in 1888, aged 67. Their children included Christina, Margaret, Marion, Thomas, Janet, Isabella, Thomas (again, b.1856), Eliza (b.1858) and Mina (b.1862). He and his wife are buried in Borthwick Waas. John (19th C.) resident of Hawick who married Mary Oliver. Their son William Oliver was baptised in 1849. John (b.1819/20) born in Roberton Parish, son of George. In 1861 he was farmer at Phillhope, farming about 1900 acres and employing 4 people. He was unmarried at that time, living with his mother Ann and 3 servants. John (b.c.1820) carter and farmer in Newcastleton. In 1851 and 1861 he was living on Montague Street. In 1850 he married Helen (or Ellen) Ogilvie from Hawick. Their children included Mark, James, John and Margaret. John (19th C.) married Janet Elliot, their daughter Margaret being baptised in Castleton Parish in 1847. John (19th C.) married Janet Oliver in Castleton Parish in 1841. John (1827–81) born in Hawick, son of William. He started as a journeyman warehouseman, becoming a master skinner and tanner. He ran what was probably the town's most successful tanning and wool merchants, succeeding to the business of Andrew Ewen in Slitrig Crescent. In 1851 he was living with his mother at 56 High Street; he may have been partner in what is listed in Slater's 1852 directory as 'Michael & Scott', tanners and skimmers of Punch Bowl Close. In 1861 he was at 1 Slitrig crescent and listed as a skinner employing 12 people. He was also a farmer. He entered the Council in 1867 for Slitrig Ward and was elected a Magistrate in 1869, then became Provost 1871–74. During his Provostship Commercial Road was developed and there was the stockingmaker's strike of 1872/3. He was presented with some inscribed silver plate on his retirement, and returned to the Council in 1878/9. He was a keen Common Riding supporter, chairing the Race Committee, and being a Steward at the Races. He was also Chairman of the first School Board of Hawick, as well as being a local curler and bowler. He married Janet W. Scott (one of the 'Whack' Scotts), who died in 1855, aged 24. He later married Annie, daughter of butcher George Davies. Their children were William Scott (who became Provost), John, Margaret Scott (who married solicitor James Barrie), and 2 children who died in infancy. A portrait of him hangs in the Town Hall and he is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. John Scott (19th/20th C.) son of Provost John and brother to Provost William Scott. He worked in the hosiery business in Leicester, joined London Scottish as a private, rose to commissioned rank and was awarded the Military Cross for leading his men in a bayonet charge at Mons. He probably married Florence Crane from Leicester. Leslie (20th C.) resident of Singdean. In 1949 he was fined after his bicycle collided with a motorbike! He lived to the age of 92. Margaret (b.1794/5) draper in Newcastleton, recorded in Pigot's 1837 directory and Slater's 1852 directory. In 1851 and 1861 she was on Stopford Street, already a widow. She had sons John and William. Mark (19th C.) third official Common Riding singer of Hogg's 'Teribus'. Patrick (16th C.) recorded in Philhope in 1579 when he witnessed the transfer of Rough-hope and Philhope from John Turnbull to Martin Elliot. Patrick (16th/17th C.) resident of Lairhope. In 1618 Walter Scott of Buccleuch complained that he had cut down '2 grite geist [joist] treis' from his lands of Gorrenberry. He may be related to James, who was at Hislop at the same time. He was ordered by the Privy Council to pay the Laird of Buccleuch £10. Patrick (17th C.) recorded in a deed of 1634 as schoolmaster at Lilliesleaf. He is the first teacher on record there. It is possible that the same Patrick was witness in 1651 in Ashkirk Parish. Patrick (17th C.) resident at Roan in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Robert (15th C.) resident of Hartwood. In 1494/5 Walter Rutherford in Phaup was allowed to compone for several crimes, including stealing sheep from him and John Fletcher. Robert (d.1699) resident of the Teviothead area whose gravestone is there. His wife Bessie died in 1701. The names of James Nichol and Marian Scott, also engraved on the same stone, are probably his parents (assuming that they survived him). Robert (17th C.) listed as resident at Whitfield in Wilton Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. John, who was also listed as a cottar there, was surely a relative. Robert (17th/18th C.) married Blanch Borthwick in 1703, both being from Hawick Parish. Robert (17th/18th C.) recorded at Outerside in 1712 when his son Thomas was baptised in Roberton Parish. James (b.1714) may also have been his child. Robert (17th/18th C.) workman in Weensland, probably originally from Wilton. It seems possible that he was son of William in Boonraw. In 1718 in Wilton he married Janet Paterson; she may be the Janet (b.1787), daughter of Francis Paterson. Their children included: William (b.1719), baptised in Wilton; and Francis (b.1722), John (b.1724) and Isabel (b.1726), baptised in Hawick. The witnesses in 1722 were Richard Scott of Boghall and Robert Scott, tenant in Newton, and in 1726 were Henry Orrock and Dand Gray. Robert (18th C.) tenant in Bowanhill in Cavers Parish. He was 'in Bowenhill' in 1714 when he married Anne Douglas, nurse to Rev. Robert Cunningham of Hawick. He was still at Bowanhill in 1726 when one of his children was baptised. He was described as tenant in Bowanhill in 1720 when he married Isobel, daughter to the deceased Robert Thomson; this appears to have been his second marriage. Their children likely included Robert (b.1724), James (b.1726) and James (again, b.1732). Robert (18th/19th C.) farmer at Philhope according to the 1789-97 Horse Tax Rolls. He was owner of 1 farm horse and 1 saddle horse at Philhope in 1797. He also paid tax for having 3 non-working dogs in 1797. He may have been father of the Robert who was a labourer at Philhope in 1812. Robert (1774/5-1852) born in Yarrow, he was an agricultural labourer at Deanburnhaugh. He married Catherine (or 'Ketty') Wilson (1781/2-1853). Their children included: Jane (b.1806); and Robert (b.1809). He and his wife were recorded at Deanburnhaugh in 1841 and 1851 (by which time he was a 'Pauper'). They are buried at Borthwick Waas. Robert (b.c.1770s) servant at Woll Rig according to the 1799 ballot for the Militia in Ashkirk Parish. Robert (b.c.1770s) servant at Orchard according to the 1799 and 1801 ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish. Robert (b.c.1780s) labourer at Philhope according to the ballot for the Militia in Roberton Parish in 1812. He could have been related to the Robert who was farmer at Philhope in the 1790s. Robert (18th/19th C.) married Mary Hall and had a son Robert (b.1807) baptised in East Bank Kirk. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Ovenshank in Castleton Parish. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. Robert (b.c.1790) stocking maker in Denholm recorded on Pigot's 1837 directory. In 1841 he was living around the Canongate. He married Agnes Turnbull and their children included: Betsy (b.1816); Andrew (b.1818); Catherine (b.1822); William (b.1824); Jean (b.1826/7); Nanny (b.1828/9); Robert (b.1831/2); Helen (b.1833/4); and Mary (b.1836/7). Robert (1793/4-1854) from Castleton Parish, he was a shepherd at Dryden. He is recorded at Dryden in 1841 and 1851. He married Isabella Glendinning (1788/9-1852). Their children included Adam, Janet and George. His family are buried at Teviothead. Robert (19th C.) married Isabel Glendinning and had a son George (b.1832) baptised in East Bank Kirk. Robert (b.c.1810) carter in Newcastleton. The family were at about 30 North Hermitage Street in 1851 and 1861. His wife was Betty and their children included: Jane; Mary; Jessie; Helen; John; Betty; Agnes; Walter; Margaret; and Rubina. Robert 'Bobby the Drummer' (1832/3–1920) son of Elliot, he was a weaver in Newcastleton, like his father. In early life he also worked as a drover, and knew the old roads well, from the Highlands to the Midlands. His nickname came from playing drums in the village band. In 1861 the family were living at about 23 South Hermitage Street. He was the last person in Newcastleton to work the hand-loom, which he had in the back of his house at 12 South Hermitage Street; he wove his last plaid in 1913. Robert (b.1831/2) hosier in Denholm in the 1860s. In 1861 he was listed at about Sunnyside as a 'wool frame knitter'. His wife was Christian and their children included Agnes and Betsy. Robert (1858–1911) house-painter in Hawick, son of William and Betsy Clerk. He married Margaret Wilson in Hawick in 1876; she was daughter of George Wilson and Helen Scott. Robert J. 'Bert' (??–??) founder of R.J. Nichol coach business in 1932. His children were: Bert, who continued the family business; Jessie; and Effie, who died young after an accident. Robert 'Bert' (1921–2008) son of Bert, he was born in Lothian Street. He was known as a swimmer in his youth and had a life-long love of rugby, particularly the Linden (which he captained); he also played a few games for Hawick R.F.C. He volunteered for the R.A.F. in WWII, returning to run his father's business until 1990, driving coaches to rural areas around Hawick, as well as trips further afield. For decades the firm brought schoolchildren from outlying villages to Hawick High School. He married Jean Douglas. In 1955 tragedy struck, when 2 of their children, Robert and Sheena drowned in the Cauld. He also had children Douglas and Dorothy. Ronald Andrew 'Ronnie' (1960–2015) rugby player and leader of the Drums and Fifes. Son of Bill and Lydia and brother of Phil, Ian and Lindsay, he was educated at Wilton and Hawick High School and worked as a plasterer and builder. A keen rugby player at school, he went on to play prop forward over 200 times for the Linden and was a regular for the Greens in the 1980s and 1990s, playing 180 games. He also represented the South of Scotland and was capped for the Scotland 'B' team in 1985. A great supporter of the Common

Riding, he was a member of the Drums and Fifes for 39 years, including being leader for 20 years. He also served as Chairman of the Common Riding Committee 2007–10, as well as President of the Callants' Club and 1514 Club. He married Lynn Frost in 1981 and they had a son, also Ronnie. Known affectionately as 'Big Ronnie', the nickname applied to the size of his heart as much as to the stature of the man himself. A tree and ornamental tree-guard were unveiled in his memory on the Kirkwynd in 2016. Simon (16th C.) tenant of the lands of Buccleuch in 1574, recorded in the last testament of Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme. William was also listed as tenant there, and they were probably both related to George, who was tenant at Bellendean. Simon 'Syme' (16th/17th C.) tenant of 'Fairnyleis' recorded in 1623. Michael Birnie in the same place was found guilty of stealing 30 sheep from there, belonging to him and his son William, along with Walter Scott of Todrig and his son Walter Scott. It is unclear if these lands were Fernieles in Rulewater, or somewhere else. Simon (17th C.) recorded in 1651 when he witnessed baptisms in Ashkirk for William Glen and for James (perhaps a relative). Simon (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Chapelhill in 1721 and Highchesters in 1725. His children, baptised in Robert, included: Francis (b.1721); and Francis (again, b.1725). Thomas (17th C.) tenant in Synton Mill. He was mentioned in a session record in Ashkirk in 1635, when Isobel Scott (also in Synton Mill) complained about Margaret Tullie calling her a witch and a thief. Perhaps the same Thomas witnessed a baptism in 1660 for James Scott (with the other witness being John Scott of Langhope). Thomas (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Malie Telfer and their children included William (b.1680). The witnesses in 1680 were John Scott in Ormiston and John Aitken. Thomas (17th C.) tenant in Peelbraehope according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Thomas (17th C.) listed as resident at Outerside on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Newton in 1721. He married Janet Nichol in 1704 and their children included: Helen (b.1717); Mary (b.1719); and John and Robert (b.1721). He could be the Thomas whose daughter Margaret was baptised in 1710. Other children of his were probably William (b.1704), Janet (b.1707), Esther (b.1711), Isobel (b.1713) and Jean (b.1715). Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was living at Buccleuch

Shiels in 1720, Howcleuch in 1722, Deanburnhaugh in 1725 and Bellendean in 1728. His children included: John (b.1720); Francis (b.1722); Jean (b.1725); and Robert (b.1728). Thomas (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Mabonlaw in 1766. He married Betty Sinton in 1765, the marriage recorded in both Roberton and Wilton Parishes. Their children included Alison (b.1766). Thomas (b.c.1780) shoemaker in Newcastleton according to the ballot for the Militia in 1801. Thomas (18th/19th C.) cooper in Newcastleton, listed in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. Thomas (19th C.) married Janet Laidlaw in Wilton in 1826. Thomas (1820/1–98) grocer and merchant in Newcastleton. He was at about 16 Douglas Square in 1851 and on North Hermitage Street in 1861. He could be the same as the baker recorded on Douglas Square in the 1860s. He married Julia Mitchellhill, who died in 1888, aged 63. Their children included: Margaret; Robert; Mary (1855/6–97); William; and Thomas (1863/4–98), who died at Portobello. In later life he lived at Brieryhill Cottage, where he died. He is buried in Ettleton Cemetery. Thomas (b.1820/1) carter on North Hermitage Street in 1851. He married Jane Kyle and their children included Helen (b.1848) and Mary. Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Bessie Hislop and their son James was baptised in 1654. The witnesses were George Dickson and James (who was probably related). Walter (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1656 he (along with Robert) witnessed a baptism for James (who was surely related). He may be the Walter who married Malie Nichol and whose daughter Bessie was baptised in 1650. He might also be the Walter who married Helen 'Bleck' and had children Jean (b.1661) and Francis (b.1662). The witnesses in 1661 were George Walker and James Vogan. Walter (17th C.) resident at Northhouse according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Walter (17th/18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. His children included Marion (b.1705) and Blanch (b.1706). Walter (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was at Howcleuch in 1718 and 1721. Probably the same Walter was at Eilrig in 1732 when his daughter Margaret was baptised. Children, baptised in Roberton, who may be his include William (b.1715), Walter (b.1718), Margaret (b.1719), Agnes (b.1721) and Walter (b.1723). Walter (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. His children included Janet (b.1744), Mary (b.1746), John (b.1748) and Robert (b.1750). Walter (18th C.) resident in

Earlside in 1726 when his son Thomas was baptised in Cavers. Walter (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Bessie Scott and their son Robert was baptised in 1729. Walter (18th C.) resident in Ormiston in 1730 and Deanbrae in 1733. His children included: Magdalen (b.1730) and Margaret (b.1733). Other children (baptised in Cavers) who may have been his included Thomas (b.1726), Mary (b.1735), Walter (b.1738), William (b.1740), John (b.1743), Adam (b.1745) and Alexander (b.1747). Walter (18th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Helen Dodds and their son William was baptised in 1750. Walter (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Bessie Stoddart and their son John was baptised in 1761. Walter (18th C.) resident in Todrig Mill in 1763 when his son Robert was baptised in Roberton Parish. Walter (18th/19th C.) wright in Hawick. He married Betty Wilson, who died in 1819. Their children included: Margaret (b.1770); Walter (b.1772); Jane (b.1772); Jane (again, b.1775); Margaret (again, b.1776); Betty (b.1777); an unnamed son (b.1779); Joan (b.1780); Mary (b.1783); and John (b.1783). He may have been witness to a baptism in 1783 for Francis Cairns. Walter (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He married Jean Elliot and their son Elliot was baptised in 1797. Walter (18th/19th C.) dyer in Hawick in 1797 on the list of men balloted to serve in the Militia. In 1799 he was among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in Hawick parish'. He may be the spinner of this name who was on the ballot in 1801. Walter (b.c.1770s) tanner in Hawick according to the 1799 ballot list for the Militia. He was still on the ballot in 1801. He could be either the Walter born in 1772 to Walter and Betty Wilson or the Walter born in 1775 to John and Mary Nichol. Walter (b.c.1770s) saddler in Hawick according to the 1799 ballot list for the Militia. Dr. Walter (1785–1858) son of William, he was born in Castleton Parish. His father was one of the first feuars to build in Newcastleton. He was the first mathematics teacher at Edinburgh High School. He is described by Thomas Carlyle, and in a letter from his sister Jane Carlyle. Walter (b.c.1805) resident of Newcastleton. His wife was Margaret and their children included Betty, Christian, Thomasina, Walter and Margaret. Walter (b.c.1805) resident of Newcastleton. His wife was Isabella and their children included Robert, John, Isabella, Betty and Mary. Shoemaker John (b.c.1765), living with him in 1841, may have been his father. Walter (1816/7–84) shepherd in Robertson Parish, born in Castleton. In 1871 he was shepherd at Broadlee. In 1840 he married Janet, daughter of John Muir (or Moore), who died at Branxholme Braes in 1888, aged 83. Their children included: Janet (1841/2–52), who died at Tushielaw; Robert (b.1843); John (1844/5–52), who also died at Tushielaw; and Walter (1847–1878), who died at Broadlee. In 1841 he was living at Deanburnhaugh with his wife and father-in-law and in 1851 and 1861 he was a shepherd at Crookwelcome in Ettrick Parish. The family are buried in Borthwick Waas. Walter (b.1831) born in Robertson Parish, son of James. He was a carrier in Hawick. In 1861 he was living at 4 Orrock Place with his wife Mary and daughter Jessie. His parents and other family members were living in the next-door house in 1861. William (16th C.) tenant at Buccleuch, listed in the last testament of Sir Walter of Branxholme in 1574, along with Simon also in Buccleuch, as well as George in Bellendean. William (17th C.) tenant in ‘Carritridge’ (probably Carewoodrig). Along with William Elliot (also in ‘Carritridge’) and several other men from the upper Borthwick and Teviotdale, he was charged in 1685 with being a Covenanter. However, all the men took the ‘Test’ and promised not to frequent conventicles. He could be the William who witnessed a baptism for William Nixon in Hawick Parish in 1678. William (17th C.) herd in Boonraw, recorded when one of his children was baptised in Robertson Parish. He married Margaret Brown, and their children included: Bessie and Agnes (b.1679); Thomas (b.1680); and Margaret (b.1682). The witnesses in 1682 were Walter Scott and Walter Sanderson. He himself witnessed a baptism for Robert Storie in Robertson parish in 1686. Perhaps the same William leased part of the farm of Todshawhill from the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1693. Either he or a later William in Boonraw married Janet ‘Whirk’ and had a daughter Janet baptised in Wilton in 1696; the witnesses were Robert Storie and Robert Ormiston. William (17th C.) resident of North Synton in 1694 when he was listed on the Hearth Tax roll there. William (17th C.) resident of Easter Cavers who was listed in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. William (17th C.) listed as tenant at Brighouse in Castleton Parish on the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. William (17th C.) listed at ‘vails’ (i.e. Valesburn) among ‘The poor in Hauick Parioch’ on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. William (17th/18th C.)

resident of Newton on Slitrig. In 1709 he married Janet Paterson in Kirkton Parish. William (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was recorded at Mabonlaw in 1718, 1721 and 1723. His children included: James (b.1718); Bessie (b.1721); and Marion (b.1723). He could be the ‘barn man’ who witnessed a baptism in Hawick in 1718 for John Dickson, workman in Branxholme. William (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Susan Lauder and their son William was baptised in 1726. The witnesses were Walter And Adam Scott. William (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Stouslie in 1735 and 1737. In 1735 he witnessed a baptism for James Dryden, resident of Clarilaw. He married Mary Ormiston and their children included James (b.1735) and Robert (b.1737). The witnesses in 1735 were William Scott and Thomas Irvine and in 1737 were Thomas Scott and George Graham. William (18th C.) shepherd at Teindside in 1740. He married Janet Scott and their children included Helen (b.1740). He is probably the William who married Janet Scott in Wilton Parish in 1730. William (b.1742) may also have been his child. The witnesses in 1740 were Walter Scott at Commonsideside and Thomas Elliot at Harwood. William (18th C.) son of John, tenant in Allanhaugh Mill. He was admitted as a Burgess of Hawick in 1737. He could be the William born in Hawick Parish in 1716. William (18th C.) workman in Hawick Parish. He married Janet Turnbull and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1742. The witnesses were carrier James Wilson and shoemaker Thomas Scott. William (18th C.) merchant who purchased 23 High Street from Robert Scott in 1753, and is probably responsible for the ‘All Was Others . . .’ plaque. He could be the William, tobacconist, who was Cornet in 1748. He is probably the tobacconist William who witnessed a baptism for John in 1757. He could be the William who married Janet Blaikie in Wilton Parish in 1756 and had children (baptised in Hawick), including: William (b.1758); James (b.1761); and Janet (b.1764). The witnesses in 1761 were Hector Blaikie (surely related to his wife) and John Knox and in 1764 were ‘Mr John Laurie student’ and Alexander Bunyan, officer (suggesting either that he was strongly involved with the Kirk, or that he could not find other witnesses). He could be the William who hired the Hawick Parish mortcloth in 1760. William (18th C.) recorded at Highchesters in 1763 when his daughter Ann was baptised in Robertson Parish. William (18th C.)

resident of Cavers Parish, recorded at Langside in 1769. His children included Jean (b.1769), Nelly (b.1778), James (b.1784), Thomas (b.1784) and Margaret (b.1786). William (18th C.) resident of Robertson Parish. He was at Philhopesiel in 1780 when his daughter Mary was baptised. William (18th C.) recorded as a carrier in Hawick in 1767 when he witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Thomas Waugh. He could be the same as one of the other Williams. William (18th C.) married Helen Rutherford in 1765, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Hobkirk Parishes. William (d.c.1795) part of a Hawick family popularly known as 'Ernpistols'. He was presumably related to James, who died in 1778 and had the same nickname. It was said that he was originally a baker (or perhaps a tailor), who became bankrupt at the end of the 18th century and moved to London as a journeyman. It is said that when delivering bread there, a wealthy lady was struck by him, started up conversation, and offered to pay for a commission for him in the Navy. He is also said to have returned to Hawick on one occasion, when people marvelled at how he looked in uniform, and to have died later at the Nile. He is supposed to have been uncle of William Nichol, who was 'Willie Brewed a Peck o' Maut' in the song by Burns. It is possible he was the 'Pistols' whose daughter Manie died in Hawick in 1800. He could be the 'William Nichol Tailor – or iron pistols' whose death is recorded in Hawick in 1804. William 'Sweet William' (d.1798) Hawick man whose death is recorded in the Parish register. Note that a separate William, husband of Isabel Brown, was recorded dying in the same month. William (18th C.) married Betty Hardie in 1780, the marriage recorded in both Hawick and Cavers Parishes. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isobel Brown in 1781 and she died in 1798. William (18th/19th C.) recorded as farmer at 'Gibsnose' (in Wilton) on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Probably the same William is listed at Pathhead when he paid the cart tax in 1790 and 1791. He is probably the William, recorded at 'Roadside' in 1791, who married Janet Elliot and had children Janet (b.1787) and William (b.1791). William (18th/19th C.) resident of Castleton Parish. He was one of the first feuars to build in Newcastle. He married Mary Murray. Their children included: Jean (b.1782); Margaret (b.1784); Walter (b.1785), who became mathematics teacher at the Edinburgh High School; and Helen (b.1789). William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish.

In 1794 he married Betty 'Weems', also from Hawick. Their son John was baptised in 1795. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1796 he married Mina Laidlaw, also from Hawick. William (18th/19th C.) baker in Hawick. He is recorded in 1797 on the list of men on the ballot to serve in the Militia. In 1799 he was among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in Hawick parish'. He may be the same as one of the other Williams. William (18th/19th C.) father of Provost John. He lived at 56 High Street. His premises are marked on Wood's 1824 map. His wife Mary was listed as 'Proprietor of houses' in 1851. His other children included Elizabeth (who married printer James Dalglish) and Wilhelmina (who married Bailie John Briggs). William (18th/19th C.) stocking manufacturer in Denholm recorded in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was probably related to Robert, who was also listed as a stocking maker. William (1788/9–1838) weaver in Newcastle. He married Margaret Nichol, who died in 1872, aged 78. Their children included: John (1832/3–1915), who married Margaret Beattie. They are buried in Etleton Cemetery. William (b.1790/1) farm overseer at Thorlieshope in 1841 and 1851. His wife was Janet and their children included James and Mary. William (b.1791/2) from Wilton Parish, he was farmer at Newlands in Minto Parish. He was recorded there in 1841, 1851 and 1861, farming 200 acres. His wife was Beatrice and their children included William, Janet, Jane, Beatrix, Christian, Adam, James, John, Francis, Robert and George. William (1795/6–1870) farmer in Newcastle. In 1851 he was a cattle dealer on Langholm Street and was still there in 1861, farming 12 acres. His first wife was Margaret Elliot, who died at Middlemoss in 1823, aged 26 (probably daughter of Thomas Elliot of Redheugh). He secondly married Agnes Nichol, who died in Newcastle in 1893, aged 85. Their children included: Helen (1828/9–34); John (1829/30–61); William (b.c.1833); Jane (b.c.1837); Helen (again, 1841/2–1922); Esther; James (1844/5–1923); Ann (1846/7–49); Agnes (1848/9–60); and Robert (1854/6–1923). William (1812–43) son of carter James. He married Jean Mitchellhill in Castleton in 1839 and they had a daughter Mary. In 1841 he was living with his brother-in-law Andrew Mitchellhill on North Hermitage Street. William (b.1833/4) farmer in Newcastle. In 1861 he was living on Langholm Street and recorded as farmer of 11 acres. His wife was Isabella and their children included Thomas and Agnes. William (b.1833/4) from Dunottar, Kincardine, he was recorded in 1861 as gamekeeper at Newlands Cottage in Castleton Parish. William (1837/8–1906) blacksmith in Newcastleton. He married Elizabeth ('Bessie') Davidson Nichol in 1873 and she died in 1898, aged 56. He secondly married Elizabeth Jane Scott, who died in 1955, aged 87. Their children included William (1874–8). They are buried at Ettleton. William Scott (1876–1932) oldest son of Provost John, he had early business training with Laing & Barrie, solicitors, then he worked in the offices of the Edinburgh Town Clerk. He also farmed at Acreknowe and Winnington Rig and later Girnwood in the Borthwick valley (which he inherited from his aunt Hannah Davies). He was secretary of the West Teviotdale Agricultural Society, involved in other agricultural activities and a Liberal in politics. He is probably the 'Mr. W.S. Nichol, Wilton Burn, Hawick' said in 1908 to possess the only known copy of the 1824 edition of James Hogg's 'Flodden Field'. He was councillor for Wilton Ward from 1923, and Provost 1928–31. He fought the changes brought about by the Local Government Bill of 1929, but then became Vice-Convener of Roxburghshire County Council. He was also a keen Common Riding supporter, being Chairman of the General and Ceremonial Committees. In 1923 he married Marie Morris of London. He resigned from public life for health reasons, and died in an Edinburgh nursing home, his ashes being buried at Girnwood (formerly spelled 'Nicall', 'Niccol', 'Nicol', 'Nichole', 'Nicol', 'Nicole', 'Nicol', 'Nicholl', 'Nickel', 'Nickell', 'Nickoll', 'Nycholl', etc.).

Nichol's (ni-kulz, ni-kolz) n. former skinner and tanner, John Nichol. He succeeded to the business of Andrew Ewen in Slitrig Crescent. In 1871 he was employing 15 men.

Nichol's (ni-kulz, ni-kolz) n. former bus company, based in Hawick, run by Bert Nichol and his son (also Bert) from 1932–89. Their bus depot was in Noble Street. They operated a regular country service around the Hawick area, as well as bussing pupils every school-day to Hawick from Newcastleton, Teviothead, Roberton and Bonchester. The company also ran tours and trips to Blackpool, Morecambe, Scarborough, Great Yarmouth and Bailleiul. At its height in the early 1980s the business had 9 coaches and 7 full-time drivers. The company ceased operating in 1990.

Nichol's Croft (ni-kolz-kroft) n. former name for the area previously called Matthew Henderson's Croft and now called the Village. The name is referred to in a Hawick sasine of 1610. It was used through the 18th century, and still survived into the 19th. It is unknown who the 'Nichol' was who gave their name to the land.

Nicholson (ni-kul-sin) n. George (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Elizabeth Johnston and their children included Thomas (b.1794), Margaret (b.1796) and John (b.1799). The witnesses in 1799 were Schoolmaster James Kirk and Walter 'Freedom'. He may be the weaver recorded on the ballot list for the Militia in 1799; he was a weaver at Whisky Houses in 1801, along with John and James, who may have been his brothers. George (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isabel Scott and their son George was baptised in 1804. The witnesses were Mrs. Arkle and Robert Tinlin. His wife is probably the Isobel Scott who witnessed a couple of baptisms recorded just previously to that of her own child. The next recorded baptism was for a child of James Sanderson and Isabel Scott in 1811, which may have been a second marriage of his wife. It is possible he is the same George who earlier married Elizabeth Johnston.

James (b.c.1780) weaver at Whisky Houses in 1801, according to the 1801 ballot list for the Militia. George and John were also listed and may have been his brothers. John (b.c.1780) weaver at Whisky Houses in 1801, according to the 1801 ballot list for the Militia. George and James were also listed and may have been his brothers. Robert (b.1817/8) frameworker in Hawick, originally from Dumfries. He married Margaret Haig and their children, baptised in Hawick Free Kirk, included: Christian Scott (b.1846); Agnes (b.1848); James (b.1849); Thomas Haig (b.1851); and Agnes (b.1853).

nicknames (nik-nāmz) n., pl. familiar names, sometimes shortened forms, and often descriptive in some way. At early times the only name would be what we would recognise today as a nickname, and many of these would give rise to later Christian names and surnames. However, later nicknames became almost a necessity, since so many people had the same surnames and Christian names. In 1839 the Hawick minister remarked on the particular local habit of 'distinguishing individuals by other than the names that properly belong to them', pointing out how the same names run in families, how the common usage of such nicknames sometimes meant that the real name might be unknown to their neighbours, and also pointing out that the names were even used in the register of deaths. William Norman Kennedy described the local propensity for nicknames in 1863: 'some of these names exhibit internal evidence of a personal peculiarity or defect, some arose from indulgence in a particular vice or the manifestation of a rare virtue, some from a social trait or a habitual phraseology ... some were named after birds of evil omen, as well as forest animals of fierce and implacable nature. Some had an appellation descriptive of bodily agility or inferring a mental qualification ... some being humorous, some sensual, and others indecent. On the other hand, many of these nicknames were titular, and took their rise from the place of abode of the party named'. There are nicknames recorded very early in the area around Hawick, including: 'Daft John' in 1491/2; 'Casy', 'Gaberlunzie', 'Gyde' and 'Tassy' in 1493; 'Blinnd John', 'Case', 'Corvus', 'Crackspear', 'King', 'Siders', 'Slitrig', 'Smith' and 'Young Rider' in 1494/5; 'Crackspear', 'the King' and 'Young Rider' in 1500; 'Bellit Robin', 'Blue John', 'Ginkin', 'the Lady', 'Nae Guid Priest', 'Park', 'Priest', 'Taburner', 'Vallance' and 'Wait-schod' in 1502; 'Bellit Andrew', 'Casy', 'Gy' and 'Lang John' in 1503; 'the Prince' in 1510; 'Blackhead', 'Braid Christopher', 'Geordie Go Wi Him', 'Laird', 'Lang Roger', 'the Lawyer', 'Little Roger', 'Merchant', 'Nelly's Jock', 'Reid Andro', 'the Sheriff' and 'White Sark' in 1541; 'Helen's Hob' and 'Hob's John' in 1561; 'Elder Will' in 1561/2; 'Wait About Um' and 'the Clerk' in 1562; 'Airchie Keen', 'Airchie's Will', 'Blue Tom', 'Clement's Hob', 'the Floor', 'Isonel's Robin', 'Mirk Hob' and 'Vicar's Rob' in 1567; 'Airchie Fyre the well as ‘Wicked Wat’, ‘John the Lameter’, ‘Walter the Ratton’, ‘Laird’s Wat’ and ‘Gibbie wi the Gowden Gartins’ among the 16th and 17th century local nobility. There are several early Cornets with cognomens, including the first recorded name, ‘Laird’ in 1703. Other examples from the 18th and 19th centuries include: ‘White John’ in 1701; ‘Black John’ and ‘Pope’ in 1704; ‘Doctor’ and ‘Wester James’ in 1705; ‘Skail the Mercat’ and ‘Heidhooose’ in 1706; ‘Duke Aitken’ and ‘Black Walter’ in 1707; ‘Young Whitegates’ in 1720; ‘the Crocodile’, ‘Little Auld Nanny’ and ‘My Lord Minto’ in 1776; ‘Black Andrew’, ‘Blinnd Jean’, ‘the Chief’ and ‘Pistols’ in 1778; ‘Meldrum’ and ‘Rough Jock’ in 1787; ‘Helen and the Cuddy’ in 1800; ‘Wullie on the Wundi Sole’ and ‘Kill Drys’ in 1805; ‘Garlic Jock’ in 1806; ‘Craft’ and ‘Peggy Cheap’ in 1811; and ‘Forfar’ and ‘Pawkie’ in 1815. Such names were once much more common than today, and a huge number of 19th century examples are collected in the poem ‘Hawick Immortals’. It is important to realise that nicknames were typically employed with no offence meant or taken, and that they would most often be used to refer to a person in conversation, rather than to their face. Nicknames appear to be more common for males, but many local females examples are known. Many such names are handed down in families, often through the oldest son. Some of the names still in use today go back for several generations, and some may be even older.

nickstick (nik-stik) n., arch. a tally, specifically ‘ti loss yin’s nickstick’ is to lose count or miscalculate something, especially the time of a birth – ‘Nickstick bodie, one who proceeds exactly according to rule; as if he has had one to dine with him, he will not ask again without having a return in kind, Teviotdale’ [JoJ].

nimmet (ni-mi) n., arch. dinner, appetite – ‘A guid nimmet’ [GW] (from Mediaeval English ‘none-mete’ or ‘noon meal’).

Nimmo (ni-mō) n. James (18th C.) recorded as ‘Eggman’ in Hawick in 1741. He married Janet Aitken and their daughter Janet was baptised in 1741, with witnesses dyker William Elliot and carrier William Aitken. His wife may be the daughter of William Aitken, baptised in 1708. Perhaps the same James ‘Nimmoe’ also married

Helen Hardie and had a son Andrew (b.1759), plus hired the Hawick Parish mortcloth in 1758.

Nimrod (nim-rod) n. nickname in use around the early 19th century. It was also the name of the black stallion ridden by the Laird of Langlands for about 25 years in the 18th century, especially during his ceremonial marking of the boundary between Langlands estate and the Burgh of Hawick.

nine-pins (nīn-pinz) n., arch. former name for skittles, a game played by some people in Hawick in the 18th and early 19th centuries.

the Ninestane Rig (thū-nīn-stān-rig) n. hill off the Newcastleton road, near Whitropefoot, site of a circle of standing stones. The circle is about 290 yards south of the summit. There are nine stones, two of which are large (about 6 feet and 4 feet, respectively) while the others are broken into stumps. The layout is slightly oval, measuring 23 feet by 21 feet. It is believed to be early Bronze Age. It was possibly the location for the ballad ‘Barthram’s Dirge’ and is also by tradition where Lord Soulis was boiled alive in lead. On the south side of the ridge, half a mile from the stone circle, are the remains of a settlement, composed of 2 enclosures. Note there is also a ‘Nine Stane Rig’ in the Lammermuirs – ‘They shot him dead at the Nine-Stane Rig, Beside the Headless Cross, And they left him lying in his blood, Upon the moor and moss’ [T], ‘They bore him down with lances bright, But never a wound or scar had he; With hempen bands they bound him tight, Both hands and feet on the Nine-stane lee’ [JL], ‘The Nine-stanes, his kimmers, Can snirk at his game, But Cauldcleuch and Gritmuir Think black-burnan shame’ [DH] (it is marked ‘Nine Stones’ on Stobie’s 1770 map; there are several places named ‘Nine Stones’ elsewhere in Scotland and England).

the 95 Bus (thū-nīn’-ee-flv-bus) n. the number of the Edinburgh to Carlisle bus service, which provides Hawick’s main public transport link with nearby cities. The number may have been chosen because it is approximately the distance between the 2 cities. The service has more recently been called the ‘X95’.

Nine-well Park (nīn-wel-pawrk) n. field south of the Stonedged farmhouse in the Rule valley. It was so-called because it contains nine separate springs, which were said to never fail.

Nisbet (niz-bi) n. small town off the A698 about 3 miles north-east of Jedburgh, and also a former station on the Jedburgh Railway of the Kelso Branch of the North British Railway. Here the Scots beat the English in a battle of 1355. Hertford's men razed 'Neyther Nesebett' and 'Over Nesbet' in 1545. There is little sign of the former parish church. Samuel Rutherford, Professor of Divinity was born here in 1600 (also written 'Nes-bit' and other variants; the origin of the name is probably from Middle English 'nesebit', meaning 'the nose bit', after the local topography; it first occurs about 1150 as 'Nesbet'; note that Nisbet House is near Duns).

Nisbet (niz-bi) n. Henry (b.1833) son of William and Margaret Young. He was listed as a tailor when he joined the Royal Artillery in 1852. He became a Chelsea Pensioner in 1873. James (1785–1854) religious publisher of London, who was father-in-law of Rev. W.A. Wallace. He was a native of Kelso, and one of the principal subscribers to the erection of Kelso North Church. His publishing company, James Nisbet & Co. published most of the books of R.M. Ballantyne, who was related to the Ballantynes of Kelso. He gave 2 flagons, 8 communion cups, 4 plates and a baptismal basin to the new Free Kirk in Hawick. The cups were in continual use until 1924 and the basin was later set in a carved font. John of Nisbetfield (17th/18th C.) lawyer, who was married to Agnes Riddell, and thus assumed the lands of Bewlie. He and John Riddell of Muselee were assigned a new loft in Lilliesleaf Kirk in 1707. He and his wife gave Bewlie (or perhaps half of it) to Walter Scott of Whitfield in 1713, since he had married their only daughter Agnes. Half of Bewlie was leased by him to Thomas Riddell in 1716. John (17th/18th C.) resident of Cogsmill in Kirkton Parish. His children included Ann (b.1721), Robert (b.1723), Janet (b.1726) and James (b.1729). Thomas

(17th/18th C.) herd in Headshaw. He married Agnes Dagleish and their children, baptised in Ashkirk Parish, included George (b.1715). W. (19th/20th C.) manufacturer of fermented ginger beer at 6 O'Connell Street. Walter (b.1824) son of William and Margaret, he was born in Hawick. He joined the 96th Regiment of Foot and was dismissed in 1865, thereafter being registered as a Chelsea Pensioner. Walter (19th C.) picture framer at Myreslawgreen. In 1854 he married Margaret (or 'Maggie'), daughter of George Dickson and Annie Affleck. Their children included: Robert, who worked at the Hawick Labour Exchange; and Margaret Young, who married Leonard Kersley, Hawick draper. Walter (1906/7–2010) born in Hawick, he served in the K.O.S.B. during WWII and then became a banker. He moved to Lanark in 1970, reorganising that town's banks, and becoming a councillor after retirement. He was also involved in developing New Lanark. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Berryfell in 1733 when he married Beatrix Scott. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1791 he married Elizabeth Sharp, who was also from Hawick Parish. William (b.c.1795) resident of Hawick Parish, originally from Crailing. In 1841, 1851 and 1861 he was a woollen frame-work knitter living at 4 Teviot Crescent. He married Margaret Young and their children included: Elizabeth (b.1817); Helen (b.1819); Christian (or Catherine, b.1821); William (b.1823); Robert (b.1824); Walter (b.1827); Beatrix (b.1829); Richard (b.1831); Henry (b.1833); James (b.1835); and Margaret (b.1837). He is probably the William who was one of the 6 elders of Hawick Parish who left in 1843 to form Hawick Free Kirk. He could be the same William who was one of the men in the vanguard of the Hawick band at the Carthaugh Baa in 1815, and whose recollections formed part of Robert Murray's 1863 article on James Hogg. William (1819–75) farmer from Sprouston, who moved to Hawick to become a butcher. He was one of the first Trustees of the Congregational (then Evangelical Union) Kirk, from 1848. In Slater's 1852 directory he was a flesher on Teviot Square. In 1851 he was already at 1 Buccleuch Street, listed as a master butcher, employing 2 men. 1 Buccleuch Street was at that time was 2 separate shops. He moved to 2 Howegate in 1864. He married Agnes Story (whose sister was mother of Walter Easton of the 'Jedburgh Gazette'), who died in 1883, aged 57. They had 3 sons, including William (b.1850, who succeeded to the butcher's business) and Robert. They also had 4 daughters, including Isabella Douglas (b.1848, who was the first wife of J.J. Vernon) and Margaret T. He is buried in Wellogate Cemetery. His wife died in Edinburgh in 1883. William (1850–1916) son of William, he followed his father into the butcher's business at 2 Howegate. He married Elizabeth, eldest child of farmer Walter Henderson. Their children were: Margaret Henderson, a teacher at St. Mary's Infant School; and William, a hosiery traveller in London (formerly written 'Nizbet').

Nitshiel Sike (ni'-shel-sīk) n. stream on the north side of the Borthwick valley, running past the cottage at Outerside in a roughly eastern direction. Outerside Rig is the hill between this stream and the Hoscode Burn. About half-way between Outerside and the Borthwick it has been suggested that a possible bridge mound could be related to the Roman road suggested to pass up the Borthwick valley.

the Nitton (thu-ni'-in) n. Newton, a farm at the Heights, just north of Hawick. It may have belonged to 'Robert Grundi de Neuton' in the late 13th century and was later referred to as 'Chamberlain Newton'. The original name came from it being granted to Walter de Berkeley, Chamberlain to William the Lion in the late 12th century. The lands were part of Hassendean Parish until that was suppressed in 1690. It was still listed as 'Newton, or Chamberlain Newton' in 1788 and 1811. There have been Scotts at the farm for many generations. William Graham was living there in 1799 and James Anderson in 1801 (sometimes spelled ‘Ni’ton’ and other variants; the name first occurs as ‘Chambirlayne neutone’ in 1259, as ‘Neuton’ in the late 13th century, and commonly as ‘Chamberlain Newton’ until the 17th century).

Nitton Muir (ni'-in-mewr) n. former farmstead near Newton, precise location uncertain, but presumably near the main road by the summit. The Hume family were living there in 1841. It was abandoned around the 1850s – ‘She, wearied, wan the Nutton Muir, When, lo! she spied afore her, A great white ghaist was stan’in’ there, Joost ready to devour her’ [JoHa].

Niven (ni-vin) n. George (b.1792/3) from Liberton, he was a tanner in Hawick. He was living at about 2 Backdamgate in 1841, but in 1851 was with his nephew Walter Scott in Langholm. He was probably the first person in Hawick to receive a full baptism according to the new evangelical principles of what would become the Baptist Kirk. The baptism was performed by Rev. James Blair in the mill lade off Slitrig Crescent in 1844. His wife was Margaret and their children included Robert and William. James (18th/19th C.) recorded as tenant in Lilliesleaf in the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. Sally Cornet’s Groom since 1983 (with a gap), performing these important duties for 35 Cornets. Thomas (18th/19th C.) carter in Byreholm in Castleton Parish. He was listed among heads of households in 1835 (also formerly ‘Nevin’).

Nivet (ni-vi) n. Henry (19th C.) married Helen Dryden in 1852. Their children (baptised in Hawick Parish) included: Helen (b.1855); Elizabeth (b.1869); and George (b.1871). He could be the ostler from Hawick who was living in Selkirk in 1851. Henry ‘Harry’, M.B.E. (??–) born in Hawick, he worked in the knitwear industry, then at the Henderson Tech., becoming Principal in 1975 and was awarded the M.B.E. in 1979. He was also involved with the Archæological Society, Harriers, Camera Club and other local societies (also written ‘Evitt’).

Nivison (ni-vee-sin) n. Alexander (18th C.) recorded in 1765 when he witnessed a baptism for Adam Leyden in Hawick. Rev. Alexander (1786–1861) 3rd son of Abraham, minister of Middlebie, he was educated at Edinburgh University and licensed by the Presbytery of Dalkeith in 1811. He became for a time a teacher of oriental languages, and had the opportunity to become a Chaplain in Calcutta, but preferred to stay at home, and so switched positions with James Brown. Thus he was presented to Robertson Parish in mid-1825 and ordained there in 1826. He was recorded at the Manse on the 1841 census, when his brothers Richard and William (both also ministers) were staying with him. He demitted in 1844, when he decided to give up being a minister, and he died in Edinburgh. He married Christina Thomson (d.1849) of Montrose and their children were: Elizabeth Broun (1826–1911), who married Dr. James Ogilvie, missionary in Calcutta, although another account suggests she married the same Rev. James Brown; Alexander (1828–61), who died in Melbourne; Abraham (1830–97) of Edinburgh; David Thomson (1834–67), who died in Calcutta; Christina (1835–51); and Euphemia Duncan (1838–1925), married William Stuart Sutherland of Edinburgh. He wrote a description of the Parish for the ‘New Statistical Account’ in 1834. John (18th C.) resident at Chapelhill in 1743 and 1752 when his children were baptised in Robertson Parish. His name appears to be written ‘Nievieson’ in 1743. His children included: Thomas (b.1743); Bessie (b.1746); and John (b.1752). Thomas (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. In 1690 he witnessed a baptism for Helen (who was surely related to him) and James Murray. Probably the same Thomas was herd in Langhope in 1697 when he married Bessie Murray, who was also from Ashkirk Parish. Their children included Janet (b.1702), John (b.1709) and William (b.1715). William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Earlside in 1727. His children included Agnes (b.1719) and John (b.1727) (also written ‘Neavison’, ‘Nevison’ and ‘Nievison’).

nivver (ni-vur) adv. never – ‘hei’ll nivver change’, ‘it’s nivver ower late’, ‘...made report this day that they niver trysted with the like emergence before them tabled ...’ [PR1714], ‘If ye tak it tae hert then ye’ll nivver gang wrang’ [WAP], ‘This is nae place for a Border man to gaun aboot. Niver a brae to pech up ower Niver a view’ [DH], ‘It niver happened dinnae fear ye, Petition signed by ilka Teri’ [MB], also used ironically – ‘ee’re never ready at last, ir ee?’, ‘never! A deh believe eet’, used emphatically, not at all – ‘‘Never sic a thing in oor heeds’, he replied’ [BCM1880] (note pronunciation; also spelled ‘niver’ and ‘never’ as in English).

the player pays to throw a stick, keeping any cakes that he knocks down (noted by J. Jamieson).

Nixon (nik-sin) n. Adam (16th C.) probably name of 'Eddy of Larestonburne', who is listed along with John in 1590. The and other Nixons were named in a complaint them by the tenant of Birdoswald about a raid made on his livestock in 1588. Agnes (18th C.) recorded in a disposition given in 1767 as being one of the cottars of Hawick Shiel who were responsible for making 'bakes' on the Common, in violation of the orders of the Hawick Town Council. Alexander (15th/16th C.) listed as being 'in the Brighous' in 1516 when a number of Nixons and other men of Liddesdale received remisison for their crimes. He may have been related to Henry in Larriston, William in Flicht and William in Steel. Alexander (16th C.) recorded as one of the tenants of Brighouse, along with 2 Williams, on the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. He could be the same man as Alexander 'of Stelle' who is recorded (right after William, younger of Brighouse) on a 1544 list of Scotsmen who gave their support to the English King. Alexander (16th C.) recorded at Larriston in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was listed right after Quentin 'of Lawrellstane', and was probably also related to George, Jeffrey, John and Hector, who were also listed in the same place. Alexander (16th/17th C.) recorded as 'Ekkie Nixsoun in Dyk' in 1611, among Liddesdale men who failed to appear at court in Jedburgh. Andrew 'Dand' (16th C.) mentioned in an English letter of 1542 as 'Dond Nyxson, Scottes man afore sent to Edynbourgh' from whom news came of events in Scotland. It is unclear how he was related to other Nixons. Andrew 'Dand' (16th C.) recorded in 1581 as 'Dand Nixsoun of Kewly'. He is listed along with many Armstrongs and Elliots of Liddesdale who complained to the Privy Council about crimes committed by the Scotts and their allies. His lands were probably those of Killoley, near Dinlabyre, and he was likely related to Hob, who was recorded being from there in 1590. Andrew 'Dandy' (16th C.) recorded as 'Dande Nixson' at Brighouse, right after Ringan in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was probably related to William, William, younger and George, who were also listed at Brighouse in 1544. Archibald (15th C.) recorded in the proceedings for the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh in 1494/5. Hector Lauder, brother of the Laird of Todrig, has remission for several crimes, including bringing in him and Robert (suggesting they were closely related) to take part in raids, perhaps on Whitlawhouse. Archibald 'Airchie' (16th C.) recorded at the Steele in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He may be related to other Nixons at the Steele in 1544, Barth, Archie, Thomas and Alexander. He may be the 'Arschie Nixson' who, along with Ninian Armstrong, had a bond in 1548 to enter 2 Fosters as prisoners at Ferniehirst. Archibald 'Airchie' of the Steele (16th C.) signed the bond of assurance with the English Wardens in 1584, his name appearing along with Harry of the Steele and Edward of Dinlabyre. His name is recorded as 'Arche Nixson of the Steill'. Archibald 'Cowfowl' (16th C.) recorded as 'Arche Nixon Cowfowle' in 1590 when, along with Elliots of the Steele and others, he was accused of stealing cattle and horses from England. He was also named in a second accusation of 1590 along with Will Elliot of Heuchhouse, Clement Nixon 'Clash' and others. Also in 1590 he was listed along with several Elliots and Shiels, who in 1590 were accused of attacking the farm of Dotland a couple of years earlier. Additionally he was named in 1590 along with Clement 'the Clash', as well as Elliots, Shiels and others who were accused by the tenants of Woodhall of stealing from them. He could be the 'Arche Nickson' recorded in 1590, accused of being on a raid of Elliots, Nixons and others who raided into England in 1588. He was recorded in 1595 when the Lord of Gilsland complained about raids into England; he is listed there as 'Arch Nyckson alias Cowfowle', but it is unclear what his nickname might have meant. John of Larristonburn and Clement 'the Clash' are also listed and hence perhaps related. It is possible that he is the same man as Airchie of the Steele. Archibald (17th C.) resident at Little Park in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Bartholomew (16th C.) listed as one of the tenants of the lands of 'Cleirlandis, Robsteid, Thomscotsteid, Cranswat, Gusbank, Hurklebuss' in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. He may be the same Bartholomew who was tenant of 'Stellis within the Dyk', listed first, along with Thomas and Jeffrey. He may also be the same Bartholomew who was tenant of 'Litlesteill' in the 1541 rental roll. He was 'Barte Nixson of Stelle' in 1544 when listed among Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII, and was probably related to the other Nixons listed there, namely Archie, Thomas and Alexander. 'Wille Nixon Barte son', also listed in 1544 may have been his son. Charles (18th/19th C.) son of Hawick manufacturer John. He was a solicitor in Nottingham and then Leeds. In 1849 he served as one of the executors for the estate of his brother John. Clement 'Clem' (16th C.) recorded as 'Clemme Niksoun in the Esscheis' in the register of the Privy Council in 1581. He was a servant and dependant of Robert Elliot of Redheugh, and had been taken prisoner by Lance Armstrong of Whithaugh, because Elliot had refused to make him answerable to the Warden for various crimes. In 1581/2 he was 'Clemme Niksoun, callit of the Hye Asches' when accused of leading a band who stole 6 cows from a farm at Huntly; his son John was also listed, and he is said to have sold one cow to a merchant from Jedburgh called Milligan, who confessed, and they were declared rebels. In 1587/8 he is 'Clemme of Hie Asshis' when his son John is recorded being held in ward (by the Laird of Anstruther) as part of an attempt to quell unrest on the Border; however, he 'eshaipit and eschewit' and his pledge was charged to appear before the Privy Council. It is unclear where 'the Ashes' was. Perhaps the same 'Clemmy' was recorded among Nixons and Elliots complained about by the English Warden regarding a raid in 1588. Clement 'the Clash' (16th/17th C.) servant of William Elliot of Larriston. In 1590 he was named along with Archibald 'Cowfowle', as well as Elliots, Shiels and others, of stealing from the tenants of Woodhall; his nickname is recorded there as 'Cleshe'. He was further accused in 1590 among Elliots and others said to have stolen from the 'Hewrde' family, maiming and taking prisoner Christopher 'of the Whithall'; he is there 'Clemmye Nixon the Clashe'. Also in 1590 he was 'Clemmy Nixon 'the Clashe'' on a list of Elliots, Croziers, Nixons and others accused of rieving from William Robson of 'Allerweshe'. In 1595 he was among Nixons and Elliots complained about by the Lord of Gilsland for a raid on 'Haslegyll'; he is there recorded as 'Clemett Nyxson alias the Clashe'. John, 'Gleed Larriston' was also listed as a servant of the Laird of Larriston, and so they may have been related. In 1595 he was also complained about for two other raids, along with Archie 'alias Cowfowle', John of Larristonburn, Jenkin and others. There is a further record of a complaint by the English against 'Clemmy the clashe' in 1597. His nickname may have referred to being a gossip. Clement 'Clem the Croon' (16th C.) listed among Border chiefs by Monipennie in his compilation published about 1594 (but compiled earlier). His name is given as 'Cleme Nikson, called the Crune' and in 1578 and 1580 as 'Clemme of the Crune'. His son Quentin is recorded in the 1570s and 1580s being a pledge held in ward to suppress lawlessness on the Border. Edward (16th C.) listed along with George as tenant of 'the Dyke' in Liddesdale in 1541. Both he and George are also recorded on a list of Nixons, Olivers, Croziers and others, who gave their support to the English Crown in 1544. Edward of Dinlabyre (17th C.) listed in 1579/80 among men accused of raiding into England. He is recorded as 'Eduarde Niksoun, Laird of Dunlybyir', with his caution being John Carmichael, younger of that ilk. In 1584 he signed the bond of assurance with the English Wardens, his name appearing along with Harry and Airchie of the Steele. Fergus (16th C.) recorded at the Dykes in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. His name is given as 'Fargathe Nixson' (and 'Fergus' seems the most likely forename). 'Fargaises Willie of Kirkleheade' is named among men accused of rieving in 1592 (with no surname listed); given the rareness of the name, this could be his son. Probably the same 'Fergus Nykson' was listed along with 'Hob' and others in 1541, when accused of raiding Gilsland and killing Englishman Dandy Wigholm. Gavin (16th/17th C.) listed among men declared as fugitives for not appearing at a court in Hawick in 1605. He was also cited for not appearing at another court in Peebles later in 1605. He was 'in Burnefute', which was probably the place in Eskdale. Gavin (17th C.) tenant in Graystanehaugh in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. Geoffrey (16th C.) recorded among many men from Liddesdale who did not appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. His name was listed as 'gofredi nykson', and John was right before him. George (16th C.) recorded first on a list of Nixon tenants of Killoley on the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. The others were John, Clement and Andrew, who may have been related. He could be the same man as 'Georg Nixson of Larlestane' listed first among Nixson in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. George (16th C.) listed along with Edward as tenant of 'the Dyke' in Liddesdale in 1541. He may be the same as the tenant of the lands of Killoley. Both he and Edward are also recorded in 1544, swearing allegiance to Henry VIII. George (16th C.) recorded at Brighthouse in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was probably related to William, William, younger and Ringan and Dandy, who were also listed at Brighthouse in 1544. George

'Geordie' (16th C.) recorded among Nixons and Elliots who were complained about by the English Warden in 1590 regarding a raid in 1588. His son Henry was also listed. He could be the 'Geordie Nixon of the Larestoune burne' listed along with 'Hob' of Killoley, Hob's brother Jenkin, John (servant to Martin Elliot), as well as Croziers and Shiels accused in 1590 of stealing from the tenants of 'Lynbriggies'. Given this list, it seems unlikely he is the same man as 'Ill-drooned Geordie', father of Hob and Jenkin. George 'Ill-drooned Geordie' (16th C.) recorded at Killoley in 1588 when there was a complaint by Englishmen about a raid made on his livestock. His son 'Jenkin' is also listed; and since Jenkin was brother of 'Hob', then he was also father of Robert of Killoley. He is probably descended from the George associated with Killoley in the 1540s. He is recorded in 1590 among a group of Elliots and others accused of taking livestock and goods from Over Warden in England. Probably the same man was in 1590/1 'George Nikson, son of Will of Calley' among men that the Earls of Bothwell and Murray were to enter before the Privy Council; this means that his father was Will. He is the 'yll drowned Georde' and 'halfe drowned Geord' recorded in 1595 along with Jenkin and other Nixons, Elliots and others when there were complaints made about raids into England. He may be the George who signed a bond written by Sir John Forster to try to end family feuds on the Border in 1595/6. It is unclear what his nickname meant. Hector (16th C.) listed as 'Ector' of 'Lawrellstane' (probably Larriston) in 1544 when his son John swore allegiance to the English King. Several other men were also listed at Larriston, and so probably related, including George, Quentin and Jeffrey. Henry (15th/16th C.) recorded as 'Henry Nicsoun in Larishop' in a document of 1500 listing men who gave pledges to Patrick, Earl of Bothwell. This may have been Lairhope near Teviothead. Golfrid and Edward are also listed there, so they may be his brothers or sons. Perhaps the same Henry, son of John, is also recorded among a large list of men of Liddesdale who did not appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. Henry 'Crackspear' (15th/16th C.) recorded among many men from Liddesdale who did not appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. There he is listed as 'henrici nykson craksper'. He is also listed among a large number of men from Liddesdale and elsewhere who pledged good behaviour to Patrick, Earl of Bothwell in 1500; he is recorded as 'Henry Nicsoun, Craksper', separate from Henry 'in Larishop'. He may be the same 'Henry Niksone' and 'Nixsone' listed in 1510 in the Register of the Privy Seal among men associated with Robert Elliot of Redheugh, required to come before the King to promise to keep order, and then obtaining a respite for their crimes. William 'Nixson' is also listed there. Henry (15th/16th C.) named in a respite of 1515/6 along with Robert Elliot of Redheugh, William Elliot of Larriston, James Forester in Greenhaugh, Adam Crozier and others. He is also recorded as 'in Larestanys' in 1516 when he had a respite from the Privy Council for all of his crimes; also listed were several other men, including William 'in Flycht' and William 'in Stele', another Henry and Alexander 'in the Brighous'. The respite applied to all other Nixons, except Robert and William, 'brether sister sound to Johne Elwald'. It is likely that most of these men were closely related. He could be the same as one of the other contemporary Henrys. Henry (16th C.) listed in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale, along with William, as tenant of 'Kylsfurd' (i.e. Kilford). This William could be 'Grey Will of the Kyll Fuid' who is recorded in 1563, suggesting that he might be William's father. Another Henry (or the same one) is listed as tenant of Stripshielden, along with David. Henry 'Harry' of Howden (16th C.) recorded in the 1581 Register of the Privy Seal. His name appears with several Armstrongs and Elliots of Liddesdale who were accusing the Scotts of various crimes. He could be the same as one of the other contemporary Henrys. He is probably related to the earlier William of Howden. Henry (16th C.) recorded in 1584 as 'Herrie Nixson' who was 'of the Steill', along with Airchie. The pair signed an assurance with the English Wardens, along with Edward of Dinlabyre, to whom they were presumably related. Henry 'George's Harry' (16th C.) listed as one of 3 Nixons among the Border chiefs compiled by Monipennie sometime before 1594. He is recorded as 'Georgis Harie Nikson'. Probably the same 'Henrie Nickson sonne to Geordy' was recorded among Nixons and Elliots complained about by the English Warden in 1590 regarding a raid in 1588; he is there 'Henrie Nickson sonne to Geordy'. He may be the Henry who signed a bond written by Sir John Forster to try to end family feuds on the Border in 1595/6. Henry (16th C.) recorded in 1597 when there was a complaint against him, along with Robert Elliot of Thorlieshope, Hob Armstrong and Alexander Armstrong, for a raid on 'Ellinghamerigge' in England. He was referred to as being 'of Killforde', but Scott of Buccleuch argued 'that there is not such a persoune' (although there was a man of that name at Kilford 5 decades earlier). He may have got off for giving the wrong name or address! Jeffrey (16th C.) tenant of 'Stellis', along with Bartholomew and Thomas, on the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. He is listed in 1544 as 'Jeffaray', brother of Thomas 'of Stell', on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. Jeffrey (16th C.) recorded at 'Lawrellstedde' (probably Larriston) in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was probably related to George, Alexander, Quentin, John and Hector, who were also listed at Larriston. Jenkin (16th C.) recorded in 1544 on a list of Nixons, Olivers, Croziers and others, who gave assurances to the English King. He was recorded as 'Jenkyne Nixson of Stanesheld' (i.e. Staneshiel) and was probably related to John, who was also listed in the same place. He may be the English fugitive Jenkin recorded being reset by 'Reid' Simon Armstrong. Jenkin (16th C.) son of George of Killoley and brother of Robert. He is mentioned in a complaint in 1590 about a raid into England made by Nixons and Elliots in 1588. Probably the same 'Ginkyne' was accused in 1590 (along with Elliots and Shiels) of stealing from Roland Walker. In 1590 he was listed along with his brother 'Hob' of Killoley along with other Nixons, Croziers and Shiels, accused of stealing from the Wilkinsons of 'Lynbriggess'. He is recorded being 'of Kelleley' and was presumably related to the earlier Nixons from there. The other Nixons named in 1590 were his brother Hob and Geordie of Larriston Burn. He is probably the Jenkin recorded in 1590 on a list of Elliots, Croziers, Nixons and others accused of rieving from William Robson of 'Allerweshe'. Probably the same 'Jenken Nyckson son to George' was listed in 1595 among Nixsons, Elliots and others complained about for raids into England. In one raid he is listed along with George 'yll drowned Georde', who may have been related and in another he and John are both 'of Lareston'. John (15th C.) recorded in 1494/5 among Liddesdale men who failed to appear at the Justice-aire in 1494/5. Perhaps the same John's son Henry was also listed. John (16th C.) son of Matthew, 'callid 'no good clarke'. He was listed in 1541 among Scotsmen accused of burning the corn of William Carnaby at Halton. He may be the same as one of the other Johns. John (16th C.) tenant of 'Hesseldale' according to the 1541 rental roll of Liddedale. Perhaps the same John was joint tenant of Heuchhousehill in 1541. John (16th C.) recorded at Killoley in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He is listed as 'John Nyxson of Kellel', and was probably related to William, who is also recorded at the same place. He is probably the John recorded at Killoley in a rental roll of 1541. John (16th C.) recorded at Flicht in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was probably related to Matthew and 'Perswill', who were also there in 1544. John (16th C.) resident at 'Stanesheldes' (i.e. Staneshiel) recorded in 1544 on a list of Nixons, Olivers, Croziers and others, who gave assurances to the English King. He was probably related to Jenkin, who was also listed in the same place. John (16th C.) recorded in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was listed as being 'of Coulegayte', which could have been Claygate. John (16th C.) listed in a 1544 bond of support for the English King, signed by Nixons, Olivers, Croziers and others. His name is given as 'John Nixson of Lawrellstanes, Ector sone', and hence presumably Hector was his father. John (16th C.) listed among those implicated in the ambush of Scotts and Gledstains at Whithaugh in 1580. His name is given as 'Johnne Niksoun, callit Halyden', although the meaning of the nickname is unclear. He must have been a supporter of Lencie Armstrong of Whithaugh John (16th C.) son of Clem 'callit of the Hye Asches'. In 1581/2 the pair were among men accused of stealing cattle from a farm at Huntly; he was declared a rebel after not appearing to answer the charge. In 1587/8 he was recorded being warded with the Laird of Anstruther; however, he escaped and his pledge was ordered to appear before the Privy Council. He is recorded as 'laird of the Highe eshes' and also 'of the Higheshies' in 1595, listed along with his brother (who is unnamed) among men of Liddesdale and upper Teviotdale accused of raids into England. He is probably the John 'of Eshes' who was demanded by the English Commissioners as one of the hostages to be taken as a pledge for other Liddesdale men in 1597. He was further 'of the Eshes' in 1597 among men for whom the English Warden demanded pledges. John (16th C.) recorded in 1586/7 being 'in Dodburne' among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. John (16th C.) recorded being of Kilford in 1590 when there was a complaint that he and some Elliots had stolen in 'playne dayelight, thir hirdes' and 24 head of cattle from people on the English side in 1588. He may be the John recorded in 1590 among Elliots of the Steele, the Park, Binks, and others, accused of a raid into England. John of Larriston Burn (16th C.) recorded as 'John Nyckson of Lareston burne' as a raider into England in 1589/90. He is listed in 1590/1 being 'of Layrestenburne' among men that the Earls of Bothwell and Murray were to enter before the Privy Council. He is recorded being 'of Laiest burne' in Monipennie's list of Border chiefs published around 1594 (but probably compiled several years earlier). He and 'Eddy of Larestonburne' are also recorded in 1590 when there was a complaint against them by the tenant of Birdoswald about a raid made on his livestock in 1588. He was 'of Lareston' in 1590 among a group of Elliots and others accused of taking livestock and goods from Over Warden in England. In 1595 he was 'alias Larestoneburn, guyde and purpose maker' and 'of Lareston bre' when complained about by the Lord of Gilsland regarding 2 raids into England. He could be the John 'in Larestoun' who was convicted and executed in Jedburgh in 1611. John 'Gleed Larriston' (16th/17th C.) servant of William Elliot of Larriston. His nickname is recorded as 'gleed Lareston'. In 1595 he was among Nixons and Elliots complained about by the Lord of Gilsland for a raid on 'Haslegyll'. Clement 'the Clash' was also a servant of the Laird of Larriston, and so they may have been related; the pair were each accused of raids on England in 1597. He may also be the John accused of 2 further raids in 1595, one with 'yll drowned Georde' and another with Jenkin of Larriston. He may have been the same as one of the nearly contemporary Johns associated with Larriston. His nickname presumably referred to a squint. John (16th/17th C.) tenant in Riccarton. In 1611 John Moscrop, Burgess of Jedburgh, acted as cautioner for him in Jedburgh Court. John (16th/17th C.) tenant at Burnmouth. In 1624 Adie and Will Usher were convicted of stealing his sheep. John (16th/17th C.) recorded as tenant in Lawshill in 1623. Rowie Foster stole sheep from 'Callshiels' owned by him and Gavin Elliot 'callit of ye Schawis'. John (17th C.) tenant at Larriston Rig in Castleton Parish on the Hearth Tax records of 1694. Bailie John (c.1757–1812) Bailie and manufacturer. He came to Hawick in 1774, being an apprentice with William Irvine, linen draper. In 1779 he was recorded as Irvine's apprentice when the pair witnessed a baptism in Cavers Parish. He was one of the first large-scale hosiery employers, taking over from John Hardie around 1780. The original partnership was with William Irvine, George Noble and Thomas Sanson, but Sanson left the same year, and a few years later he was the sole partner. He paid the Shop Tax in Hawick in 1785. In 1786 it is recorded that he was running 8 frames, and started manufacturing ribbed stockings, and in 1795 he already had 12 frames. The firm spun the yarn as well as knitting the hosiery. His premises were on the High Street, where the Victoria Hotel was later built; he lived on the top flat, with the spinning jennies and warehouse below. Around 1793, along with Bailie Simpson, he presented the bible that used to sit at the end of the Magistrates' row in St. Mary's Kirk (and moved to the Old Parish). He is probably the merchant of that name who subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784). He was recorded as a manufacturer in Hawick on the 1790–91 and 1794 Horse Tax Rolls. He paid the dog tax in 1797. In 1799 his apprentice Francis Elliot is listed on the ballot for the Militia. Around 1799 he was one of the locals contributing money for the war with France. He was involved in the years 1799–1803 with a court case against merchant Walter Lunn, who was declared bankrupt. He started the early construction phase of what became Lynnwood Mills around 1803 or 1804, and there carding and spinning were carried out. In 1811 he was an Ensign in the 1st Regiment Roxburghshire Militia. In Hawick in 1782 he married Mary, daughter of William Grieve, tenant of Southfield. Their children included: John (b.1783); Mary (1784–88); William (1785–1871), who succeeded to the hosiery firm; Joseph (1790–1842); Charles, solicitor in Nottingham and Leeds; and an unnamed daughter. The witnesses in 1783 and 1784 were Bailie John Elliot and Robert Grieve (perhaps his wife's brother). He is probably the John whose eldest daughter Agnes married Robert Jardine in Hawick in 1811. John (1783–1848) eldest son of manufacturer John. He also became a manufacturer in Hawick, being a partner in the firm of Nixon & McKie. He was 'Junr. Merchant' in 1801 when listed on the ballot for the Militia in Hawick; this suggests he could not have been born after 1782. He was listed in London when he subscribed for 2 copies of Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He died in Nottingham and his inventory from 1849 is preserved, with his estate valued at £2300, his brother Charles and William Elliot acting as executors. Joseph (1790–1842) younger son of manufacturer John. He was a partner with his brother William. He subscribed to

Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. In 1841 he was living on Walter's Wynd with John (probably his son) and a female servant. When he died his brother was left as sole partner in the family firm. Rev. J.W. (19th/20th C.) Rector of Wetheral, Carlisle, who was appointed to help out with St. Cuthbert's in Hawick during the vacancy in 1910–11. Martin (16th C.) possessor of 'Hiefflycht' (i.e. High Flight) in 1541. He was probably related to other local Nixons. Matthew 'Nae Guid Clerk' (16th C.) mentioned in 1541 when his son John was listed among Scotsmen accused of burning the corn of William Carnaby at Halton. His name is given as 'Matho, callid 'no good clarke'', but it is unclear exactly what this meant (however, compare 'Nae Guid Priest', which was a nickname for an earlier Oliver). He may be the same as one of the other Matthews. Matthew (16th C.) tenant of Hightrees Cleuch according to the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. He may have been related to John, who leased the neighbouring lands of 'Hesseldale'. He is probably the 'Mathewe Nixon of Hetherclewes' listed in 1544, among Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. Matthew (16th C.) recorded at Flight in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was probably related to John and 'Perswill' who were also there in 1544. 'Pate Nixson Mathewe son', also listed in 1544 may have been his son, as well as William, Pate's brother. Mrs. ?? (19th C.) local lady who left a bequest called 'Mrs. Nixon's Bounty Fund', to be distributed to poor women in Hawick and Wilton. It was administered by the ministers of Hawick and St. George's and the Provost of Hawick, and still had a value of £2300 in 1939. She was presumably wife of one of the local manufacturers. Ninian 'Ringan' (16th C.) recorded as 'Renyon Nyxson of Brighows' in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was probably related to William, William, younger, George and Dandy, who were also listed at Brighthouse in 1544. Probably the same Ninian witnessed a bond in 1548 when some Elliots had a bond to enter Robert Crozier as a prisoner. Patrick 'Pate' (16th C.) recorded in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was listed as 'Pate Nixson Mathewe son' and could have been son of Matthew of Hightreescleuch. His brother William is also listed in 1544. Patrick 'Pate' (16th C.) son of Quentin, he is recorded at Larriston in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to

Henry VIII. His name was given as 'Patte Nixson of the same, Qwinten sone'. He was probably related to George, Alexander, Jeffrey, John and Hector, who were also listed in the same place. Patrick (17th/18th C.) gardener in Hawick who witnessed a baptism in 1702. Percival (16th C.) recorded in 1544 as 'Perswill Nixson, Fleght' on a list of Nixons, Olivers, Croziers and others who gave their support to the English Crown. He was probably related to John and Matthew, who were also listed at Flight in 1544. Quentin (16th C.) recorded at Larriston in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. His name was given as 'Qwinten Nixson of Lawrellstane'. He was probably related to George, Alexander, Jeffrey, John and Hector, who were also listed in the same place. His son Pate is also listed. Quentin (16th C.) son of 'Clemmie the Crwne' or 'Clemme the Crune'. He was held by George Buchanan of the Ilk, on a pledge of good behaviour to the King and released by 1578, but promised to meet again with other pledges in order to suppress lawlessness on the Border. In 1580 he was held in ward by the Earl of Lennox in Dumbarton Castle and later that year stated to be warded in Edinburgh Castle. In 1580/1 he was sentenced to imprisonment for theft, along with several Armstrongs and Elliots of Liddesdale. Christie son of Quentin was recorded in 1585 in a long list of men of Dumfriesshire receiving remission for past crimes. Quentin 'the Doo' (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1618 as servant to William Elliot of Hartsgarth. He was listed among a group of Elliots and others who John Scott in Newark complained attacked his farm at Foulshiels in Liddesdale, beating up one of his workers there. Not appearing, the accused were denounced as rebels. Robert (15th C.) recorded in the proceedings for the Justice-air held in Jedburgh in 1494/5. Hector Lauder, brother of the Laird of Todrig, has remission for several crimes, including bringing in him and Archibald (suggesting they were closely related) to take part in raids. Robert (15th/16th C.) listed along with William as 'brother, sister souns to Johne Elwald' in 1516. They are given as exceptions to the Nixons who had remission for their crimes, suggesting that what ever they were accused of was more serious. It is unclear which John Elliot was their uncle. Robert 'Hob' (16th C.) recorded in 1541 along with Fergus and others accused of raiding Gilsland and killing Englishman Dandy Wigholm. It is unclear where he came from. Robert 'Hob' of Killoley (16th C.) brother of Jenkin and probably son of George, 'Ill-drooned Geordie'. He was named in 1590 among several Nixons, Croziers, Shiels and others, accused of stealing from the Wilkinsons of 'Lynbrigges'. He is recorded being 'of Kelleley' and was presumably related to the earlier Nixons from there. The other Nixons named in 1590 were his brother Jenkin and Geordie of Larriston Burn (who was therefore presumably distinct from his father). Robert 'Scabbit Hob' (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1623 when he was accused of stealing sheep from 'Rosie' and her tenants of Mangerton. He was acquitted of the first cited theft, but found guilty of the second and ordered to be hanged. Robert (17th/18th C.) resident of Dodburn. He married Janet Riddell and their children included Janet (b.1705) and Gideon (b.1723). The witnesses in 1705 were William Henderson in the Flex and Walter Grieve in Branhholme Park. He is probably the Robert who witnessed a baptism for James Scott in Stobicote in 1720. Roland 'Rowie' (16th/17th C.) tenant in Brighousecleuchhead in 1622 when he promised to appear before the Justice Court to answer charges against him. Thomas (16th C.) tenant of 'Stellis' in Liddesdale in 1541, along with Bartholomew and Jeffrey, who were presumably related. He is also listed in 1544, along with his brother Jeffrey, plus 'Barte' and 'Arche', among Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. Thomas (16th C.) recorded at the Dyke in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. 'Fargathe Nixson' was also listed there, and so presumably a close relative. Walter (17th/18th C.) Elder of Hawick Kirk who lived at Hawick Shiel. He is probably the Walter who witnessed a baptism for John Irvine in Hawick Shiel in 1706. He was listed as tenant in Hawick Shiel when he witnessed baptisms for William Gledstains, for James Borthwick and for Robert Tudhope (servant to Falnash) in 1708 and for Walter Scott in Hawick Shiel, for John Nichol in Newmill in 1709, for John Turnbull (herd in Whitchesters) in 1710 and for William Hislop, his servant in Hawick Shiel. In 1716 he (and Simon Miller, also at Hawick Shiel) witnessed a baptism for James Borthwick, shepherd at Hawick Shiel, and in the same year he witnessed a baptism for William Hislop at Hawick Shiel. In 1717 he was appointed to collect monies from 'Hawickshiels, the two Southfields, Allan Haugh milne, Newbigging, and Raes-knowes', suggesting he may have lived in this area. He was still an elder the following year. He witnessed baptisms in 1718 (along with Walter Scott, both recorded as tenants in Hawick Shiel) for Matthew Charlton, in 1720 for

William Hill (weaver at the Flex), in 1721 for 2 men called John Scott in Hawickshiel, as well as William Hislop, in 1723 and 1725 for Robert Scott in Hawick Shiel and also in 1725 for John Scott in Allanhaugh Mill, for blacksmith James Gledstains and for workman Thomas Stoddart. He may be the Walter who married Janet Riddell and whose son William was baptised in Hawick in 1708. William (14th C.) owner of lands in 'Ermildon' (i.e. somewhere around Arnton Fell) in Liddesdale, according to a c.1376 rental roll. The list includes 'Locus Willelmi Nycson', valued at 21 shillings. Perhaps the same William was listed in 1398 among the 'borowis' for establishing the Earl of Douglas' bounds on the West March. William (15th C.) recorded among many men from Liddesdale who did not appear at the Justice-are in 1494/5. William (15th/16th C.) recorded as 'in Flycht' in 1516 when he received remission for his crimes from the Privy Council, along with several other Nixons and others. It seems likely he was related to Henry in Larriston, William in the Steel and Alexander in the Brighouse. William (15th/16th C.) listed as 'in the Stele' in 1516 among Nixons and other Liddesdale men who received remission for their crimes from the Privy Council. William (15th/16th C.) recorded along with Robert as 'brother, sister souns to Johne Elwald' in 1516 when several Nixons, except for them, were given respite for their crimes. It is unclear which John Elliot was their uncle. William (16th C.) name of 2 separate men who, along with Alexander, were tenants of Brighouse in the 1541 rental roll of Liddesdale. He is also 'William Nixson of Brighows' in 1544 when he was on a list of Scotsmen who gave their support to the English Crown; William, younger (presumably his son) was also listed, as well as George, Ringan and Dandy. William (16th C.) recorded at Howden in Liddesdale in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. William (16th C.) listed at Dinlabyre in 1544 among Nixons, Olivers, Croziers and others who gave their support to the English Crown. William (16th C.) listed at Killoley in 1544, on a list of Scotsmen swearing allegiance to Henry VIII. He is recorded as 'William Nixson of Kellele'. He was probably related to John, listed at the same place in 1544 and Hob recorded there in 1590. In 1590/1 his son George was 'son of Will of Calleley' among men that the Earls of Bothwell and Murray were to enter before the Privy Council. William (16th C.) son of William of Brighouse. He was recorded as 'William Nixson younger of Brighows' in 1544 along a list of Nixons, Croziers, Olivers and others who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. His father William was also listed there. William 'Willie' (16th C.) recorded in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was listed as 'Wille Nixson Barte son' and could have been son of Bartholomew of the Steele. William (16th C.) listed in 1544 on a list of Nixons, Olivers, Croziers and others who swore allegiance to the English Crown. He was listed as brother of 'Pate', who was son of Mathewe, possibly of Hightreescleuch. William 'Clement's Will' (16th C.) presumably son of Clement, he was known as a thief. In 1557 a bond was signed between Thomas Turnbull of Hartshaugh, George Rutherford of Grange, Adam Turnbull of Woollee and Adam Turnbull of Billerwell to capture him and present him at the 'airn yetts' of Ferniehirst. There is another bond of 1557 (where he is 'Clemattis Will') among several Armstrongs to present him at Ferniehirst. And a third bond by Hector Armstrong and others (including Archibald of the Steel) to present him to John Kerr of Ferniehirst in 1556 on the back of which is a bond by Hector Lorraine of Harwood to present 'Will Nyksone, called Gymmerhom', who could be the same man. William 'Grey Will' (16th C.) recorded as 'Grey Will of the Kyll Fuir'd'. In 1563 Gavin Elliot of Ramsiehill and others from Liddesdale entered into a bond with Sir Thomas Kerr of Ferniehirst to bring him in. He could be the William who was listed after Henry as being tenant of Kilford in 1541. Either he or a different William is also listed as tenant of Howden. He could be the same 'Gray Wil' listed among Border chiefs (along with Johnne of the Park) in Monipennie's c.1594 compilation. William (16th C.) listed as 'alias Kneates, of Higheschies' in 1597 among 5 Scotsmen delivered to the English Deputy Warden by Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch at Copshawholm. It is unclear where 'Higheschies' might have been. William (17th/18th C.) farmer at Branxholme Town in 1691, when there were 5 tenants recorded there. He was recorded as tenant in Castlehill in 1692. He could be the William, married to Janet Scott, whose son William was baptised in Hawick Parish in 1678, along with an unnamed son in 1673. The witnesses in 1678 were John Ker and William Nichol. He may be the William who witnessed a baptism for William Martin in the Flex in 1700 and probably the William recorded in Stobicote in 1707 who witnessed a baptism (along with Robert Thomas in Newmill) for Walter Wilson in Castlehill. William (18th/19th C.) farmer at Lymiecleuch, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. William (18th/19th C.) clerk with manufacturer John; however, it is unclear if he was related. In 1799 he was selected by ballot to serve on the Roxburghshire Militia. William (1785–1871) hosiery manufacturer, son of John and Mary Grieve. Born in Hawick, he moved to Nottingham, from where he was made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1806, after sending a new silk Cornet's Sash (it is possible that up until then the Cornets simply wore their best clothes, with no formal uniform). Returning to Hawick he worked in Nixon's and was himself elected as Cornet in 1813. He used to ride a white horse known popularly as 'Nixon's mare'. He also acted as paymaster or commissary for the prisoners of war who were in Hawick 1812–14, having 120 prisoners under his charge. The main manufacturing premises were at 52 High Street (marked on Wood's 1824 map), before Lynnwood Mill was built. The firm was still listed as 'John Nixon & Sons' in Pigot's 1837 directory, even although his father had died in 1812; it manufactured woollens as well as hosiery. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He laid the foundation stone for the Free Church, was one of its first Trustees as well as serving as a deacon. He later built Lynnwood House (where he is recorded in 1841) and was generally active in public life. In 1851 he is recorded as master wool-spinner, employing 115 people. In the 1860s he served as Vice-President of the local division of the Evangelical Alliance. He was also a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. He married Jane, daughter of John Elliot of Binks in 1814, and she died in 1877; the couple had no children. The marriage certificate of 1849 shows his wife's name to be Jane Elliot Graham (so it is unclear if this was a 2nd wife). He was in partnership for a while with Joseph, his brother. Later he was the sole proprietor of the firm of Nixon's and restricted himself to the preparation of yarn, with hosiery passing to the form of Nixon & McKie. A portrait of him exists. He donated 2 Adam Brown portraits to the Museum. He was involved in the 'Lang Stand Oot' and later with the development of a carrier on a broad frame, which led to a lowering of prices and wages. Hence, through the 1820s he was unpopular among the local stocking-makers, his effigy being carried through the town at one point, with an accompanying song – 'O, but ye're a loon, Willie! O, but ye're a loon! Ye brought the Shirra in a chaise To pull our wages doon' [T] (formerly written 'Nexsone', 'Nickson', 'Nicksone', 'Nicon', 'Niksoun', 'Niksoune', 'Nixson', 'Nixsoun', 'Nixyne', 'Nyckson', 'Nykson', 'Nyksone', 'Nyksoun', 'Nyxsoun', etc.).

Nixon's (nik-sinz) n. Messrs. John Nixon & Sons, stocking-makers, with their main mill at Lynnwood, built in the early 1800s. The weir built to divert water into the mill lade at Lynnwood was usually referred to as 'Nixon's Cauld'. John Nixon started as a hosiery manufacturer in 1780, spinning as well as knitting. The firm introduced more advanced hosiery machinery to Hawick in 1805. John Nixon died in 1812 and the firm was then run by his sons William and Joseph. Improvements to production in the early 1820s led to a lowering of wages for workers, which was an important part of the 'Lang Stand Oot' strike of 1822/3. William and Joseph Nixon were the partners in 1829, when they were given a grant from the Board of Trustees for Manufactures for spinning machinery. In 1837 the firm was listed on the High Street, still as 'John Nixon & Sons'; this was probably where the Victoria Hotel was later located. In 1842 Joseph Nixon died and his brother William was left as sole partner. He then went into partnership with William McKie, and the company was called Nixon & McKie; it was listed as such on Walter's Wynd in Slater's 1852 directory. The Lynnwood factory was sold to Thomas Laidlaw in 1864. They also built the factory on Walter's Wynd that was bought by Pringle's in 1869 and renamed Rodono.

Nixon's Brig (nik-sinz-brig) n. former name for a small, wooden footbridge near Nixon's Mill at Lynnwood. It was washed away in the flood of 1846, part of it ending up lodged between the Tower Hotel and waulk mills and another part washed up on the Tower Knowe.

Nixon's Mare (nik-sinz-mār) n. white mare called Molly, which was owned by William Nixon, manufacturer, who was Cornet in 1813. The horse was loaned to a few subsequent Cornets, and is seen in a portrait by Adam Brown.

nixt (nikst) adj., adv. next – 'The said day the Baylyeas and Counsell appoynted the Com-mone to ryd upon Fryday nixt, the first day of June' [BR1705], '...thereof they appointed thair meeting to be on Thursday nixt, the 3 day of May' [PR1711], '...should be put out of ye toun and not to reside therein till Whitsunday nixt' [PR1715] (note the pronunciation, even when spelled 'next'; a colloquial difference with standard English is that, e.g. if this is Saturday, then 'nixt Mond' is 9 days away, while 'this Mond' is in 2 days; cf. the less common neext and older neist).

no (no) adv. not – 'he's no is smert is hei thinks hei is', 'it's no fair', 'no a bit o'd', 'no bad, considerin', 'they'll no be lang in comin', '...The crimson current no congeal'd Wi frozen age' [JR], '...Yet we'll no mind – The tide may turn, we'll no' despair' [JoHa], 'No that I'm thinkin' love's a' that's needit ...' [JTe], 'Because ye think that yer a gentleman and I think that yer no' [RM], 'Aw'm no' in the tid for sermons ...' [RM], 'It's no' in steeds, it's no' in speeds, It's something in the heart abiding' [RH], '... sic a bleezer as it was, wui no a whuff o wund' [ECS], 'A axt um if this was the Haaick Motor, an whuther it was gaun back ti Haaick that nicht or no' [ECS], 'A job is valued for the time it takes, now. No' the work that's put intill't' [DH], '... Waxcloth, no carpet, on the flair, Doon oor close and up oor stair' [IWL].

no bad (nō-bawd) adj. quite good, excellent – 'yon taiblet's no bad, issen eet?', '... which is no bad, but a long way tae catch up on Andra Ballyntyne' [CT].

Noble (nō-bul) n. Alexander (14th C.) owner of lands in 'Ermildon' (i.e. somewhere around Anrton Fell) in Liddesdale according to a c.1376 rental roll. 'Locus Ellie Nobill' is listed there with a value of 6 shillings. Andrew (b.c.1810) hostler, recorded at about 21 High Street in 1841. By 1851 he was widowed and a frame-worker, living on Walter's Wynd and in 1861 he was a railway labourer at 77 High Street. His wife was Margaret and their children included Betty, Mary, John, Helen and Joan. Arthur (1864–95) son of Robert Noble, who gave his name to Arthur Street. George (18th C.) merchant in Hawick. He subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784). He may be the George, son of William and Margaret Pringle, born in Hawick in 1740. He married Jane Scott and their children included William (b.1771), Agnes (b.1775) and Walter (b.1777). His wife 'Jean' died in Hawick in 1778. George (1781–1816) poet, born at the small cottage of Kerfield, near the Dunion. He was an illegitimate child, raised mainly by his grandparents. He worked as a farm labourer. He was largely self-taught, becoming fond of mathematics, philosophy and astronomy. He became an acquaintance of James Veitch of Inchbonny and he wrote a verse about the path through the constellations of the great comet of 1811. Lord Buchan became his patron, giving him the use of a house at Dryburgh. His verses to the memory of Wallace are inscribed on an urn near the statue at Dryburgh. He also wrote an ode to the poet James Thomson. However, his health declined, and although a position as clerk was found for him at a colliery near Newcastle in 1815, he died a few months later.

Henry (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Priestthaughshiel in 1781 when his daughter Janet was baptised. James (17th C.) listed at Whithope among 'The poor in Hauick Parioch' on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He may be the James, married to Janet Murray, whose children, baptised in Hawick Parish included Walter (b.1682) and probably Helen (b.1684). James (17th C.) resident of Roberton Parish, when it still contained Hassendean. He was recorded in Parkhill in 1687 when his son James was baptised, with witnesses John Noble (surely a close relative) and Robert Learmonth. He may be the James who married Jean Thomson in Roberton Parish in 1687. James (17th C.) recorded as resident at Borthwickshiels in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. It is listed under the farms of the Earl of Tarras in Hassendean Parish. James (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. In 1728 he was in Roberton itself and in 1735 at Borthwickbrae. He married Isobel Ker in Roberton in 1727. Their children included: Agnes (b.1728); Walter (b.1730); twins Isobel and Janet (b.1733); and Mary (b.1735). He was living at Chisholme in 1733. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Calaburn in 1744. He married Isabel Ker and their son James was baptised in 1744, with witnesses William and Robert Scott. James (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish, living at Mervinslaw in 1751. He married Marion Young and their son Adam was baptised in 1751, with witnesses Robert Scott and Walter Irvine. James (18th C.) married Betty Douglas in Hawick Parish in 1769. Rev. James (1836–1883) born in Perthshire, son of Rev. James and Margaret Crow. He was educated at Edinburgh University, licensed to preach by Perth Presbytery in 1859 and became assistant at St. Stephen's in Edinburgh in 1861. However, later that year he was translated to be minister of Castleton Parish. He served as Chaplain to the Liddesdale Curling Club. In 1879 he attended the celebration for his colleague Rev. John Black of the Associate Kirk in Newcastleton. He died unmarried. James (1851/2–81) son of Andrew, contractor in Coldstream. He drowned in Hawick, and is buried in the family plot in Lennel. John (16th C.) tenant of Gavin of Elliot of Falnash in 1569. Elliot acted as cautioner for his tenants at a meeting in Hawick, assuring that they would obey the laws of the Lord Regent. John (16th C.) servant of Robert Elliot. In 1590 he was named along with 'Gib Elliott son to Robin' and John Shiel (another servant of Robert), as well as Elliots and Croziers, when they were accused of stealing horses from Middleton Hall. He was further listed in 1590, along with Nixons, Croziers and Shiels, accused of stealing from the tenants of 'Lynbriggs'; he is there 'Martin Elliott's man', but it seems that the same person is meant. He may be the John who signed a bond written by Sir John Forster to try to end family feuds on the Border in 1595/6. John (16th C.) tenant in Henderson's Knowe. He was recorded in 1590 in a case where Walter Scott of Buccleuch and Walter Scott of Goldielands were ordered to enter certain of their tenants to answer some English complaints. John (17th C.) resident at Horsleyhill on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He is probably the John who witnessed baptisms in Roberton Parish for William Collin in Horsleyhill in 1682, for Thomas Scott in Hassendean in 1683, for Thomas Robson in 1684, for William Scott, for George Hood, for William Collin, for Robert Scott and for James Noble in 1687 and for John Renwick in Horsleyhill in 1688. John (17th/18th C.) resident in Woodburn when his children were baptised in Roberton Parish. This included Mary (b.1712) and John (b.1717). He is probably the John who married Isobel Scott in Wilton in 1702 and additionally had children Janet (b.1703), William (b.1707) and Janet (b.1710) in Roberton, as well as John (b.1702) and Helen (b.1715), baptised in Wilton. John (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. He was living at Boghall in 1742. He married Bessie Scott and their children included: Margaret (b.1730); Agnes (b.1736); and John (b.1742). The witnesses in 1742 were Walter and James Scott. He is probably the John who witnessed a baptism in 1733 for Robert Darling, resident of Boghall. John (18th C.) married Rebecca Gibson in Wilton Parish in 1767. Robert 'Hobbie' (16th C.) Borderer who is mentioned in the ballad 'Jock o the Side', as well as in the eponymous ballad. The character in the ballads is perhaps based on 'Hobbe Noble', who was living 'hrd by the howse of Bewcastell' according to a 1583 letter of Thomas Musgrave. He could be the Robert Noble who died on his farm at Parkhead in 1620 (and hence was not hanged at Carlisle). Robert (17th C.) tailor in Effledge. In 1684 he was listed among men declared as fugitives for attending field conventicles. Robert (1839–1919) of Wellfield and later Heronhill and Borthwickbrae, he was from Biggar, coming to Hawick as a warehouseman and traveller for Dicksons & Laings. He became a junior partner in Richardson, Noble & Co. (established 1871), which built Glebe Mills in 1877. He founded Robert Noble & Co. in 1880 after Robert Richardson died. He was active in public life through being a J.P., President of the South of Scotland Chamber of Commerce and being associated with the School Board, the Cottage Hospital, the Gas Company, the Teviotdale Dairy and the Constitutional Club. He bought Borthwickbrae from William Elliott Lockhart about 1884. About 1895 he gave land around Borthwick Waas Cemetery for a shrubbery, and kept it up at his expense (along with the Grieve sisters). He married Isabella Armstrong (1841–1900) in 1860, and their children included: Jane Wilson (1860–79); Elizabeth Florence (1862–1941), who married James Scott; and Arthur (1864–95). The family are buried in Wilton Cemetery. The Trinity area adjacent to Glebe Mills was developed largely through his efforts, and Noble Place is named after him. He also left money for the Hawick Technical College. Robert (19th/20th C.) from Hawick, he attended St. Andrews Kirk. He was a home missionary in Glasgow (at Finneston) and London (Clapham Road). Walter (17th C.) among the men declared as fugitives in 1684 for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. He was tenant in Effledge and listed as ‘Taylor in Effledge’ in one account. However, it is possible this was confusion with Robert, tailor in Effledge. Walter (17th C.) listed as resident at Harden in Wilton Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Walter (17th/18th C.) living at Castleside in 1710 when his daughter Christian was baptised in Robertson Parish. He is probably the Walter who married Isobel Cuthbertson and whose son Robert was baptised in Ashkirk in 1706. William (17th C.) servant to Walter Earl of Buccleuch. He was listed in the deceased Earl’s inventory in 1633, when he was owed for his annual fee. It is unclear if he was a servant at Branxholme or in Edinburgh or elsewhere. William (18th C.) workman in Hawick. He married Margaret Pringle and their children included: Janet (b.1738); George (b.1740); and James (b.1743). The witnesses in 1743 were cooper John Aitken and ‘Officer’ Thomas Sword. William (18th C.) resident of Denholm in 1772. His children included John (b.1772). William (18th C.) gardener at Burnhead in 1793, when he was working for William Scott. He could be the William who witnessed a baptism for John Lorraine in 1754 (formerly ‘Nobill’, ‘Nouble’, ‘Nowble’ and variants).

Noble Place (nō-bul-plis) n. street in the Trinity area near the Glebe Mills, built around 1885 and named after Robert Noble. It was essentially built to provide convenient accommodation for workers at Glebe Mills.

Noble’s (nō-bulz) n. knitwear firm of Robert Noble & Co., founded in 1872 as Richardson, Noble & Co. Robert Noble moved to Glebe Mill in 1877. The company dwindled after WWII, but survived until 1962, when it merged with other companies (Walter Thorburn of Peebles and George Roberts of Selkirk), with Glebe Mills being taken over by Pringle’s. However, even the new merged company only lasted a few years. Papers relating to the firm exist, covering the period 1879–1959.

nocht (nocht) pron., arch. nothing, naught – ‘Thou sellist thy fowk for naucht ...’ [HSR], ‘...but A’d a thoosand rather be sair hackin’ treis than hing aboot like this daein’ nocht’ [JEDM], ‘He was daein’ nocht ava’ [GW], ‘...They are a’ set at nocht by the eicht o’clock bell’ [JJ], ‘There’s nocht without trouble, Ye mauna complain’ [GWe], ‘...The haufin kens that the world’s sweet And there’s nocht wrang’ [WL], ‘In wordly goods he’s truly blest, For he has nocht a thief wad steal’ [WP], ‘It’s nocht like what it used to be I doot I’ getting auld ...’ [DH], ‘...And, Lord, I am thankfu’ there’s nocht oot o’ place’ [DJ], adv., arch. not – ‘I am sorye that ye should nocht have rested your selffs a night with me as I loked ye should have done in yowr vaye and return touardis his Majestie’ [SB1597], ‘I will dosyre yow to spare me and nocht to trubill your self and me farder’ [SPB1629], ‘...to be paid to them in case the horse come nocht back again, or be lost’ [BR1644], ‘It ser’s me nocht to grieve my loss, But it sall be passin’ strange’ [WiSp], n., arch. a mean or insignificant person, cipher (also written ‘naucht’; cf. nowt, nowts, nothing and nihin).

nochts (nochts) pron., pl., arch. nothing – ‘If he were asked ‘What to do’, [he answered] ‘Nochts ava.’’ [HAST1868], ‘There was nochts left o the nerrest-hand loch bit paddihs, fishes stankin for braith, an glet’ [ECS] (cf. nocht and nowts).

Noctes Hawickianæ (nok-teez-hIk-ee-an-ā) n. book published at the end of 1859, containing caricatures and sketches describing the adventures of a theatrical troupe who spent 9 days performing in the Subscription Rooms in Hawick a few weeks earlier. The sub-title was 'Ye Drama on ye Borders. Being ye feates and adventures of a dramatic companie, what they did, and how they did it, with ye folks they met, and how they met them, and exhibiting ye effects in modern Athens of a very distant explosion, and who were affected thereby, illustrated in upwards of one hundred humorous sketches, embracing portraits of ye Dramatis Personæ, from photographs by Treuffitt Brothers, and veritable likenesses of other parties from Nature'. The pseudonymous authors were Charles K. Tynte and Austin Burns. The illustrations were actually by Keeley Halswelle (with the assistance of Burns Bryson). The book is now rather rare. It contains a couple of sketches of Hawick streets in 1856, as well as a view including Goldielands Tower and caricatures of a few Hawick residents of the time. W.E. Wilson gave a lecture on the book in 1917.

No Kiddin (no-ki-din) n. popular music band based in Hawick in the late 1970s. They consisted of Kenneth Stoddart (keyboards and synthesiser), Stevie Turnbull (lead/rhythm guitar), Paul Desport (lead singer), Jim Inglis (bass guitar) and Derek Lunn (drums).

nolt (nōlt, nōl') n., pl., arch. cattle – 'Item, whatsoever person or personnes that has thair hors, meiris, or nolt of any sort, out of ane house in Hawick ...' [BR1640], '...the great inconvenience that follows by Burgesses who live not in the town, their putting horse, nolt and sheep to the Common ...' [BR1720], '...had no right, title, interest, clame of right, property, or possession to the said Commonty, nor privilege of pasturing yrupon with horse, nolt, or other cattle ...' [BR1734], '...at riding the Common tearly the riders were in use to hound and drive out of the Common all the horse, nolt, and sheep belonging to the tenants on the confines of the Common ...' [C&L1767], a bullock, single head of cattle – 'A cow £22; a nolt £7' [BR1638] (cf. nowt).

Nolt-lair (nōl'-lār) n. former lands in Liddesdale, adjacent to Yethouse. It is written as 'Nolt-lares' in 1632, among lands possessed by Hab Henderson, and including Hightrees, Burnmouth, Dawstonburn and Prickinghaugh. It is probably the 'Noltlawis' recorded in 1611 when Hob, son to Jamie Henderson there, was listed for non-appearance in court at Jedburgh. In the 1718 survey of Scott of Buccleuch properties, it was 'Noutlares' and combined with Yethouse to cover 70 acres.

Nolt-lair (nōl'-lār) n. lands that were part of Lilliesleaf Common. Along with Stotfield, it was described in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls that it was feued by John Scott in Bewlie Mains.

nominat (no-mi-na', -ni') v., arch. to nominate, name – '...and nominat James Scott, called of Westport, to be Corronett for that year' [BR1705], pp. nominated, named – '...the elders after nominate were ordered to collect ye money for propagating Christian knowledge in ye High-lands and Northern Islands' [PR1717], 'And recommend it to those whom they shall nominat for that effect, to take advice in the first place of the Honourable Laird of Cavers' [PR1724] (also spelled 'nominate').

non-entry (non-en-tree) n., arch. failure to enter possession of a property, amount due for payment on this occurrence, failure to appear in court – '...Robert Scott of Allanehauch, his airis and assignais ane or ma, the nonentres, mailies, fermes and dewteis of all and hail the landis and lordship of Quhitchester ...' [SB1569].

noo (noo) adv., arch., poet. now – 'But when oor ribs they nearly cut the skin through, 'Tis time to cry – 'Come, doctor! let alane noo'' [JoHa], 'Noo, aw was nae wey feard ...' [BCM1880], 'Keep up yer credit, Ye're somebody noo' [GWe], 'Noo a' is richt, the day is bricht' [RH], 'The simmers fled, she's waitin still, Nae wooer nou comes near' [WL], 'When the Fair day comes roun' In the times we ken noo ...' [WL], 'And noo ilka day she ca's in while I wark ...' [DJ] (not particularly Hawick, where the word is 'now' or in some contexts nih; also spelled 'nou').

noo-a-days (noo-u-dāz) adv., arch. nowadays – '...an' yow that has schule lair an' awquant wi' sae muckle new licht o' things they hae fund oot noo-a-days aboot the sterns an' sae an' sae' [BCM1880] (not particularly local).

Nook Haugh (nook-hawch) n. farm in Ashkirk Parish. It was listed in the 1841 and 1861 censuses and was probably the same as Haughheid.

noomer (noo-mur) n., v., arch. number (also nummer).

noost (noost) n., arch. the action of a horse's teeth in grinding its food, v. to chew food, particularly said of a horse (noted by J. Jamieson).

noozle (noo-zul) v., arch. to press, squeeze (noted by J. Jamieson; also nuizle).

nor (nor) conj., arch. nor (used in various forms where modern English would have 'or' or other words) – 'I, myn aieris nor assignais, nor nane vthir in myn nor thair namis, sal nor may in ony time ask, raise nor clame ony mair of the said nyne hundreth merkis ...' [SB1470], than (usually after comparisons) – '...and gif it be mair nor £20, and within £40, thirteen shillings and four pennies ...' [BR1640], '...that no persone sall bruick the office of bailliarie longer nor the space of twa years together ...' [BR1648], 'aw daursay John yer congregation's better t'ye nor a hantel aw could name ...' [WNK], '...howe mukle bettir is thy loefe nor wyne!' [HSR], 'Thou art fairer nor the childer o' men ...' [HSR], 'Nae mair nor newspapers!' [DH].

noration (nō-rā-shin) n., arch. noise, clamour of voices (from 'an oration').

Norbank see Northbank

Norham Castle (no-rum-kaw-sul) n. castle just over the Tweed in Northumberland, near the village of Norham. It began as a timber construction in 1121 by Bishop Flambard, and was developed as a stone keep in the late 12th century. However, it was involved in many national incidents, and was a garrison of the March Warden, although it was too strong to be affected by Border raids. The smaller 'Ragman Roll' was signed there in 1291 and the Scots suffered a defeat nearby in 1348. It was ruined soon after the Reformation – '... And at Norham Castle he cried 'I stand A Neville at last in Northumberland!' [WHO].

norlan (nor-lin) adj., arch. northland, originating in the North – 'But the norlan' wind comes laden Wi' bitin' frost an snaw! Oh weary, weary Winter, I wish ye were awa'!' [JT], 'An' that's as true as I'm a Scot, A redshank, Norland haggis eater' [JoHa], 'Oh cease they mane, thou norlan' wind, And o' thy wailin' let me be' [TDa], n., poet. someone from the north – 'Auld Lizzie the Nor'lan', in Lill'slea did dwell, In ma auld Granny's days – as she used to tell' [BM1901].

Norman (nor-min) n. James (20th C.) owner of the Station Hotel 1933–51. He sold Langbaulk to the Henderson brothers. His daughter Jean married James Aitkin Henderson, who became Provost.

Normand (nor-mund) n. John (13th/14th C.) first man listed on the inquisition of 1303/4 into the inheritance of William Charteris' half barony of Wilton. Most of the men are clearly local, and the inquest was held at Roxburgh. His name is written 'Normaund'. He also swore fealty to Edward I in 1296 as 'Normaunt', with a seal showing a lion rampant on a 6-leaved flower and the legend 'S'IOH'...BVRGES' DE BERW'I', although he was from Roxburghshire.

Noroway (no-ro-wā) n., arch. Norway – 'A wild fanciful popular tale of enchantment, termed 'The Black Bull of Noroway'' [JL].

Norris (no-ris) n. William (18th C.) resident of Denholm in 1780 and 1781. His children, baptised in Cavers Parish, included: Jean (b.1780); and Margaret (b.1781).

Northbank (nor-, north-bawngk) n. former farmstead and ruined 16th century peel tower in Southdean Parish. It is located between Steele Knowe and White Hill, to the east of the hamlets of Chesters and Southdean. The tower is about 5 m by 4 m and is ruined down to a single storey. Adjacent to the tower is an enclosure 23 m square, and there are signs of 2 other turf-walled buildings to the south-west; these are probably the remains of an earlier steading. The previous name for the farm may have been 'the Banks'. There are modern sheep-shelters there. The surrounding area has old rig lines, covering at least 22 hectares, enclosed by boundary banks and ditches. The more recent farmstead is about 500 m west of the ruined peel tower. It was valued at 22 shillings in 1538 and 1539. 'Belle', Thomas and 'Bennete' Laidlaw were tenants there in 1541, paying 22s yearly. The tenant of the farm there in 1669 was 'Lancellot Laidlie'. Robert Laidlaw and George Oliver, each with one hearth, are recorded there in 1694, as well as 'Culbert whilands'. Thomas Telfer was shepherd there in at least 1797–99 and Robert Douglas in 1801 (it is already 'Northbank' in 1538, and is 'Norbank' in 1669 and 'Norbanck' in 1694; it is marked 'Norbanck' on Blaeu's 1654 map, but it not marked on Roy's or Stobie's 18th century maps).

North Berryfell (north-be-ree-fel) n. farmstead on the east side of the Slitrig and more than a kilometre from Berryfell farm (which is sometimes called ‘South Berryfell’ to distinguish it). William Oliver was there in 1841. James Brunton was farmer in the 1860s, A. Jackson in 1868 and then Drydens until at least the early 1900s. The farmer there in 1872, Mr. Dryden, uncovered an ancient cairn, where pieces of pottery were found, as well as the top stone of a quern nearby. The farmhouse is now a ruin.

North Bridge Street (north-brij-stree) n. road leading to North Bridge, connecting the High Street (or Oliver Place) with Dovemount Place. Before the road was developed the general area had been in use as nurseries by Dickson’s. The name appeared around 1832, with the first house built in 1845. The southern end is just the opposite side of the street from Oliver Place. The middle section used to contain the houses and surgeries of many of the town’s doctors. Nos. 16 and 39 were designed by J.P. Alison in 1895, as well as a hotel on the street at about the same time. The northern end was built largely in 1899–1900, with Nos. 41–49 designed by J.P. Alison. The Art Nouveau inspired Nos. 43 (J.E.D. Murray’s studio) and 45 (Alison’s own house and office) are particularly noteworthy. Nos. 2, 4, 6 and 41 are grade C listed buildings, while 43, 45, 47 and 49 are grade B (also sometimes referred to as ‘Bridge Street’; named because it is the road to the North Bridge).

North Bridge Street Mill (north-brij-stree²-mil) n. former woollen mill situated to the south of the Teviot near North Bridge Street. It is recorded in 1872, but it is unclear precisely where it was.

North Brig (north-brig) n. North Bridge, being the bridge over the Teviot at the end of North Bridge Street, built in 1832 by John & Thomas Smith of Darnick. It was originally called the New Bridge, to distinguish it from the Teviot Bridge in the west part of the town, and was funded by the Turnpike Trustees, since it allowed for a much easier route to the North. In 1882 it needed to be widened, the corrugated iron parapets being removed and the pavement width added to each arch. This work was carried out by Scott & Thomson’s. Originally it had 4 arches, with 2 allowing carts to pass at the riverside. These were filled in when the river banks were later built up to street level. Stone steps also once led up from the water-side to Bridge Street near the present Library (shown on the 1858 Ordnance Survey map), and another set by the railway, while a steep brae led from near the Buccleuch Memorial to the haugh where Duke Street was later built. In 2000 the bridge was closed to road traffic when the Waverley Bridge was opened to carry the main south-bound A7. It is a grade C listed building (called ‘the New Brig’ until the railway arrived in 1849, then more often referred to as ‘the Station Brig’).

North British Railway (north-bri²-eesh-rāl-wi) n. company that built the railway line south from Edinburgh, reaching Hawick in 1849, and then succeeded, amid bitter political rivalry, to extend the line to Carlisle, completing what would be known as the Waverley Line in 1862.

North Burn (north-burn) n. stream flowing into the Allan Water from the north-east. It rises on Chester Knowe near the former farmstead of Newbigging and flows roughly south-west. It is also sometimes known as Newbigging Burn.

Northcote Street (north-ko²-stree) n. street between Dovecote Street and Laidlaw Terrace, built around 1884 and named after Sir Stafford Henry Northcote (1818–87), who was Chancellor of the Exchequer and Foreign Secretary (the fact that it is north of Dovecote Street can’t be a coincidence though!). The former joinery sheds of Archie Aimers on the south side were replaced in the 1980s by a small grassy area for the use of parents and small children.

Northcroft (north-kroft) n. former name for a farm lying between Stirches House and the Heap Hills. William Rutherford was recorded there in at least 1748–51. It was once part of the Langlands estate, but sold off around 1780. In 1788 it was valued at £20 and owned by Mrs. Shortreed, and she was still listed as owner in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. James Black was farmer there in 1841 and the owner by about 1874 was John James Scott Chisholme. It was sometimes referred to as ‘Nethercroft’ (marked on Stobie’s 1770 map, it ‘North Croft’ in 1748).

Northcroft (north-kroft) n. former farmstead in the upper Teviot valley, above Commonsides on Blaeu’s 1654 map. It may be the place of that name referred to in a 1581 complaint when Elliots there were molested by Scotts and others. It was part of the lands associated with Commonsides that were already occupied by Gilbert Elliot (brother of Robert of Redheugh) in 1591 when leased to him by Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme. It was leased to Gilbert Elliot (now of Kirkton) again in 1603, when it was described as a 20-shilling land (it is ‘Norchcroft’ in 1603).

North Croft Park

North Croft Park (north-kroft-pawrk) n. former name for lands in Minto Parish. It is listed in 1779 when included among lands whose liferent had been granted to Rev. Robert Elliot. They are still listed in the 1811 Land Tax Rolls, along with ‘Quarter of Whitefield House’, valued at £52 2s 9d.

the North Crofts (thu-north-krofts) n. former name for an area of Denholm, corresponding to roughly the part later developed as Riverside Drive. It is said that in about 1860 Mr. Laidlaw was digging there when he came upon several stone cists containing human skeletons (also sometimes ‘North Croft’).

North Greenholm (north-green-hōm) n. former farmstead to the north of the main farm of Greenholm in Liddesdale. It is marked on the 1859 Ordnance Survey map, just east of Leahaugh Cottage.

North Hermitage Street (north-her-mi'-eej-stree) n. part of the main B6357 through Newcastleton, lying to the north of Douglas Square. The British Legion Hall is at No. 3.

Northhouse (north-hoos) n. Northhouse, farm off the A7 between Newmill and Teviothead, near where the main road crosses the Teviot. The nearby side road goes up the Northhouse Burn to Old Northhouse (which is also referred to as just Northhouse). This was once part of the lands of Ringwoodfield. It was formerly home of a local branch of the Scotts and became part of the Buccleuch estates. John Scott was tenant there in 1498 and had 20 cows stolen by John Dalgleish and others in about 1510. In 1524, when Sir Walter Scott of Branxholme was regranted the office of Bailie of the lands of Melrose Abbey, he was given this farm and that of Thirlestane for his fee. In 1540 the King’s shepherd William Henderson is recorded being paid for oats there. Archibald Elliot of Falnash was recorded being there in 1547. In 1553/4 the lands were still held in fee (along with Thirlestane) for the office of bailiery; they were together valued at £20 Scots at that time. William Scott of Bowden rented lands there from Melrose Abbey in about 1557 for £5. The lands are listed among those inherited by Sir Walter Scott in 1574. Scott of Satchells lists Walter of Northhouse as the first of the 24 ‘pensioners of Buccleuch’, and says he was the first Scott of Northhouse. Robert Scott was tenant there in 1607. ‘Will’ Scott of Northhouse was declared a rebel in 1608 after failing to answer to charges that he had raided Stobs, stealing the writs and charters for ransom. Another tenant, Archibald Scott is recorded in 1619. It was still listed as part of Ringwoodfield in the Lordship of Melrose in 1634, 1653, 1661 and 1663. 5 people were listed there in the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694, with 7 hearths being recorded. Archibald Gledstains was tenant there in at least 1696–98 (he was recorded as ‘Mr’, suggesting he may have been the teacher or similar). Thomas Scott was living there in 1702. It was included in the survey of Buccleuch properties in 1718, when it covered 1678 acres and was bounded by the River Teviot, Braidhaugh, Doecleuch, Skelfhill, Phaup and Southdeanrig. William Coltart was there in 1726. Thomas Elliot was renting the farm in the period 1745–48 and Robert Miller in 1747. Walter Irvine lived there around the 1760s. In at least the period 1791–99 the tenant was Thomas Scott. James Linton was a weaver there in 1799 and Adam Anderson a mason in 1801. John Fenwick farmed there in the 1860s. In the early 20th century there were Amoses there. There was once a suggestion to divert the Hawick-Carlisle railway from there to Wilton Lodge. An ancient axe-head (perhaps bronze) found there was donated to the Museum in 1861, but subsequently disappeared (see also Auld Northhouse; the origin of the name is surely literal, and is also sometimes ‘Northhouses’; it appears from about 1500 as ‘Northous’, is ‘Northhous’ in 1498, ‘northous’ in 1502, ‘Norththous’ in 1524, ‘Northous’ in 1540, ‘Northows’ in 1547, ‘Norththous’ in 1553/4, ‘Northous’ in 1557, 1564, 1619 and 1663 and ‘Northhous’ in 1660 and 1661; it is already ‘Northhouse’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map).

Northhouse Brig (north-hoos-brig) n. road bridge over the Teviot on the A7, near where the Northhouse Burn joins the River.

Northhouse Burn (north-hoos-burn) n. stream that joins the Teviot from the south, near Northhouse. It forms part of the probable boundary line of the Catrail.

Northhouse Chaipel (north-hoos-chā-pul) n. former chapel at Old Northhouse. Its location is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map, although there are now no physical signs of it. It is said that there were burials in the attached graveyard until 1792, and several stones have been subsequently unearthed in the area. The graveyard is marked in 1863 on both sides of the stream, which is called the Chapel Burn. The chapel may have served the upper Teviotdale area before the chapel was built at Caerlenrig.

Northhouse Cottages (north-hoos-ko'-ee'jeez) n., pl. cottages at Northhouse, where the side road to the Allan Water (south from the A7) crosses the Northhouse Burn. A building that is no longer there is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map.

Northhousehaugh (north-hoos-hawch) n. former name for the flat ground by the Northhouse Burn, probably at 'Auld Northhouse', where the small church was built. There was once a farmstead here, near where the Catrail crossed the burn. James Miller was there in 1772. John Sinton, Robert Lunn and Robert Nichol were farm servants living there in 1801.

North Liddle Street (north-li-dul-stree) n. street in Newcastleton, running alongside the west bank of the Liddel (or Liddle) Water.

North Ludge see Minti North Ludge

Northope Burn (nor-thup-burn) n. stream that rises north of Craik Cross Hill, in a set of sikes called March Sike, Corse Grain, Rashie Grain and Laird's Cleuch Sike, and becomes one of the streams feeding the head of the Borthwick Water.

Northope Haugh (nor-thup-hawch) n. farmstead in flat ground by the Northope Burn, just to the west of Howpasley, in the upper Borthwick valley. About 250 m to the east are the remains of a large enclosure, with 2 smaller enclosures within it. And about 60 m to the south-west are another 2 small circular enclosures. The age of these features is not known. This was probably the farm of 'Noirhop' listed along with Craikhope in the 1627 valuation of Hawick Parish; together they were estimated at '100 lb., vicarage 16 lb'. It was also listed along with Craikhope on a draft map of the Borthwick in 1650, having 8 'communicants' between them.

North Port (north-pōr) n. former entrance to the town at the top of Walter's Wynd, between 47 and 49 High Street. This was the start of the road towards the North from the old town. A plaque was placed at 51 High Street by the Callants' Club in 1964.

North Stewart Place (north-stew-ur'-plis) n. original name for the street joining East and West Stewart Places, which were all named after Rev. James Stewart and part of the area popularly known as Stewartfield. It is now part of East Stewart Place.

North Synton (north-sin'-in) n. farm to the east of Ashkirk, but on the north side of the Ale valley, distinct from the other Synton (or Sinton) farms on the south side. It may have been part of the same estate as South Synton in early times, but was separate from at least as early as 1407.

North Synton

In that year Archibald, Earl of Douglas, granted the lands to Barnaby Veitch of Dawyck. Alexander Veitch was recorded as owner in 1502. David Thomson was farmer there in 1581/2. In 1601 it was described as having a 'tower and fortalice' and being an annexed part of the Barony of Dawyck. It was held by the Veitch family until 1641, when largely sold to Francis Scott of South Synton, except for Clerklands. In 1643 it was owned by Francis Scott of Synton, with the west side valued at £208 and the east side valued at £338. It was fully annexed to South Synton again in 1675. The 'laird of North sintoun' (who appears to have been Rev. Robert Cunningham) paid the land tax there on £600 in 1678; at the same time Francis Scott of Synton was the owner of Essenside, valued at £365. The value was the same in 1707, £600. Francis Cunningham of North Synton is recorded in 1690 and his sister Maria was served as heir to his 50-shilling land there in 1691. Dr. Gideon Elliot (son of the tenant in Borthwickshiels and descended from the Elliots of Horsleyhill) became Laird through marriage to Margaret Cunningham in 1691. The main house was taxed for having 7 hearths in 1694, and there were 9 people further assessed on the estate for having a hearth (William and George Easton, George Scott, George Tait, James and John Veitch, Thomas Cochran and William Nichol), as well as 8 poor people (Bessie Murray, Isobel Turnbull, Isobel Dryden, Jean Foster, Jean Elliot, John Fraiter, Janet Veitch and Margaret Dunlop). Thomas Aitchison was a cottar there in 1698, when William Telfer was also living there. Robert Scott was a cottar there in 1719. Robert Hunter was tenant in 1737. Charles Scott lived there in the 1790s. James and John King were farmers there in 1797. James King was farmer there in at least 1799–1801, Andrew Mather was a servant in 1799 and Walter Cavers in 1801. It was listed being owned by John Pringle of Clifton in 1788 (and still recorded this way in 1811), when valued along with Birkwood at £600. In the 1830s the lands were owned by Robert Pringle of Clifton. Andrew Riddell was farmer there in the 1860s, followed by John Riddell. The farmhouse was remodelled in the late 17th century, but contains parts of a 16th century building (the oblong part oriented east-west). The north-west extension and porch are modern. The house is 3 storeys on the south, but 2 on the north. The oldest part may have been built for James Veitch, who succeeded to the lands in 1536. The vaulted basement is still well preserved. There is also a ‘bun-shaped quern’ beside the east gable and a carved sandstone block built into the south gable. It is said that an upper chamber, the ‘Minister’s Garret’ was used as a hiding place by an ousted preacher during the Killing Times. About 200 m north-west of the farmhouse are the remains of a hill-fort, visible in aerial photographs, but largely obliterated by ploughing. About 450 m to the north-west are signs of rig-and-furrow cultivation. About 600 m to the north is an old enclosure, with nearby rig lines. And just south of the road, a little to the east of the farm, are signs of another settlement (its approximate location is marked as ‘Sintoun’ on Gordon’s c. 1650 map and as ‘North Sintoun’ on Blaeu’s 1654 map; it is ‘Northswentoun’ in 1475, ‘Northsyntoun’ in 1497, ‘Northsintone’ in 1525, ‘Norcht Synton’ in 1531, ‘North Syntoune’ in 1609 and 1691 and ‘Northsintone’ in 1704).

North Toll Bar (north-tōl-bawr) n. another name for Dovemount Toll.

North Toon-o-Rule (north-toon-ō-rool) n. North Town-o’-Rule, name for a cottage at the north side of Town-o-Rule farm, the same as the cottage known locally as Drythropple and renamed Heathfield for a while. This is where the poet John Halliday was living in 1851, as well as carrier John Gray and his family.

the North Tyne (thu-north-tīm) n. river that rises near Kielder Water, being one of the major river valleys of the English Middle March and joining the South Tyne near Hexham – ‘Then seeking the south that held his shrine, Heard the low hills echo ‘To Tyne! To Tyne!’ [WHO].

Northumbria (nor-thum-bree-a) n. ancient Kingdom of north-eastern England, also including parts of southern Scotland for centuries, and now the general name given to the English north-east. The kingdom was established around the year 600, including Bernicia (roughly from the Forth to the Tees) and Deira (roughly the Tees to the Humber). The name derived from being north of the Humber. Hawick would have been part of the Kingdom of Northumbria until the Battle of Carham in 1018.

Northumbrian (nor-thum-bree-in) adj. relating to present-day Northumberland or ancient Northumbria, n. the language spoken in Northumbria. This was originally one of Brythonic or ‘p-Celtic’ languages, most closely related to Old Welsh. In periods after about the 6th or 7th century the word is used to describe the early form of Anglian spoken throughout the Kingdom of Northumbria and that developed into Scots and in particular the Hawick dialect. Essentially the same form of p-Celtic is sometimes called ‘Cumbric’.

Northville (north-vil) n. private house at 25 North Bridge Street, which later became the Kings Hotel. The property behind it on Union Street was once the site of Teviot Grove Academy. The house was for a few years the home of the Blenkhorns.

North Witterside Road (north-wi’-ur-sīd-rōd) n. name sometimes used for Commercial Road in the mid-19th century.

Norville (nor-vil) n. John (17th/18th C.) wig-maker from Greyfriars Parish in Edinburgh. In 1714 he produced a testimonial to Hawick Session from his previous parish attesting that he had made ‘his publick repentance for his scandal’ and could baptise his child. Also in 1714 he was witness in Hawick to a baptism for Robert Miles. In 1720 he witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Walter Scott. He married Christian Scott and their children, baptised in Hawick, included: John (b.1714); Robert (b.1716); John (again, b.1719); and Martha (b.1725). The witnesses in 1716 were innkeeper William Shiel and servant William Brown and in 1725 were Robert Scott of Burnhead and Adam Scott in Lees. Given the witnesses in 1725, his wife was probably related to the Scotts of Burnhead, perhaps sister of Robert of Burnhead (also written ‘Norvel’, ‘Norvell’ and ‘Norvil’).

Norwud (nor-wud) n. Norwood, house on Sunnyhill, built for mill owner Peter Scott in 1904. It was designed by J.P. Alison in an Arts & Crafts style, with multiple gables and a castellated tower. It has an entrance porch and a first-floor balcony at the rear. Fashion parades from Pesco’s used to take place on the lawns of the terraced garden. The Scott family stayed there until 1964, and latterly it has been the home of the Paterson-Browns. It is a grade B listed building. The name is also used more generally for the area around Norwood itself. The ‘Norwood Trophy’ was gifted by Peter Scott and competed for among local bowling clubs.

the Norwud Trophy (thu-nor-wud-trō-fee) n. local bowling trophy, donated by manufacturer Peter Scott and named after his residence. It was presented after the earlier Beechwood Trophy was won outright by the Buccleuch Bowling Club in 1912.

nosey wundi (nō-zee-wun-di) n. an ‘inquisitive glass’, an angled mirror mounted outside a window to allow a view along the street without leaning out. Also referred to as ‘keekin’ or ‘peepin’ glasses. They were introduced by John Guthrie around 1898, when he made one for his house at 61 High Street, after seeing similar devices on buildings in narrow streets on the continent. They soon began to appear all over Hawick, and even spread to some neighbouring towns. Although they existed to a lesser extent elsewhere, they were peculiarly popular locally. Since the height of their popularity they have disappeared one by one. A census of 1989 revealed a total of 51 in Hawick, distributed amongst the Loan, Buccleuch Street, the Sandbed, Silver Street, the Howegate, Kirkstyle, the High Street, Oliver Place, Bourtree Place, Bourtree Terrace, Bridge Street, Croft Road, Laidlaw Terrace, Dovemount Place and Princes Street.

nostirl (nos-ti-rul) n., arch. nostril – ‘Ther gaed up an reek owt o’ his nostriles ...’ [HSR] (note ir instead of ri).

notar (nō-tur) n., arch. a notary public, someone authorised to draw up legal documents – ‘... quhilk council and communitie, all in ane vois, electit the said Gilbert Watt, notar, clark for ane yeir to cum ...’ [BR1638].

notar-public (nō-tur-pu-bleek) n., arch. a notary public, someone authorised to draw up legal documents – ‘...and heirupoun askit instrument of me, notar public, befor thir witnessis ... Thomas Westoun, notarius publicus, teste manu propria’ [SB1574], ‘...to content and pay to Gilbert Watt, notar-public, five half-firlots aitts, eaten by thair guidis to him in harvest last’ [BR1642], ‘...in presence of me, notar publick, and witnesses subscribing, John Scott and Thomas Turnbull, present Bailies of the Burgh and Town of Hawick ...’ [BR1734] (also ‘notar publick’ and variants).

notary public (nō-tu-ree-pu-bleek) n., arch. someone with authority to draw up legal documents. In the middle ages this was usually an official of the church; in local charters they are often ‘presbyters’ of the Diocese of Glasgow. Post-Reformation notaries were public officials, often including the Town Clerk.

the Note o the Gate (thu-nō'-ō-thu-gā) n. road through a hill pass on the way to England from Hawick, leading from the Rule valley to Liddesdale. The road branches south off the A6088, about a mile beyond Bonchester. The name also refers to the pass itself, which is at a height of 376 m (1233 ft) in the middle of what is now Wauchope Forest. There was once a toll house near the pass. It was regularly used as a meeting spot for farmers buying and selling bales of wool. Archibald Scott was toll-keeper in 1851 and William Beattie was the publican there, for at least 1878 until 1883. The walls were still there in 1891, but eventually the stone was broken down for road material (also sometimes ‘Knot’; it is marked ‘Knott in the Gait’ on the 1718 Buccleuch survey and ‘Not O’ the Gate’ in about 1795; the meaning of the first part of the name is obscure).

Notman (no'-mun) n. James (18th C.) resident of Minto Parish. His children included: John (b.1721); Isobel (b.1723); and James (b.1727). James (18th C.) weaver in Kilnknowe in Hobkirk Parish when his children were baptised in 1786 and 1788. He was probably the son of John born in Hobkirk in 1759. His children included James (b.1786) and Isabel (b.1788). Other children of his may have been John (b.1781), Cicely (b.1784), Janet (b.1791) and William (b.1794), Walter (b.1796). James (18th/19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish, probably the son of James born in 1786. His children included: Ann (b.1810); Agnes (b.1811); Margaret (b.1812); James (b.1814); Jane (b.1817); John (b.1819); and Jean (b.1821). He may be the James who married Agnes Armstrong in Cavers Parish in 1809. James (19th C.) married Elizabeth Black in Hawick in 1850. James (b.1849/50) stockingmaker in Hawick. He married Susan Liddle in 1872. The family lived at 10 Loan and then 20 Howegate. Their children included Isabella (b.1876), Ralph Liddle (b.1881), Janet Laidlaw (b.1884), Robina Liddle (b.1890), James (b.1893), Mary Hamilton (b.1896) and Stuart Scott (b.1897). John (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His children included Robert (b.1755), Isabel (b.1757) and James (b.1759). John (18th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. His son Robert was baptised in 1790. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Minto Parish. He married Janet Rutherford in Cavers in 1822 and their children included: Janet (b.1823); James (b.1825); John (b.1828); Anne (b.1830); and William (b.1833). John (19th C.) married Janet Laidlaw in Hawick in 1844. Robert (18th C.) married Elspeth Halliwell in Cavers in 1724. Walter (19th C.) married Margaret Rennelson in Cavers in 1825. William (1809–93) born at Kirkurd, Peeblesshire, son of John and Margaret Kemp. He was an apprentice architect with William Playfair in Edinburgh. He helped with Minto Manse (in 1827), Minto Church (about 1833) and Minto House (in 1837). He started his own architect's practice about 1850, working on buildings around Edinburgh and beyond. He designed Wilson's Wool Store in Hawick in 1856, and a Wareroom for William Kedia in 1859. He may also have designed a villa for Hawick manufacturer Walter Wilson in 1859 and the farmhouse at Hawick Moor in 1861. He also submitted an unsuccessful design for Wilton Church. William Burn (b.1817/8) born in Minto Parish, he was named after Rev. William Burn. He worked as a clerk in one of Hawick's mills. In 1841 he was on the Crescent, in 1851 was living at 47 High Street and in 1861 at 17 Allars Crescent in 1851. He married Joan Helm in Hawick in 1838. Their children included Margaret G., Isabella B. and Robina H. (formerly 'Noteman').

Notman's Shot (no'-minz-sho') n. former name for a piece of land on Minto estate. In 1780 it was listed (as 'Noteman's Shott') as part of the eastern boundary of the lands of Hawthorn Park and Mailchester Park, and as 'Notemans Shotts' among lands whose liferent had been granted to Rev. Robert Elliot in 1779. It was listed as 'Notman Shot' in 1811 along with Temple Croft, with a joint value of £76 16s 8d.

notour (nō-toor) adj., arch. notorious, known by common knowledge – 'James Scott, called Pedee, is fined for ane great disobedience ... the verity whereof is too notour to all that part of the town' [BR1679], '... but for his calumniating and speaking notour untruth of the town-clerk behind his back ...' [BR1706].

notourly (nō-toor-lee) adv., arch. notoriously, publicly, through common knowledge – '... and that it was visible and most notourly knowne to the most part if not the haill inhabitants of the said towne and Brugh' [BR1706], '... unless the said strangers or incomers be notourly held and reput at the time of setting ...' [BR1736] (formerly used in official documents).

not proven (not-prō-vin) adj. outcome of a trial peculiar to Scots Law, where there is evidence against the defendant, but it is insufficient for a 'guilty' verdict – 'The jury retired, and returned into Court with the following verdict: – ... James Jardine, Guilty as libelled; Elizabeth Jardine, Not Proven' [HAd1868].

noucht (nowcht) n., poet. nothing – 'And this silent cavalcade That's noucht but a reiver's wraith, Rides noiselessly ower the glade Without either skirl or skaith' [TK], 'The Lord brings the cunsil o' the heæthin til noucht ...' [HSR], 'We hae gethered noucht in the hirplin ben, For aa that we've thrawn awa' [WL] (cf. the much more common nowt and nocht).

nourice-fee (noo-ris-fee) n., arch. the payment given to a wet-nurse – 'It [Burnflat] was described by mr James Oliver, the late proprietor, as having been 'ane nourice fee' [JW].

no've (nō-uv, nōv) contr. not have – 'Ee'll no've heard the score yet?' (there is no h sounded in the Hawick version).

November Hirin Fair see the Wunter Fair
no verra clivver (nō-ve-ru-kli-vur) adj. not up to the usual standard, not just the thing, lacking in power, unwell (also 'no awfi clivver' and 'no sae clivver').

nowder (now-dur) adv., conj., arch. neither – '... and the said James sal nowdyr sel, wodset, nor analy to na maner man nor woman of nan part of his said heretagus ...' [SB1519] (cf. nowther).

no weel (nō-weel) adj. unwell, not well, in poor health – 'is yer mam still no weel?', hung-over, suffering from the effects of alcohol – 'hei's no weel efter hevin a guid night', 'She hes ir ain adaes, wui a no-weel man' [ECS].

no wice (nō-wīs) adj. not sensible, insane, irrational (see vice).

now ni (now-ni) interj. now then, there now, so, exclamation of mild remonstrance or sympathy, often used to mark a transition – 'now ni, let's git sterted', 'now ni, where was A?', 'Now nih! Ee ir a clever lassie, seekin mei that yirrint!' [ECS], 'Now nih! Look what ee've duin; ee've cowpeet eet!' [ECS] (also written 'nownae', 'now nae' and variants; see also nih).

nowt (nowt, now') pron., adj. nothing, naught – 'it's got nowt ti dae wi yow', 'A'm sayin nowt', 'Ee're sure o' nowt. Gie the laddie his braith' [JEDM], '... but the old Grannie said, 'Let her gang! There's nowt wrong wi' her!'' [JeC], '...when ee're born ee're nowt, and after a year ee're yin, but when ee play in the Band for the first time that's yow yin' [CT], '... There's nowt a Hawick man cannae dae when hei wants up the Mair' [MB] (cf. nowts, nocht, nihin and nithin).

nowt (now', nowt) n., arch. cattle, oxen, bullocks, particularly used for fattening rather than milk, neat – 'He's clear'd five hunder pounds by twa lots o' nowt bease' [EA], 'Young Percy cam' ower ae night To harrie oor nowte and sheep ...' Nurse (nurs) n. nickname for Margaret Ross.

nurseries (nur-su-reez) n. Hawick was once famous for its plant nurseries, which supplied a range plants to a wide area. A record of 1675 mentions the ‘plant market’ in Hawick. The first large-scale nursery was established at Hassendean by the Dicksons in 1728 and moved to Hawick in 1766 (as well as having premises near Dumfries, Edinburgh and Perth), supplying trees and shrubs to roughly half of the plantations in Scotland. The nurseries were at the east end of town, including land stretching from Oliver Crescent to Dovecote Street and also around Union Street and later extending to near where the Buccleuch Hotel is now. Dickson’s also had nursery land around Dickson Street and Wellfield, which became Dovemount Nurseries in the latter part of the 19th century. The firm of Dickson & Turnbull also used the Wester Nurseries, where the Playing Fields are now, including land later occupied by the cricket field, Parish Church and bowling greens. Many of these areas are marked on Wood’s 1824 map. Forbes Nurseries (also known as the Buccleuch Nurseries) operated near Stonefield from 1879–1968 and were extremely well known in their day, being once a large employer in the town. When they closed it ended a long chapter of Hawick being prominent as a nursery centre, with perhaps the Walled Gardens and success in ‘Britain in Bloom’ being the remaining vestiges.

the Nursery Hoose (th-nur-su-ree-hoos) n. former cottage at Bonchester Bridge. It lay on the east side of the Rule Water, opposite the farm of Langraw. It was also known as Bonchester Haughhead. The name came from the 2 acres of land there, which Thomas Scott of Nether Bonchester set aside for growing young trees. George Adamson lived there around 1800. The farm there was tenanted by the Turnbells in the 19th century. Sometime in the latter part of the 19th century the cottage was pulled down to build an addition to the blacksmith’s house near the Bridge (it is marked on the 1863 Ordnance Survey map).

Nut Bank (nu’-bawngk) n. former name for a small piece of land in Minto Parish. This is probably the place transcribed from the Selkirk Protocol Books as ‘Nukland’ in 1531, which the Turnbells of Minto assigned to Ralph Davidson. It was ‘Nutbank’ in 1779 and in 1780 when said to belong to Robert Irvine (although also said to be included in the lands of Deanfoot liferented to Robert Trotter), with a rent of 10s. It is ‘Nut Bank’ in the Land Tax Rolls of 1811, with a value of £1 16s 6d.

Nutt (nu) n. former farmstead in the hills above Harwood-on-Teviot. It is marked on Blaeu’s 1654 map, and is possibly confused with ‘the Holt’ or ‘Hott Hill’.

Nuttal (nu’-ul) n. Daniel ‘Danny’ plumber in Hawick. He was Cornet in 1939. He was Right-Hand Man in 1946 and Lef-Hand Man in 1947. David son of Joe, he was Managing Director with William Lockie’s. He has been Chairman of the Hawick Partnership and organiser of the Reivers Festival. He was Cornet in 1986. James ‘Jim’ (b.c.1820) from England, he was a woollen fuller in Hawick. He was said to be among those who came to Hawick following John Wilson going to the Rochdale area to learn about weaving flannel. In 1851 he was living on Wilton Place and in 1861 was at the ‘1st House, Weensland’. His wife was Helen and their children included Robert, James,

Elizabeth, Daniel and George. Joe (d.1996) doing National Service with the K.O.S.B. he worked for Peter Scott's until 1961, later becoming Managing Director of William Lockie & Co. A keen Common Riding supporter, he was Cornet in 1958. He married Janice Mitchell and they had 2 sons (including David) and 2 daughters (also spelled 'Nuttall').

Robert of Kailzie (d.1845) he was sometimes referred to as just 'Capt. Campbell'. In 1793 he bought the local estate of Weens (including Nether Bonchester) from William Oliver of Dinlabyre, but in 1796 sold it to Adm. Thomas Pringle (who passed it in 1804 to Thomas Cleghorn). His purchase also included feu-duties acquired from Kerr of Abbotrule. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir James Montgomery of Stanhope. A portrait of him and his wife was painted by Sir Henry Raeburn.

nynt (nīnt) adj., arch. ninth – 'At Branxhelm, the nynt day of the moneth off Februar ...' [SB1519], 'Agane he gaed out about the saxt an' nint hoor, an' did likewise' [HSR], 'An' about the nint hoor Jesus criet wi' ane loud voyce ...' [HSR] (also written 'nint').

[RM], 'Oor ain local trade's on th' way o' improvement' [HE1924], on – 'Ferrer on, the road turnt bieleet o baith seides ...' [ECS], used sometimes where it would be omitted in English – 'take yer elbis off o the table', 'can ee mind o whae it was?', 'And should some change o' fortune ...' [??], also used for 'with', 'from' or other prepositions – 'stervin o hunger', 'poorin o rain', 'A'm fair poorin o sweet' [ECS], 'Her faimily hae muckle mense o' her' [GW], '...But the world's the better o' bodies like him!' [WL], before a verbal noun, where English might have 'a' – 'Thay've begun o' howkin up the fields an settin taatihs in thum' [ECS] (also written 'o'; the two main pronunciations depend on context, and also note that sometimes it is pronounced a or u; in older documents heritable proprietors, as opposed to tenants, were usually distinguished by referring to them as being 'of' or 'o'' their place of residence; see also of).

Oakhill (ōk-hil) n. Victorian villa-style house off the Braid Road.

oak leaves (ōk-leevz) n., pl. symbolic adornment worn at certain times during the Common Riding, fancifully imagined to harken back to Druidic times. After the Cornet's Breakfast on the Friday morning sprigs of oak leaves are given to the guests and worn for the remainder of the day. The Drums and Fifes wear them prominently in their hats. Before the mid-19th century, the Cornet and his guests used to march to the Haugh after the dinner to dance the Reel, each bearing an oak twig on his hat and breast. The wearing of 'chaplets of oak ... by the young men' was reported to be an old custom by James Wilson in 1850. The practice of wearing oak leaves discontinued after 1855, but was revived in 1886, and has been a part of the Common Riding ever since. The origin is mysterious, and there are many theories, from pagan symbolism to a relationship with trees near Hornshole – 'What means that youthful band so gay, With oaken boughs in trim array, With frequent shout, and loud hur-ray, Drum, fife, and fiddle?' [WiS], '...An' wear an oak leaf in ma coat, An' join in the sang' [IJ], 'Ne'er picked a callant that was prooder Tae weer oaken leaf on shooder' [MB].

the Oak Trei (thū-ōk-trī) n. well-known former landmark on the New Road, near the entrance to the Volunteer car par. Although it marked no boundary, nor had specific historical significance, it was a familiar sight for generations, and a popular turning point for walks along the New Road, particularly before the Park was acquired. It was said to have been the last of a long line of trees that ran over the hill in a southerly direction, perhaps starting near the Howegate. The tree was cut down in 1984 following storm damage, and a replacement planted in the adjoining sports ground – '...Till the auld Oak Tree rocks to our glee, for I really believe – don't you? – It would like to be the Cornet' [JYH].

the Oak Trei (thū-ōk-trī) n. the Oak Tree, a public house on the north side of Buccleuch

the Occasion (thū-ō-kā-shin) n. former popular name for the celebration of Holy Communion in local churches, an important event in the community calendar. In Hawick it took place about the harvest season until the beginning of the 19th century, when complaints by farmers had it moved to the last Sunday in June. The Wednesday before Communion was Sacramental Fast Day, when all work was suspended and there were 2 services. There was also a service on the Saturday, being the day of preparation, and often 2 more services on the following Monday. The Communion itself was on the Sunday and typically lasted from 8 a.m. until about 6 p.m., with a short break for rest and refreshments, and 4 or 5 different ministers officiating. The length of the services declined through the 19th century.

och (och) interj. expression of surprise, disgust, regret or resignation, sometimes preceded by ‘tut’ – ‘och, A’ve hed enough o this’, ‘tut, och yowe an yer stipeet ideas’, ‘och it’s juist a wee scratch’, also used as a general preface to any remark – ‘och, A suppose si’, ‘... och saufe me for thy mercie’s sak’ [HSR], ‘Och howe grit is thy guidniss ...’ [HSR], ‘Och, d’ye think I’m an Irishman, D’ye think I’m an Irishman’ [JEDM], ‘Och, Robert, lad ...juist days syne I was gi’en A pickle Smith’s fifteen-eer Glenlivet ...’ [DH].

Ochiltree (o-chil-tree) n. James (15th C.) recorded as ‘Jacobo Wchiltre’ when he was witness to the 1452 sasine for William Douglas of Drumlanrig being regranted the Barony of Hawick. This was signed in Hawick by a number of local men, the list also including Robert, who must have been related. Robert (15th C.) witness to the 1452 sasine for the Barony of Hawick, where he is 'Roberto Wchtiltre' and his name appears among a list of 4 Burgesses of Hawick. He must have been closely related to James who is also listed.

[JAHM], 'At yeh shop-door a motor stuid, an forrit A gaed to finnd oot whae was ocht eet' [ECS], 'Whae's ocht this? = whose is this' [ECS] (cf. awe, awnd, aucht, ownd; note the use of the past participle form to mean 'is possessed of' rather than 'possesses', switching the subject and object compared with English).

ochts (ochts) pron., arch. anything, aught – 'Next A speerd if A cood geet ochts ti eat, – if there was a mael o meat ti be bocht' [ECS], 'Game for ochts, A snuived steevely on aboot therty yards ahint um' [ECS], 'Hei mae be deed for ochts A ken' [ECS].

O'Connell Street (ō-ko-nul-stree) n. built around 1837 and named after Irish statesman and reformer Donald O'Connell (1775–1847). A pended house known as 'the Rambler's' was demolished to make the gap in the south side of the High Street. The street has always had a kink in the middle. In the mid-20th century, No. 7 was J. Pollock, grocers, while Mrs. Mather's was at the corner with Murray Place. In 1968 Murray Place was incorporated into the street. The upper part of the south side was demolished after WWII, with further buildings being replaced by a garden and car park in 1972. It is home to a medical centre, previously the Congregational Church, and a fitness centre, which was previously the local British Legion branch. The Drums and Fifes march up here and over to Brougham Place on 'the Nicht Afore the Morn'.

the October Tryst (thū-ok-tō-bur-trīst, -trist) n. former cattle and horse market, happening on the third Tuesday in October from 1780. It was well known as a market for Highland kyloes and held around the foot of the Vertish Hill or Thorterdykes. By the latter part of the 19th century it had become only a horse market.

Od (ōd) interj., arch. emphatic version of God, used as a mild oath – 'Od! there's some fowk has a face for onything' [JoHa], 'Od, what a struggle lang they've had – But opposition brightens trade' [JoHa], 'Od saf us, boys, we sall ha'e sporte – Richt nobil sporte indeed!' [WiSp].

o'd (ōd, od) contr. of it, often treated as a single word – 'Ah'm seek o'd', 'A'll hev nane o'd', 'there's nae need o'd', 'the worst o'd aye es ...', 'ee deh ken the hauf o'd', 'A'm gettin' aboot sick o'd, this Canadian wunter's a coushed' [JEDM], 'The Borderers lang syne geh thersels an awfih leife o'd' [ECS], 'It's oot o sicht; oo canna sei ocht o'd' [ECS], '...bit it disneh say whuther the punters or the bookies cam oot o'd best' [BW1974], '...but his mother talked um oot o'd and instead hei became a painter and decorator' [IWL], '...there's a wee medicinal refreshment at the end o'd ...' [CT], '...Aw can kindeh mind o'd still' [RM] (cf. the less common o't).

the Oddfellihs (thū-od-fe-liz) n. the Scottish Order of Oddfellows Loyal Border League, a mutual aid society. A local branch, Lodge 'Loyal Border', No. 5 Waverley District existed in Hawick in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. They met in the Buccleuch Hotel for a while, and the insurance money would be collected weekly from the house of each member. Another lodge was started in Denholm in 1843 and named after John Leyden.

Oddfellihs' Haa (od-fe-liz-haw) n. Oddfellows' Hall, also known as the Oddfellows Arms. It was a public house at the foot of O'Connell Street, on the east side (Murray Place for a while) in the mid-19th century. The proprietor in the earlier years was Thomas Scott. The building became the Central Tea Rooms and later the Legion.

Oddy (o-dee) n. Arthur taken on as trainee manager at Hawick knitwear manufacturers Pringle’s in 1924. Along with William Mac-taggart, who joined a year later, the pair became Directors in 1932 and Managing Directors a year later, managing the firm through the mid-20th century. He resigned in 1945, leaving Mactaggart as sole Managing Director.

the Odeon (thu-ō-dee-in) n. name for the Exchange Buildings when it became part of the Odeon cinema chain in the mid-20th century.

Ode to Hawick (ōd-too-hlk) n. title of probably the first known example of a poem written to celebrate Hawick, penned by Rev. Robert Cunningham in 1710.

Odin (ōdin) n. supreme Norse deity, god of wisdom, art, culture and the dead, traditionally thought of as one of the gods in the Hawick battle cry ‘Teribus ye Teri-Odin’ – ‘Scotia felt thine ire, O Odin! On the bloody field of Flodden’ [JH], ‘The Common-Riding is at hand, That festival savae great and grand, And ower Auld Hawick waves Odin’s wand The nicht afore the morn’ [JMS] (although the myth persists, there is no historical evidence to believe that Norse gods were ever worshipped in the Borders, and the connection between Hawick and Thor and Odin may well be traced to the Victorian attempts to decipher the ‘Teribus’ slogan, perhaps inspired by Hogg’s rhyming of ‘Odin’ with ‘Flodden’).

o’ee (oi) contr. of you – ‘wull the per o’ee cairry this?’ (pronounced as a single diphthong and treated like one word).

Ogill (ō-gul) n. John (15th/16th C.) recorded as 'Johannem Ogil' when he witnessed the 1508 sasine for Adam Hepburn inheriting his father's Lordship of Liddesdale. 'Joh. Ogill' witnessed charters for Adam Hepburne of Craigs in Edinburgh in 1501 and 1506 and could be the same man or related.

Ogilvie (ō-gul-vee, -bee) n. Adam (17th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He witnessed baptisms in 1656 for Archibald Stewart and in 1661 for Patrick Redford, for John Tudhope, for James E... (along with John Tudhope) and for William Stewart. Adam (17th C.) tenant in Branhholme. His wife Jean Chisholme's will is recorded in 1684. The fact that he was at Branhholme suggests a connection between this family and the Scotts of Buccleuch a generation earlier than when there were Ogilvie Chamberlains. He may have been brother of William and perhaps Gideon. He was also surely related to Andrew and James, who were tenants in Branhholme farms in the 1690s. He witnessed a baptism for James Baptie in 1678 and another for Patrick Scoon in 1685. Adam of Hartwoodmyres (17th/18th C.) only son of William and Elizabeth Turnbull. He was Chamberlain to the Duchess of Buccleuch. In 1708 he was 'younger' when he was listed as one of the Commissioners of Supply for Selkirkshire. He was probably the 'younger of Hartwoodmyres' who was one of the original members of the 'Honest Country Club' in 1711. In 1708 he married Jean Erskine of Dryburgh, and she died at an advanced age in 1761. Their children included: Margaret (b.1709), who married William Elliot of Wolfelee in 1732; Elizabeth (b.1711); William of Hartwoodmyres (b.1712); James (b.1714), who may have died young; Katherine (b.1718), born in Hawick Parish, who married Walter Grieve, tenant at Branhholme Park; and Isabel (b.1720). He may be the unnamed son of William and Elizabeth Turnbull born in Hawick Parish in 1684. His wife is probably the 'Mrs Ogilvie' of Hartwoodmyres, who in 1757 witnessed a baptism for Katherine Ogilvie (her daughter) and Walter Grieve. Adam of Hartwoodmyres (1745/6–1809) son of William and Elizabeth Elliot. He may also have been referred to as 'of Chesters'. He was an advocate and was made an Honorary Burgess of Hawick in 1775. He helped form the Hawick Farmers' Club in 1776. He served as an executor for Henry Elliot of Peel, who died in 1780. He paid the land tax on about £460 for Hartwoodmyres in 1785. He served as Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch, taking over from William (his father) in 1787. He was living at Branxholme in 1785–88 when he paid a tax for 2 female servants, increasing to 3 in 1789 and 1790 and 2 again in 1791. He also paid tax on 2 male servants at Branxholme from at least 1785, and 1 in 1788–94. He was recorded at Branxholme on the Carriage Tax Rolls for 1794/5 and 1797/8, as well as farmer there in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls and for having 4 carriage or saddle horses. He served as a Deputy-Lieutenant for Roxburghshire in 1797 and 1798. He was listed among the voters of Roxburghshire in 1788, where his vote is described as 'partle a liferent vote from Cornelius Elliot, W.S., his brother-in-law'; if this is true then there has been confusion over the identity of his wife. He was also recorded as a voter in Selkirkshire in 1788. In 1791 he witnessed the baptism of one of Lord Napier's children at Wilton Lodge. He subscribed to John Learmont's book of poetry in 1791. He paid the Horse Tax at Branxholme in 1785–97, when he had up to 4 horses. In around 1802 he paid about £460 in land tax on Hartwoodmyres. He was listed as a Commissioner for Selkirkshire in 1805. He was a trustee for the estate of William Oliver 'Auld Cash'. In 1806 he consulted with the Council over the appointment of Hawick's next schoolmaster. He married Anne Renata, daughter of Gavin Elliot of Midlem Mill in 1787; they had a large family. In 1808 he was on the subscription list for Jamieson's Scots dictionary. He appears to have served as Chamberlain until around 1808, after which his trustees are referred to, suggesting he died around then. He died at Branxholme. Adam (18th/19th C.) resident of Greens in Liddesdale. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821, along with 'L., mason' (probably 'Little'), to whom he was surely related. Alexander (17th/18th C.) resident of Branxholme. He may have been son of James (who was also a resident of Branxholme). In 1705 he witnessed a baptism for William Oliver, 'servitor' in Todshawhaugh. He married Isobel Halliday in Hawick in 1707. Their daughter Isobel was baptised in 1708, with witnesses William Elliot in the Sandbed and Henry Orrock. Alexander (17th/18th C.) resident of Selkirk Parish, recorded in a legal document in 1721. Alexander (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Esther Douglas and their children included: Isobel (b.1735); and William (b.1737). Alexander (1715/6–71) resident of the Greens in Castleton Parish. His wife was Elizabeth Little, who died in 1793, aged 56. Their children included William (1768/9–1818), who died at Greens. They are buried in Ettleton Cemetery. Andrew of Newlands (17th/18th C.) recorded as a householder at Branxholme on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. He is probably the same Andrew whose servant Andrew Lamb was listed among Covenanter fugitives in 1684. In 1696 and 1697 he leased a third of the farm of Branxholme Mains. James, who also leased a third, must have been a close relative, and he was surely also related to Adam, recorded in Branxholme in 1684. How these Ogilvies were related to the later Chamberlains at Branxholme is unclear; however, it is possible he is son of James, who was also a householder in Branxholme (and died in 1706). Probably the same Andrew witnessed baptisms in 1704 for William Scott in Branxholme, in 1707 for Robert Scott, carrier in Branxholmtown, in 1708 for James Scott 'Laird' and in 1713 for Thomas Anderson in Branxholme Town. In 1714 his servant Bessie Riddell got married. He was also recorded in 1719 in a declaration regarding the commonty between Wauchope and Templehall. In 1719 he was in Branxholme when his servant William Hume got married to Helen Govenlock (servant to William, also at Branxholme). He was father of William, and the pair witnessed a baptism for John Cavers (herd in Branxholme) in 1711. He also witnessed some of the births of the children of William Ogilvie in Hawick, presumably his son. He may be the Andrew who in Hawick in 1728 and 1730 witnessed baptisms for James Henderson in Branxholme. In 1714 he married Elizabeth, sister of Rev. John Ritchie of Minto; the marriage was performed at Minto by Rev. John Gilchrist of Bedrule, and was recorded in the Hawick Parish records. It is unclear if his lands of Newlands were those in Lilliesleaf or Castleton. Andrew (18th C.) recorded in 1754 when the Town Council paid for cords to bind him, as well as paying for him to be watched. He was presumably imprisoned for some crime. Rev. Andrew (1731–1805) son of William and Martha Laing, who were from Hawick. He was the 14th child, his father being tenant at Broadhaugh. He was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Langholm in 1758 and ordained by the Dissenting Church of Newcastle at the Groatmarket Meeting-house. He became minister at Linton in 1781. He married Agnes Lomax from Newcastle in 1767 and she died in 1808. Their children were: Eleanor; Jane; Margaret; William; Joseph; and John. He wrote about the Parish of Linton for Sinclair's Statistical Account. David of Brieryyards (1726–c.83) probably son of William. He paid the window tax for Brieryyards in 1748. His daughter Martha married Thomas Turnbull in 1757 and he witnessed baptisms for the couple in 1758 and 1759. He was added to the voters' roll for Roxburghshire in 1780. He was involved in a court case against Capt. John Douglas of Cavers. He was probably the Ogilvie of 'Brieryyards' listed among the Commissioners for Roxburghshire in 1761. Brieryyards passed to the Turnbells (through his daughter) in 1783, suggesting that he was deceased by then. George (d.1807) listed as 'Messenger' in Hawick on the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. His death is recorded in the Scots Magazine, where he is also 'messenger', presumably meaning he was some kind of agent, possibly a 'messenger-at-arms', a lawyer appointed to execute summonses. He is probably the George who witnessed a baptism in Hawick in 1794 for James Scott and Isabel Hogg. He was probably the George who was married to Margaret Learmonth and who had several children born in Hawick: Janet (b.1780); Thomas (b.1781); John (b.1783); Alexander (b.1785); Michael (b.1788); Mary (b.1790); Margaret (b.1792); and George (b.1794). Gideon (17th C.) one of the earliest known members of this Roxburghshire family. In 1656 he married Susannah Scott of Harden (probably daughter of Sir William Scott). Their son William was the first Laird of Hartwoodmyres. Henry (18th/19th C.) recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 directory as proprietor of Hartwoodmyres. He was a Commissioner of Selkirkshire in 1819. James (d.1706) indweller in Branhholme. In 1694 he was recorded as a householder at Branhholme on the Hearth Tax rolls. In 1696 and 1697 he leased a third of the farm of Branhholme Mains. Andrew, who also leased a third, must have been a close relative (perhaps his son) and he was surely also related to Adam, recorded in Branhholme in 1684. He is probably the James who (along with Francis Scott in Branhholme) witnessed a baptism for Walter Chisholme in 1684. He is probably the James who witnessed a baptism for a Grieve in 1698. In 1700 James Scott in Stobiscote was fined for 'forestalling of the public market' by buying a lamb from his servant and then selling it to a butcher. In 1702 he witnessed baptisms for John Scott (also in Branhholme), for Gilbert Elliot in Nether Southfield and for James Laidlaw (in Branhholme Town). He was recorded as tenant in Branhholme (along with John Scott) when he witnessed a baptism for Walter Scott, herd in Branhholme Town. In 1704 he was 'tenent in Branocholm' when he witnessed a baptism for Walter Wilson. He received the lands of Hosscote 'in liferent' in 1705 from William Scott of Harden. He married Jane Elliot and their son was William, possibly the William born in Hawick around 1670. He witnessed a couple of baptisms in 1701, including one for Bailie Walter Elliot. His daughter Jane died in 1701 (when he gave money to the Parish). Other children were Adam, Andrew (probably the resident of Branhholme) and Alexander. He is probably the James who rented quarter of the farm of Borthaugh in at least the period 1690–98. James (18th C.) saddler in Hawick. He subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784). John (b.1794/5) born in Cavers Parish, he was farmer at Cooms in Ewes Parish. He was there in 1841, 1851 and 1861. He married Jane Common and their children included Janet, Margaret, William, John, Adam, Robert and Sibella. Rev. John H. (19th/20th C.) minister of Lilliesleaf Free Kirk 1926–28, probably its last years. Little (1793/4–1862) stone mason at the Greens in Castleton Parish. He married Jane Little, who died in 1879, aged 81. Their children included: Margaret (1819/20–40); Jane or Janet (1825/6–46); Elizabeth (1826/7–47); Mary (b.c.1827); William (1828/9–1900); Rabina (b.c.1839); Margaret (again, 1842/3–81); and Joan Black (1845/6–1913). He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821, and was probably son of Adam from there, who also subscribed. Michael (18th/19th C.) local whip-maker. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Andrew Murray. His sons were John and Andrew, who died in infancy. He could be the spinner Michael whose child died in Hawick in 1815. Mr. ?? of Teindside (18th C.). Recorded as 'Mr Ogilbie of Tiendside' in 1729 when he rented the Hawick 'litter' for a funeral. He may have been William or one of the other local Ogilvies. Robert (17th C.) witness in 1632 for the reversion document for Harwood by Edward Lorraine. Robert (18th C.) overseer for the early spinning company set up in Hawick by a group of local gentlemen. He was in this position for only a couple of years from about 1741. He could be the Robert who in 1720 married Jean, daughter of Robert Ruecastle. He may be the Robert who hired the Hawick mortcloth in 1760. Robert (18th/19th C.) farmer at Broadhaugh (and others), recorded on the Horse Tax Rolls of 1785–94. He was also owner of 5 farm horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He was additionally taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. Thomas (17th/18th C.) 2nd son of William of Hartwood. In 1705 he acted as factor for the young Margaret, daughter of the deceased John Scott of Synton. He may have been son of the 1st Laird of Hartwoodmyres and younger brother of Adam. Thomas Elliot ‘Tom’ of Chesters (1751–1831) 2nd son of William of Hartwoodmyres and Elizabeth Elliot, he was born in Ashkirk Parish. He joined the Madras civil service at the age of 19, becoming paymaster at Vellore, which was under siege in the early 1780s. He retired in 1786 and bought Crailing, then sold it the next year so he could purchase Chesters from the Bennet family. There he had a mansion designed by local architect William Elliot, the construction being completed in 1790. While it was being built he lived at Gala House. In 1788 he owned Chesters and associated lands (valued at £965 2s 3d), Lanton Mill and associated lands (valued at £93 9s 5d), as well as the farm of Newton (valued at £853 6s 8d) on the opposite side of the Teviot from Chesters, plus associated teinds. In 1788 he was mentioned as about to be added to the list of voters in Roxburghshire. He was at Chesters in 1791 when he subscribed to John Learmont’s book of poetry. In 1791 he also witnessed the baptism of one of Lord Napier’s children at Wilton Lodge. He was taxed for owning a carriage in the 1780s and 90s and had 5 female and 4 male servants at Gala House in 1788 and 2 female servants in 1789. By 1790 he was at Chesters, and he had 7 or 8 servants there until at least 1797. He also paid tax for having 4 horses at Chesters in the period 1790–97. He was additionally taxed for having 4 non-working dogs in 1797. He served as a Deputy-Lieutenant for Roxburghshire in at least the period 1797–1801. He paid the land tax at Chesters and Lanton in 1811, as well as for lands around Newton in Bedrule Parish valued at about £850. He was listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819, both times along with his son William. He joined the Roxburghshire Gentlemen and Yeomanry Cavalry and served as Deputy Lieutenant for Roxburghshire. He is listed as proprietor of Chesters on Pigot’s 1825/6 directory. He was a friend of the writer Sir Walter Scott. In 1782 he married Hannah (1753–1833), 2nd daughter of Robert Dashwood and widow of Dr. Pasley. Their children were: Elizabeth (b.1783); William (b.1785), Chamberlain to Buccleuch; Adam (1792–1872), who married Letitia Keys Spence; George, who died young; Margaret (b.1795); and Jane, who married Donald Horne of Stirkoke. He may be the Thomas ‘Esq’ for whom a child’s baptism appears to be recorded in Hawick in 1786, but crossed out. One of his daughters was probably the inspiration for the tune ‘Miss Ogilvie of Chesters Waltz’, published around 1810. Thomas (b.c.1780) listed as ‘Stocking-maker Constable’ on the 1801 list for the Militia ballot in Hawick. He thus appears to have had 2 jobs. Thomas Elliot of Chesters (1821–1896) eldest son of William and Alexina Falconer. He served as a Commissioner of Supply and Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He married Hope, only daughter of Henry Reeve. His widow took possession of the estate after his death. William (17th C.) married to Elspeth Turnbull. Their unnamed child was baptised in Hawick in 1684. William of Hartwoodmyres (d.1716) son of Gideon and Susannah Scott of Harden. He was progenitor of the Chesters branch of the family. He could be the William who had discharges with the treasurer of Selkirk in 1683 and 1684. He is probably the William who leased the farm of Todshawhill from the Scotts of Buccleuch in 1691 and who was listed there on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls, paying tax on 2 hearths. He was in Todshawhill in 1695 when he contributed £100 to the Darien Scheme. He was again listed as tenant of Todshawhill in 1696. He purchased Hartwoodmyres in 1694 and in 1705 bought Brieryyards from the Scotts. In 1695 he was a Commissioner of Supply for Selkirkshire. He is probably the Laird of Hartwoodmyres who witnessed a baptism for John Chisholme of Stirches in 1708. He also witnessed a baptism in 1709 for Francis Scott of Newton. He married Elizabeth Turnbull of Tofts and had one son, Adam. William (17th/18th C.) resident in Craik, where he is recorded in at least the period 1713–27. In 1713 he witnessed a baptism for Walter Scott of Merrylaw. His children, baptised in Robertson Parish, probably included: Andrew (b.1714); Edwart (b.1716); William (b.1716); Alexander (b.1717); Robert (b.1720); Adam (b.1721); an unnamed child (b.1726); and William (again, b.1727). Some of these children may be from a different family. William (c.1670–1755) possibly son of James and Jane Elliot. He was tenant farmer at Broadhaugh in 1715 and Branxholme in 1720. In 1715 he married Martha Laing (c.1680–1735); she was daughter of Bailie William Laing. His wife's name was recorded as 'Anna' Laing in 1720. Most of their children were baptised in Hawick. Their children included: James (b.1716); William (b.1718), probably father of the farmer at Broadhaugh and Whitrope; Jean (b.1720); Walter (b.1721); Janet (b.c.1722), who married John Potts in Castleton; Adam (b.1724); Edward (b.c.1725) died young; David (b.1726) of Brieryyards; Robert (b.c.1727); Alexander (b.c.1728); Martha (1728/9–1825), who married Thomas Turnbull in Hawick and died aged 96; Betsy (c.1730–52); Andrew (b.1731), minister at Linton; and Margaret (b.1735). The witnesses in 1718 were William Laing, 'lait Bailie of Hawick' (probably his father-in-law) and John Watson, Clerk (to the Regality) and in 1720 were Bailie William Laing and Andrew of Newlands. It is possible he is the same man as William of Hoscote. William of Hoscote (18th C.) probably son of Andrew. He was tenant in Braxholme from at least 1710, when he witnessed a baptism for Walter Crow in Branxholme Town. He and Andrew witnessed a baptism for John Cavers, herd in Branxholme, in 1711 and for Thomas Anderson in Branxholme Town in 1713. In 1718 he is recorded in a baptism being 'of Dolieridge [perhaps Deloraine], tenent in Branxholm'. In 1718 he was in Branxholme when his servant William Mitchellhill was married. In 1719 he was in Branxholme when his servants Helen Govlock married William Hume (servant to Andrew, also at Branxholme) and Margaret Grieve married Walter Bowie. He was one of the Commissioners appointed to oversee the construction of the Teviot Bridge in Hawick. He is probably the William 'in Branxholm of Hahope' (this being indecipherable, and possible Hoscote is meant) recorded renting from the Duke of Buccleuch in Cavers Parish in 1723; he also rented Meadshaw that same year. In 1731 he obtained the tenancy of Whitchesters from Robert Scott of Falnash. In 1735 he leased Branxholme Park and part of Branxholme Mains from the Scotts of Buccleuch. He also rented Branxholm Park and other properties in 1737. He was one of 4 men to propose building a stillhouse and brewery in 1738, for which Robert Elliot of Fenwick was leased land by the Duke of Buccleuch the following year; this may have become Hawick's first distillery and brewery on Slitrig Crescent. He witnessed baptisms in 1738 for a daughter of Town Clerk James Weir and for merchant Andrew Riddell. There is a document of 1739 regarding a dispute between him and Walter Scott of Harden over the lands of Hoscote. His daughter Jean was baptised in Robertson Parish in 1728; Martha (b.1730), baptised in Robertson, may also be his daughter. He may be the same man as the William recorded at Craik in at least 1714–17 or possibly the same William as the tenant in Broadhaugh and Branxholme. William of Hartwoodmyres (b.1712) son of Adam and Jean Erskine. In 1742 he was one of the witnesses to the baptism of Walter Scott, last of Crumhaugh, son of Walter of Crumhaugh, residing at Midshiels; at that time he was 'of Briri-yards' and so must have lived there for a time. He was Bailie to the Regality of Jedforest and attached baronies, i.e. appointed as factor to the Duke of Douglas for properties in the Southdean area, as well as elsewhere. He is probably the William recorded in Selkirk in receipts 'for supply' in 1742 and 'for burgh cess' in 1745 and in a discharge of 1744. In 1745 he was visited by members of Prince Charlie's army on their way to England, and forced to pay a 'tax'. He was Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch from at least 1756 until about 1786, when he was replaced by Adam (probably his son). He acted as Chamberlain for Melrose, Ettrick Forest, Hassendean and Burnfoot. In 1757 he witnessed a baptism for his brother-in-law Walter Grieve, tenant in Branxholme Park. He was recorded as a Commissioner for Selkirkshire in 1761. He appears to have resided at Branxholme from about 1767, the first Chamberlain to do so. In 1777 he had correspondence with William Scott of Woll over shares of the Moss (preserved in the Walter Mason Collection). In 1778 and 1779 he paid tax for having a male servant at Branxholme. In 1745 he married Elizabeth, daughter of William Elliot (who bought Wolfelee). Their children were: Adam (d.1809), also Chamberlain, who died at Branxholme; Thomas Elliot (b.1751); William, who served with the Royal Navy and died in Antigua; and probably Jane (1758–1802), who married Maj. Gen. William Balfour. There are portraits of him and his wife. He (or another William) may also have married a daughter of John Laing of Westerkirk. William (d.1777) younger son of William, Chamberlain at Branxholme. He entered the Royal Navy in 1775 and died of fever in Antigua. William (1768/9–1818) probably son of Alexander and Elizabeth Little.

He was farmer at Greens in Castleton Parish. He is recorded there on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 2 horses. His children included: Elizabeth (Betty, 1796/7–1870), who married Peter Hope; and probably Little (1793/4–1862), stonemason. William ‘Willie’ (1785–1876), J.P., Laird of Chesters, eldest son of Thomas Elliot and Hannah Dashwood. He was born in India, educated at Edinburgh High School, and then trained as an advocate (although he never practised). He became 2nd Lieutenant in the western troop of Roxburghshire Yeomanry in 1803 (although he missed the ‘False Alarm’, being in Edinburgh at college). He was still ‘junior of Chesters’ when listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805 and 1819. Before he succeeded to Chesters he lived at Ettrickbank, where it said that Burke and Hare would stop by in 1818 with fresh fish on their wagon (which would later convey a corpse back to Edinburgh). He succeeded to Chesters in 1831 and sold the farm of Newton to Thomas Scott of Peel in 1833. He was Captain in the local (Dumfries) Militia from 1811 and Major 1820–25; Bet Young wrote ‘And gallant captain Ogilvie, a loyal heart indeed, Is so attach’d to Briton - wears the yellow and the red’. He was Chamberlain to the Duke of Buccleuch at least 1836–76 (replacing Major Riddell of Muselee), dealing with business around Hawick, as well as Teviothead, Jedburgh, Selkirk, Eckford and St. Boswells. He thus continued the tradition of his uncle and grandfather. He was the Chamberlain who was living at Branxholme around 1840 when the castle was renovated. A letter from him protesting about the content of Rev. J.A. Wallace’s sermon in Hawick in 1841 is in the National Archives, as well as further letters relating to the siting of the Free Kirk. He was recorded at Branxholme in the 1841 census, along with a dozen servants. He was still there in 1851, back at Chesters House by 1861, but recorded there as Chamberlain in 1868. He was also Deputy-Lieutenant (from 1827), Commissioner of Supply, Justice of the Peace, Tax Commissioner and member of the Police Board for Roxburghshire. He is said to have been a persuasive canvasser (on the Conservative side) during the elections after the passing of the Reform Bill. He was an original member of the Jedforest Club and was the first President of the Angling Club set up in Hawick in 1858 (but which later folded). He was listed as owner of Chesters and other lands in the Land Tax Rolls of about 1874. In 1818 he married Alexina, daughter of Alexander Falconer of Woodcot, East Lothian, and she died in 1884 at an advanced age. They had a large family, including Thomas Elliot (who succeeded), William F. (Bengal Army), Alexander, George, Frank and Alexina. He died at Chesters at the age of 91 and is buried at Ashkirk. William (d.1830) said to be brother of Andrew, minister of Linton, and related to the Chesters family. He was probably actually nephew of Rev. Andrew and hence grandson of William, tenant at Broadhaugh. He is probably the William who farmed at Broadhaugh himself. ‘Mr Wm. Ogilvie, Broadhaugh’ is listed among the subscribers to Robert Wilson’s ‘History of Hawick’ in 1825. William (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Margaret Scott and their children included Helen (b.1821). William (18th/19th C.) possibly son of Robert, who was farmer at Broadhaugh in 1797. He farmed at Whitrope as well as Broadhaugh. He subscribed to William Scott’s ‘Beauties of the Border’ in 1821. In 1825 he married Janet Byers, who died in 1888, aged 84. Their son was William Robert (b.1827). William Robert (b.1827) son of William and Janet Byres. He farmed at Broadhaugh and Whitrope. He was listed at Broadhaugh in 1866. On the 1851 census he employed 20 labourers, and they had 2 household servants. William Henry ‘Will’ (1869–1963) poet, who wrote many popular Border poems, including ‘The Road to Robertson’, ‘The Raiders’, ‘Ho! For the Blades of Harden’ and ‘The Barefoot Maid’. He was born at Holefield farm near Kelso, where his father George was a reasonably well-off tenant farmer, 3 past generations of his family having served as Chamberlains to the Duke of Buccleuch. He was the eldest boy in a family of 8 and was educated at Kelso Grammar School by a governess, at Prep School in Yorkshire, and at Fettes College. He spent 1889–1901 in Australia working as a drover and breaker of wild horses, and there his poems of the outback life are well-known. He worked at Belalie Station in Queensland and Maroupe Station in South Australia and became a friend of Harry ‘Breaker’ Morant. He briefly lived in America (with an appointment to the Department of Agricultural Literature in State College, Iowa), and returned to Britain in 1905. He later became a journalist in Edinburgh and was Chair of Agricultural Journalism at Iowa University for 2 years. He returned to the Borders and married Madge Scott-Anderson of Ettrickshaws in 1908. They raised their son and daughter at Bowden and then moved to Kirklea in Ashkirk, where he spent the rest of his life. He visited Hawick often, for example as Callants' Club guest in 1910. He was also a Justice of the Peace for Roxburghshire. He wrote for various newspapers and magazines as well as publishing 16 books of verse and 4 volumes of prose, and was appointed official Bard to the Buccleuch Hunt. 'My Life in the Open' (1908) is an early autobiography, while 'Whaup O' the Rede' (1909) is an epic poem of over 100 pages, and 'The Land We Love' (1910) is a collection. Many of his local poems collected in 'The Border Poems of Will H. Ogilvie' (1959, 1993). His ashes were scattered on the 'Hill Road to Robertson'. Scocha set his poem 'The Land We Love' to music in 2004, and used it as the title for their second album. A cairn was erected in his honour in 1993 on the road between Ashkirk and Robertson, with a memorial plaque (sculpted by Bill Landles) and a replica at Bourke in Australia. After being vandalised, a replacement plaque will be placed at Harden. 2019 marked his 150th anniversary, with an exhibition in the Museum, publication of a reproduction version of 'Whaup o' the Rede', the unveiling of the new cairn and a memorial service in Ashkirk Kirk – 'Your cairn looks down on Ale Water's vale and the bonny Linns to Hawk's Nest, Whitslade and Blawearie where the hill road rins' [GM] (formerly written 'Ogilvy', 'Oglvie', etc. and sometimes 'Ogilbie' or 'Ogilby').

the Ogilvie Cairn (thu-ō-gul-vee-kārn) n. memorial cairn erected on the 'Hill Road to Robertson' in 1993, with the top sculpted by Bill Landles, depicting an opened book. In 2009 an adjacent stone seat was erected in memory of the founder members of the Will H. Ogilvie committee. The bronze was stolen in 2016.

O Grade (ō-grād) n. Ordinary Grade, the basic level of the Scottish Certificate of Education in one of a number of subjects, generally taken in the 4th year of High School, and effectively replaced in 1986 with the Standard Grade. Also used to denote a pass in a particular subject – 'hei hed O Grade wudwork an techy drawin'.

Oily Tam (oi-lee-tawm) n. nickname in use in the early 19th century.

oith (oith) n., arch. an oath – '...the foresaid witnesses depones upon their conscience and the oith that they have made' [Ash1635].

Old see Auld

Old (ōld) n. Rev. Thomas (1682/3–1737) graduating from Edinburgh University in 1705, he became Chaplain to Archibald Douglas of Cavers. He was licensed to preach by Selkirk Presbytery in 1715 and was ordained at Legerwood in 1717. He married Margaret, daughter of John Fullarton of Auchenhay and their only child was Jane, who married Alexander Fall.

Old Mill Town (old-mil-town) n. also sometimes known as 'Auld Mill Toon', a song about Hawick, written by David Finnie in 2001. It appeared on the 2002 CD of his band '3D'. It has been sung by Finnie and Debbie Lyons at Common Riding functions regularly since. Originally scored for guitar, it was arranged for piano by Ian Seeley. Although clearly about our Town, the word 'Hawick' does not appear in the lyrics. The words appear in the 2009 re-edition of the song book.

Old Parish Kirk see the Auld Pairish Kirk
the Old Statistical Account (thu-ōld-stat-tis-tee-kul-a-kownt) n. published as 'The Statistical Account of Scotland' in 1791–92, it became known as the 'Old' or (sometimes 'First') 'Statistical Account' after the appearance of the 'New Statistical Account' in 1834–45. The work was the result of questionnaires sent by Sir John Sinclair of Ulbster to over 900 parish ministers, with 160 questions covering geography, population, agriculture, industry and other topics. The individual parish reports, written by the local ministers, offer an invaluable (although clearly biased) picture of Scotland before the changes wrought by the Industrial Revolution. A 'Third Statistical Account' was started in the 1950s, with Roxburghshire being the last volume, published in 1992.

Oldsteson (ōld-ste-sin) n. former farmstead, probably in the upper Jed valley near Roughlee. The tenants there in 1669 were Cuthbert, William and James Robson and David Hall.

Olifer see Oliver

Oliphant (o-lee-fun) n. Adam (d.1746) he was ordained as minister of Glenbuchat in Aberdeenshire in 1718. In 1721 he was one of the preachers who filled in at St. Mary's Kirk when the incumbent was ill; his name was recorded there as 'Olifer'. In 1721 he married Margaret, daughter of Bailie Martin of Hawick and she died in 1755. Their children included James (merchant in Edinburgh), Samuel, John, Ann and Margaret. Lawrence (c.1434–98), eldest son of Sir John of Aberdalgie, he was 1st Lord Oliphant. He was one of the Justiciars at the Circuit Court in Jedburgh in 1493. Margaret Oliphant Wilson (1828–97) Scottish novelist who usually wrote as ‘Mrs. Oliphant’. Born near Musselburgh, daughter of Francis W. Wilson and Margaret Oliphant. She married her cousin Frank Wilson Oliphant. Her husband died of consumption and she had to support her 3 surviving children through her writing. She wrote mainly historical fiction, including ‘Lilliesleaf: Being a Concluding Series of Passages in the Life of Mrs. Margaret Maitland’ (1855), which used the name of the local village, but had no other connection with it.

Olipher see Oliver

Olive Bank (o-leev-bawngk) n. villa type house on Wilton Hill Terrace (roughly at the top of the road leading up from Wilton Hill) once the home of cabinet-maker John Hunter. It was built in about 1879.

Oliver (o-lee-vur, -fur) n. Abraham (17th/18th C.) recorded at Smailcleughfoot on the 1696 Hearth Tax Rolls. He may thus have been related to the famous ‘Ringan’. Adam ‘Ade’ (15th C.) tenant at Nether Dykeraw in 1541, along with James, Michael, John and Robert. Adam ‘Ade’ (16th C.) listed as tenant at ‘Rowntrehil’ in 1541 along with Marion and John, paying 11 shillings. Several other Olivers (John, Robert and Robert ‘the schireff’) were tenants in the other parts of the farm and may be related. Adam (16th C.) listed at Hyndhaughhead among Scotsmen who pledged loyalty to the English Crown in 1544. His name comes after ‘Dande’, in the same place, and so he was probably the son or younger brother. Adam ‘Adie’ (16th/17th C.) son of ‘Dand the Lover’. The pair were listed among Scotts and other local men who were accused in 1590 of a raid into England 3 years earlier. His name is recorded as ‘Eddie’, which was often an English transcription of ‘Adie’. Probably the same man was listed as ‘Ady Olipher called the Luther’ when he was declared a fugitive in 1605. Adam (17th C.) recorded in a rental roll of 1669 along with Robert Laidlaw. It is unclear where they were tenants, but perhaps Northbank or Slack. Adam (d.1808) gardener in the ‘East end of the Town’. He died in Hawick. Adam (1774/5–1848) farmer at Chapel in Lilliesleaf. He married Mary Hall, who was from Bowden and died in 1856, aged 65. Their children included: Adam (b.1803); Andrew (c.1810–92); Anne (d.1899), who married Thomas Turnbull; Mary (b.c.1820); and Thomas (b.c.1822). His children were mostly born in Jedburgh Parish. His wife was a widow at Chapel

(recorded aged 77) on the 1851 census for Lilliesleaf. He and his wife are buried in the graveyard at Jedburgh Abbey. Adam (1803–77) eldest son of Adam, farmer at Chapel in Lilliesleaf Parish. In 1841 he was a gardener in Jedburgh. He married Elizabeth Cumming. Their children Adam, Thomas and William emigrated to Australia. Adam (1825/6–86) born in Langholm Parish, son of Robert and Elizabeth Little. He was a joiner on North Hermitage Street in Newcastleton. He was probably the Adam who was an elder of Newcastleton U.P. Kirk in the latter part of the 19th century. He married Marion Murray, who died in 1895, aged 68. Their children included: Robert (1847–49); David, who died in infancy; Margaret (1851/2–67); Helen (1853/4–90); John; Elizabeth; and Ann. Adam (b.1869) from Eccles Tofts, Berwickshire, son of William. He worked as coachman for several people in Berwickshire and around Kelso, before moving to Weens around 1900. He married Helen Hunter and had 3 sons. Adam (19th/20th C.) resident of Deanbrae. In 1906 he contributed to the fund for the renovation of Kirkton Kirk. Agnes (17th C.) resident of Spittal-on-Rule on the Hearth Tax records in 1694. Agnes (17th C.) blacksmith at Chesters according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. She was probably related to other Olivers listed there, namely 2 Johns and 2 Thomases. Agnes (b.1780/1) born in Ettrick Parish, she was a widow who lived at 12 Buccleuch Street. It is unclear who her husband was, but clearly a prominent local man, since she is listed as ‘Ind.’ and ‘House Proprietess’ in the censuses. She was already a widow on the 1841 census and lived until at least 90, since she was still on Buccleuch Street in 1871. In Slater’s 1852 directory she is listed among the local gentry. In about 1874 she was recorded owning part of the former lands of Patrick Cunningham in Hawick. Alexander ‘Sandy’ (15th C.) recorded in 1502. George Douglas, Master of Angus, was fined for failure to prove the arrest of his son Thomas, called ‘Waitschod’. Alexander (16th C.) tenant in part of Westerhouses in 1541. The tenants in the larger part of the farm were Nicholas and Margaret. Alexander (16th C.) recorded at Westerhouses among men complained about by the English Warden for a raid into England in 1587. He is probably a descendant of the earlier Alexander in Westerhouses. Alexander (b.c.1770s) weaver in Denholm according to the ballot lists for the Militia in Cavers Parish in 1799 and 1801. He may be the Alexander who married Agnes Ferguson and whose children, baptised in Cavers, included Ralph (b.1812) and Betty (b.1816). Alexander (b.c.1780) labourer at Brighthouse according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish. Alexander (18th/19th C.) listed as secretary of the Conservative Reading Room in Pigot's 1837 directory. Alexander (b.1804) born in Ashkirk Parish, son of John and Anne Niel. He was a miller in the Hawick area. He was at Hallrule in 1841 and Synton Mill in 1851. By 1861 he was toll-keeper at Ashkirk Toll Bar, and was then a widower. He married Jane Scott (from Selkirk) in Hobkirk Parish in 1831 and their children included: Agnes (b.c.1832); John (b.c.1834); Robert (b.c.1836); James (b.1838); Adam (b.1839); William (b.1843); Alexander (b.1845), who probably died in infancy; and Walter (b.1848). Rev. Alexander (b.1827) born at Jedhead, Southdean Parish, son of Thomas and Jane Baptie. He was educated at Mowhaugh School in Bowmont valley, at Yarrow School and at Edinburgh and Glasgow Universities, where he won multiple prizes. In 1854 he became assistant minister of the East U.P. Kirk in Galashiels, moving to Regent Place Church, Glasgow in 1865. He was associated with the Temperance movement and the Liberation Society and published many articles and books. He received a D.D. from Edinburgh University in 1888 and was Moderator of the U.P. Synod in 1894. He may be the Alexander who married Anne Hardie in Southdean Parish in 1852. Andrew (16th C.) tenant at Kilnsyke according to a 1541 rental roll of Jedforest. Andrew (16th C.) tenant at Whiteside in 1541, along with Patrick, Gilbert and John. Perhaps the same 'Dand' in Whiteside was pledge for his son and brothers in 1571. He was also one of the leaders of the Oliveres for whom the Turnbull and Rutherford chiefs served as pledges in the same year. He was surely related to David, who was recorded as tenant in Whiteside in 1571/2, along with his unnamed brother. His name appears again in 1572/3, along with Oliveres and others from Southdean, with Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule and Richard Rutherford of Edgerston as cautioners. Andrew 'Dand' (16th C.) recorded in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He is named as 'Dande Ollyver of Hyndrawghthede', which was presumably Hyndhaughhead. Andrew 'Dandy' (16th C.) listed at Falside among Scotsmen who pledged loyalty to the English Crown in 1544. His name is listed right after Ringan in the same place, and hence they are surely related. Andrew 'Dand', 'the

Lover' (16th C.) listed among men complained about in 1590 by the English Warden for a raid into England in 1587. The others mentioned were local Scotts, as well as a Laidlaw, a Sharp, a Rutherford and a Hall. His son 'Eddie' (which probable means 'Adie', i.e. Adam) was also on the list in 1590. It is unclear how they were related to other Oliveres. Andrew 'Lang Andro' (16th/17th C.) recorded in 1611 along with Hob of 'Heidfauldis' when they refused to pay tithes to the Minister of Jedburgh. Andrew 'Dan' (16th/17th C.) tenant in Clarilee in 1610 when Adam Robson was found guilty of stealing a cow from him. Andrew (16th/17th C.) called 'of Thorterwood' in Jedforest. He was deceased in 1657 when his grandson inherited his lands in Jedburgh. Andrew 'Dand' (17th C.) lived with his son Thomas at West Falside in Southdean Parish about 1640. Andrew (17th C.) tenant in Sneepdykes according to a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Andrew (17th C.) grandson of Andrew 'called of Thorterwode'. He inherited his grandfather's lands in Jedburgh in 1657, ratified by the Earl of Lothian in 1677. Andrew (17th C.) cordiner in Darnick near Melrose. He is recorded in the proceedings of the Melrose Regality Court in 1660. Given the shoemaking trade, there is a possible connection with the Oliveres in Hawick. Andrew (17th C.) tenant of Bairnkine. In 1684 his son Andrew was among those listed as fugitives for being a Covenanter. Andrew (either him or his son), along with Richard and Robert, also in Bairnkine (and perhaps also his sons) were listed among those who refused to take the Oath of Allegiance in 1684. He was recorded at 'barnkin' in 1690 when listed among people owing money to the deceased Mark Turnbull and Bessie Kerr. He was also listed at Bairnkine on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Andrew (17th C.) resident at Slacks in Southdean Parish according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694, when he possessed 3 hearths. Andrew 'Dand' (17th C.) resident at Roughlee according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Andrew (17th C.) 'cottar' at Hallrule who was listed among the poor in Hobkirk Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Andrew 'Dand' (17th C.) recorded along with Steven as a tenant at Falside on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls, when they paid tax on 2 hearths. There was a separate Steven also listed, as well as John, plus Thomas and his sons; presumably some of these Oliveres were closely related. Andrew (17th/18th C.) resident at Swinnie. His wife Janet Learmonth (1691/2-1736) was recorded on a tombstone in Abbotrule

Kirkyard, along with Isabel (d.1756), possibly his daughter. Andrew 'Dand' (18th C.) tenant at Falside in Southdean Parish around 1740, along with Thomas and William. He may be the same Andrew who was tenant at Alton and Adderstoneshiel with William (possibly his brother) in the 1760s. He may be the 'Dand' who had the following children christened in Southdean parish: Janet in 1739; unnamed in 1741; and Agnes in 1744. He may be related to the earlier Dand who was recorded at Falside. Andrew (18th C.) tenant in 'Rigg' in Cavers Parish when he paid the window tax in 1748. He was probably at Caerlenrig. However, it is unclear how he was related to other Olivers. He may be the Andrew whose son Andrew was baptised in Cavers in 1747. Andrew (18th C.) tenant at Unthank in Hobkirk Parish. He farmed there after about 1757, when Unthank was sold by Thomas Scott to William Elliot of Wolfelee. Andrew (18th C.) listed at 'Fodderleebirks' in the subscription list for Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784). He may be the same as one of the contemporary Andrews. Andrew (b.c.1765) farmer at Westerhouses in Southdean Parish. His wife was Elizabeth. He was an Elder in the Relief Kirk in Jedburgh. He and his wife travelled there for services in a 'noddy'. His children included Elizabeth and Janet. He may be the Andrew recorded at Doorpool in the 1794 Horse Tax Rolls. Andrew (b.c.1770) cooper at Kirk Style in Hobkirk Parish. His wife was Ann. Andrew (d.1811) from Jedburgh, he was the keeper of the Carter Bar Toll. His death is recorded in Hawick. Andrew (18th C.) mason in Newcastleton. In 1797 he was listed among men on the ballot to serve in the Militia. In 1799 he was among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in the parish of Castletoun' and in 1801 he was a mason at Thorlieshope. He may be the Andrew who married Peggy Gray and whose children, baptised in Castleton Parish, included John (b.1808) and Margaret (b.1812). Andrew (18th/19th C.) licensed grocer at 4 High Street. He married Elizabeth (b.1774), 6th child of Walter Purdom. Their children included: Agnes (b.1806); and Andrew (b.1808), a tobacconist at 42 High Street. He may be the 'Oliver' whose premises are shown at about No. 42 on Wood's 1824 map. Andrew (b.c.1780) shoemaker in Hawick according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. He was probably related to other shoemaking Olivers. Andrew (b.c.1780) servant at West Mains according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish. Andrew (b.c.1780) son of 'Mr Oliver' tenant in Kirkton, according to the

1801 ballot for the Militia. His father was probably either James or Thomas, who were recorded at Kirkton in 1797. Andrew (18th/19th C.) eldest son of William of Langraw. As a boy he was taught by James Sanson (archetype for 'Dominie Sampson'). He was a successful wool stapler and cloth manufacturer in Huddersfield. He inherited Langraw in 1812, having to pay off some debts. It is said that when the Hare Cairn was dismantled he sent the carved cist slab to Abbotsford. He was listed as Andrew of Langraw in Pigot's 1837 directory. In 1803 he married Jean (or Jane), daughter of Thomas Scott, who farmed at Woollee; she was a first cousin of the writer Sir Walter Scott. He was succeeded by his son William. Andrew 'Rolly' (1793-1857) auctioneer and lawyer, father of James, and founder of Andrew Oliver & Son when he came to Hawick in 1817. He was son of James and Isabel Elliot, born at Marlefield Hope, Eckford. He had a brother William, who was a grain-works managed in Berwick and another brother George, who was a baker in London. He was an apprentice solicitor in Kelso, then worked in Annan, before moving to Hawick. He characteristically always wore a tall, white, felt hat, with a broad, black band. He started the auction mart system in 1847, probably the first of its kind in Britain. He became a member of the Hawick Curling Club in 1819 and was Clerk of the club for many years. He was described as a 'writer' when he subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821 and Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He is recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 directory as a writer and 'messenger' on the High Street. His premises at that time were probably one of the 3 places on the High Street marked 'Oliver' on Wood's 1824 map. There are several letters to him from the 1820s preserved in the Walter Mason Collection. In Pigot's 1837 directory he was listed as an auctioneer on the Sandbed, as well as a 'Messenger at Arms' and writer. In 1852 he was listed at Bridge House as a messenger at arms and 'Andrew Oliver & Son' are listed as writers. He was at the Sandbed in 1841 (probably already in Bridge House) and listed as a writer and auctioneer. By 1851 he was explicitly at Bridge House. In 1852 his company is listed as coal agents at the Station for the Marquis of Lothian's coal fields, as well as insurance agents for Sun. In Coldstream he married Catherine Brown, who died in 1867, aged 72. Their children included: Jane (b.1815); and James (b.1817), also a local lawyer, accountant and auctioneer. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. Andrew (18th/19th C.) married Janet Stevenson in Hobkirk in 1816. Andrew (b.1806/7) from Kirkton, he was a mason at 'Parkhouses' (i.e. Burnhead Cottages) in Wilton Parish. He is listed among heads of households at Howdenburn in Wilton Parish in 1835 and at 'Pityhouses' in 1840. His wife was Isabella Glendinning and their children included Isabella, James, Margaret, William and Andrew. Andrew (b.1808) son of Andrew and Elizabeth Purdom. He was a tobacconist at 42 High Street. In 1841 he was living there with his mother and sister Margaret. His sister was his housekeeper in 1851, when he was employing 5 people. Andrew (b.1807/8) born in Jedburgh Parish, he was son of Adam and Mary Hall. Like his father he was farmer at Chapel in Lilliesleaf Parish. In 1861 he was farming 150 acres and employing 5 people. He and his brother Thomas were the 'Messrs Oliver' recorded at Chapel in 1868. They were unmarried and lived with their sister Mary. Andrew (19th C.) schoolmaster at Cogsmill and Denholm. His grandmother was a Cranston, sister of Andrew Murray's wife. He was at Cogsmill around the 1880s. Andrew Rutherford (1855–1918) eldest son of James. He became partner in Andrew Oliver & Son, Auctioneers and Live Stock Salesmen in 1888. He was a respected figure in local agricultural circles, being Honorary Secretary of the West Teviotdale Agricultural Society and of the Teviotdale Farmers' Club for many years. He was also a supporter of the Common Riding and patron of racing, hunting and other sports. He lived at Thornwood, died there and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. A memorial clock to him overlooked the principal ring in the Auction Mart. He became a director of Blenkhorn, Richardson & Co. in 1909. Oliver Park was named after him. Andrew (1856–1938) 2nd son of Robert and Violet Rodger, he was born at Dinlabyre in Castleton Parish. He became an apprentice blacksmith in Greenlaw, spent some time in Ireland and then was blacksmith at Alanton, Berwickshire for almost 50 years. Andrew (1885/6–1937) died at Falside and is buried in Southdean cemetery. Anne (b.1811/12) from Langholm, she was son of John, tailor in Newcastleton. In 1861 she was recorded as 'feuar' at about 15 Hermitage Street, living alone. She may be the Anne who was juvenile librarian in the Parish in the 1860s. Archibald (16th C.) recorded as tenant of half of the lands of 'Greithil' in Jedforest in 1541. Archibald of Bush (d.1843) 2nd son of William of Dinlabyre. He is probably the Archibald, son of William, who became a surgeon-apothecary's apprentice in Edinburgh in 1799. He joined the 4th Bengal Native Infantry. By 1815 he was made Captain, then became deputy paymaster at Benares and retired at the rank of Major. He possessed Bush (also called 'Overton Bush') near to Edgerston. He became a member of the Jedforest Club in 1826. He married Anne, daughter of Col. John Anderson. They had no children and Bush eventually went to his nephew William, son of his brother John. There are portraits of him and his wife by Sir John Watson Gordon. Archibald (b.c.1790) son of James, he was born in Bedrule Parish and was tenant farmer at Denholm Mill. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He was tenant of Denholm Mill according to Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories. In 1841 he was living at Denholm Mill, but was deceased by 1851. He married Ann Laing and she died in 1857. Their children included: James (b.1820); Agnes (b.1821); Elizabeth (b.1823); Helen (b.1825); Ann (b.1827); Alison (b.1829); Margaret ('Maggie', b.1831); Joanne (b.1833); and John Laing (b.1836). Several of his daughters worked in Hawick as milliners and dressmakers. He was surely related to John, who was also at Denholm Mill in 1825. Arthur (1927/8–2006) worked at Craik Forest, then as a hand-knitter at Deanbrae Mill. He was a keen walker and angler, as well as Common Riding supporter. A stalwart of the Teviotdale Harriers, he joined in 1947, served as President, and in 200 received a trophy for 50 years as a running member. He was well known throughout the Town for his generous spirit. He married Lillian and had children John, Andrew, Margaret and Susan. Barton (b.1835) son of Castleton shepherd George. He may also have been called 'Angus Barton', after the local minister. In 1861 he was an agricultural labourer at Bairnkine in Southdean Parish and he later farmed at the Dodlins. He married Jessie Murray and their children included Catherine (b.1860), George (b.1862), William (b.1864), James (b.1866), Adam (b.1869), Betsy (b.1871, who married John Mable), Margaret (b.1873), Jessie (b.1876), Jane (b.1879) and David (b.1880). Charles (16th C.) tenant at Slacks in 1541, paying 11 shillings yearly. Thomas and John were tenants in the other part of Slacks. His name is recorded as 'Carolo Oliver'. Charles son of Robert, he followed his father by working at Lyle & Scott's, eventually becoming Managing Director. He arranged a partnership with

Christian Dior in 1954. He was a Captain during WWI, being awarded the Military Cross. He married Maisie, daughter of baker Thomas Brydon. He lived at Bucklands. Christian (17th C.) listed 'in Lustruther' among people declared to be rebels for refusing to take the Oath of Allegiance in 1684. It is unclear if this was a man or a woman. David (d.c.1170) recorded as 'Olifard', he was King David I's godson. He was probably of Norman descent, and had brothers who remained in England. If related to other Olivers (and not the Oliphants), then he is probably the first known ancestor of that family. He served with King Stephen's army at Winchester in 1141, against his godfather. But when King David escaped he helped him return to Scotland, for which he was granted lands at Smailholm and Crailing, as well as the Barony of Bothwell. Around 1150 he witnessed the grant of the Church of Molle to Kelso Abbey. He granted the tithe of Crailing Mill to the monks of Jedburgh Abbey about 1162, and he also made grants to Dryburgh and Soutra. In 1165 he was Justiciar of Lothian (perhaps the first on record), meaning he exerted authority from the Tweed to the Firth of Forth. He may have married a daughter of Berengar Engaine, who previously held Crailing. He had 5 sons, David (who succeeded), William, Walter, Philip and Fulco (or 'Fulk', Parson of Smailholm). David (d.c.1190s) succeeded his father David 'Olifard' (although these generations are confused). He had at least 2 sons: Walter, who married a daughter of the Earl of Strathearn and succeeded his father; and David, who married Johannah, heiress of Calder. Thus both sons moved further North, where the name was softened to 'Oliphant'. David (13th C.) son of Walter, from whom he inherited lands in Roxburghshire at Crailing and Smailholm. He is recorded along with Walter in a charter of Soutra Hospital in 1273. He married Devorguile (whose surname is not given), but died without an heir. Their Border lands went to his sister, who had married Walter of Moray. His wife could be the 'Dervorgulla Olyfart' who was involved in a lawsuit with Dervorgulla de Baliol in 1289. David (d.c.1502) resident of Strynds. He was probably son of Gilbert, and appears to be a different man than David 'Nae Guid Priest', who also lived in the same place at the same time. He is recorded in 1502 along with Robert 'in stryndis' producing a remission for stealing a total of 101 sheep from William Ker at 'Dernewik-mure', with Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst as his surety. He was also allowed to pay a fine for his part in stealing sheep from 'Jedworthe, Rowcastell, Langtoun, and Bethroull'; this was along with Robert and John (brother of Ingram). Also that year he was allowed to pay a fine for a further theft (of a long, detailed list of items) from Martin Wood in Whitfield, this being along with 'Long John' and 'Little John', again with Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst as his surety. Additionally in 1502, along with John son of Gilbert 'in kilclewis', he was allowed to compone for stealing 19 sheep and a cow from Maton and six sheep from Muirhouselaw; Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst was his surety. Probably the same David, brother of John son of Gilbert, in Strange, was also recorded in 1502 when they were allowed to compone for stealing a horse and a pot from Ednam. After failing to 'fynde sufficient souerties' he was sentenced to hanging in 1502, along with Robert, Martin and Matthew, all from Strynds (they may have been his uncle and cousins). All 4 were subsequently captured, and assuming the execution took place, this marks the demise of this once powerful rieving branch of the Olivers. David 'Nae Guid Priest' (15th/16th C.) resident of Strynds, which was near Westerhouses in the Rule valley, later called Strange. In 1502 he had remission for being involved in a series of raids, with Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst serving as surety, this included: stealing 12 oxen and cows from Sir David Home at Lammermuir; associating with rebels Thomas and Andrew Grahamslaw; stealing a horse from John Douglas in Jedburgh; stealing 3 horses from a farm at Nisbet; and stealing 20 sheep from George Douglas in Trows. He is recorded there as 'Dauid oliver in le stryndis, vocatis david na gud preist', but it is unclear how he got this odd nickname. He was recorded further in 1502 as 'na gude clerk' when he and John 'in le stryndis' were allowed to compone for crimes committed against Gilbert Lamb at Jedburgh, including seriously wounding him; Andrew Kerr was surety. Additionally in 1502 along with Ingram and John in Strange, he had remission for stealing oxen from Ancrum, as well as sheep, a cow and other items from Maxton. In 1505 Robert Oliver, 'Rob with the Dog' was given remission for previously intercommuning with him and John 'Cadger'; his nickname is there recorded as 'Na-gude-Preist'. David of 'Hyndhewche' (16th C.) recorded in 1557 as the 'taker' of John Kerr of Ferniehirst. He was presumably an officer of the Warden, and based at Hyndhaugh in Southdean Parish. Probably the same man is listed as tenant of 'Hynhanchheid', i.e. Hindhaughhead in Monipennie's list of the Border Clans published in about 1594 (but probably from earlier). In 1583 William Fenwick of Wallington (near Otterburn) complained that he and 200 others raided his farm, taking cattle, horses and 16 prisoners; this appears to have been a raid into England to recover cattle and other goods stolen from them earlier. David (16th C.) recorded in 1571/2 as tenant in Whiteside, when John Rutherford of Hunthill was surety for him and his brother. Although his brother's name is not given, this may be 'Dand', who was also recorded in Whiteside at about the same time. David (17th C.) recorded as one of the tenants in Falside in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. David (17th C.) recorded as tenant in Southdean in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. He was probably related to James and Thomas, who were also listed as tenants there. David (17th C.) resident of Nether Dykeraw according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. David (17th/18th C.) one of the Olivers of Falside in Southdean Parish, who left there in 1747. He may be the same man as the David recorded at Falside in 1669, or alternatively was a descendant of his. He was tenant farmer at Abbotrule Townfoot. He may have been father of some of Thomas, Dand and William, who were tenants at Falside around 1740. David (b.1829–bef. 1909) labourer in Newcastleton, son of George and Elspeth Murray. He worked as a railway surfaceman. He was at 37 South Hermitage Street in 1861. In 1853 he married Margaret Pott (b.1833) in Hobkirk Parish; she was daughter of Robert Pott and Mary Armstrong. Their children, baptised in Castleton Parish, included: Mary (b.1853); George (b.1855); Robert (b.1857); James (b.1860); Andrew (b.1862); John (b.1864); James (b.1867); and Margaret (b.1873). David Councillor in Newcastleton, representing the village on the County Council in the mid-20th century. He lived on South Hermitage Street. He acted as first Chairman of the village hall committee. David (1937/8–) born in Eastbourne, he lived for a few years in Selkirk, coming to Hawick at the age of 10. He attended Drumlanrig and the High School, was an apprentice painter for the Store, did National Service in the Royal Scots Greys and later worked for Pringle's. In 1967 he set up his own painting and decorating business, eventually retiring in 2001. In 1960 he married Betty, who was from Falkirk. The couple have been active in the Salvation Army and he was also President of the local Rotary Club. They couple's children are Kay, Gail and David; they celebrated their diamond wedding anniversary in 2020. Douglas (1871–1961) of Hassendeanbank, son of James Oliver and Jane Rutherford. He attended Mill Hill School (where James Murray had taught) and served in the Army during WWI. He entered the family Auctioneering business in 1887 and was sole proprietor by 1918. He was also Secretary of the Curling Club. He was Chairman of the Hawick Heritable Investment Bank and Chairman of the managers of the Cottage Hospital. He served in the Boer War. In 1904 he married Sybil Brown from Galashiels and their children were: Florence Murray (b.c.1905); Muriel Rutherford (b.c.1907); Elsie Margery (b.c.1910); and James Kenneth Murray ('Ken', 1914–99). Ebenezer (b.1718) son of James, the Cavers schoolmaster, he was born in Cavers Parish. He was the 3rd generation of his family to be schoolmaster in Cavers and he also served as Session Clerk. In 1759 his salary was 180–200 merks. In 1773 he is recorded augmenting his income through a market garden at East Cavers. He was married to Janet Brown, and their children included: John (b.1750); and James (b.1753). In 1762 he had a child born called James. It is possible that his son John was the schoolmaster in Castleton whose son Ebenezer was born in 1778. Ebenezer (b.c.1770s) clockmaker in Denholm. He was recorded as a labourer from Denholm in 1797 on the ballot to serve in the Militia. In 1799 he was listed among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not Drawn Still residing in Cavers Parish'. He was recorded as 'Watch mender' in Denholm on the 1801 ballot for the Militia. He was also recorded as watch and clockmaker in Denholm on Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He is probably the Ebenezer married to Betty Scott, whose children (born in Cavers Parish) included: John (b.1802), probably a weaver in Hawick with an eldest son also called Ebenezer; James (b.1804); Betty (b.1807); Margaret (b.1809); Thomas (b.1811); and Ebenezer (b.1814). He was surely descended from the earlier schoolmaster. Ebenazar (19th C.) Secretary of the Denholm Horticultural Society in the 1860s. Edward (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 being 'in Jedforest', although no more specific designation is given. At the Justice-aire in Jedburgh, the Coroner (William Cranston) was fined for failing to arrest him. Edward (16th C.) tenant at 'Stryndis' (i.e. Strange) in a rental roll of 1541. His name is listed as 'Eduardo Olivere'. He was probably related to earlier Olivers of Strange. Edward (16th C.) recorded as being 'of Lymkylwodd' in 1544, in a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to England. His lands were somewhere in Jedforest, like the other Oliveres listed. Elizabeth 'Bessie' (17th C.) listed along with Robert in Bank, on a list of people who refused to take the Oath of Allegiance in 1684 and were declared rebels. Robert was probably her husband. She was among a relatively small number of women who were prosecuted for being Covenanters. Elliot (b.1854) eldest son of lawyer James. He became a partner in the family firm Geo & Jas. Oliver. However, he retired early because of problems with his eyesight. Francis (1749–1829) tenant farmer of Heap. He was one of the founders of the Relief Church in Hawick. He died in Hawick. Francis (18th/19th C.) flesher in Newcastleton. He was listed as male head of his family in 1835 and 1836 and as a carter in 1837. Perhaps the same Francis was a servant at Millburnholm on the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish. Frederick Scott (1864–1934) born in Edinburgh, son of merchant John Scott Oliver. He became a prominent politician, particularly as a Unionist. In 1915 he purchased the estate of Edgerston from William Edward Oliver (who was not a relation). He married his cousin Katharine Augusta McLaren. Gavin (16th C.) tenant farmer at 'West Houses' (possibly Wester Houses in the Rule valley). He is recorded in a bond of 1562 along with William, tenant at Lustruther, who may have been a relative. The 2 of them had to enter Robert Robson, called 'Foul Mouth' to John Kerr of Ferniehirst. Geoffrey (15th C.) father of Matthew. His son was recorded at the Justice-are in Jedburgh in 1493 when he was fined for non-appearance, along with other Oliveres. George (16th C.) recorded as 'Gorge Ollyver of Whiteside' in a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544. 'Jake' and 'Patte' Oliver were also listed as being at Whiteside, and hence probably related. George (16th C.) tenant in 'Clarely' listed along with 2 other Oliver chiefs in Monipennie's list published around 1594 (but probably from earlier). This was the farm of Clarilee, lying roughly between Hyndhaughhead and Roughlee. George (16th C.) recorded in Chesters in 1571, when he was one of the 3 main leaders of the Oliveres for whom Sir Thomas Turnbull, John Turnbull of Minto, Richard Rutherford of Edgerston and John Rutherford, younger of Hunthill, served as pledges. He was listed again in 1572/3 along with other Oliveres, as well as

William Kirkton of Stewartfield, with Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule and Richard Rutherford of Edgerston as their cautioners; this appears to have been in relation to Kerr of Ferniehirst being declared a fugitive and all his former supporters swearing allegiance to the Crown. George (17th C.) recorded in 1669 as tenant in 'Slacks', along with William, who was surely a close relative. John was also listed as tenant there. He witnessed the baptism of a daughter of John Ker of Shaw at Southdean Kirk in 1681. George (17th C.) recorded as one of the tenants in 'Townheid' (near Chesters) in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. George (d.c.1685) tenant in Swinnie when his will was recorded in 1685. He was surely related to Thomas, who was at Swinnie at the same time. George (17th C.) brother of Thomas of Ashtrees. In 1691 he wounded Robert Rutherford, Minister of Ancrum, following an attempt to disrupt the service there. This was presumably still fall-out from the days of persecution of the Covenanters. George (17th C.) resident of Northbank according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. George (17th C.) resident of Strange in Southdean Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. He was surely related to John who was also listed there in 1694, as well as James recorded there in 1689. George (17th C.) recorded at Woodhouse on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. George (17th/18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. His children, with no mother's name given, included Bessie (b.1696), Jean (b.1701) and Margaret (b.1703). George (17th/18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. In 1699, along with shoemaker Robert (presumably a relative, perhaps his brother), he witnessed a baptism for cooper John Turnbull. He was shoemaker in 1712 when he witnessed a baptism for cook James Wright. He married Jean 'Betie' (i.e. Beattie). Their children included: Janet (b.1701); Isobel (b.1701); Margaret (b.1703); Grizel (b.1705); and Agnes (b.1708). The witnesses in 1703 included Robert and in 1705 were carrier John 'Atkin' and Henry Orrock. Bessie (b.1696) may also have been his daughter. It is unclear how he was related to the later shoemaker George. He could be the George who witnessed baptisms for the other George in 1726, 1728 and 1731. He is probably the George 'Senior Shoemaker' who witnessed a baptism for tailor Thomas Kay in 1739. George (18th C.) Hawick shoemaker, said to be from the Dykeraw Oliveres, he may have been son of Robert and Agnes Atkins (or Aitkin). He may be the George who witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Robert (and Bessie Blackhall) in Hawick in 1730.

He is described as 'senior' in 1740, so he probably had a son George at that time. In 1721 he married Margaret, eldest daughter of John Aitkin. Their children included: Robert (b.1722); John (b.1724); Agnes (or Annie, b.1726), who married George Douglas, from the Timpendean branch; George (b.1728); James (b.1729); Margaret (b.1731); William (b.1733); Isobel (b.1736); Walter (b.1738); and Bessy (b.1745). The witnesses in 1726 were George and Robert Oliver, in 1728 were George and Walter (presumably near relatives), in 1729 were smith John Scott and Patrick Forman, in 1731 were George (again) and John Telfer (perhaps the Beadle), and in 1745 were weaver Andrew Jardine and mason Adam Turnbull. In 1725, along with cooper John Aitkin (perhaps his father-in-law), he witnessed a birth for miller John Henderson. He is probably the shoemaker George who witnessed baptisms for shoemaker Robert in 1757 and 1765, suggesting that this Robert (of Burnflat) was his son. He may also be the George who witnessed a baptism for shoemaker John in 1757. He may be the George recorded in 1788 as owner of Burnflat (although that may indicate that he had purchased the land earlier, and may well have been deceased by then). George (d.bef. 1804) 'My Lord' listed in Birsilton in 1804 when his son Robert's death was recorded in Hawick. He was surely related to the other Olivers who were called 'Lord', as well as the Olivers who owned land at Birsilton, such as James, Cornet in 1784. George (c.1770–1837) son of William and Jean Nichol, he was born at Blinkbonny. He worked as a shepherd in Castleton Parish, including at 'Wheathaugh' (probably Whitehaugh) farm, which was run by his brother. He emigrated to the U.S.A. (with his whole family, except for the eldest son George) and died at Mishawaka, Indiana only a couple of years later. He married Elizabeth Irving and their children included: George (b.1803); John (b.1807); Andrew (b.1809); Jane Grey (b.1810); Dorothy Irwin (b.1815); Robert (b.1817); William Irving (b.1821); and James (b.1825), who became famous for improving the plough. George (b.c.1770s) servant at Saughtree according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. He was a shepherd at Saughtree on the 1801 list. George (b.c.1770s) servant at Redheugh according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1799. George (18th/19th C.) recorded on the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as farmer at Dykeraw. He owned 3 farm horses and 1 saddle horse at that time. He also paid the dog tax at

Dykeraw in the same year. George (18th/19th C.) tenant in Chesters in Southdean Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. He was probably related to Gilbert and Thomas who lived at Chesters at the same time. On the 1801 ballot for the Militia he is recorded as 'Husbandman' at Chesters. George (b.c.1770s) wright in Denholm according to the ballot list for the Militia in Cavers Parish in 1799. He was drawn in place of James Boswell Scott (substitute for David Scott in Merrylaw), who died in 1799. However, in 1800 he paid a penalty of £12 12s to avoid serving. George (b.c.1770s) son of Thomas, farmer at Birneyknowe, according to the ballot list for the Militia in Cavers Parish in 1799. George (18th/19th C.) flesher in Newcastleton. He is listed among heads of households in 1835 and 1836. He was surely related to Francis, also a butcher in Newcastleton. George (b.c.1795) mason in Hawick. He is listed among heads of households in Wilton Parish in 1835–41. In 1835 he was at Dovemount, at Stellhouse in 1840 (the address changed to 'Toll Bar Hawick') and at the Toll Bar in 1841. He was living at the Western Toll Bar on the 1841 census, with wife Mina and children William, Isabel, Margaret and James. George 'Pie Oliver' or 'Pies' (c.1800–47) baker on the Howegate, at about No. 19. He may have been son of William 'Little Cash'. His wife made pies at 19 Howegate, which presumably gave the nickname for the family. He married Janet or 'Nannie' Brown (from Selkirk), who died in 1881, aged 87. Their children included: William (b.1822); Thomas (b.1824); Catherine; Agnes (c.1828–1901), who married Robert Murray; Janet; George; and Robert. The three brothers who were stockingmakers, George, 'Jock the Hoist' and William, may have been his sons. He may have been related to James, who was an earlier baker in Hawick. His wife was working as a washer-woman on the Back Row in 1851. It is also unclear whether he could be the George 'of Burnflat' who was recorded as a heritor in 1854 (after his death); he seems likely to be the George recorded as owner of Burnflat on the 1811 Land Tax Rolls. George (1803–72) eldest surviving son of Town Clerk John. He was Cornet in 1824. He trained as a lawyer, and in 1831 went into partnership with his father as a 'writer' and bank agent. In 1837 he is listed along with his father as agent for the Commercial Bank. In 1841 he was living on Buccleuch Street and was there in 1851, recorded as 'Procurator in Sheriff Court of Roxburgh Shire'. The firm was thus

‘John and George Oliver’, but became ‘Geo. & Jas. Oliver’ on the death of John in 1849, when his younger brother became a partner. He was local agent for the Duke of Buccleuch, as well as being political agent for the Conservative Party in Hawick and Liddesdale. He was mentioned as one of the local ‘fictitious voters’ in an investigation of 1837 (along with John and Robert Anderson they bought property in Selkirkshire, apparently in order to gain the ability to vote there). He had a prominent role in the Hawick to Carlisle railway extension. He was probably the George ‘of Burnflat’ who was recorded as a heritor in 1854; he seems likely to be the George recorded as owner of Burnflat on the 1811 Land Tax Rolls (his son John inheriting these lands from him). He became tenant at Borthaugh in 1860. He served as a Commissioner of Supply for Roxburghshire. He was also one of the Orrock Trustees and served as Chairman of the Parochial Board for Kirkton Parish. He married Margaret, daughter of John Lindsay of Almeriecloss (Forfarshire) at Arbroath in 1843. Their children were: Margaret Spink (b.1844); Jane (b.1846); Mary (b.1848), who married Surg.-Gen. Peter Stephenson Turnbull, descendant of the Bedrule Turnbells; John (b.1850), also a Hawick lawyer; Jane (again, b.1852); Christian (b.1854), who married David Turnbull of Fenwick and Brieryyards; George Lindsay (b.1857), farmer, who spent time in New Zealand; and James Lindsay (b.1860), who also spent time in New Zealand with his brother. A portrait of him exists. His wife’s portrait, by Atkinson Horsburgh, is in the Museum, painted in 1883. George (b.1803) son of Liddesdale shepherd George and Elizabeth Irving. His brother James was the manufacturer of ‘Oliver’s Chilled Plough’ in South Bend, Indiana. He was the only one of his brothers not to emigrate to America. He was shepherd at Gatehousecote and elsewhere. He married Elspeth Murray. Their children included: William (b.1827), who became Steward at Gatehousecote; David (b.1829), who lived at the family home in Newcastleton; Elizabeth (b.1831), who married Adam Crozier; James Binnie (b.1834), who probably died young; and Barton (b.1835), who farmed at ‘the Dodlins’ near Hawick. George (19th C.) resident of Hawick and Wilton Parishes. He married Mina Telfer and their children included: and William (b.1829), James (b.1830); Isabella (b.1833), Margaret (b.1835), Beatrix (b.1836), Walter James (b.1838); James Walter (b.1840), baptised in Wilton; and Beatrix (b.1842), baptised in Hawick. George (c.1820–1900) son of John and Agnes Rutherford. He was born in Scotland, probably near Hawick. He moved to the Galt, Ontario area with his father and family. He married Elizabeth Turnbull (d.1868) and their children included John, James, Andrew, William, Thomas, Elizaebth, George, Agnes, Agnes (again) and Robert. Most of his family moved to Carberry, Manitoba, being among the first settlers there. George (19th/20th C.) farmer at Trow Knowes. He was an Elder of Kirkton Kirk. In 1906 he contributed to the fund for the renovation of Kirkton Kirk. George Lindsay (b.1857) son of Hawick lawyer George. He went to New Zealand and bought property there with his brother James. However, he returned to farm at Whitehaugh (near Newcastleton) and later lived in Hawick. George Currie Stenhouse (1900–73) born in Glasgow, from a Borders branch of the Olivers. His family moved to Hawick and in the 1920s he decided to emigrate to Canada. He worked as a herd in New Liskeard, Ontario, but travelled extensively while looking for work. On a return trip to Hawick he met Anne Murray (1895–1977) and she followed him back to Canada where they were married in 1931. The couple returned to Hawick in 1936. Gilbert (15th C.) father of Robert, James and William. His sons were separately fined at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh in 1493, for non-appearance to answer for unspecified crimes. He could be the same Gilbert who (along with John ‘benkis’) had 2 cows stolen by Philip Waugh in Jedburgh, with Waugh having remission in 1494/5. Perhaps the same Gilbert is mentioned in 1502 when his son John in ‘stryndis’ had remission for stealing a horse and a sword from Smailholm. He may also be the Gilbert recorded in 1502, along with James Rutherford and a man called ‘Wobstar’, when Thomas Rutherford in the Grange had remission for resetting them and their stolen livestock. Gilbert (16th C.) tenant at Whiteside in Jedforest in 1541, along with Patrick, Andrew and John. Gilbert (16th C.) tenant at Hindhaughhead in 1541 along with his mother Margaret. They paid 25 shillings yearly. Gilbert (16th C.) tenant at Over Dykeraw in 1541. He was probably related to other nearby Olivers, e.g. the tenants at Nether Dykeraw. Gilbert ‘Gib’ (16th C.) recorded in a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He is named as ‘Gybe Ollyver of the Dykis’. His lands may have been the Dykes in Bedrule, or perhaps more likely is Dykeraw in Southdean (given the family connection and forename). Gilbert (17th/18th C.) farmer at Dykeraw, recorded in a list of tenants in Jedforest in 1669. He was probably son of Robert, also listed there. He married a Douglas and their son was James, baptised in Southdean Parish in 1694. He was ancestor of George and James of the Hawick legal firm. Gilbert (18th C.) recorded as 'farmer in Hawick' who was deceased in 1754 when his daughter Ann married Andrew Ford in Edinburgh (or this may have been the Ann, daughter of Gilbert and Janet Turnbull, born in Hawick in 1738). He may have been born in Jedburgh Parish in 1712. Gilbert (18th C.) workman and carrier in Hawick Parish. In 1768 he witnessed a baptism in Hawick for Walter Stevenson and Janet Oliver (probably his daughter). He is also probably the carrier Gilbert who witnessed a baptism for Francis Aitkin and Anne Oliver (likely his daughter) in Hawick in 1766. He married Janet Turnbull and their children included: Anne (b.1738); Janet (b.1741); Helen (b.1744); and Robert (b.1746). The 1741 baptism was witnessed by merchant John Ruecastle and 'Officer' John Telfer and the 1746 one by Bailie Robert Scott and merchant William Oliver. Gilbert (18th/19th C.) resident at Chesters (Southdean) according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. He is listed right after Thomas, who may be a relation. Helen nee Elliot (18th C.) only child of William Elliot of Myredykes. In 1797 she married ironmonger James Oliver in Hawick. Her first children were born in Hawick, and then the family moved to Borthwickbrae Burnfoot, where her husband became tenant farmer. A story is recounted of how when she was married she brought a collie dog from Myredykes, and every sheep clipping season the animal would disappear from Hawick for a few days, since it had set off to help round up the sheep. In 1851 she was recorded as an 'Annuitant' living at Alemoor Cottage with her unmarried daughters Rachel, Eliza and Isabella, as well as 2 servants. Helen (b.1825) from Cavers Parish, son of Archibald. She was the eldest of 4 sisters who were living at about 61 High Street in 1851 and working as milliners and dressmakers. She was listed with her sister Ann in Slater's 1852 directory. Henry (d.bef. 1596) tenant in 'Hyndmureheid' (probably Hyndhaughhead). He was killed by Thomas Kerr of Crailling and his servants Andrew Hogg and George Gardner, who were denounced as rebels in 1596. There was a complaint in 1599 that James Douglas, Sheriff of Cavers had allowed them to remain at their dwelling place. He is further recorded in 1601 as the deceased 'Henrie Olypher', who had been killed by Thomas Ker and his servant George 'Gladner'; this pair were later killed by a group of Turnbells and others in Jedburgh. Henry (b.1806) agricultural labourer and shepherd in Southdean Parish, son of William, who was hind to the Laird of Langraw. In 1841 he was at Abbotrule farm and was farm steward at West Fodderlee in 1851 and 1861. In 1840 in Southdean he married Isabella Renwick from Morebattle; she died at Burnflat in 1895, aged 87. Their children were: Isabella (b.1841), who married Thomas Welsh; Robert (b.1843), a marine engineer who was lost at sea; Helen (b.1846); and Helen (again, b.1851). Ingram (15th C.) recorded as 'chairleis' in 1493 when he was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. His residence could be associated with Charlie's Hill or Charlie's Knowe in Southdean Parish. He may be the same Ingram against whom premeditated crimes were committed in Jedburgh by William Kirkton in Kirkton, according to the 1494/5 Justice-aire. He could be the Ingram for whom George Douglas Master of Angus was fined for failing to arrest (along with Thomas 'Waitschod' and James) in 1502. Ingram (15th/16th C.) son of Robert in Strange and brother of John. In 1494/5 he was listed among 8 Olivers and a Shiel when they had remission for communing with the English. He could be the same man as Ingram in 'chairleis'. In 1502 George Douglas, Master of Angus was fined for his non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Also in 1502, along with his brother John, and David 'Nae Guid Preist', he had remission for stealing oxen from Ancrum, as well as sheep, a cow and other items from Maxton; he was there recorded being 'in le stryndis' and his surety was Mark Ker of Dolphington. Additionally in 1502 his brother John was allowed to compone for stealing 2 oxen from Jedburgh with him, as well as other thefts (without him). Ingram (16th C.) farmer at Harwoodtown. 'Ingrem Olferis barne and zaird' (i.e. 'barn and yard') are listed in the 1562 Baronial dispute over lands in Feu-Rule, being assigned to Agnes Herries as superior. Presumably the same 'Ingra' was listed as 'man and servand' of Thomas Turnbull of Harwoodtown (brother of David Turnbull of Wauchope) in 1567, when his master was ordered to present him to answer charges related to raids into England. Isabel (b.c.1800) grocer on the High Street in Pigot's 1837 directory. In 1841 she was at about 30 High Street, living with wool-sorter Walter Wilson, who may have been a relative. Isobel (17th C.) listed at Dykeraw among the poor of Southdean Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls James (15th C.) assigned the lease of the Crown lands of Garlawcleuch in the Yarrow valley in 1489 along with his son John. It is unclear how he might have been related to other Olivers. James (15th C.) son of Gilbert. He is recorded in 1493 when he was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. His brother Robert was also fined at the same time, as well as Matthew son of Geoffrey, Robert brother of Matthew and Martin brother of Robert. William, son of Gilbert, was also fined, and probably his brother too. He was also recorded in 1494/5 among 8 Olivers and a Shiel (connected with Strange) who had remission for communing with the English; he was there stated to be brother of Robert, who was son of Gilbert, and also brother of William. He could be the James for whom George Douglas Master of Angus was fined for failing to arrest (along with Thomas 'Waitschod' and Ingram) in 1502. James (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 as 'burgess' (presumably of Jedburgh, or else a nickname) at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Along with Robert in Lustruther, Robert (nephew of David) and Robert Waugh in Mervinslaw, he had a remission for a raid on 'Kelshop', which resulted in the slaughter of Robert Brig and Adam 'Barnisfader'; his surety was Ralph Ker of Primside Loch. It seems likely he was related to the Olivers of Strynds. James (15th/6th C.) son of Gilbert in 'stryndis'. In 1502 he and his brother John had remission for a series of crimes: stealing an ox from Ancrum; stealing 2 cows from Jedburgh; and treason. His surety was Robert Douglas, uncle of the Laird of Bonjedward. Also in 1502, along with brothers Matthew and Martin, he was allowed to compons for stealing 200 sheep from the tenants of Jedburgh, Ruecastle, Lanton and Bedrule; his surety was again Robert Douglas. James 'the Prince' (15th/16th C.) resident of Swinnie recorded in 1502 when George Douglas, Master of Angus was his surety. He failed to appear at the Justice Aire in Jedburgh and was to be fined at the next court. The same man was charged at the 1510 Court of the Justiciary in Jedburgh. His crimes included theft of sheep from various people. James (16th C.) recorded as tenant in Mervinslaw in a rental roll of 1541, along with William, Margaret and William alias 'Merchant'. His steading was valued at 25s. James (16th C.) tenant at Waterside in 1541, along with Marion Young and Robert Young. It seems likely that they were related somehow. They paid 22 shillings yearly. James (16th C.) tenant at Nether Dykeraw in 1541, along with Michael, John, Adam and Robert. His name was given first, suggesting that he was the senior family member. James (16th C.) admitted as 'perpetual vicar' of Castleton in 1559. It is unclear how long he remained. James (d.1573) recorded as 'somytyme seruandis to Blak Ormistoun' when he was convicted and hanged along with William Donald. Their crimes included stealing livestock and burning the corn of Sir Andrew Kerr. It is unclear if he had direct local connections. James (17th C.) monk at Jedburgh Abbey in the period 1542–81. He held the title of Prior of Canonbie in the 1570s, but probably continued to reside in Jedburgh. He is recorded in 1573 as 'Dene James Oliver Pryour of Cannaby' in a case before the Privy Council regarding some lands in Canonbie. It is unclear where he came from. James (17th C.) schoolmaster in Cavers Parish. He is said to have accompanied the 'Guid Leddy Cavers' to conventicles on Ruberslaw and at Hagburn. His son James took over as schoolmaster at Cavers. He is also said to have kept a personal narrative of his experiences attending secret Covenanter sermons and escaping from the dragoons, stories that were passed down in his family for several generations. His son James was schoolmaster after him. James (17th C.) recorded as tenant of 'Souden' i.e. Southdean in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. James (17th C.) recorded as tenant of Hyndhaughhead in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. James (17th C.) tenant in Ashtrees. He is recorded in 1684 when his son Thomas was listed as a Covenanter fugitive. He himself refused to take the oath and was banished to Jamaica. He is also said to have 'paid to Meldrum 100 merks, also to Graden 30 rex dollars, also at a Circuit Court in Jedburgh 14 rex dollars, at another time £4 sterling; and the notwithstanding all other losses troopers were quartered on him.' James (17th C.) recorded as 'of Stryndis' (i.e. Strange) in 1689 when he complained that the Parish Minister had not read out the Articles of Estate or prayed for William and Mary. He was probably related to George and James who were recorded at Strange in 1694. James (17th C.) cottar at Ruletownfoot according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. James (17th C.) resident of Over Dykeraw according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. James (17th/18th C.) schoolmaster in Cavers Parish, son of James, who had been schoolmaster before him. It was said that he was a very strict and pious man. He would spend an hour each evening in the old church, reading scriptures by candle-light. It is said that a visiting Englishman saw him in the church one night, reading by candlelight in his red nightcap and thought he had seen the Devil. He gave his sons names from the Bible: Ebenezer, who succeeded as schoolmaster; Samuel (b.1702), who became schoolmaster in Hobkirk Parish; and Nathaniel. Douglas of Cavers ordered that he be buried in the church, 'for a man who had haunted it so much when alive deserved to sleep his last slumber under its roof'. He was presumably Session Clerk for Cavers, as well as Schoolmaster, and responsible for the entries in the Parish register. He probably taught his son to write, since essentially the same hand can be seen in the baptismal records from at least the 1690s until the 1760s. James 'Jafr the Piper' (17th/18th C.) formerly resident of Kirkton Parish, he was in Hawick in the early 1700s. His nickname was also given as 'Jafray'. In 1717 he was summoned to Hawick Kirk Session for abusing William Riddell on the street, and asked to supply testimonials from his former parish. Later that year he was called to task again for 'a relapse in drunkenness and rambling in ye streets occasioning the school boyes to follow after him through the toun'. And later that year, after not presenting the requested testimonials was given a final ultimatum, after which he would be handed to the Magistrates. It seems that they did not continue in 'extruding him out of ye toun' at this time. He was probably the same James, 'toun officer' who was rebuked in 1718 for playing (presumably the pipes) in front of William Whaton, who rode through the town 'in a military posture' for some kind of bet; he stated he was 'urged and pressed by the schollars to play before William'. In 1719 he was again rebuked 'for his indecent carriage in his drunkenness', specifically for 'rambling in his drunkenness and troubling the minister in his chamber', again being given a last chance to reform his behaviour. He married Agnes Telfer in England (presumably a quick wedding) in 1720. This 'irregular marriage on the English side' may have been the last straw, since the Session then went over the records of his past mis-deeds and sent a 'memorial' to the Magistrates adding that 'if they concurred not with ye Session the minister would make address to another judge to extrude him and to divest him of his service through the toun'. He appears to have been Hawick's Town Piper for at least 1717–20 and was replaced by Robert

Fowler about 1721. James (17th/18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Ashybank in 1709, 1716 and 1718. His children included Elizabeth (b.1709), Thomas (b.1716) and Agnes (b.1718). The later tenant in Ashybank, with the same name, was perhaps related. James (b.1694) son of Gilbert, and probably grandson of Robert, farmer at Dykeraw. He was born in Southdean Parish and was a carrier, later becoming tenant farmer at Earlside. He married Bessie Douglas in 1722 and their children were: James (b.c.1723), who died in infancy; and Isabella (b.c.1725), who married James Learmonth in Bedrule. In 1729 he secondly married Margaret, daughter of James Douglas of the Trows, who owned (or had the tenancy of perhaps) the farm of Earlside. He was by then in Hawick Parish, where he was recorded as 'workman'; in 1743 and 1746 he was listed as a carrier in Hawick, and he presumably took over the farm at Earlside shortly afterwards. He may be the carrier James who in Hawick in 1757 witnessed baptisms for wheelwright James Aitkin and Mary Oliver (probably a relative), as well as for gardener Alexander Donald. He is probably the James, senior, who witnessed baptisms in 1767, as well as in 1771 for merchant John (his son) and in 1772 for merchant James (also his son). He may be the James who witnessed a baptism for wheelwright James Aitkin and Mary (perhaps his daughter) in 1772. He may be the 'James Oliver, sen. merchant' in Hawick who subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784), along with his son James. With Margaret Douglas he had 5 sons and 4 daughters, all baptised in Hawick Parish, including: Betsy (b.1730); James (b.1732), ironmonger in Hawick; Mary (b.1734); Agnes (b.1738); Christian (1738–1804); John (b.1740), merchant in Hawick; Robert (b.1743), who probably became a surgeon in North Berwick; and Gideon (b.1746). The witnesses in 1743 were shoemaker Robert (who may therefore have been a relative) and maltman John Moss and in 1746 were ex-Bailie Robert Howison and carrier John Scott. James (18th C.). Married to Agnes Telfer, their son Robert was born in Hawick in 1724. James (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was tenant in Ashybank in 1755. He married Isabel Walker and their children included Elspeth (b.1751), Betty (b.1753) and Isabel (b.1755). Other children, baptised in Cavers Parish, who may be his, included John (b.1745), Helen (b.1746), James (b.1747) and John (b.1757). He may be a descendant of the earlier James at Ashybank. Bailie

James (1732–1820) 2nd son of James of Earlside and Margaret Douglas. It is said that when Prince Charlie's army passed through Hawick in 1745 his father sent him into the country with his horse for safety. He was Cornet in 1764. He had an ironmonger's business near 'the Cross' in Hawick and became tenant of the Duke of Buccleuch's farm at Crumhaugh Hill. In 1767 and 1777 he was witness for baptisms for merchant John (his brother). He is probably the merchant who in 1779 (although the date is uncertain) witnessed a baptism for shoemaker Robert (perhaps a relative) and Helen Scott. He is recorded as a merchant in 1781 and is probably the James who paid the Shop Tax in Hawick in 1785. He was Bailie several times in the period 1790–1810. He married Christian, daughter of Robert Elliot of Caerlenrig. They had 5 sons and 3 daughters, including: James (b.1766); Robert (b.c.1769); John (b.1770), who became a lawyer and Town Clerk; William (b.1772); Christian (b.c.1773), who may have married John Sibbald in Edinburgh in 1792; Thomas (b.1775), probably the son of the Bailie listed on the ballot for the Militia in 1797; Margaret (b.1777); and Mary (b.1781), who probably married Bailie Thomas Turnbull. For the 1766 baptism he was recorded as a merchant and the witnesses were John and Francis Elliot (his wife's brothers). In 1772 the witnesses were Francis Elliot (again) and James senior (probably his father), in 1775 were John Elliot and John Oliver, in 1777 were the whole congregation and in 1781 were John Elliot (junior, perhaps his brother) and wheelwright James Aitkin. He could be the James whose child was buried in Hawick in 1772. He is buried at St. Mary's. Note that there is some confusion in that another James was born to his parents in 1740, which is assumed to be an error for John. James (18th C.) tenant at Ashybank, probably son of the previous James who was there. He was recorded at Ashybank in 1778 when his son James was baptised in Cavers Parish. He was also recorded at Haughhead when several of his children's baptisms were later recorded together, specifically Isabel (or 'Tibby', b.1784), Jean (b.1786) and John (b.1789) were probably also his children. James (18th C.) resident of Roberton Parish. He was living at Rough-hope in 1785 when his son William was baptised. He is probably the James who married Isabel Scott and had other children, mostly baptised in Roberton Parish, namely: Isabel (b.1783); Nelly (b.1790); John (b.1792); and James (b.1799), baptised in Ashkirk. James

(18th C.) resident of Bedrule Parish. His children included: John (b.1780); James (b.1784); Peggy (b.1786); Archibald (b.1789); George (b.1792); and Robert (b.1795). His death (in his 89th year) is recorded in the Edinburgh Magazine. James (18th C.) tanner who was Cornet in 1782. The Council banned the carrying of pistols at the Common Riding that year, but he would have none of it, and they were not finally dispensed with until 1784. He lived at 23 High Street, the 'All Was Others' house, which is shown belonging to 'Oliver' on Wood's 1824 map. James (b.1766) son of ironmonger James, and descended from the Dykeraw family. He farmed at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot. He is probably the James who subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784), along with James 'sen. merchant', who was most likely his father. It is possible he was the merchant called James who was listed in Hawick in the 1791–97 Horse Tax Rolls. In 1797 in Hawick he married Helen (b.1777), only child of William Elliot of Myredykes in Castleton Parish. Their children included: Rachel (b.1799); James (b.1801), who continued to farm Borthwickbrae Burnfoot; Christian (b.1803); Helen (b.1804); Margaret (b.1806); Mary (b.1809); Elizabeth (b.1815); Mary (b.1817); William Elliot (b.1819), who spent some time in Australia; and Isabel (b.1821). Other children may have been Jane and Mina. The first few children were born in Hawick Parish and the rest in Roberton. James (1754/5–1839) merchant in Newcastleton. He was recorded at Newcastleton on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 2 horses. He married Jane Armstrong, who died in 1814, aged 53. Their children included: Peter (1789/90–1845), also a merchant; Adam (1798/9–1816); and 2 who died in infancy. They are buried in Etletton Cemetery. James (18th/19th C.) recorded as farmer at Kirkton, on the Horse Tax Rolls of 1797. Thomas is listed before him and so possibly related. He also paid the dog tax at Kirkton in 1797. James (18th/19th C.) farmer at Hermiston in the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls for Lilliesleaf Parish, when he owned 8 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. James (18th/19th C.) resident of Minto, recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. James (1765–1840s) baker in Hawick, son of Robert and Isabel 'Kenmur'. He was Cornet in 1784. It was said that he continued to carry pistols at the Common riding, although it had been decreed to discontinue the practice the previous year. However, when his brother-in-law William Wilson was Cornet in 1786, the pistols were finally abandoned. He is probably the baker James who (along with Robert of Burnflat, his father) witnessed a baptism in 1789 for James Farquhar and Margaret (perhaps his sister). He is probably the baker (and Bailie) called Oliver who was one of the first members of the Curling Club in 1803. He helped compile a 'New Valuation of Houses and Gardens in the Town of Hawick' in 1814. He was listed in the 1808 will of William ('Auld Cash') as his second cousin. He was probably the James appointed Chief Magistrate of Hawick in 1818. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825, when he is listed as being 'of Burnflat'. In 1789 he married Ann, daughter of Walter Wilson, but they had no family, and she died in 1809. Probably the same baker James married Elizabeth Purdom. Their children included: Elizabeth (b.1818); Isobel (b.1820), who became Mrs. McIntosh; Robert William (1822–49), also a baker; Agnes (b.1823), who married blacksmith James Bowie; and William James (b.1824), also a baker. The family were living at about 43 High Street in 1841, and his wife was a widow there in 1851 (and listed as 'landed proprietrix'). In 1809 he was recorded being 'in Birseltown'. He is probably the James who was also referred to as being 'of Burnflat'; this is how he is listed among the major landowners of Hawick Parish in 1839. According to James Wilson he described Burnflat as 'ane nourice fee' (i.e. the wages given to a wet-nurse, although it is unclear what that meant). James (18th/19th C.) tenant in Upper Dykeraw in Southdean Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. John was also tenant there and presumably related. James (18th/19th C.) gardener at Knowesouth in Bedrule Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. James (18th/19th C.) nailer in Minto. His son Thomas was recorded in the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. John, recorded as a nailer on the 1801 Militia ballot, may have been another son. James (18th/19th C.) from Westshiels in Southdean Parish. He married Jane Bruce, who was from Jedburgh. Their son William was baptised in Byrness in 1812. James (18th/19th C.) Treasurer of the Burgh of Hawick recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He may be the same James who was a member of the Curling Club in 1812. He may also be the James who is recorded on Wood's 1824 map as owner of property at the east end of Langlands Road and also along the east side of Roadhead. James (1801–80) son of James, he also became tenant at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot. He was listed on the 1834 electoral roll as a joint proprietor. He was one of the Tory supporters who received 'Tully's Mill' at the 1837 election. He apparently withstood the mob longer than anyone else, getting loose 3 times before finally being thrown into the Slitrig (4 men were later found guilty of rioting). The court proceedings describe how the mob 'did throw stones and mud at him, and did surround, and violently drag or force him towards the side of the Slitrig river', where they 'did push or force him into the river, which was then in a swollen state, and of considerable depth, and did kick him on the chin and other parts of his person'. However, he later wrote to Bailie Wilson, thanking him for the loan of some clothes, and stating that he 'felt only a little stiff, and that he was a few slight bruises'. He was at Borthwickbrae Burnfoot in 1841 and in 1851 was listed as tenant there, farming about 1200 acres and employing 4 labourers. He farmed at Howpasley from 1858, was farming 3800 acres there, and employed 9 people; he was still recorded there in 1868. In 1842 he married Dorothea (or Dorothy, d.1891), daughter of William Moffat, farmer at Garwald, Eskdalemuir. His children included: James (b.1844); William Moffat (1846–1910), the eldest surviving son; Jane (1848–1918); Helen Elliot (b.1850); John (b.1852); and Thomas (b.1854). His younger sons went abroad. James (b.1804/5) stockingmaker in Denholm, probably on Eastgate. In the 1860s he was listed as a stocking-maker in Denholm, suggesting he had his own business. His wife was 'Barbary' and their children included George and Barbara. There is an obelisk to their memory at Borthwick Waas. James (1814–1900) 4th surviving son of Hawick lawyer and Town Clerk John. He trained as a lawyer himself and was partner in the firm of George & James Oliver with his older brother. In 1841 he was living on Buccleuch Street with his father and siblings, and was described as a clerk. He could be the James who was 'sub-distributor' in the stamp office on Buccleuch Street in Pigot's 1837 directory. He was living at Teviot Lodge in 1861. In the mid-1800s he was recorded as owner of parts of Roughheugh that had previously belonged to John and William Thomline, Adam and George Easton and James Hart. He had Mayfield House built on land that he inherited from his father. He was a Town Councillor, serving as Chairman of Wilton Parochial Board, Wilton Landward School Board and Wilton Heritors' Committee. In 1852 he married Thomasina Pott (1830–80), sister of Gideon Pott of Knowesouth and daughter of George and Jane Elliot.

Their children were: Elliot (b.1854), who was a partner with Geo. & Jas. Oliver for a while, but retired and left the district; Jane Pott (b.1858), who married John Elliot of Binks; Christian Watson (b.1860), buried at Ainzahatta, Spain; James John (b.1864), partner in the legal firm; Elizabeth Murray (b.1866), also buried at Ainzahatta; as well as George (b.1860), Mary Georgina (b.1866) and Thomas (b.1868), who all died young. He retired about 1893 and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. Papers from roughly 1895–1919 are in the Borders Archive. James Rutherford (1817–1905) Auctioneer and Livestock Salesman of Bridge House and later Thornwood, only son of Andrew. He trained as a lawyer, and then joined his father's auctioneering business. He was a leading figure in the town in Victorian times, being a Town Councillor, Magistrate, J.P. (from 1888), Chairman of Hawick Heritable Investment Bank, Governor of Hawick Savings Bank (1890–94), Secretary and Treasurer of the West Teviotdale Agricultural Society (1842–1905), founder member, Honorary Secretary and Treasurer of the Teviotdale Farmers' Club (1859–1905), President of the Border Burghs' Conservative Association (1878–92), President of the Archæological Society (1883–88). He was also a member of the Curling Club from 1844, being Secretary for several years, and the first Secretary of the Hawick Bowling Club. He was also Senior Magistrate 1857–58, resigning during the dispute over the railway line. He offered a site on Bridge Street for the new Evangelical Union (later Congregational) Church, but the congregation declined the offer at the time. He is said to have formed the Teviotdale Farmers' Club after being black-balled from joining the other one (presumably the Agricultural society, formed earlier by Douglas of Cavers). He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1852. He had the splendid Thornwood House built and is believed to have been owner of the first car in Hawick (a photograph shows him with a chauffeur and another man-servant in the grounds of Thornwood). Oliver Crescent and Oliver Place are named after him; his monogram 'JRO' is above 2 of the dormer windows at No. 3 Oliver Place, and the carved head above the entrance may be his likeness. In about 1874 he is listed as owner of the parts of Weensland and the 'particate' lands of Hawick that had previously been held by James Dickson, as well as part of Roughheugh (earlier owned by James Knox). In Hawick in 1849 he married Jane Rutherford (1828–55), daughter of builder Robert, and she died of typhus fever (after having 3 children). He secondly married his first wife's niece, also Jane Rutherford ('Mrs. Oliver', the local historian), and they had 7 further children. His family included: Jane (1850–1910), who married Robert Inch; Andrew (b.1853), who died in infancy; Andrew Rutherford (b.1855), auctioneer; Alice Mary (b.1861), eldest daughter by his 2nd wife, who married Dr. John R. Hamilton; James (b.1863), also died in infancy; Catherine Brown (1864–1930), who married manufacturer Robert Innes and secondly married teacher H.H. Llewellyn; Evaleen (1866–1934), who married Spencer Waterfall from Sheffield; Blanche Ada (b.1868), who married Dr. Drummond from Liverpool; William (1869–1919), a solicitor; and Douglas (b.1871). At least one portrait of him exists. He is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. James (b.1819/20) farmer at Denholm Mill, son of Archibald. He is recorded there in 1851, and was miller on a directory of 1852. He married Mary Hall and their children included Archibald. James (1823–1908) born in Newcastleton, son of shepherd George and Elizabeth Irving. In 1835 he emigrated to New York with 2 other brothers, to join their brother John (who had gone in 1830), while the last brother, George, stayed in Liddesdale. They moved to a farm in Lagrange County, Indiana, where his father died in 1837 (the 'sick year'). The family moved to Mishawaka and he attended school, but had to leave to support his mother and siblings. He first worked as a ditch-digger, then a cooper, before starting in a grist mill then an iron company. He eventually went into business for himself, making ploughs. He hit upon a novel manufacturing process and patented a 'chilled steel plough' (where the cooling method made the cutting surface superior). The Oliver Chilled Plow Works became one of the largest in the U.S.A., and was a standard tool of pioneer farmers. At its height the company employed 2000 people and the factory covered 27 acres of covered space, making 200,000 ploughs a year. He was a great benefactor of the town of South Bend, building a hotel (called the Oliver Hotel) and an opera house. The town presented him with a gold cup inscribed with the word 'Copshawholm', which his son used as the name for his new house there in 1900. He married Susan Doty in 1844, and she died in 1902. They had 2 children, Joseph (who carried on the business) and Josephine (who married the secretary of the company). When he died his fortune was nearly £15,000,000, making him one of the richest ever Borderers at that time. James (b.1824) son of James, who was a baker in Hawick. He worked as a journeyman baker. He was recorded in Hawick in 1855, but may then have moved to Langholm. He married Mary Murray, who was from Langholm. Their children included: Alexander (c.1854–1934), born in Langholm, who emigrated to Tasmania and taught for 40 years at the Penguin State School; Agnes (b.1855), who was born in Hawick and married George King; Jack; Ralph; and Frank. James Walter (b.1840) born in Wilton Parish, son of George and Wilhelmina (or ‘Mina’) Telfer. The family emigrated to Canada in 1844 and he eventually became a surgeon in Niagara Falls. James (b.1844) son of James and Dorothy Moffat, he was born in Robertson Parish. He married Martha Pollard and their children included: Dorothy Moffat, who married William Baxter and another man named Gilbert; William James, who married Nora Estelle Brown; and Jana E., who married William Johnston. Members of the family lived later in Western Australia. Rev. James (1845–1918) born in Teviothead, son of John and Helen Sibbald. He was educated at Newmill and then at Hawick Grammar School. He graduated from Edinburgh University in 1863 and spent 2 years as an assistant teacher to Anthony Dodds at Buccleuch School (being succeeded by J.A.H. Murray). He was assistant minister at Selkirk and Bedrule and then at Nelston before being ordained as minister at Tweedmouth in 1870 and moving to St. James’, Portobello in 1880. He was President of the Edinburgh Border Counties Association and represented them at the 1906 Jubilee celebration for the Hawick Archaeological Society. He was said to be a great orator. He married Elizabeth Young of Howford. James (d.bef. 1917) from Newcastleton, he was an apprentice draper in Hawick. He was said to have had a lifelong interest in Hawick and in dramatics. James Lindsay (1860–93) youngest son of Hawick lawyer George. He bought some property in New Zealand with his brother George Lindsay. However, he suffered from ill-health and returned to Scotland. He married Agnes Ellen (‘Nellie’), daughter of Peter Pennycook of New Hall. He took over running the farm at Greenriver (i.e. Hobsburn) for his ill mother-in-law’s brother Henry Elliot. He hunted regularly with the Jedforest Hunt, although he eventually lost the use of one arm. He had one son, Harry. He died at Greenriver and is buried in Hobkirk kirkyard. His wife and mother-in-law moved to Scarborough after his death. James John (b.1864) younger son of lawyer James, he worked in the family firm of Geo. & Jas. Oliver. In 1914, on the death of his cousin John Oliver of Lynnwood, he became senior partner in the firm. He also lived at Mayfield after his father died. He was a keen member of the Teviotdale Cycling Club and the Hawick Golf Club (where he was Captain for 2 years and Treasurer for 10 years). He was a founder member of the Border Club, and the last surviving original member. He was also Chairman of the Hawick Constitutional Club. He served as a Lay Elector, Church Warden and Treasurer (for over 50 years) for St. Cuthbert’s Kirk. During WWI he was a Special Constable and became Sheriff-Substitute of Roxburghshire in 1930. He retired at the age of 82, owing to failing eyesight. In 1894 he married Robina Pennycook Scott and their children were Edith Agnes Scott (‘Nancy’, who married Harry Usher of Courthill), Thomasina (who married Victor Henry Wells-Cole), James Scott (also W.S.) and Tommy Scott. He is buried at St. Cuthbert’s. James Scott, W.S. (20th C.) son of James John, he was also a partner in Geo. & Jas. Oliver. He is probably the James S. whose diary describes his time as an A.R.P. Warden during WWII. James Kenneth Murray, O.B.E., ‘Ken’ (1914–99) auctioneer and successful horse-trainer who lived at Hassendeanbank. He was the son of Douglas and great-grandson of Andrew. As an amateur jockey he won many races, including the Scottish Grand National of 1950 on ‘Sanvina’. As a trainer he had nearly 1,000 winners, including 5 Scottish Grand National winners, and in 3 separate seasons he had 56 winners. He is also the only trainer to have had a horse come second 3 times in the Grand National, ‘Wynburgh’; the horse was retired at Hassendeanbank, along with its donkey friend. He was founding Chairman of the National Trainers Federation and was largely responsible for the renaissance of the Doncaster Bloodstock Horse Sales. He was also sometimes known as the ‘Benign Bishop’ after one of his horses (or perhaps the other way around). He was appointed O.B.E. in 1997, for services to farming and the local community. He gave a speech at the Friday Hut in 1992. He married Joan Innes and they had children Susan (who married William Forster) and Douglas Stuart. He secondly married Rhona Wilkinson. A biography ‘The Benign Bishop’ (1994) was written by Dan Buglass. Jane see Helen Christina Eason Rees. Janet (16th C.) recorded as tenant in Southdean Mill in a rental roll of 1541, along with Patrick and Marion. Janet (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with Robert. Together they were tenants of lands valued at 8s 4d. Her name is given first, suggesting she was mother or older sister of Robert. Several other Olivers were tenants of 3 other parts of Lustruther. Janet (17th C.) recorded as 'in Wool' on a list of people who refused to take the Oath of Allegiance in 1684 and were declared rebels. It is unclear whether 'Wool' was Woll, or Wells or somewhere else around Jedforest. Jean 'Jeannie Ma Lord' (d.1819) said to be a descendant of 'Hab o' Hawick' and cousin of 'Clinty'. Although her married name was Riddell or Turnbull, it is said that she retained her maiden name through strength of character. She was known as 'Jane' as well as 'Jean'. She was well educated and her kitchen on Silver Street was a meeting place for the local literati. She wrote an account of the flood of 1767. In the 1837 election a Tory-supporter named Robert Paterson took refuge under the bed of her house (or former house) and was dragged out by the mob. She was known as a strong-willed eccentric, and her nickname came from her word being law among her circle of acquaintances. Stories are also told about how she was 'fond of Dress and used to give considerable orders to the Drapers of the town'. She had a son called 'Daft Robbie', Dr. Oliver of the Navy. Despite the story that her maiden name was Oliver, her death record records her as 'Jeany Scott spouse to deceased Robert Oliver – Jeany my Lord'; hence she may have been the Jean Scott who married Shoemaker Robert Oliver in 1756. Her nickname may therefore be related to the 'Lord' nickname that some of the Olivers had, e.g. George, recorded as 'My Lord, Birsilton' in 1804. Jeremiah (b.1735) son of Thomas and Janet Middlemas. He was born in Southdean Parish, but lived most of his life in Crailing. He married Margaret Leadhouse and their children were: Stephen (1782–58), tailor; Robert (b.1784); Robert (again, b.1785); Andrew (b.1787); Richard (b.1788); and Agnes (b.1795). Some of his descendants emigrated to New Zealand. John (13th C.) merchant in Berwick, recorded in 1260. He is one of the earliest known Olivers in the Borders. John (14th C.) recorded in the Exchequer Rolls in 1330. It is unclear where he came from in Scotland. John (15th C.) recorded as master of works for a bridge in Dumfries in 1460 and again in 1465. It is unclear how he was related to other Olivers. John (15th C.) recorded in 1479/80 as a naturalised Scotsman, now in London. John (15th/16th C.) son of Robert in Strange and brother of Ingram.

In 1494/5 he was listed among 8 Olivers and a Shiel when they had remission for communing with the English. He was also described in 1502 as brother of Ingram when he was allowed to pay a fine, along with Robert and David, 'in Stryndis', for being involved with several raids around Jedburgh, Ruecastle, Lanton and Bedrule. He and Robert (perhaps the same Robert who was his father) specifically stole 6 oxen and cows from Philip Ormiston at Maxton; Mark Ker of Dolphinston was surety for him. Additionally in 1502, along with his brother Ingram and David 'Nae Guid Preist', he had remission for stealing oxen from Ancrum, as well as sheep, a cow and other items from Maxton; Mark Ker of Dolphinston served as his surety. He was probably 'Long John Oliver' ('longus' in Latin), who, along with 'Little John Oliuer' and David in Strynds was also allowed to pay a fine for stealing a list (long and detailed) of goods from Martin Wood in Whitfield in 1502, with Mark Ker of Dolphinston as his surety. Furthermore, in 1502 he was also charged with: stealing 2 oxen from Adam Moscrop in Jedburgh, along with his brother Ingram; stealing a horse and 4 oxen from Thomas Pringle in Smailholm; stealing a horse from John Cranston in Crailing; stealing 2 horses and some sheep from George Davidson in Raperlaw; and stealing a horse and goods from Bongate in Jedburgh. Once again Mark Ker was his surety. Finally in 1502, along with another John and John's brother David, all from Strange, he was allowed to compone for stealing a horse from Ednam. Also in 1502 he Martin and Matthew componed for stealing 2 cows and more than 100 sheep from the Laird of Bedrule at Bedrule and Fulton; again Mark Ker was his surety. John (15th/16th C.) son of Gilbert in 'stryndis'. In 1502 he and his brother James had remission for a series of crimes: stealing an ox from Ancrum; stealing 2 cows from Jedburgh; and treason. His surety was Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst. Also in 1502 he is recorded as son of Gilbert in 'stryndis' when he had remission for stealing a horse and a sword from Smailholm; his surety was again Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst. Additionally, along with his brother David and another John, all from Strange, he was allowed to compone in 1502 for stealing a horse from Ednam. Furthermore, in 1502, he was recorded as son of Gilbert 'in kilclewis' when he was allowed to compone, along with David for stealing 19 sheep and a cow from Maxton and six sheep from Muirhouselaw; Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst was his surety. He was also recorded in 1502 as son of Gilbert when, along with Martin in Strange, he was allowed to compone for stealing a cow from Bedrule; Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst was again the surety. He was also recorded as son of Gilbert in 1502 when he was allowed to compone, along with his brother David, for stealing a horse and a pot from Ednam. He was recorded further in 1502 being 'in le stryndis' when, along with David, he was allowed to compone for crimes committed against Gilbert Lamb at Jedburgh, including seriously wounding him; Andrew Kerr was surety. He is probably the same man as 'Little John' ('parva' in Latin) who had remission in 1502, along with 'Long John' and David, for stealing goods from Martin Wood in Whitfield; Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst was his surety, suggesting he was the same John. John 'Cadger' (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1505 when 'Rob with the Dog' had remission for intercommuning with him and David 'Nae Guid Priest'. He is there said to be 'called Cageare'. John (16th C.) tenant at 'Rontrehil' (probably Rowantreehill) in 1541 along with Robert, paying 11 shillings. Several other Olivers (John, Margaret, Adam and Robert 'the schireff') were tenants in the other parts of the farm and may be related. John (16th C.) listed as tenant at 'Rowntrehil' along with Marion and Adam, paying 22 shillings yearly. This is separate from the John who was in 'Rontrehil' with Robert. John 'Blackheid' (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, listed separately from another John and several other Olivers. He was tenant of part of Lustruther valued at 8s 4d. John (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with Katherine and Marion, who were probably his daughters or sisters. Together they were tenants of lands valued at 25s, while several other Olivers were tenants of 3 smaller parts of Lustruther. John (16th C.) tenant at Whiteside in 1541 in Jedforest, along with Patrick, Gilbert and Andrew. Probably the same man was recorded as 'Jake Ollyver of Whiteside' in a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544. George and 'Patte' Oliver were also listed as being at Whiteside, and hence probably related. John (16th C.) tenant in Harelawcleuch in 1541 along with Richard Oliver and Patrick Laidlaw. John (16th C.) tenant in Falside in 1541. His part of the lands was valued at 25s. Other tenants there included Ninian, Walter, 'Little ' Roger, 'Lang' Roger and Robert, called 'Laird'. John 'Jock' (16th C.) recorded as 'Joke Ollyver of Lustrodder younger' in 1544, when he was among Olivers and others who gave assurance to the English Crown.

William, Hob and Ringan were also listed at Lustruther and so were probably related. John (16th C.) tenant at Slacks in 1541, along with Thomas, who was probably his father or brother. They paid 22 shillings yearly, with Charles renting the other part of Slacks. He was also recorded as being 'of Slakis' in a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544. John (16th C.) tenant at Nether Dykeraw in 1541, along with James, Michael, Adam and Robert. John 'Jock' (16th C.) listed among Scotsmen who pledged loyalty to the English Crown in 1544. He is recorded as 'Joke Ollyver of Cresters', which is probably a transcription error for Chesters. John 'Jock' (16th C.) recorded at 'Fowden' (probably 'Sowden', i.e. Southdean) in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. John (16th C.) recorded being from Bedrule when he was cited to appear before the Privy Council in 1566. He is probably the priest from Bedrule listed among several Borders clerics ordered to appear before the Lords of Secret Council in 1569; he was there recorded as 'Maister Johnne Oliver in Bedroule'. He was presumably a pre-Reformation priest who was cited for not giving up the old ways. John (16th/17th C.) recorded as 'John Oliphe in Tempilhall' when he witnessed a sasine for the lands of Templehall and Brewlands in Rulewater in 1604. He was also one of the people who were directed by a court action to leave Templehall and Brewlands in 1605, this being brought by George Turnbull, acting as 'tutor' to Jean and Beatrix Turnbull. John (16th/17th C.) recorded as tenant in Lethem along with Simon Robson in 1623. 2 men were acquitted of stealing sheep from them. John (17th C.) tenant in the farm of Bank according to a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. He is probably the John in Bank whose wife's will, Grizel Hall, was recorded in 1685. John (17th C.) recorded as smith near Chesters (Southdean) in a list of tenants of Jedforest in 1669. He is probably related to the Thomas who was recorded as smith at Chesters at 1694 and could be one of the 2 men called John who were also listed as residents at Chesters in 1694. John (17th C.) recorded as tenant of 'Rodes' in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. It is unclear where this was exactly, but it is listed right after Whiteside. John (17th C.) recorded as tenant in Highlee in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. John (17th C.) tenant in 'Slacks', listed on the 1669 rental roll of Jedburgh Forest. George and William were also tenants at the same time. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Margaret Fowler and their children included: Agnes (b.1678); and Bessie (b.1680). The witnesses in 1680 were Adam and William Brown. John (d.1679) from Hobkirk Parish. He is recorded as one of the men banished to America in 1679 for being a Covenanter, and dying at Moul Head of Deerness, in Orkney, when their ship wrecked and they were ordered shut up beneath the hatches. John (17th C.) resident of Hawick who married 'Jenet Bo' (presumably Janet Boa). Their son William was born in Hawick in 1674. John (17th C.) tenant in Falside. In 1679 he served as surety for his brother Thomas, 'servitor of the Marquis of Douglas', who was a Covenanter supporter. Perhaps the same John was recorded as tenant on the 1694 Horse Tax Rolls along with Steven. John (17th C.) listed 'in Wadiespindles' among people declared rebels in 1684 for refusing to take the Oath of Allegiance. John (d.c.1685) tenant in Blackleemouth when his will was recorded in 1685. John (17th C.) resident at Greena in Castleton Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax records. John (17th C.) weaver in Hawick, on the 1693/4 subscribers' list for the new Kirk bell. He was listed in 1694 among those on the west-side of Hawick who paid the Hearth Tax. He is probably the weaver who witnessed a baptism for Andrew Jardine, younger, in 1708. John (17th C.) appears to be recorded as 'Stand the Lan' (or perhaps 'Lau') in the Hearth Tax records for the area of Jedburgh in 1694. It is unclear if this was a nickname or a location of some sort. John (17th C.) recorded as tenant in Strange in 1689, when he headed a list of Southdean parishioners who complained that their minister had failed to pray for William and Mary. resident of Strange in Southdean Parish on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. He was surely related to George who was also recorded there. John (17th C.) resident of 'hoa cleugh-fit' according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. This entry comes just before Waterside, and so was presumably in the Jedforest area. John of Dinlabyre (17th/18th C.) 1st Oliver Laird, he was descended from the Olivers of Lustruther. He may be the tenant recorded at Lustruther and Hyndlee in 1694, when he paid tax on 6 hearths (so he was an important farmer in the area at that time). He probably purchased the Dinlabyre estate from the Elliots in about 1698. He is described as 'elder' of Dinlabyre in 1719 when he purchased the lands of Larriston from Robert Elliot. His eldest son was William, who succeeded to Dinlabyre, and married Mary, daughter of William Chisholme of that Ilk. His 2nd daughter Mary married John, son of William Chisholme of that Ilk (and therefore he had a son-in-law and a brother-in-law who were brother and sister!). It is unclear how he was related to the Olivers of Southdean and neighbouring areas. John (17th/18th C.) merchant in Hawick. In 1710 he witnessed a baptism for weaver Michael Briggs. He may be the same as one of the other Johns. John (d.1739) last of the Olivers of Ashtrees. The lands passed to his only child Helen, and her husband, John Scott. John (1684/5–1750) tenant farmer at Stonedge. He married Helen 'Andrum', who died in 1762, aged 71 (or possibly 76). Along with their daughter Euphen, they were recorded on a memorial stone at old Abbotrule Kirk. John of Dinlabyre (d.bef. 1775) only son of William and Mary Chisholme. He may have been Sheriff of Roxburghshire, as well as Procurator-Fiscal. He also owned the lands of Over and Nether Larriston and others in Liddesdale. In 1748, along with his father, he gifted sacramental cups to Castleton Kirk. He is probably the 'Jo. Olipher' who paid the window tax in Castleton Parish for both Haggiehaugh and Dinlabyre House. In 1734 he married Violet, eldest daughter of Thomas Douglas, who was brother of Archibald Douglas of Cavers. He was succeeded by his eldest son William (b.1738); he may have had other sons, but their names are not known. His daughter Jean married Samuel Mitchelson, W.S., in 1753. His wife may be the 'Lady Dinlabyre' recorded in a hire of the Hawick Parish mortcloth in 1758. John (18th C.) referred to as 'senior' in an account of the 1767 flood. He and shoemaker Thomas Waugh 'got to the top of the kiln', but then needed people to throw ropes to save them. He may be one of the 3 shoemakers of that name who had children in the 1760s, perhaps the one who lived at 'Bridge end'; however, he could be a John from an earlier generation. Rev. John (1707–1755) youngest son of Thomas, tenant in Southdean Mill. He was licensed by Jedburgh Presbytery in 1733, and became assistant minister at Southdean in 1736. In 1743 he took over as minister of Southdean on the death of his predecessor John Inglis. He paid the window tax at 'the mance' in Southdean Parish in 1748. His wife, Isobel Hall (daughter of Edward of Whitelee in Redesdale) died in London in 1774. Their children were Elizabeth, Thomas, Janet and Edward. John (18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. He married Susan Hope and their children included: George (b.1756); Margaret (b.1757); Susan (b.1760); and William (b.1761). The witnesses in 1757 were smith Robert Telfer and George (who was probably a relative), in 1761 were Bailie James Scott and gardener Thomas Miller. It is unclear how he was related to other shoemaking Olivers, however the other shoemaker John was witness to a baptism for him in 1760, along with blacksmith Robert Telfer. Given the names, he may have been the son of shoemaker George, born in 1724, with the other John being his cousin. He is probably the shoemaker John who witnessed baptisms (along with merchant Andrew Scott) for merchant William Veitch in 1757, 1759 and 1765 and for merchant Andrew Scott (along with William Veitch) in 1758 and 1762. John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was living at Cavers Knowes in 1745 when his daughter Isabel was baptised. John (18th C.) shoemaker of Hawick. He may be the son of Robert and Bessie Blackhall who was born in Hawick in 1734. He married Isabel Scott in 1756. Their children included: Agnes; Robert (b.1762), tailor in Hawick, possibly 'Clinty'; Elizabeth 'Betty' (1764–1838), who died in Peebles; Agnes (again, b.1766); Alison (b.1768); Andrew (b.1770); and William (b.1775). His son William was named as a second cousin in the 1808 will of William, 'Auld Cash'; William's brother was stated to be tailor Robert, who may have been 'Clinty'. In fact he was probably a full cousin of 'Auld Cash'. In 1760 he was witness to a baptism for another shoemaker of the same name, who may have been his cousin. Either he or one of the other shoemakers called John was witness for shoemaker James Brown in 1766. He is probably the shoemaker at 'Bridge end' whose death is recorded in Hawick in 1787. He may also be the John 'senior' who narrowly escaped from his house during the flood of 1767. John (b.1735) son of Walter and Margaret Turnbull, he was born in Hawick and was a shoemaker. He married Helen Currer in Hawick in 1763; she was living in Hawick Parish, but born in Bedrule Parish, daughter of James. Their children included: Helen (b.1764); Margaret (b.1766); Jane (b.1768), who married James, son of George and Agnes Douglas (who were related to the Timpendean Douglasses); and Agnes (b.1772). The witnesses in 1766 were James Currer (probably his father-in-law) and Robert Oliver (presumably a relative, but there were several contemporary men of this name) and in 1772 were James Elliot of Ormiston and surgeon Robert Erskine. James Haining suggests that he secondly married Agnes Ekron, but that is probably confusion with a different John (b.1740). John (b.1740) son of James, farmer at

Earlside and Margaret Douglas, who came from the Trows family. He was a merchant in Hawick. He is probably the merchant who witnessed a baptism for Alexander Lockie in 1772. In 1766 he married Agnes (1748–80), daughter of merchant James Ekron and Isobel Richardson. Their children included: Isabel (b.1767), who died young; Elizabeth ('Betty', 1771–1844), who married linen merchant Charles Scott, and not George Hall from Duns, as some Hall of Philadelphia family histories have suggested; James (b.1773); James (again, b.1775); Agnes (d.1775), who also died young; Isabel (again, b.1777); and William (b.1779), died in infancy. James Oliver Senior and 'J. Oliver Jnr.' (probably his father and brother) were witnesses to the baptism of his first child, and seem likely to have been his father and brother. James Oliver 'Senior' (probably his father) and merchant James Ekron (his father-in-law) were witnesses in 1771, William Scott, merchant, and James Aitkin were witnesses in 1773, while J. Oliver, merchant and T. Aitkin were witnesses in 1777. His wife Agnes' had a book of the catechism that survived as a family heirloom. John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Isabel Moss (also from Hawick) in 1761. Their children included Helen (b.1762). John (18th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. He married Christian Scott and their daughter Ann was baptised in 1777. John (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was recorded as a wright at Cauldmill in 1777, 1779, 1782 and 1788. His children included William (b.1777), Stephen (b.1779), John (b.1782) and Helen (b.1788). Several other children baptised around the same time could be his, e.g. Margery (b.1784) and Thomas (b.1786). Perhaps the same John was in Cauldmill in 1796 when his twins Isabel and Elizabeth were baptised in Cavers. John (18th C.) schoolmaster in Castleton Parish. He was recorded at the Schoolhouse in 1778. He married Margaret Armstrong and their children included: Janet (b.1775); Agnes (b.1776); Ebenezer (b.1778); Archibald (b.1778); Elizabeth (b.1781); Thomas (b.1782); Elizabeth (again, b.1784); James (b.1786); and John (b.1787). It seems possible he is John (b.1750), son of Cavers Schoolmaster Ebenezer. John 'Rough Jock' (18th C.) recorded in 1787 when his child died in Hawick Parish. His name is recorded as both 'Rough Jock' and 'Rough Joke'. He could be the same as one of the other Johns. John (b.c.1765) recorded as 'independent' at Newton in Wilton Parish in 1841. He was probably a retired farmer there. He lived there with Helen, who was probably his wife. John (18th/19th C.) said to have been son of William and Isabella Stewart. He lived in Hawick Parish when his first 2 children were baptised and in Wilton Parish when some other children were baptised (e.g. at Braidlies in 1787 and Muirfield in 1791), and was later at Essenside. He married Margaret Douglas in Castleton Parish in 1770. Their children included: Helen (b.1775); John (b.1777); Francis (b.1779); Isabel (b.1782); William (b.1785); Robert (b.1787), who emigrated to Pictou County, Nova Scotia; Henry (b.1791), who emigrated with his brother Robert; and Margaret (b.1789). John (18th C.) married Isabel Scoon in Minto Parish in 1790. John (18th/19th C.) tenant in Upper Dykeraw in Southdean Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. James was also tenant there and presumably related. He was 'Husbandman' at Dykeraw on the 1801 Militia ballot. John (18th/19th C.) tenant in Westerhouses in Southdean Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. William was also tenant there and presumably related. John (18th/19th C.) tenant at Langburn (distinct then from Langburnshiels) in 1801, when his servant William Foster was on the Militia ballot in Hobkirk Parish. John (18th/19th C.) wright at Chesters in Southdean Parish according to the Lieutenancy Book for 1799. John (b.c.1770s) servant at Moss-paul according to the ballot list for the Militia in Cavers Parish in 1799. Perhaps the same John was a servant at Northhouse Haugh on the 1801 Militia ballot. John (b.c.1780) mason at Cauldmill according to the ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish in 1801. Perhaps the same mason was listed at Stobs Castle in 1821 when he subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border'. John (18th/19th C.) tenant at Denholm Mill. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He may have been father of Archibald, who was also at Denholm Mill in 1825. John (1770–1849) 2nd son of James, ironmonger and Cornet, he was grandfather of J.J. Oliver of Mayfield. He became a lawyer and set up in partnership with John Elliot about 1791. He is recorded in documents in Selkirk, preserved in the Walter Mason Collection, in 1801, 1802, 1807, 1810, 1813, 1814 and 1815. Oliver & Elliot were appointed agents for the Commercial Bank in 1820 (or shortly afterwards), and were listed in Pigot's 1825/6 directory on Buccleuch Street. His house at 5 Buccleuch Street is marked on Wood's 1824 map. He is probably also the 'John Oliver Esq.' who is shown on Wood's map as owner of land around where Mayfield Park was built. He served as Hawick's Town Clerk 1810–41, being originally appointed jointly with James Inglis (he was recorded as already Town Clerk in 1808 when his son James died). He was recorded as a freeholder in the Michaelmas Head-Court of Jedburgh in 1811. He arranged for the first Burgh Seal in 1817 (and in fact paid for the small version of the seal himself), which led to the design for the Town's Coat of Arms. He was also one of the founding members of the Hawick Curling Club. In 1825 he subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick'. In 1827 Oliver & Elliot were involved with a case in Selkirk regarding 'Dowager Lady's Elliot's 4 wheel carriage'. For a while he was in partnership with his sons (at least William and Thomas) as woollen manufacturers; together with William Wilson & Sons they purchased Weensland Corn Mill in about 1836 and had Weendland Mill built there. In Pigot's 1837 directory he is listed as agent of the Commercial Bank and also for North British Insurance, along with his son George; he is also listed as a writer on Buccleuch Street, with 'John & George' being listed separately as writers and 'justice of peace clerks'. He was living on Buccleuch Street (at about No. 11) in 1841, with his children William, James, Thomas and Mary. On his retiral he was presented with a silver punch bowl by the Burgh. He married Jean (or Jane), daughter of George Fairley, merchant of Greenlaw. Their children were: James (1802–08), who died young; George (b.1803), also a lawyer; John (b.1805), farmer at Caerlenrig and Whitropefoot; Jane (b.1807), who married William Aitcheson of Linhope; Christian (b.1809), who married Liverpool merchant William Watson; Margaret (b.1810), who married Dr. Harrison of the East India Company; Mary (b.1812); William (b.1813), farmer at Hallrule and Barnes; James (b.1814) also a lawyer, who had Mayfield House built; and Thomas Fairley (b.1816), farmer at West Fortune, Haddington. He is buried at St. Mary's. A portrait of him exists. John (18th/19th C.) resident of Ashkirk Parish. He was recorded at Ashkirk Mill in 1797 among men balloted to serve in the Militia; in 1799 he was 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in Askirk parish' and he was a labourer at Ashkirk Mill in 1801. He married Anne Niel (surely related to the miller Alexander Neil, perhaps his daughter) in Ashkirk Parish in 1800 (with his wife's name given as 'Agnes' when they married). Their children included: Isabel (b.1801), who married John White of Midshiels; Janet (b.1802), who married Francis Napier Scott; Alexander (b.1804), miller and later keeper of Ashkirk Tollbar; Jane (b.1806); and James (b.1809). His widow could be the 80 year old pauper of the same name (born in Minto Parish) living with Barbara Scott in Denholm in 1851 (and who had a son Alexander in Minto in 1800). John (18th/19th C.) farmer at Whitfield in 1797, according to the Horse Tax Rolls. He owned 5 horses at that time. John (18th/19th C.) servant at Courthill in Wilton Parish. He is recorded in 1797 on the list of men balloted to serve in the Militia; his name appears again in 1798, but by 1799 someone had substituted for him, although it is unclear who this was. John (b.c.1780) shepherd at Singdean according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish. John (b.c.1780) nailer in Minto according to the ballot for the Militia in 1801. He may have been son of nailer James, whose son Thomas was on the 1799 Militia ballot. John (c.1786–1847) from the Hawick area. He emigrated to Canada. He married Agnes Rutherford and their children were: Janet (c.1817–47); George (c.1820–1900), who died in Carberry, Manitoba; and Andrew (c.1827–50), who died in New Orleans. He and his wife died in Galt, Ontario. John (b.c.1780s) labourer at Wester Alemoor, according to the 1812 ballot for the Militia in Robertson Parish. John (18th/19th C.) married Agnes Rutherford in Southdean Parish in 1814. John (18th/19th C.) married Margaret Rutherford in Southdean Parish in 1823. John (18th/19th C.) Hawick man known locally as a musician, probably on the fiddle (noted as such by W.N. Kennedy in 1863, with no additional information given). John (1781–1857) born in Bedrule Parish, son of James. He was miller of Hawick Mill. He is recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories and was farmer and miller on the Crescent in the 1841 census. He was also recorded as a nail-maker at Hawick Mill in the 1837 directory and a nail-maker on the Crescent in Slater's 1852 directory. In 1851 he was at Hawick Mill House and recorded as farmer of 50 acres and nail-maker, employing 6 men. He was living with his sister-in-law Margaret Scott and nephew Robert Renwick. He was still listed as miller at Hawick Mill in Slater's 1852 directory. John (b.c.1785) shoemaker at 4 Cross Wynd, recorded in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories. In 1841 he was recorded on the Cross Wynd with his wife Margaret. It is unclear how he might have been related to other shoe-making Olivers. Probably the same shoemaker was listed on the ballot for the Militia in 1801. John (1789/90–bef. 1861) tailor in Newcastleton, listed in Pigot's 1825/6 and 1837 directories and Slater's 1852 directory. In 1851 he was at about 15 North Hermitage Street. His daughter Anne was still living there in 1861. He could be the John who was recorded as subscription librarian in Newcastleton in 1852. John (18th/19th C.) nailer at Teviothaugh. He was recorded in 1815 among Denholm men accused of 'mobbing and deforcing water bailiffs', but acquitted. John (b.c.1790) miller at Haughhead in Hawick Parish. He is listed there in 1841, along with his wife Alison; this could be Alison Turnbull, who married a John in Kirkton Parish in 1809. John (c.1800–bef. 51) framework knitter. He came from the same family as Mary, who married Walter Grieve. He was recorded on the Loan (around No. 6) in 1841. He married Margaret Purves, who was from Bedrule. Their children were: Margaret (b.c.1826); John (b.1828), who moved to Vancouver; Robert (1831–1906), who emigrated to South Australia; Helen (b.1834); Martha (b.1836); Isabella or Elizabeth (b.1838); and Janet (b.1840). By 1851 his wife was a widow at No. 6 Loan, and she was still there in 1861, working as a 'Mangle Keeper'. John (b.1805) 2nd surviving son of Hawick Town Clerk John. He farmed at Caerlenrig and Whitropefoot. He was named in 1837 along with his brother George, and Robert Anderson (also a lawyer in Hawick) among Tories who had jointly purchased land in Selkirkshire for the purposes of voting there. He was recorded at Caerlenrig in 1861, farming 80 arables acres and 600 acres of pasture and employing 5 people. He was recorded as farmer at 'Rigg' in 1868. He married Helen Sibbald and they had 4 sons and 2 daughters, John (b.1843), James (b.1845), George (b.1847), Jane (b.1849), Agnes (b.1852) and John. John (1809/10–70) cattle dealer in Lilliesleaf. He married Jane Young, who died at Dryden in 1893, aged 74. They are buried in Lilliesleaf Kirkyard. John (b.1843) son of farmer John and grandson of the Hawick Town Clerk of the same name who founded the family law firm. He resided at Lynnwood House. He became the senior partner in Geo. & Jas. Oliver. He married Euphemia, daughter of John Johnstone of Crailing Hall. Their daughters were Helen Sibbald, Mary Beatrice Simson and Elizabeth Rutherford. He was a prominent agriculturalist, being tenant of Whitrope and President of the Teviotdale Farmers' Club. He was also Vice-President of the Sacred Harmonic Society in the 1880s. John (b.1850) eldest son of lawyer George. He succeeded his father as partner in the firm of 'writers and bank agents', 'Geo. & Jas. Oliver'. He also became tenant in Borthaugh after his father's death. In about 1874 he was recorded as owner of Burnflat, which had previously belonged to George. He represented Wilton Parish on the County Council for 9 years. He was an enthusiastic promoter of the Border Club. He is probably the John of Borthaugh who composed 'March Militaire: The Border Mounted Volunteers'. He was a member of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland from 1880. He married Edith Mary, daughter of Thomas Cobb of Kent (a family that can trace its ancestry back to the time of Edward II). Their children were: Mary Lindsay, a musician, who moved to Moline, Illinois; George Lindsay, a Captain in the West India Regiment; John Lindsay, who served in the Boer War and moved to Salisbury, Rhodesia; Thomas Lindsay, an engineer with the Chicago and Rock Island Railway Company, who died of typhoid in Moline in 1905; James Lindsay, who followed his brother to the U.S.A. as an engineer; Faulconer Lindsay, who became a farmer in New Zealand; Gordon Lindsay, who also went to Chicago to work for the railway; and Edith Margaret Lindsay. The entire family had the middle name 'Lindsay', in memory of his mother and to distinguish this branch of the family. John (19th/20th C.) eldest son of hosiery manager Robert. He trained as an architect, working for Alex Inglis. In WWI he was with the R.A.M.C. and received the Military Medal. He was later an architect in South Africa. John A.L. partner in the firm of Geo. & Jas. Oliver, the 5th generation of Hawick lawyers. He started practising in about 1977. Katherine (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with John and Marion. Together they were tenants of lands valued at 25s, while several other Olivers were tenants of 3 smaller parts of Lustruther. Ken see James Kenneth Murray. Leo (13th C.) recorded as 'Lionus Oliver de Thorndon' in the 1279 assize roll of Northumberland. He was also listed in Coquetdale as a fugitive. His lands were in England, but, nevertheless, he is an early example of this surname. Richard, son of Thomas, is also listed in 1279 and possibly related. Lyle (16th C.) tenant in Roughlee in 1544, when he was among Olivers who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He is listed as 'Lyonell Ollyver of Rowghleis'. Lyle (17th C.) tenant in Rouchhirst according to a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. He is listed along with Thomas 'minor', who may have been related. Margaret (16th C.) recorded as tenant in Mervinslaw in a rental roll of 1541, along with her son William. Their steading was valued at 12s 6d. Other tenants at Mervinslaw included James and William alias 'Merchant'. Margaret (16th C.) tenant at Hindhaughhead in 1541 along with her son Gilbert. They paid 25 shillings yearly. Margaret (16th C.) joint tenant in Wylie's Hill in 1541, along with Margaret Wylie, paying 25s yearly. Another part of the farm was tenanted by (presumably a different) Margaret, paying 12s 6d yearly. Margaret (16th C.) joint tenant in the larger part of Westerhouses in 1541, along with Nicholas. Alexander was tenant of $\frac{1}{3}$ of the farm. Margaret (17th C.) recorded in 1658 when she was fined by the Magistrates for calling Isabell Scott 'witchesgait, and saying that she devoored her awine child'. Margaret (17th C.) recorded being 'in Slack' in 1684 on a list of people who refused to take the Oath of Allegiance and were declared rebels. She was among a relatively small number of women who were prosecuted for being Covenanters. Margaret (18th C.) servant at Borthwickbrae in 1791, when she was working for John Elliot. Margaret (18th/19th C.) recorded along with Mary in Pigot's 1837 directory as milliners and dressmakers on the High Street. Margaret (b.1778/9) grocer at Chesters in 1841 and 1851. She was born in Crailing Parish and was widow, probably of one of the local Olivers. Marion (16th C.) recorded as tenant in Southdean Mill in a rental roll of 1541 along with Patrick and Janet. Her name is listed as 'Mariote Olivere' (which is probably 'Marion', but could also be 'Mary'). Marion (16th C.) listed as tenant at 'Rowntrehil' in 1541 along with John and Adam, paying 11 shillings. Several other Olivers (John, Robert and Robert 'the schireff') were tenants in the other parts of the farm and may be related. Marion (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with her son William ('the Lawyer'). Other tenants were 2 Johns (one called 'Blackhead'), Janet Katherine and another Marion. Marion (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with John and Katherine. Together they were tenants of lands valued at 25s, while several other Olivers were tenants of 3 smaller parts of Lustruther. She is separate from the mother of 'the Lawyer'. Martin (15th C.) brother of Robert. He is recorded in 1493 when he was fined at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh for non-appearance. Other Olivers who were fined at the same time were Robert and James son of Gilbert, Matthew son of Geoffrey and Robert brother of Matthew. It is unclear how he might have been related to these other Olivers, or who his brother Robert was. However, probably the same Martin was recorded in 1494/5 as brother of Matthew (although it is possible that what is meant is brother of Robert in Strange), when a group of 8 Olivers and a Shiel had remission for communing with the English. In 1502, along with his brother Matthew and James son of Gilbert, he was allowed to compone for stealing 200 sheep from the tenants of Jedburgh, Ruecastle, Lanton and Bedrule; his surety was Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst. Probably the same Martin in Strange was allowed to compone in 1502, along with John son of Gilbert, for stealing a cow from Bedrule; Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst was again the surety. Further in 1502 he was allowed to compone, along with Matthew (both in Strange) for stealing 4 lambs and an ox from George Russell in Fulton. Also in 1502 he Matthew and John componed for stealing 2 cows and more than 100 sheep from the Laird of Bedrule at Bedrule and Fulton; Andrew Kerr was again his surety. He is probably the Martin who was one of the 4 Olivers in Strynds who were sentenced to execution in 1502 for their 'diverse reiffis, hereschippis, slaughtaris, and stouthis'; the others were Robert, David and Matthew. Martin (16th C.) recorded among Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544. His name was given as 'Matyn Ollyver of Fawside', with Ringan and Dandy Oliver also listed there. Martin (17th C.) resident of Slacks in Southdean Parish according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. His name appears to be written 'Marin'. Matthew (15th C.) son of Geoffrey. He is recorded in 1493 when he was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. His brother Robert was also fined at the same time, as well as James and Robert sons of Gilbert, and Martin brother of Robert. Probably the same Matthew is also recorded in 1493 when his brother Robert's charges of common theft and delivery of stolen goods were suspended. Probably the same Matthew was recorded as brother of Martin (although the text is ambiguous) in 1494/5 among 8 Olivers and a Shiel who had remission for communing with the English. In 1502, along with his brother Martin and James son of Gilbert, he was allowed to compone for stealing 200 sheep from the tenants of Jedburgh, Ruecastle, Lanton and Bedrule; his surety was Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst. He is likely the same Matthew in 'le stryndis' who was allowed to compone in 1502 for bringing in 11 Nixons to steal a black horse from Corbet (in the company of Robert Oliver), 2 horses from Dolphinston and 10 sheep from the Laird of Bedrule; his surety was Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst. Further in 1502 he was allowed to compone, along with Martin (both in Strange) for stealing 4 lambs and an ox from George Russell in Fulton. Also in 1502 he Martin and John componed for stealing 2 cows and more than 100 sheep from the Laird of Bedrule at Bedrule and Fulton; Andrew Kerr was again his surety. He is likely to be the Matthew recorded in 1502 who was sentence to hanging in Jedburgh, along with Robert, David and Martin, all residing at Strynds (near Abbotrule); the judgement was on account of failure to find sureties. A note in the records of the Justice-aire adds that the men were delivered to the Sheriff, so presumably the sentence was carried out. Matthew (16th C.) miller at Langnewton Mill. In 1590 he was among a list of men who complained about an attack by Robert and James, brothers of Andrew Ker of Newhall, and their accomplices. Michael (16th C.) tenant at Nether Dykeraw in 1541, along with James, John, Adam and Robert. Michael (b.1820s) farmer at the Flex in 1841. His wife was Helen and they had a daughter Helen. Michael (b.1816/7) born at Whitlaw, he was Constable in Teviothead Parish. He lived at Teindside Slope in 1851, but by 1861 he had moved to Melrose. His wife was Mina and they had children Williamina and William. Michael 'the Toff', full back for Hawick Royal Albert. His nickname came from how he conducted himself on the pitch. He first played for the Legion and was signed by the Albert at the age of 18, remaining for 12 seasons. He was part of the team that won the East of Scotland League Championship in 1973/4. He later played for Kelso United and Hawick Waverley. Mrs. James Rutherford (1839–1914), born Jane Rutherford, she was the second wife of James and step-mother of Andrew R. The couple had 7 children together. She had a strong interest in local history, writing 'Upper Teviotdale and the Scotts of Buccleuch' (1887) and 'Border Sketches' (1904), as well as articles for the Transactions. She was usually referred to as simply 'Mrs. Oliver of Thornwood'. She also had short stories published in Chambers Journal. She was involved in Conservative politics, being and active member of the Primrose League. She ceremoniously laid the foundation stone for the new Post Office with a silver trowel in 1892; her husband owned all of the neighbouring land, and she was involved in establishing the Post Office there. She gave a speech at the unveiling of the Horneshole Monument in 1901. She was Guest at the Common Riding of 1902. In 1903 she unveiled the plaque on the Sclaterford Bridge. She was an active member of the Primrose League. Her portrait is in the Museum, by an unknown artist. Murray (19th C.) elder of Newcastle U.P. Kirk in the latter part of the 19th century. Nellie 'Nell o the Bar' (19th C.) wife of Kit Paterson (descendant of 'Pawkie'). The 'bar' presumably refers to the Loan Toll-bar, near where they lived. Nichol 'Ower-the-cleuch' (16th C.) recorded in 1586/7 as 'Nichol Olipheir, callit Ower the Cleuch', among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. It is unclear what his nickname meant. Nicholas (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502. He was the representative of John Rutherford of Hundalee to 'give suit' for Rutherford's lands of Grubet at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh. Nicholas (16th C.) joint tenant in the larger part of Westerhouses in 1541, along with Margaret. Alexander was tenant of $\frac{1}{3}$ of the farm. Ninian (16th C.) tenant in Falside in 1541, with his part of the lands valued at 25s. Tenants of the other parts included John, Walter, 'Little' Roger, 'Lang' Roger and Robert, called 'Laird'. Ninian 'Ringan' (16th C.) recorded as 'Ranyon Ollyver' in the same place as William of 'Myrleslawe' in 1544, when he was among a list of Scotsmen swearing allegiance to the English King. They may have been based at Mervinslaw. Ninian 'Ringan' (16th C.) listed at Falside among Scotsmen who pledged loyalty to the English Crown in 1544. His name is listed as 'Ranyon Ollyver of Fawsid'. 'Dandy Ollyver of the same' is also listed and hence surely related. Ninian 'Ringan' (16th C.) recorded at Lustruther among Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544. Other men at the same place were William, Hob and Jock, younger. Ninian (17th C.) resident of Woodhouse according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Ninian 'Ringan' (d.1736) farmer at Smailcleughfoot in Jedwater, near to Ferniehirst Mill. His name is also sometimes written 'Ringan'. He was famed as one of the most important of the local Olivers in his day, holding a position of trust by the Baron of Ferniehirst and being known for his great strength. Many stories of his feats were current in Jedforest into the 19th century. One tale involves the liberation for 2 friends from Newcastle Jail. It was also said that he was a Covenanter, who fought at Drumclog, Killiecrankie and

Bothwell Bridge, then supposedly slew a Highlander champion in single combat, went into hiding and joined the Cameronians at Dunkeld. After the Revolution he is said to have returned to his farm and attended the Cameronian Chapel at Denholm. Another tale involves him shooting the dogs of some hunters who rode through his corn (this being amplified in James Telfer's poem 'Auld Ringan'); they were said to have reported him to the King, leading to his arrest by royal warrant. A different version says that the young Marquess of Lothian trampled his corn deliberately while hunting with his dogs, this being in retaliation for Ringan not letting him enter the charter room at Ferniehirst when his father was away; Ringan shot the Marquess' dogs, leading the Marquess to appeal to the Sheriff for his arrest, which came only after a siege of his house at Smailcleughfoot, with his servant girl being shot and he himself having his jaw broken by a supporter of the Marquess named Allan. He then ended up in prison in Edinburgh Tolbooth for 8 years and continued to live there after his release, being buried in Greyfriars Kirkyard. He is alternatively said to have died in jail in Edinburgh. His story is described by Sir Walter Scott, in Lang's 'Stories of the Border Marches', in the ballad by James Telfer (published in 1824 and revised for the 1862 edition, including details in a letter written by the local inventor James Veitch, who was a descendant of his sister, and a fictionalised version of the slaying of the Highland chief), in Tancred's 'Rulewater' in 1907 and in 'The Covenanters of Teviotdale' in 1908. The extent to which any of the details are true is completely unclear, although Abraham Oliver is recorded as resident at Smailcleughfoot in the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls, and could have been a close relative. It was said that his son Robert later came across the man called Allan who had attacked his father and 'gave him such a dressing . . . as payment for breaking his father's chaftblade' – 'Auld Ringan sat i' the Smailcleugh Tower, Even at his ain hearth-stane; And his mind did roam on youthful deeds, Of days that now were gane' [JTe], 'Auld Ringan was an Oliver stout, Of the stout Jedforest clan; Of him his kinsmen were well proud, – He was their foremost man' [JTe]. His 'Andrea Ferrara' sword was kept by the inventor James Veitch, whose great-grandmother was his sister; it was later owned by the Veitches of Inchbonny. Ninian 'Ringan' (d.1736) tailor in Falside. In 1698 his twin sons Stephen and Andrew were baptised in Southdean

Parish, Patrick (16th C.) recorded in 1538 being made 'chamberlain' responsible by the Crown for collecting the rentals in Jedforest. He was 'Sir' (or 'domino'), probably meaning that he was a priest rather than a knight. He was allowed rents from 40 shillings worth of land. It is unclear how he was related to other Olivers. Patrick (16th C.) tenant at 'Rouchchesteris' in Jedforest according to a rental roll of 1541. It is unclear where this farm was, but probably near Strange and Southdean Mill, where he may have been related to other Olivers. Patrick (16th C.) tenant in Southdean Mill in 1541, along with Janet and Marion. Patrick 'Pate' (16th C.) tenant at Whiteside in Jedforest in 1541, along with Gilbert, Andrew and John. His name was listed first and so he may have been the senior family member. He is also recorded as 'Patte Ollyver of Whitside' in a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544. 'Jake' and 'Gorge' Oliver were also listed as being at Whiteside in 1544, and hence probably related. Patrick 'Pate' (16th C.) first man listed among the Olivers who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544. He was listed as 'Patte Ollyver of the Bushe', his lands probably being Bush near Bonchester. Patrick (17th C.) resident at Hassendean recorded in 1684 among the men declared as rebels for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. He may be the Partick who married Bessie Scott and whose children, baptised in Robertson Parish, included Isobel (b.1681), with witnesses William Scott and John Armstrong. Patrick (17th C.) recorded as one of the tenants in Falside in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. 2 men with this same name were listed along with other Olivers, and a Common and a Laidlaw. Patrick (1720/1-79) died at Bridgehouse in Castleton Parish. His wife Margaret Beattie died in 1793, aged 60. He is probably an ancestor of James and Peter, who were merchants in Newcastleton. He and his wife are buried at Ettleton. Patrick (18th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. His children included Thomas (b.1758), Robert (b.1761) and Margaret (b.1763). Patrick (18th/19th C.) recorded on the 1794 and 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as farmer at Westshiels in Southdean Parish. He had 4 farm horses and 1 saddle horse. He also paid the dog tax in the same year. He may also have been known as Peter. His children included: Patrick (b.1783); and James (b.1785). Other children may have been Mary (b.c.1779), Margaret (b.1785), Andrew (b.1786), Thomas (b.1786) and Isabel (b.1788). Peter (16th C.) described as 'somyntes receipt with' (i.e. reset with) George

Ker of Primside Mill when he was accused by the English Warden of stealing sheep from him in 1589. Peter (18th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. He lived for a while at Hyndlee and was shepherd to 'Brockalaw' (i.e. on nearby Brockie Law). A story is told by his son Robert, recounted in 'The local historian's table book' (1844) of how he encountered one of the fairy folk, said to be the last seen in the district. Peter (1783-1861) son of Patrick, tenant at Westshiels in Southdean Parish. He may be the 'Patrick' recorded as tenant at Westshiels on the 1801 Militia ballot in Southdean Parish. He married Mary Fowler and their children John (1826-1917) and Robert (b.1827) were born in Edinburgh. He died at Cannonmills, Edinburgh. Peter (1789/90-1845) son of James and Jane Armstrong, he was born at Burnmouth in Castleton Parish. He was a merchant in Newcastleton, but was declared bankrupt in 1817, with Walter Armstrong of Burnmouth appointed as trustee. He is 'P. Oliver', merchant in Castleton, in the subscriber list for William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821 (ordering 2 copies). He married Elizabeth Murray, who died in 1864, aged 75; she was probably daughter of Thomas Murray and Janet Inglis. Their children included: James (1812/3-31); Jeanie (1813/4-35); David (1817-18); Janet (1819-28); Thomas (1820/1-41); David (again, b.1823); John (1825/6-33); Alexander (1830-31); Janet (again, 1833-34); and James (b.1837). Most of their children died young, in either Edinburgh or at Whisgills. Philip (16th C.) recorded among a list of the occupiers of Newton in Bedrule in 1531. Richard (13th C.) listed in the 1279 assize roll for Northumberland. He appears there as 'Ricardo filio Thomae Oliver', and so his father was Thomas. He seems to have been connected with the lands of St. Paul, probably in Coquetdale. He may be related to the Leo who also appears in the same roll. Probably the same 'Ricardum Oliver' is listed on a panel deciding on the lands held by the Earl of Dunbar in Northumberland in 1290. Richard (16th C.) tenant in Harelawcleuch in 1541 along with John Oliver and Patrick Laidlaw. Richard (17th C.) listed as resident of Bairnkine along with Andrew and Robert in 1684 when they were declared fugitives for refusing to take the Oath of Allegiance. They were surely all related. If he managed to escape persecution then he may be the Richard who was given the rank of Lieutenant in the Roxburghshire Fencibles after the Revolution. Richard (17th C.)

cottar at Fodderlee in Abbotrule Parish according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (13th C.) listed in a 1288 receipt for the fee of Alexander, son of the Earl of Dunbar, made at Berwick. He was recorded as 'Robertus Oliuer' Burgess of Berwick in 1291 as part of the Ragman Rolls. Also in 1291/2 he had 2 letters of safe-conduct, and was there described as a merchant of Berwick. In a court case in 1293 (whe a man stole money from Newcastle) he is referred to as Constable of Berwick Castle. Robert (14th C.) recorded as 'Olyver' in 1387 when he witnessed a document for Sir Thomas Strother in Newcastle. He is one of the earliest known Olivers who may have a local connection. Robert (15th/16th C.) tenant in 'le stryndis' (i.e. Strange) recorded at the Justice-aire held in Jedburgh. His name headed a list of 8 Olivers and a Shiel who had remission in 1494/5 for the crime of communing with the English. The others listed were his sons Ingram and John, as well as Matthew, Martin ('his brother', although it is unclear if this means Martin's brother or his), Robert son of Gilbert (who was therefore clearly a different man), James and William ('his brothers', probably meaning Robert's brothers, i.e. other sons of Gilbert) and Gilbert Shiel in Bedrule. It is possible he is the same Robert as the son of Geoffrey. He was also recorded as 'in Stryndis' in 1502 when, along with David, he had a remission for stealing 101 sheep from William Ker at 'Dernewik-mure'; Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst served as surety. Also that same year he was allowed to 'compound' (i.e. pay a fine) for several other crimes, including stealing 200 sheep from the tenants of Jedburgh, Ruecastle, Lanton and Bedrule, stealing 7 oxen and cows from Philip Ormiston in Maxton, killing John Moffat, stealing 33 cows, 200 sheep, 4 horses and goods from 'Robert Barnisfader' at 'Kelshop', killing Robert Brig, and for 'Treason of old and new'. Some of these crimes were carried out along with John (brother of Ingram) and David. He is probably the Robert who was allowed to compone in 1502 for stealing sheep from Jedburgh and cows from Selkirk; Andrew Kerr of Ferniehirst served as his surety. Additionally he is probably the Robert who was mentioned as a colluder with Matthew in bringing in a gang of Nixons who stole a horse from Andrew Ker in Corbet. He is probably the Robert who was sentenced to be hanged later in 1502 (along with David, Martin and Matthew) for failure to 'fynde sufficient souerties for satisfactione of parteis'. These 4 were either brothers or a mixture of 2 generations (more likely if this was the same David). Robert (15th C.) son of Gilbert. He is recorded in 1493 when he was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. His brother James was also fined at the same time, as well as Matthew son of Geoffrey, Robert brother of Matthew and Martin brother of Robert; William, son of Gilbert, was also fined, and was probably his brother too. In 1494/5 he was listed (again as son of Gilbert) among 8 Olivers (including Robert in 'Stryndis') and a Shiel who had remission for the crime of communing with the English. Robert (15th C.) brother of Matthew. He is recorded in 1493 when he was fined for non-appearance at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Matthew son of Geoffrey (who may be the same Matthew who was his brother) was also fined at the same time, as well as James and Robert sons of Gilbert, and Martin brother of Robert. The same Robert, brother of Matthew, was also recorded in 1493 when his charges of common theft and delivery of stolen goods (after the date of his previous remission) were suspended. Robert (d.bef. 1502) murdered by a large group of Turnbolls and others. The perpetrators were all fined in 1502 for failure to appear to answer to the charge. The 23 named men were (in the order they appear in the records) George Turnbull in Weens, John Turnbull in Gatehousecote, Andrew Turnbull in Gatehousecote, William Turnbull in Gatehousecote, Lawrence son of William Turnbull in Bonchester, David and Andrew Shiel, Hugh Shiel, Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule, Andrew Turnbull in Bedrule, William Turnbull brother of the Laird of Bedrule, John Turnbull 'Blew John', Andrew Turnbull, Alan Davidson 'Taburner', John Turnbull in Ruecastle, John Turnbull in Jedburgh, John Turnbull in Wells, Adam Turnbull in Wells, Ninian Turnbull, David Turnbull in Bonchester, Patrick Turnbull, Philip Turnbull and William Turnbull in Bonchester. There is no information given about the circumstances of his death, e.g. why so many people could be held responsible for his murder (and it seems that many of them must have been pardoned later). It is possible that 3 men named Bowden from Jedburgh, who failed to appear later in the 1502 court to answer for the cruel slaughter of Robert, could also be other murderers of his. It seems likely he was closely related to the Olivers of Strynds. Robert (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502 as 'brother's son of David' (although which brother is unclear), along with Robert in Lustruther, James

'Burgess' and Robert Waugh. They had remission for stealing cattle and goods from 'kelshop' and for killing Robert Brig and Adam Bairns-father; Ralph Ker of Primside Loch was surety. It is unclear if he was the same as one of the other Roberts. Robert (15th/16th C.) tenant in Lustruther. He was listed in 1502 along with Robert 'brother's son of David', James Oliver 'burgess' and Robert Waugh in Mervinslaw, when they had a remission for their crimes. This included stealing 200 sheep, 29 cows, 4 horses and other goods from John and Adam 'Barnsfader' at 'Kelshop', as well as killing Robert Brig and Adam 'Barnsfader'; his surety was Ralph Ker of Primside Loch. Robert (15th/16th C.) recorded in Swinnie in 1502. George Douglas, Master of Angus, was fined for failing to enter him at the Justice-aire in Jedburgh. Robert 'Rob wi the Dog' (15th/16th C.) recorded receiving remission in 1505 for intercommuning with rebels David 'Na-gude Preist' and John 'Cageare'. His nickname was given as 'Rob with ye dog'. He may be the same as one of the other contemporary Roberts. Robert (16th C.) tenant at 'Rontrehil' (probably Rowantreehill) in 1541 along with John Oliver. Another Robert, nicknamed 'the Sheriff', was tenant in another part of the same lands. Robert 'the Sheriff' (16th C.) tenant at 'Rontrehil' in Jedforest in 1541, paying 11 shillings. His is recorded as 'alias the schireff'. Other Oliveres (Richard, John, another John, Marion and Adam) rented the other parts of the farm of Rowantreehill. Robert (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with Janet. Together they were tenants of lands valued at 8s 4d. Several other Oliveres were tenants of 3 other parts of Lustruther. Robert (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with William ('the Lawyer') along with Marion (his mother). Their part of the lands were valued at 8s 6d. Other tenants there were 3 Johns (one called 'Blackhead'), Katherine and another Marion. Robert 'Laird' (16th C.) tenant in Falside in 1541. His lands were valued at 12s 6d. Other tenants there included Ninian, Walter, 'Little' Roger, Robert, Alexander, John and 'Lang' Roger. His name is given as 'Roberto Oliver, alias Larde'. He may have been an ancestor of the Oliveres in Hawick called 'Lord' in later generations. Robert (16th C.) tenant at Nether Dykeraw in 1541, along with James, Michael, John and Adam. Robert (16th C.) tenant in part of Wylie's Hill in Jedforest in 1541. The other tenants were 2 Margaret Oliveres and Margaret Wylie. Robert 'Hob' (16th

C.) recorded as 'Hobe Ollyver of Lustrudder' in 1544, when he was among Oliveres and others who gave assurance to the English Crown. William, Jock, younger and Ringan, were also listed at Lustruther, and so were probably related. They were probably all descended from the earlier Robert in Lustruther. Robert 'Hob' (16th C.) recorded among Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII in 1544. He was listed as 'Hobr Ollyver of Eshetres'. Robert (16th C.) recorded in 1544 on a list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was listed as being at the same place as 'William Ollyver of Myrenslawe', which was probably Mervinslaw. Robert 'Hab o Hawick' (15th/16th C.) supposed ancestor of Hawick's Oliveres, who lived at 'the Garrison'. First mentioned in print in Wilson's 1825 'History of Hawick', his story was dramatised in 1829 by Sir David Erskine as 'James V; or, the Warlike Days of Hab o' Hawick'. Apparently 'Hab' refused to walk from his house at the corner of the Howegate and Silver Street to Drumlanrig Tower when invited by the visiting King, stating 'Tell your master that here sits Hab o' Hawick at his ain fireside, and a fig for King James and a' his kin!'. This led to him being summoned to Edinburgh so the King could reciprocate at Holyrood. He was stated to be an old veteran at the time of the incident, which happened shortly before the death of James V. It is also said that he would visit 'Auld Hawick' (Hardie's Hill) every Sunday. How much of this story is true is uncertain, but there seems no reason to doubt that he existed and had some interaction with the King. Robert 'Hob' (16th C.) recorded in a Warden Court of 1559, involving representatives from the Scottish and English sides. He produced a 'bill of y^e Rotrohill' (presumably a list of items that had been stolen from him) for livestock and goods with Englishman William Hall. Robert 'Rany's Hob' (16th C.) recorded in 1586/7 among Borderers accused of crimes who had failed to appear in court and were given one more chance to find sureties. He was listed as 'Hob Olipheir, callit Raneis Hob'; it is possibly his father was Ringan. Robert 'Hob' (16th/17th C.) recorded in a court case of 1605 as a tenant in Wauchope in Rulewater. Robert 'Hob' (16th/17th C.) listed as 'called of Blanche' in 1605 when he was declared as a fugitive at a court in Jedburgh. Robert (16th/17th C.) tenant in Longnewton Mill. Along with George, stabler in Edinburgh, they complained to the Privy Council in 1612 that John Scott in Edinburgh had wounded them. Robert 'Lord Olifer' (17th

C.) cordiner who was another of the Silver Street Olivers. He was probably son of the Walter who was mentioned in 1666. In 1651/2 he was fined £5 by the Bailies for refusing to act as guide for leading Cromwell's troopers to Langholm. He may be the same Robert ('shoemaker, elder') who contributed to the town bell in 1693/4. He and his son Robert were probably the 2 men of that name listed on the west-side of Hawick on the 1694 Hearth Tax records. His children probably included: Margaret (1667/8–1719), who married Bailie Robert Hardie; Robert, shoemaker who married Agnes Aitkin in about 1696; and William (b.1676), who married Christian Hart. Robert (17th C.) tenant farmer at Dykeraw and ancestor of the Hawick lawyers. He may have been born in Hawick Parish in 1643 (son of Walter and Agnes Paisley), but there are several contemporary men of the same name. He was recorded on a list of rents for the Jedforest area in 1669. Gilbert, also listed at Dykeraw, was probably his son. In 1670 he married Isabel Hair (b.1646 in Melrose) in Jedburgh. Their son Robert was also farmer at Dykeraw. Robert (17th C.) resident of Hawick. He married Helen Elliot and their children included: Walter (b.1672); and Bessie (b.1675). Robert (d.c.1685) tenant in Mervinslaw when his will was recorded in 1685. Robert (17th C.) tenant in Bank. In 1684 he and Bessie (probably his wife, but perhaps his sister) refused to take the Oath of Allegiance and were declared rebels. Robert (17th C.) listed as resident of Bairnkinne along with Andrew and Richard in 1684 when they were declared fugitives for refusing to take the Oath of Allegiance. They were surely all related. Robert (17th C.) resident of Slacks in Southdean Parish according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. Robert (17th C.) recorded as resident at Stonedg on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (17th C.) resident at Swinnie according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. Robert (17th C.) recorded at Bank on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Robert 'Lord Oliver' (17th/18th C.) probably son of shoemaker Robert, he is listed as 'cordiner' on the 1693/4 list of contributors to the town bell. He and his father are probably the 2 Roberts, residents of the west-side of Hawick, recorded on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He may be the shoemaker Robert, who (along with shoemaker George, presumably a relative) witnessed a baptism in 1699 for cooper John Turnbull. He is probably the 'Robert Olifer called Lord' whose son John was baptised in 1704 and whose daughter Isobel was baptised in 1708. He may also be the Robert who, along with his wife, purchased a tenement in Hawick in 1713. He is probably the shoemaker Robert who witnessed a baptism in 1718 for fellow shoemaker Walter Scott. He married Agnes Atkins (or Aitkin) about 1696. Their children included: William (b.1701); John (b.1704); and Isobel (b.1708). Other probable children of his were: Robert (b.c.1699), who was also a shoemaker and married Bessie Blackhall; and George, also a shoemaker. A baptismal witness in 1701 was carrier William Aitken, who was probably related to his wife and a witness in 1704 was carrier John Aitkin (presumably also related to his wife); the other 1704 witness was gardener John Gardner. The 1706 witnesses were Bailie George Martin and gardener John Gardner and in 1708 were Bailies George Martin and Robert Hardie. In 1723 there is mention in the Town Book of the Burgess money for 'William Olifer, brother to Lord Olifer', and this may have referred to his sons Robert and William. Robert (17th/18th C.) from Jedburgh Parish. In 1713 he married Agnes Bennet (probably from the Bennets of Chesters) in Ancrum Parish. Robert (c.1699–1764) shoemaker in Hawick, probably son of Robert and Agnes Atkins. It seems likely that he was the 'Lord Olifer' who in 1723 gave in the Burgess money for his brother William; if so then he was also nicknamed 'Lord' and his brother was merchant William, father of 'Auld Cash'. He may be the Robert who (along with George) witnessed a baptism in 1726 for another George. He is probably the Hawick shoemaker who had bonds with the Bailies, officers and Burgesses of Selkirk in 1729, 1731, 1739 and 1744, with his son William giving a discharge in 1768. He may also be the Robert who had a discharge with the Burgh of Selkirk in 1759. He was involved with the 1740 bond for the construction of the Teviot Bridge. He was feued the western part of Howlands by George Langlands in 1742. He is probably the Hawick shoemaker Robert who had another discharge from the Burgh of Selkirk in 1743 (at the same time as John Blackhall, probably his father-in-law) and further discharges in 1759 and on 2 bonds with Selkirk in 1761. He is probably also the Robert recorded as 'factor to children of deceased William Olifer late merchant in Hawick' recorded in discharges in Selkirk in 1744, 1745, 1749 and 1752; this seems likely to have been his brother William. He is probably the shoemaker of that name who (along with William, junior, merchant, probably his brother) witnessed a baptism for baker John Kedia in 1743. He is probably the shoemaker Robert who in 1746 witnessed baptisms in Hawick for merchant Andrew Ekron and for labourer William Graham. He married Bessie (or 'Betty') Blackhall in Hawick in 1728; she was daughter of John Blackhall (shoemaker in Selkirk) and Catherine Curren, born in Selkirk in 1703 and died in Hawick in 1776. Assuming he is the same man who married Bessie Blackhall, their children included: Robert (b.1728), carried on the family shoe-making business; John (b.1730); Catherine (b.1732), who married Walter Wilson, 'Haunless Wat'; John (again, b.1734), shoemaker; William (b.1738); Agnes (b.1740), who married Bailie Walter Purdom; Thomas (b.1742); and twins George and Bessie (b.1744). The witnesses in 1728 were Mr. Anderson (Grammar School Rector) and Bailie John Scott, in 1730 were John Blackhall (his father-in-law) and George Oliver (surely a relative), in 1742 were merchant James Douglas and gardener Robert Turnbull and in 1744 were John Blackhall again and George again. He was related to merchant William, 'Auld Cash', perhaps his uncle, and therefore brother of William, father of 'Auld Cash'. In 1743 he witnessed a baptism for James Oliver, tenant in Earlside and another for William 'junior merchant' (probably his brother). He is probably the Robert 'Senior' who (along with merchant William) witnessed a baptism for Walter Wilson and Catherine Oliver (his daughter). Robert (18th C.) recorded being paid in 1751, along with Robert Easton and their workmen, for work on the new Teviot Brig. This was explicitly for 'helping the far pillar of the bridgem and 12 drains'. He was presumably a mason or similar tradesman. Robert (1732/3–89) son of Thomas, tenant farmer at Chesters. He was farmer at Langburnshiels. He was one of the founding group of seceders, who met in Hawick in 1763, leading to the establishment of the Green Kirk. He was recorded at Langburnshiels on the Horse Tax Rolls in 1786–90, being succeeded by his son Thomas. In 1763 in Hobkirk Parish he married Margaret (1737/8–1823), daughter of Andrew Currer (or perhaps 'Currie'). Their children included: Isabella (1774/5–81); Agnes (1777/8–83); and Thomas, tenant in Lilliesleaf. Robert of Burnflat (18th C.) shoemaker in Hawick. He was owner of the lands of Burnflat in 1767 when the Duke of Buccleuch brought the first case proposing division of the Common. He was also listed as one of the neighbouring land-owners who gained from the Division of Hawick Common in 1777. He received a little over 10 Scots acres of what had previously been the Town's land. He also appears to have held the land near Myreslawgreen called Birsilton. He is probably the Robert of Burnflat who (along with baker James, his son) witnessed a baptism for James Farquhar and Margaret (perhaps his daughter). He married Isabel Kenmure and their children included: William (b.1757); Robert (b.1759); Peter (b.1762); Agnes (b.1763); James (b.1765), baker in Hawick, who was also 'of Burnflat'; and Isabel (b.1767). The witnesses in 1757 were shoemaker George and tobacconist Francis Scott, in 1759 were baxter Walter Ruecastle and weaver George Turnbull and in 1765 were George Oliver and George Deans, junior. His son James was listed as a 'second cousin' in the 1808 will of William, 'Auld Cash'; he may have himself been a full cousin of 'Auld Cash'. It is unclear who his parents were, but one possibility is George and Margaret Aitkin; shoemaker George was a witness to the 1757 baptism (along with tobacconist Francis Scott), supporting this idea. Robert (c.1730–1803) shoemaker of the Cross Wynd, son of Robert and Bessie Blackhall. He is easily confused with at least one other contemporary shoemaker of the same name. He married Jean (or Jane) Scott in 1756. Their children included: Robert (b.1757); William (b.1760); Agnes (b.1764); and Elizabeth (b.1766). The 1757 baptism was witnessed by shoemakers Robert Oliver (presumably his father) and William Scott (perhaps his father-in-law). William Scott also witnessed the 1766 baptism, along with John Oliver (perhaps his brother). His wife may have later been known as 'Jeanie My Lord'. His son William may be the surgeon in Middleton, Teesdale, England who died in 1816, aged 56. He is probably the Robert who witnessed a baptism for shoemaker John in 1766. Robert (18th C.) resident of Wilton Parish. In 1770 he is recorded at Brieryyards. He married Isabel 'Brokie' or 'Brackie' in 1760 and their children included: John (b.1762); Isabel (b.1764); Barbara (b.1766); Thomas (b.1768); Isabel (again, b.1770); Samuel (b.1772); Agnes (b.1774); and Margaret (b.1779). The witnesses in 1770 were Robert Easton and Walter Oliver. Dr. Robert (1743–1823) son of James and Margaret Douglas. He was a surgeon in North Berwick. He married a Miss Russell and they had a family of 3 daughters (Margaret, Mary and Isabella) and 1 son (who was in the Navy and received a grant of land in Canada). Robert (18th/19th C.) shoemaker in Hawick, probably related to other shoemaking Olivers. In 1776 he married Helen Scott in Hawick (the parish record stating 'Almost forgot that Robert Oliver and Helen Scott both of this Parish ...'). Their children included: Margaret (b.1779, probably); Mary (b.1782); John (b.1783); William (b.1785), hind at Langraw, who emigrated to the U.S.; Helen (b.1785); Janet (b.1786); and Jane (b.1787). The witnesses in 1779 were tanner John Elliot and merchant James (probably a relative), and in 1786 were ex-Bailie John Elliot and shoemaker Thomas Wallace. Robert (18th/19th C.) another of the shoe-making family. In 1788 (and still listed in 1811) he is recorded owning part of Roughheugh (acquired from Langlands of that ilk), valued at £16 11s 8d, as well as part of the 'particate lands' in Hawick; his Hawick lands were later divided between Alex Graham of Berwick, the heirs of William Elliot and the West U.P. Congregation. He could be the Robert 'junior, shoemaker' who witnessed a baptism in 1790 for James Rae and (along with James Rae) witnessed a baptism in 1791 for bookbinder Walter Elder. He could be the Robert who is marked on Wood's 1824 map as owner of land off Damside, and also to the north of Roadhead. His daughter Jean married James Edgar. Robert (18th/19th C.) farmer at Knowesouth, recorded as owner of 2 horses on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Robert (18th/19th C.) farmer at Bridgehouse in Castleton Parish, listed on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as owner of 2 horses. He was also taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. Robert (18th/19th C.) recorded on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls as farmer at Milsingtonhaugh. Robert (18th C.) labourer at Nether Larriston. In 1797 he was listed among men on the ballot to serve in the Militia and in 1799 was among those whose names had not been drawn, but were no longer living in the area. A man of the same name appears as a clogger at Larriston on the 1801 ballot; it is unclear whether this is the same man. Robert 'Clinty' or 'Robbie Clinty' (1772–1847) tailor and town councillor. He got his nickname from the old family house, Clinthead, which stood on a rock at the Auld Brig. He was a descendant of 'Hab o Hawick', several generations of Olivers having lived in that area. He was listed as a tailor in Hawick on the ballot for the Militia in 1801 (although not on previous lists, suggesting he may have been born later in the 1770s). He was apprenticed to William Sanderson, tailor, later became the quartermaster of the tailors on the Council and was elected a Town Councillor in 1804. He was known to be emphatic in expressing his opinions. He is listed as a tailor on Silver Street in Pigot's 1825/6 directory, but must have retired before the 1837 directory. In his old age he moved from Clinthead. He is listed living on the Kirkwynd (in the same house as the Hardie family) in the 1841 census. He was immortalised in the words of the song by J.E.D. Murray. He may be the tailor Robert, who is mentioned as a second cousin in the 1808 will of William 'Auld Cash'; if so he was son of shoemaker John. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of London who subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. He must have had a local connection. Robert (18th/19th C.) resident of Southdean. In 'The local historian's table book' (1844) he is said to have lived at 'Southdean in Jedburgh, and died about a dozen years ago'. He recounted a story of his father Peter encountering a fairy at Hyndlee. Dr. Robert 'Daft Robbie' (d.1828) of the Navy, son of Robert and 'Jeannie My Lord'. He may have been the Robert born in 1757. He was said to have been educated in Edinburgh. He was 'sun-struck' in India and returned to Hawick to lead a retired life. It is said that he spent much of his time among the rocks of the Slitrig below their Silver Street home, playing with the children there – 'The pebble stanes – Daft Robbie's joy Was aye to aid them in sick ploy, And by the hand, stay feet sae sma', Amang the rocks when like to fa' ' [AD]. Robert (b.1787–1871) son of John and Margaret Douglas. He lived for a while with his father at Essenside, where his son John was baptised. He married Elizabeth, daughter of James Hardie and Elizabeth Hunter. Their children included: Isabel (b.1812), who must have died young; John (b.1813); Isabel (b.1814), who settled in California and married a man from Vermont; Margaret (b.1816); George Hardy (b.1818); James Douglas (b.1820), who also went to California, but returned to Westville; Agnes (b.1822); Helen (b.1824), who married John Archibald Hamilton in California; William (1826–61), who went out to Cailifornia, was one of the first men to drive cattle through the Sierra Nevada and was killed by Indians at Shelter Cove; and Mary (b.1830). In 1813 he, his wife and infant child emigrated to Canada, along with his brother Henry. They settled in Pictou County, Nova Scotia. Robert (b.c.1790) farmer at Heap, recorded in 1841. He was born in Kirkton Parish. In 1851 he was a shepherd living on Wilton Place. His wife was Betty. Robert (18th/19th C.) married H. Turnbull in East Bank

Kirk in 1816. Robert (19th C.) married Catherine Rutherford and had children baptised in Hawick Free Kirk, including John (b.1743), James (b.1744) and Thomas (b.1846). Robert (19th C.) married Janet Davidson and had children baptised in Hawick Free Kirk, including Agnes (b.1844) and Thomas (b.1847). Robert (19th C.) married Jane Wallace and had children baptised in Hawick Free Kirk, including Margaret Robina (b.1851) and Janet Davidson (b.1852). Robert William (b.1822) son of James and Elizabeth Purdom, he became a baker on the High Street. He was one of the first Trustees of the Congregational (then Evangelical Union) Kirk, from 1848. He was listed as a High Street baker in Slater's 1852 directory and in 1851 was at 6 High Street. His wife was Margaret and their children included Eliza, William and Margaret. Robert (b.1822/3) mason in Denholm. He may be the young apprentice who was recorded at the quarry at Bedrule in 1841. In 1851 he was probably living on Canongate and in 1861 probably on Sunnyside. He married Mary Mack and their children included: Mary (b.1847); Betsy (b.1849); Janet (b.1851); Robert (b.1854); John (b.1857); Margaret (b.1859); James (b.1862); and George (b.1865). Robert (1826/7–61) born at Bridgehouse, son of John, he was a shepherd in Castleton, Kirkton Parishes and Ashkirk Parishes. In 1851 he was an agricultural labourer at Dinlabyre, living with his parents and described as a widower. In 1861 he was a shepherd at Whitehillbrae. In 1856 in Castleton Parish, he secondly married Violet Rodger, who was born at Delorainburn. Their children included; John Rodger (b.1855), born at Boghall; Andrew (b.1856), born at Dinlabyre, who was blacksmith at Allanton; Jane (b.1858), born at 'Howkshall', Teviothead; Margaret (b.1860), born at Whitehillbrae; Robert Elliot (b.1864), born in Ashkirk; Violet (b.1866), born in Ashkirk; and Ann (b.1870). Robert (1827/8–1902) son of John and Ann Aitken. He worked with Lyle & Scott for about 38 years, being secretary and becoming a Director. He married Lizzie, daughter of James Davidson, and she died in 1942. Their children were John (architect in South Africa), Capt. Charles, James, George, William and Robert. He lived at Wellogate Villa and is buried in the Wellogate Cemetery. Robert (1831–1906) son of John and Margaret. He grew up in Hawick, where he worked as a skinner in 1851. He married Jane Hobkirk in Hawick in 1853 and the following year they sailed for Australia with their infant daughter Margaret. They settled in Wasleys in South Australia and had many other children. His grandson Harry Gordon Oliver was an engineer in charge of several projects on the River Murray. Robert (1857/8–1910) grocer in Newcastleton. He married Elizabeth Jane Gordon, who died in 1935, aged 72. Their children included: Emily (1896/7–1910); and James (1893/4–1914). They are buried at Ettleton. He was probably son of David and born in Hobkirk Parish. Robert Don (1895–1980) son of Col. William James of Lochside, his ancestors came from Hownam. He served in the Royal Navy, retiring as Vice-Admiral. Afterwards he was appointed Deputy Lieutenant for Roxburghshire. Roger 'Little Roger' (16th C.) tenant in Falside in Southdean Parish in 1541. His part of the lands was valued at 8s 4d. Other tenants there included Robert (alias 'Laird'), Ninian, John, Walter and another Roger (called 'Lang Roger'). Roger 'Lang Roger' (16th C.) tenant in Falside in 1541, listed separately from 'Little Roger'. His lands were valued at 25s. Samuel 'Sam' (b.1702) son of James, who was schoolmaster in Cavers, he was baptised in Cavers Parish. He became schoolmaster of Hobkirk Parish in 1726. He also served as Clerk for the Parish. In 1745 he was at Forkins smiddy watching the passage of the Jacobite army when they pressed him into service as their guide up the Rule valley and through Liddesdale. It is said that at their main camp he ran into the Laird of Gorrenberry who escorted him past the Prince and they doffed their hats at each other; this tale was told in the Rule valley long afterwards. He resigned as schoolmaster in 1750. In 1729 he married Betsy, daughter of John Scott of Weens. Samuel (18th C.) born in Wilton Parish. He was a resident of Minto Parish in 1774 when he married Isabel Miller. His children included: Helen (b.1780), baptised in Wilton Parish; and Samuel (b.1789), who was a mason in Yarrow in 1841 and in Selkirk in 1851. He could also be the Samuel whose children baptised in Hobkirk Parish included James (b.1775) and John (b.1778). He could be the Samuel, son of James, born in Hobkirk Parish in 1749 and may have been related to the Hobkirk schoolmaster. Samuel (b.c.1770s) gardener at Knowsouth in Bedrule Parish according to the ballot list for the Militia in 1799. Probably the same Samuel married Isobel Moscrop in 1805 and had children including: Agnes (b.1807); Robert (b.1807); and Isobel (b.1812). Samuel (b.1789) son of Samuel. He was a mason in Selkirkshire. In 1841 he was at Curcarwood in Yarrow and in 1851 was in Selkirk. He married Isabel Miller in Ettrick in 1814 (she seems to have had the same name as his mother). He is probably the Samuel recorded in a letter about work done at Ettrick Church in 1825. His children included: Samuel (b.1816), who was a mason like his father, married Margaret Rutherford in Melrose, emigrated to the U.S.A. and had 2 sons who fought in the American Civil War; William (b.1818); James (b.1820); Helen (b.1822); John (b.1824); Isabel (b.1826); Janet (b.1828); Robert (b.1830); and David (b.1833). Samuel (18th/19th C.) resident of Hobkirk Parish. In 1829 he married Betty, daughter of John Scott. Samuel (18th/19th C.) younger son of William of Dinlabyre. He spent most of his life as a farmer, at Whitehill and elsewhere. He was described as 'a clever, witty, well-read man, who could converse on most subjects'. He joined the Jedforest Club in 1830. He may be the Samuel who was at Mertoun near Dryburgh in 1841. Simon 'Sym' (16th C.) recorded in 1566 when the Lords of Secret Council made John Rutherford of Hunthill act as surety for him. He probably held lands in Jedforest. Steven (17th C.) recorded in 1676 when his daughter was among a number of local people fined for using weights that were lighter than the standards. Specifically her 'quarter of ane pound wanted twa drop, and her twa unce wanted ane drop'. His daughter must have been a trader at the market in Hawick, but it is unclear where they were from. Steven (17th C.) recorded as tenant in Falside in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. There were several other Olivers there, David, Thomas and 2 Patricks, to whom he may have been related, with his name appearing first. Probably he was the same as one of the 2 Stevens who were listed as tenants at Falside on the 1694 Horse Tax Rolls, one of them along with Dand; there was also a John and Thomas and his sons recorded there at the same time. Steven (b.c.1780) servant at Trow Mill according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish. Thomas (15th C.) witness in 1436 to a sasine for the lands of Wolfelee and Wolfehopelee. He is recorded as 'Thome Olyver de Swyne', which is probably Swinnie. Thomas 'Watschod' (15th/16th C.) recorded in 1502. George Douglas, Master of Angus, was fined for failure to prove his arrest (as well as that of Ingram and James). He was 'sandis sone' (presumably 'Sandy's son') and called 'waitschod'; his nickname may refer to 'watschod', a kind of cloth, which was often blue. Thomas (16th C.) stated to have been killed around 1540 at Abbotrule, along with 'Will Kowman'. This was the result of a raid led by James Routledge of Todhills in Cumbria, which was complained about by the Laird of Ferniehirst and his tenants. Thomas (16th C.) tenant at Slacks in 1541, along with John, who was probably his brother or son. They paid 22 shillings yearly, with Charles renting the other part of Slacks. Thomas (16th C.) recorded being of Lustruther in 1583/4 when William Fenwick of Wallington (near Otterburn) complained that he and around 200 others raided his farm, taking cattle, horses and 16 prisoners. This appears to have been a raid into England to recover cattle and other goods stolen from them earlier. It is clear that he was one of the main Oliver leaders at that time. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as 'Thomas Olipher' resident of Harwood when he was one of the witnesses to a Rulewater sasine of 1631. Thomas (17th C.) described as 'Thomas Olipher, cordiner' when he was fined in 1642 for using irreverent language to the Bailies. Probably a different Thomas, 'traveller' was in 1642 sentenced to 8 days in the stocks for drawing his sword at one of the Bailies. But he was possibly the Thomas who was recorded in 1642 being ordered to pay James Scott for the oats his livestock had eaten. He may also be the same Thomas who promised not to carry a 'whinger' in 1639 and the Thomas fined in 1649 for keeping his cattle on the 'infield' and for cattle eating his neighbour's corn and hay. This may be the Thomas, married to Margaret Chisholme, who had these children in Hawick: Walter (b.1641); Margaret (b.1642); Sara (b.1645); John (b.1649); Beatrix (b.1652); and Helen (b.1655). The witnesses to the 1641 baptism were Andrew Liddersdale and William Liddell. He could have been son of Walter (who is mentioned in 1666, and brother of Robert. Thomas (17th C.) described as 'traveller' in 1642 when he was accused of drawing his sword at one of the Bailies and refusing to go to the Town prison. He was fined and sentenced to 8 days in the stocks. It seems likely he was a different man from Thomas, 'cordiner', who was also recorded in the Town Book in 1642. He was also 'traveller' in 1652 when he was found to be not liable for the claim made against him by merchant John Scott, for tobacco pipes, 'hott waters', powder, sugar and other goods that he 'brak, drownit, and lossit' on the way from Edinburgh to Hawick. Thomas (17th C.) tenant in the farm of Hill (probably near Roushirst) according to a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Thomas (17th C.) tenant at Mervinslaw, recorded in a rental roll of 1669. There were several other tenants there at the same time. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as tenant of Whiteside in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. William was also there and so presumably closely related. Perhaps the same Thomas was listed on the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls as tenant in Whiteside. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as one of the tenants in Falside in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. He was listed as 'handie', presumably meaning that he was a tradesman of some sort. There were several other Olivers there at the same time. He may be the Thomas, 'servitor of the Marquis of Douglas' who was a Covenanter supporter, with his brother John, tenant in Falside, standing as surety for him in 1679, that he would return to prison if so ordered. He could be the Thomas 'in Jedforest' who is on a list of men refusing to take the Oath of Allegiance in 1684. He could be the Thomas who was recorded at Falside with his sons in 1694, when he paid tax on 2 hearths. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as tenant in Braehead in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Thomas (17th C.) listed as a tenant in 'Pouhach' in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest (i.e., Southdean Parish). Thomas (17th C.) recorded as one of the tenants in Dykeraw in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Both Thomases 'elder' and 'younger' are listed there, as well as several other Olivers. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as one of the tenants in Southdean in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. James and David were also listed there, and so probably close relatives. He could be the Thomas 'called Burne, in Fuddon' (assuming this is an error for 'Suddon') whose will is recorded in 1687. Thomas (17th C.) recorded as tenant in 'Dyk' in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Jedforest who was imprisoned in 1679 for being a Covenanter. He may have been taken prisoner after the Battle of Bothwell Brig. He gave a bond that he would not rise up in arms again and was released. It is possible that he was the Thomas of Southdean who complained that the Parish Minister had not read out the Articles of Estate or prayed for William and Mary in 1689. It is also possible that this was the Thomas, tenant at Southdean Mill, whose son John became minister at Southdean. Thomas (17th C.) son of James in 'Ash-trees', i.e. the farm in the Jed valley. He was listed in 1684 among many people who were declared fugitives for refusing to conform to Episcopalianism. However, he appears to have escaped persecution, since Thomas of Ashtrees was given the rank of Ensign in the Roxburghshire Fencibles after the Revolution. His brother George is recorded in 1691. Thomas (d.c.1685) tenant in Swinnie when his will was recorded in 1685. He is surely related to George, who was at Swinnie at the same time. Perhaps the same Thomas was listed at Swinnie among the poor of Southdean Parish in the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. Thomas (17th C.) recorded in 1688 when he complained of being assaulted in Hawick High Street when 'bringing in heather for use of the said towne'. This was presumably for fuel. He could have been one of the contemporary Olivers of Southdean. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Southdean Parish who was listed on the Hearth Tax rolls in 1694. He may be the same as one of the earlier Thomases. Thomas (17th C.) resident of Wadeshill in Southdean Parish according to the Hearth Tax rolls of 1694. Thomas (17th C.) name of 2 men who were resident at Swinnie according to the 1694 Hearth Tax rolls. One was described as 'kill' (perhaps suggesting a kiln) and the other was 'knou'. Thomas (17th C.) blacksmith at Chesters according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. He is probably related to John who was smith there in 1669. Perhaps he is the related to Thomas the smith in Hawick. Thomas (17th C.) resident at Chesters according to the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. He is listed separately from the smith. Thomas (17th/18th C.) resident of Kirkton Parish. He married Janet Cessford in 1696, the marriage being recorded in Cavers. Thomas (1688/9–1754) tenant at Chesters. He is probably related to some of the Olivers who were recorded at Chesters on the 1694 Hearth Tax Rolls. He married Jane Gillrie (1691/2–1768) and their children included Robert (1732/3–89), tenant at Langburnshiels. His family were buried in Oxnam. Thomas (17th/18th C.) married Janet Cessford in Cavers Parish in 1696. He may be the Thomas whose son George was baptised in Cavers in 1703. Thomas (17th/18th C.) smith in Hawick. He witnessed a baptism for Hawick Town Herd William Palmer in 1707 and another for Gideon Amos in 1714. In 1712 he was 'smith att ye westport of Hawick'. He married Margaret Douglas and their children included: Isobel (b.1701); Margaret (b.1703); John (b.1709); and Janet (b.1712). The witnesses in 1712 were Bailie Robert Brown and carrier Andrew Clerk. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. His daughter Margaret was baptised in 1724. Thomas (18th C.) tenant at Falside in Southdean Parish around 1740, along with 'Dand' and William. Thomas (b.c.1715) born in Southdean Parish. In 1732 he moved to Crailing. He married

Janet Middlemas in Crailing in 1739. Their children included: Jeremiah (b.1735), born in Southdean; Isabel (b.1740), baptised in Nisbet; Robert (b.1743), also born in Nisbet. Thomas (18th C.) workman in Hawick. He married Margaret Weir and they had a daughter, Anne (b.1743). Helen (b.1740) may also have been his child. The witnesses in 1743 were weaver William Turnbull and cooper James Scott. Thomas (18th C.) tenant at 'Glestains' (i.e. Gledstains). In 1758 he was among parishioners in Hobkirk Parish who were asked to provide broom for thatching the roof of the kirk. Thomas (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Mary Oliver and their daughter Helen was baptised in 1756. John (b.1757) and Robert (b.1758) may also have been their children. Thomas (18th C.) recorded at Weensmoor in 1774. He may be the Thomas whose daughter Helen was baptised in Hobkirk Parish in 1774. Other children may have been Barbara (b.1771), Nelly (b.1772) and Alison (b.1775). Thomas (18th C.) footman and gardener at Orchard in 1785, when he was working for William Dickson. Probably the same Thomas was coachman at Cavers in 1794. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Hawick Parish. In 1795 he married Margaret Stewart, who was also from Hawick. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident at Chesters (Southdean) according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. Gilbert was listed after him and so possibly related. Thomas (b.1775) son of Bailie James, listed in the Lieutenancy Book for Roxburghshire. In 1799 he was a 'Shopkeeper Son of B Oliver' among those 'In the Ballot Box 1797 not drawn still residing in Hawick parish' and in the 1801 ballot for the Militia he was listed as a merchant. He could be the same as one of the other Thomases. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at Turnpikeside in Southdean Parish, according to the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls. It is possible he was the Southdean rhymmer of this name who penned these lines on the death of Rev. William Scott – 'I saw him from the kirk descent, And in five hours his life did end'. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at Birneyknowe, on the 1794–97 Horse Tax Rolls. He was recorded as owner of 7 farm horses and 1 saddle horse in 1797. His son George was listed on the ballot for the Militia in Cavers Parish in 1799. Thomas (18th/19th C.) recorded as tenant at Shankend on the 1797 Horse Tax Rolls, when he owned 4 horses. Additionally he was taxed for having 2 non-working dogs in 1797. Thomas (18th/19th C.) farmer at Castleton, recorded on the 1797

Horse Tax Rolls. Thomas (18th/19th C.) son of nailer James in Minto. He was listed in the Lieutenancy Book in 1799. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Byreholm. He subscribed to William Scott's 'Beauties of the Border' in 1821. He is listed as a carter at Byreholm among heads of households in 1836 and 1838. He could be the same Thomas as the farmer at Castleton. Thomas (18th/19th C.) recorded as farmer at Kirkton, on the Horse Tax Rolls of 1797. James is listed after him and so possibly related. He was also listed at Kirkton on the 1797 Dog Tax Rolls. Thomas (b.c.1780) shepherd at Dykeraw according to the 1799 ballot list for the Militia in Southdean Parish. Thomas (18th/19th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. He married Jean, daughter of John Whillans and Mary Swan. Their children included: Mary (b.1806); and William (b.1815). Lieut. Thomas (18th/19th C.) of the Royal Navy, was made an Honorary Burgess in 1803. He is probably the 'Captain Thomas Oliver of the Royal Navy my second cousin' mentioned in the 1808 will of William, 'Auld Cash'. He could be the Royal Navy Lieut. of that name who distinguished himself at Havana in 1805 during the Napoleonic Wars. He was probably grandson of shoemaker Robert, and perhaps son of Thomas (b.1742) or one of his brothers. Thomas (18th/19th C.) tenant in Lilliesleaf, son of Robert, who was farmer at Langburnshiels. He was recorded in the Horse Tax Rolls of 1791–94 at Langburnshiels. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. Thomas (b.c.1780) servant at Mains according to the ballot for the Militia in Castleton Parish in 1801. Thomas (b.c.1780) shepherd at Tower in Cavers Parish according to the 1801 ballot for the Militia. He could be the Thomas who married Agnes Grieve in Cavers Parish in 1800. Thomas (18th/19th C.) married Jane Baptie in Southdean in 1811. Thomas (18th/19th C.) ironmonger on the High Street, recorded on Pigot's 1825/6 directory. He subscribed to Robert Wilson's 'History of Hawick' in 1825. Thomas (b.1812/3) gamekeeper at Larriston Rigg in 1841. His wife was Jenny and their children included Turnbull, Bella and Francis. He may be the same Thomas as the gamekeeper in Bedrule Parish. Thomas (19th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He married Euphy Lawson in 1814 and their son Robert was baptised in 1828. Thomas S. (b.1812/3) gamekeeper at Woodend Cottage in Bedrule, and then stocking-maker in Denholm, probably on Sunnyside. He married Janet Turnbull in 1833 and they had children baptised in Cavers: Ebenezer (b.1834); Joseph Turnbull (b.1836); Isabella Minto (b.1838); Francis Armstrong (b.1840); William Campbell (b.1842); Francis Armstrong (again, b.1845); Thomas (b.1849); and Janet (b.1851). Thomas (b.1817/8) younger son of lawyer John. In the 1841 census he is listed as a woollen manufacturer, along with his brother William. He was probably part of the short-lived firm of John Oliver & Sons. He was later a farmer at West Fortune, Haddington. Thomas 'Tom' (b.c.1870) born in Hawick, he worked as a shepherd with his father, later entering William Watson's, where he learned about tweed manufacture and design. He became a teacher of power-loom weaving in Galashiels, Hawick and Selkirk. He received a D.Sc. from Edinburgh and was Principal and Professor of Textile Technology in the Scottish Woollen Technical College in Galashiels. Just before the War he toured Australia and New Zealand. He published at least 3 books on textiles: 'Weaving problems' (1909); 'Phase in the rise of Scotch tweed technique' (1911); and 'Wool technology and regional geography' (1931). He was also an enthusiastic lay preacher in the Brethren, publishing and contributing to 'Scripture Quarterly' during WWII. Walter (d.1242) son of David 'Olifard', or perhaps an earlier Walter. He is probably the 'Walt' o olifard' who witnessed a charter between Gervase Avenel and Melrose Abbey in 1214. He was Justiciar of Lothian under Alexander II from 1220 until his death. He granted the church of Smailholm to Coldingham Abbey. In 1221 he was witness to the dowry charter for Joan of England, who married Alexander, King of Scotland (lands that included Hassendean). He was Justiciar in 1230 when he witnessed a charter for Margaret, the King's sister and also in 1237 in a document from the English King. He was mentioned (as 'Walterum Olifard iusticiarium Laudonie') in a charter of lands to Soutra Hospital in about 1230. He also witnessed another charter relating to Inverness in the reign of King William. He married Christian, daughter of the Earl of Strathearn and inherited lands in Perthshire. He had a son David. The pair are mentioned in a charter of Soutra Hospital, granted by Walter Murray ('de Moravia') in 1273. He was succeeded by his grand-daughter Joanna, who married Walter of Moravia (or Murray). In this way the Barony of Bothwell came into possession of the Murrays, who would later also hold the Barony of Hawick. Walter (16th C.) tenant in Falside in Southdean Parish in 1541. His small piece of the farm was valued at 4s 2d. Other tenant there included with Robert (alias 'Laird'), Ninian, Roger (called 'Little Roger'), John and Roger (called 'Lang Roger'). Walter (17th C.) another of this shoemaking family. He was involved in a church dispute in 1666 and was the father of Robert. This may be the same Walter who married Agnes Paisley (or 'Paslay') and whose children (born in Hawick Parish) included: James (b.1640); Robert (b.1643); Janet (b.1645); John (b.1649); and Helen (b.1652). However, if he was father of Robert 'Lord Olifer', then his children must have been born earlier. The witnesses to the 1640 baptism were Robert Oliver and James Paisley (probably fathers or brothers of the parents). Walter (17th C.) merchant in Hawick. He is recorded in 1673 on the list of men named in the trial for the so-called riot at St. Jude's Fair. He could be the Walter in Hawick (married, aged 40) who gave evidence in 1681 at the trial of Covenanters. In 1685 he was fined for refusing to ride with a prisoner to Jedburgh when asked by the Bailie to do so, and also 'for his contumacious language given to the sd baylyea att yt time'. He was listed among the contributors to the Hawick Kirk bell in 1693/4. He is probably the Walter listed 'eist the water' among those paying the Hearth Tax in Hawick in 1694. He may be the Walter who gave evidence against Turnbull of Standhill in a trial of Covenanters in 1680. He is recorded as a merchant when he witnessed baptisms for tailor Alexander Hislop in 1700, for John Scott, smith in Hawick, in 1704, for shoemaker Robert Gardner in 1703, for merchant William Douglas in 1706, for John Nichol (servant in Newmill) in 1709, for skinner Robert Deans in 1710 and for cooper Alexander Weens in 1711. Walter (17th C.) resident of Hawick who married Janet Simpson. Their children included: James (b.1673); and William (b.1676). The witnesses in 1676 were John Deans and James Deans. He could be the same as the merchant of Hawick mentioned in the next couple of decades. He could be the Walter who witnessed baptisms for Robert Turnbull in 1683 and for Alexander Hislop in 1696. It is possible that his sons James and William were the 'students' who acted as witnesses for the baptism of an illegitimate child of Thomas Henderson and Margaret Douglas in Hawick in 1689. Walter (b.1706) born in Hawick, son of Robert and Agnes Aitkin. His brothers included shoemaker Robert and merchant William. He married Margaret Turnbull in 1730.

Their children included: Robert (b.1731); Margaret (b.1733); John (b.1735), shoemaker, who married Helen Currer; and Helen (b.1738). Walter (18th C.) recorded in 1712 being asked to 'perlustrate the town to see who were drinking in ale houses after 8 at night'. Walter (b.c.1809) cooper in Newcastleton, listed among heads of households in 1835-41 and in Pigot's 1837 directory. In 1841 he was at about 27 Montague Street. His wife was Mary and their children included Walter, Janet, Jean and Betty. William (15th C.) son of Gilbert. At the 1493 Justice-aire he was fined for non-appearance. If his father was the same Gilbert, then he also had brothers James and Robert (also mentioned in 1493). He was also recorded in 1494/5 among 8 Olivers and a Shiel (connected with Strange) who had remission for communing with the English; he was there stated to be brother of Robert, who was son of Gilbert, and also brother of John. William 'Will' (16th C.) listed in 1540 among Scottish rebels who had fled to England and were being sought by the English Wardens. He is recorded as being called 'Fargus', and his son 'Jok' is also listed. William (16th C.) recorded as tenant in Mervinslaw in a rental roll of 1541, along his mother Margaret. Their steading was valued at 12s 6d. Other tenants at Mervinslaw included James and another William, nicknamed 'Merchant'. William 'Merchant' (16th C.) tenant in Mervinslaw in 1541, whose steading was valued at 12s 6d. Other tenants at Mervinslaw included William, Margaret and James. William (16th C.) tenant in Bank, recorded in a rental roll of Jedforest in 1541. He held half of the farm. William 'the Lawyer' (16th C.) tenant in Lustruther in 1541, along with his mother Marion, 2 Johns (one called 'Blackhead'), Janet, Katherine and another Marion. His name is written as 'Willelmo Olivere, alias the procurator'. Probably the same man was recorded as 'William Ollyver of Lustrodde' in 1544, when he was among Olivers and others who gave assurance to the English Crown. Hob, Jock, younger and Ringan were also listed at Lustruther and so were probably related. He may be the same as the William recorded as tenant there in 1562. And either he or perhaps his son was in Lustruther in 1571 when he was one of the 3 main leaders of the Olivers for whom Sir Thomas Turnbull, John Turnbull of Minto, Richard Rutherford of Edgerston and John Rutherford, younger of Hunthill, served as pledges. Additionally he gave his pledge at a court in Leith, for the Olivers in Dykeraw, Falside, Westerhouses, 'the Burne',

Slacks, Mervinslaw and the Bank, as well as for other men of Southdean; his cautioners were William Douglas of Bonjedward and Richard Rutherford, Provost of Jedburgh. William (16th C.) recorded as 'William Ollyver of Myrleslawe' in 1544, when he was among a list of Scotsmen swearing allegiance to the English King. 'Ranyon Ollyver of the same' is also listed, and so presumably a brother or son. Their lands may have been Mervinslaw. William (16th C.) recorded on a 1544 list of Scotsmen who swore allegiance to Henry VIII. He was listed as 'William Ollyver of Myrenslawe', which is probably 'Mervinslaw'. This could be a repeated entry for William of 'Myrleslawe'. 'Robert Ollyver of the same' is also listed. William 'Will' (16th C.) tenant farmer at Lustruther, who along with Gavin, tenant at West Houses (probably a Southdean relative) had a bond of 1562 to enter Robert Robson 'Foul Mouth' to John Kerr of Ferniehirst. He is also recorded in 1571 giving bonds for Olivers and others in Dykeraw, Westerhouses, Falside, the Burn and Slacks. He is probably the William whose farmed was transcribed 'Anstruder' in 1572/3, when he was listed along with other Olivers and William Kirkton of Stewartfield, with Sir Thomas Turnbull of Bedrule and Richard Rutherford of Edgerston as their cautioners; this appears to have been in relation to Kerr of Ferniehirst being declared a fugitive and all his former supporters swearing allegiance to the Crown. He is probably the William in Lustruther who Thomas Laidlaw in Haugh was accused of resetting in 1589. Probably the same 'Will in Lustruther' is recorded in Monipennie's List of Border Clans of about 1594. He was indicted for a raid in 1589. William (16th C.) recorded in 1583/4 being of Slacks when William Fenwick of Wallington (near Otterburn) complained that he and about 200 others raided his farm, taking cattle, horses and 16 prisoners. This appears to have been a raid into England to recover cattle and other goods stolen from them earlier. He was probably an important leader among the Olivers at that time. William of Bairnkine (d.1605) sentenced to execution in Jedburgh in 1605. Nothing else is known about him. William (16th/17th C.) tenant of the Earl of Angus in 'Lanyburne', which could be Langburnshiels. In 1618 he complained that William Sinton 'in Helialdrum Burne', Walter Sinton his brother, Thomas Brown 'in Thorishop' and others unlawfully apprehended him at the direction of Walter Scott of Goldielands. William (17th C.) tenant at Lustruther (in Southdean Parish) in 1669. William (17th C.) recorded as tenant of Whiteside in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. He is listed after Thomas, to whom he was surely related. William (17th C.) recorded as a tenant in Chesters in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. There were 2 men of the same name listed there. William (17th C.) recorded as tenants in Slacks along with George and John in a 1669 rental roll of Jedforest. Probably one of them is the William listed as tenant in 'Soudon' and 'Suden' (i.e. Southdean farm) in the 1694 Hearth Tax records. He may be the William 'in Shaks' (if this is an error for 'Slaks') whose will is recorded in 1688. William (17th C.) tenant in Nether Whiggills in Castleton Parish according to the Hearth Tax records of 1694. William (b.1674) born in Hawick, son of John and 'Jenet Bo'. William (b.1676) son of Walter and 'Jenet Symson', he was born in Hawick. He could be the merchant recorded in the early years of the 18th century. William (17th/18th C.) merchant of Hawick, mentioned from 1702. His sister Margaret was married to Bailie Robert Hardie. In 1702 he married Christian Hart (both from Hawick Parish), with Hardie and his wife being rebuked for creating a disturbance; his father-in-law, John Hart was also rebuked by the session for their 'penny-bridal'. It is possible he is the William born in Hawick in 1676, son of Robert. It seems likely he was related to Walter, who was a merchant in Hawick at the same time. He witnessed baptisms for Anthony Haig in 1706, for Bailie Robert Hardie and Margaret Oliver (his sister) in 1709, for shoemaker Robert Allan in 1714, for tailor Robert Chisholme in 1718, for smith James Beattie in 1719, for carrier Thomas Porteous in 1720, and for weaver James Roger in 1725. He is probably the William Oliver who was among men ordered to walk around the Town in 1712 to see who were drinking in ale-houses after 8 o'clock. Probably the same merchant William was rebuked by the Session in 1716 for being involved in late night drunkenness and a fight with Thomas Huggan. He acknowledged that 'he was att the brawl and was sensible of his fault, and that he could not give an accompt who first began it'. He may have been grandfather of 'Auld Cash', and if so, then his son was also William; however, it seems more likely that shoemaker Robert was the grandfather of 'Auld Cash', and probably closely related to him, perhaps his brother. His children with Christian Hart included Janet (b.1705), with baptismal witnesses Bailie George Martin and gardener James Falsyde. It is unclear if he had any other surviving children. It is possible that he lived to an old age and that is why his nephew William was 'younger merchant' into the 1740s. William (17th/18th C.) tenant in Slaidhills. He was married to Elspeth Hislop. Their son Andrew was born in 1701, with Andrew Waugh in Slaidhills being one of the witnesses. William (17th/18th C.) 'servitor' in Todshawhill. In 1705 his daughter Janet was baptised with witnesses Robert Cook and Alexander Ogilvie in Branhholme. William of Dinlabryre (17th/18th C.) eldest son of John. He succeeded his father in the lands of 'Dunliebyre, Easterflight, Hiashes, and Burnfoot; also Over and Nether Larriston, Heartsgarth, and Langhaugh'. He and his son John donated silver communion cups to Castleton Kirk in 1748. In 1708 he married Mary, daughter of William Chisholme of that Ilk (while his sister Mary married his wife's brother John!). His children were: John, who succeeded; and Mary, who married John Scott of Synton. William (18th C.) tailor in Over Southfield. He is probably the tailor who witnessed a baptism in 1738 for John Scott, tenant in Hawick Shiel, and Bessie Goodfellow. In 1721 he married Margaret Cook, who was widow of John Goodfellow. Their children born in Hawick included: Bessie (b.1722); and Margaret (b.1724). The witnesses in 1722 were Walter and John Scott (perhaps the servant to the minister and the Kirk Beadle). William (b.1701) merchant in Hawick, son of shoemaker Robert and Agnes Atkins. It seems likely he was father of 'Auld Cash'. He was probably the William, whose brother 'Lord Olifer' gave in his Burgess money in 1723. In about 1740 he was given part of the responsibility for collecting subscriptions 'east the water' to help pay for the Teviot Bridge. He is probably the merchant who witnessed a baptism for Alexander Purdom in 1741 and the 'junior merchant' who witnessed other baptisms in 1741, 1742 and 1743, including for flesher George Deans and for Schoolmaster Walter Turnbull. He may be the William 'younger merchant' recorded in receipts in Selkirk in 1741 and 1742 (at the same time as shoemaker Robert, who was probably related to Selkirk shoemaker John Blackhall). He was also 'junior merchant' in 1743, when his son Walter was baptised, the sole witness being shoemaker Robert (probably his brother). He and shoemaker Robert also witnessed another baptism in 1743 for baker John Kedie. It seems likely that he is the 'William Olifer late merchant in Hawick' for whose children Hawick shoemaker Robert (probably his older brother) acted as factor in transactions in Selkirk in 1744, 1745, 1749 and 1752; this suggests that he died in 1743 or 1744 and his brother Robert acted as guardian for his large family. Confusingly there is a merchant William who witnessed baptisms in 1744 for shoemaker George Gardner, in 1746 for skinner Walter Scott and for carrier Gilbert and in 1758 (along with Robert Senior, perhaps his brother) for Walter Wilson and Catherine Oliver (perhaps his niece) in 1758; either there was another merchant of the same name in Hawick or the records from Selkirk are being misinterpreted. He married Margaret Coltherd (or 'Coulart'), with their children being: Agnes (b.1731); Robert (b.1733); Margaret (b.1734); James (b.1739); John (b.1741); and Walter (b.1743). It seems likely that the William born in 1737, with mother Margaret 'Corser' was also his son; in that baptismal record (and another, when he was witness for Robert Miles) he is listed as 'Merchant Junior', perhaps the William senior being his uncle. The witnesses to the 1731 baptism were George (perhaps his brother or uncle) and Robert (probably his father). The idea that he was father of 'Auld Cash' is supported by the 1808 death record, where it is stated that the father of 'Auld Cash' was also William, and probably a merchant. It is possible that he was also called 'Auld Cash'. William (18th C.) resident of Cavers Parish. He was at Cauldmill in 1747. He married Janet Wilson and their children included: John (b.1747); and James (b.1749). William (b.1732/3) workman, one of the 6 representative Burgesses appointed to perambulate and define the boundaries of the Burgh's land in 1767, during court proceedings for the division of the Common. In 1782 his daughter Isabel died, and he is listed as 'workman'; this could be the Isabel born to William and Barbara 'Binnie' in 1761. He may be the same William who married Barbara Burnet (whose name is also written 'Birnie') and whose children included: Isabel (b.1761); William (b.1765); Robert (b.1767); Thomas (b.1770); John (b.1772); and Thomas (again, b.1778). The witnesses in 1761 were and William and Thomas Birnie (perhaps his father-in-law and brother-in-law), in 1767 were the whole congregation and in 1772 were Thomas Burnet and William Laidlaw. He is probably the workman whose daughter Isabel died in Hawick in 1782. William 'Auld Soorhope' (18th C.) one of the last people to be buried in the old churchyard at Southdean. It is said that his funeral was very well attended. William of Langraw (1731/2–1812) from the family who had farmed at Falside in Southdean Parish. He may be the son of William who was a tenant at Falside in the 1740s, along with 'Dand' and Thomas (possibly his uncles). He and Andrew farmed at Alton from 1762 and then Adderstoneshiel from 1765. He then had several short leases elsewhere, including Burngrange in Northumberland. In 1801 he purchased the farm of Langraw and settled down there, retaining several other leases. In 1803 he contributed to a local subscription for the defence of the country (from the French). He was listed as a Commissioner for Roxburghshire in 1805, and in 1819 (when he may have already been deceased) both he and his son Andrew were listed. He was a heritor of Hobkirk Parish. He is said to have been quite wealthy, but lost much of his fortune backing 'bills for needy and unscrupulous persons'. In 1811 he was recorded as owner of Langraw and part of Shiel's Lands and Kirknowe. In 1764 he married Margaret Stavert, said to be a descendant of the man who carried the Douglas banner at Otterburn; she died in 1820, aged 80. He was buried along with his wife in Southdean Kirkyard. He was succeeded by his eldest son, Andrew, while a younger son, William, rented Otterstonelee in North Tyne (unless this is confusion with Adderstonelee). He could have been father of some of these children baptised in Southdean Parish: William (b.1761); Andrew (b.1762); Andrew (again, b.1763); John (b.1764); Nelly (b.1766); Thomas (b.1768); and William (again, b.1770). William (18th C.) resident of Southdean Parish. In 1761 he married Janet Oliver, who was from Wilton. Children baptised in Southdean who could be his include: Andrew (b.1762); Andrew (b.1763); John (b.1764); Nelly (b.1766); and Thomas (b.1768). William 'Auld Cash' (c.1738–1808) one of the foremost merchants in Hawick, and Cornet in 1758. He may be the William born in Hawick in 1737 to William and Margaret Croser. He traded in many different things in the district around Hawick, and was said to be the third William in a family line of merchants (although his precise relationship to earlier Olivers is unclear). He also acted as a private banker throughout the Borders, hence his nickname. In 1782, 1785, 1787, 1788 and 1790 he witnessed the baptisms of the children of Dr. Robert Douglas and Margaret Aitchison (who was his niece). He subscribed to Caw's 'Poetical Museum' (1784) as well as John Learmont's book of poetry in 1791. He paid the Shop
